The Missouri anti-trust statute, as construed and applied by the state court in its judgment herein, is unconstitutional because it unreasonably and arbitrarily violates and restrains plaintiff in error's right and freedom of contract beyond the police power of the state, thus depriving it of property without due process of law.

Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 454, 49 L. ed. 546, 550, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

Mr. John T. Barker, Attorney General of Missouri, argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. T. Rutherford and Thomas J. Higgs, filed a brief for defendant in error:

A Federal or constitutional question must be raised at the very first opportunity.

Lohmeyer v. St. Louis Cordage Co. 214 Mo. 688, 113 S. W. 1108; Brown v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 175 Mo. 189, 74 S. W. 973, Dahnke-Walker Mill. Co. v. Blake, 242 Mo. 31, 145 S. W. 438; Ross v. Grand Pants Co. 241 Mo. 299, 145 S. W. 410; Pickel v. Pickel, 243 Mo. 666, 147 S. W. 1059; Hartzler v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 218 Mo. 564, 117 S. W. 1124; Astor v. Merritt, 111 U. S. 202, 28 L. ed. 401, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 47 L. ed. 299, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216.

The Missouri anti-trust statutes have been held constitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States, and the very questions now raised by the plaintiff in error, the International Harvester Company of America, were settled long ago by this court in the case of Standard Oil Co. v. Missouri, 224 U. S. 270, 56 L. ed. 760, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 936.

Messrs. John T. Barker, W. T. Rutherford, W. M. Fitch, and Paul P. Prosser also filed a brief for defendant in error:

There is no Federal question in this case and the judgment of the Missouri supreme court should be affirmed.

Astor v. Merritt, 111 U. S. 202, 28 L. ed. 401, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 47 L. ed. 299, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Lohmeyer v. St. Louis Cordage Co. 214 Mo. 688, 113 S. W. 1108; Brown v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 175 Mo. 189, 74 S. W. 973; Ross v. Grand Pants Co. 241 Mo. 299, 145 S. W. 410.

The Missouri anti-trust statutes are constitutional, and have been held so many times.

Standard Oil Co. v. Missouri, 224 U. S. 270, 56 L. ed. 760, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 936, 218 Mo. 368, 116 S. W. 902; State ex rel. Barker v. Assurance Co. 251 Mo. 278, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 955, 158 S. W. 640; State ex rel. Crow v. Continental Tobacco Co. 177 Mo. 37, 75 S. W. 737; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 209, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 31, 28 L. ed. 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co.

Digitized by Google

v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; State ex rel. Major v. International Harvester Co. 237 Mo. 369, 141 S. W. 672.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Information in the nature of quo warranto, brought in the supreme court of the state, to exclude plaintiff in error from the corporate rights, privileges, and franchises exercised [203] or enjoyed by it under the laws of the state, that they be forfeited, and all or such portion of its property as the court may deem proper be confiscated, or, in lieu thereof, a fine be imposed upon it in "punishment of the perversion, usurpation, abuse, and misuse of franchises."

The ground of the action is the alleged violation of the statutes of the state passed respectively in 1899 and 1909, and entitled "Pools, Trusts, and Conspiracies," and "Pools, Trusts, and Conspiracies and Discriminations."

The facts alleged in the information are these: Plaintiff in error is a Wisconsin corporation engaged in the manufacture and sale of agricultural implements, binders, mowers, etc., and was licensed on the 5th of April, 1892, to do business in Missouri under the name of the Milwaukee Harvester Company, and on September 18, 1902, became licensed to do and engaged in such business in the state. In that year the International Harvester Company of New Jersey was organized with a capital stock of $120,000,000 for the purpose of effecting a combination of plaintiff in error and certain other companies to restrain competition in the manufacture and sale of such agricultural implements in Missouri, and the New Jersey company has maintained plaintiff in error as its sole selling agent in Missouri. Before the combination the companies combined were competitors of one another and of other corporations, individuals, and partnerships engaged in the same business in the state, and that thereby the people of the state, and particularly the retail dealers and farmers of the state, received the benefit of competition in the purchase and sale of farm implements. The combination was designed and made with a view to lessen, and it tended to lessen, free competition in such implements, and thereby the said corporations entered into and became members of a pool, trust, combination, and agreement. In furtherance thereof, and for the purpose of giving the International Harvester Company of New Jersey a [204] monopoly of the business of manufacturing and selling agricultural implements in the state, and for the purpose of preventing competition in the sale thereof, plaintiff in error has compelled the retail dealers in each county of the state who desire to handle and sell or act as agent for it to refrain from selling implements manufactured or sold by competing companies or persons. By reason thereof competition in such implements has been restrained, prices controlled, the quantity of such implements has been fixed and limited, and plaintiff in error has been able to secure, and for several years enjoy, from 85 per cent to 90 per cent of the business, all to the great damage and loss of the people of the state, and by reason of its participation in the pool, trust, and combination, and by reason of the acts and things done by it, plaintiff in error has been guilty of an illegal, wilful, and malicious perversion and abuse of its franchises, privileges, and licenses granted to it by the state.

The answer of plaintiff in error denied that it had become a party to any combination, or that, in its transactions, there was any purpose to restrain or lessen competition, or that trade had been or was restrained.

The case was referred to a special commissioner to take the evidence and report his conclusions. He found, as alleged in the information, that the International Harvester Company of New Jersey was a combination of the properties and businesses of formerly competing harvester companies, and plaintiff in error being one of such companies, and thereafter, by selling the New Jersey company's products in Missouri, had violated the Missouri statutes against pools, trusts, and conspiracies.

In exceptions to the report of the special commissioner plaintiff in error urged that the statute of Missouri violated the equality clause and due process clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, "(1) Because said statute arbitrarily discriminates [205] between persons making or selling products and commodities and persons selling labor and service of all kinds: In that each section of said statute applies only to articles of merchandise, and not to labor or services and the like, the prices of which are equally and similarly determined by competition, and may be equally and similarly the subject of combination and conspiracy to the detriment of the public. (2) Because said statute arbitrarily discriminates between the makers and sellers of products and commodities and the purchasers thereof: It prohibits manufacturers and sellers from making contracts or arrangements intended or tending to increase the market price of the articles they make or sell, but does not prohibit purchasers from combining to fix or reduce the market price of the commodities or articles to be purchased by them. (3) Because said statute, as construed by the commissioner, unreasonably and arbitrarily interferes with plaintiff in error's right to make proper and reasonable business contracts, and deprives it of property rights in respect thereto."

Digitized by Google

These exceptions were urged and argued in the supreme court upon the filing of the commissioner's report. Judgment was entered upon the report, in which it was adjudged that by reason of the violation of the statutes of the state, as charged in the information, plaintiff in error had forfeited the license theretofore granted to it to do business in the state, and it was adjudged that the license be forfeited and canceled and the company ousted from its rights and franchises granted by the state to do business in the state, and a fine of $50,000 was imposed upon it. It was, however, provided that upon payment of the fine on or before the 1st of January, 1912, and immediately ceasing all connection with the International Harvester Company of New Jersey and the corporations and copartnerships with which it had combined, and not continuing and maintaining the unlawful agreement and combination [206] with them to lessen and destroy competition in the sale of the enumerated farm implements, and giving satisfactory evidence thereof to the court, the judgment of ouster should be suspended. The company was given until March 1, 1912, "to file its proof of willingness" to comply with the judgment. It was also adjudged that upon a subsequent violation of the statute "the suspension of the writ of ouster shall be removed" by the court "and absolute ouster be enforced," and to that end the court retained "its full and complete jurisdiction over the cause." 237 Mo. 369, 141 S. W. 672.

A motion is made to dismiss on the ground that plaintiff in error in its answer simply denied that it had violated the anti-trust laws of the state, and it is contended that by not alleging in its answer that those laws violated the Constitution of the United States, it waived such defense. It is further contended that because the Federal right was not asserted in the answer, the supreme court of the state could not have considered, and did not consider or decide it. Decisions of the supreme court of Missouri are cited to sustain the contentions. The decisions declare the proposition that constitutional questions must be raised at the first opportunity, or, as it is expressed in one of the cases (Brown v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 175 Mo. 185, 74 S. W. 973), "the protection of the Constitution must be timely and properly invoked in the trial court."

In Dahnke-Walker Mill. Co. v. Blake, 242 Mo. 31, 145 S. W. 438, it is said: "The rule of this court is that so grave a question [constitutional question] must be lodged at the first opportunity, or it will be deemed to have been waived. If it can be appropriately and naturally raised in the pleadings, and thereby be a question lodged in the record proper, such is the time and place to raise it;" and that it is too late to raise the question after judgment in a motion for new trial. In Hartzler v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 218 Mo. 562, 117 S. W. 1124, it was held: "The motion for a new trial was not [207] the first door for the question to enter, and in our later decisions we have ruled that a question of such gravity must be raised as soon as orderly procedure will allow. This in order that the trial court may be treated fairly, and the question get into the case under correct safeguards, and earmarked as of substance, and not mere color."

It is manifest, we think, that the court only intended to express the condition of appellate review to be that in the trial court constitutional questions should not be reserved until the case had gone to judgment on other issues, and then used to secure a new trial. The principle of the rulings is satisfied in the case at bar. It is, as we have seen, an original proceeding in the supreme court, and upon the report of the commissioner which brought the case to the court for decision of the issues and questions involved in it the Federal questions were made "under correct safeguards and earmarked as of substance, and not mere color." It is true the court has not referred to them in its opinion, but we cannot regard its silence as a condemnation of the time or manner at or in which they were raised. The motion to dismiss is therefore denied.

The assignments of error necessarily involve a consideration of the statutes. The relevant provisions are contained in § 10,301 of the Revised Statutes of the state of 1909, and § 8,966 of the Revised Statutes of 1899.

Section 10,301 provides that "all arrangements, contracts, agreements, combinations, or understandings made or entered into between two or more persons, designed or made with a view to lessen, or which tend to lessen, lawful trade, or full and free competition in the importation, transportation, manufacture, or sale" in the state "of any product, commodity, or article, or thing bought and sold," and all such arrangements, etc., "which are designed or made with a view to increase, or which tend to increase, the market price of any product, commodity, or article, or thing, of any class or kind whatsoever, [208] bought and sold," are declared to be against public policy, unlawful and void, and those offending "shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a conspiracy in restraint of trade, and punished" as provided.

Digitized by Google

Section 8,966 provides that arrangements, etc., such as described in § 10,301, having like purpose, and all such arrangements, etc., "whereby or under the terms of which it is proposed, stipulated, provided, agreed, or understood that any person, association of persons, or corporations doing business in" the state, "shall deal in, sell, or offer for sale" in the state "any particular or specific article, product, or commodity, and shall not, during the continuance or existence of any such arrangement, . . . deal in, sell, or offer for sale," in the state, "any competing article, product, or commodity," are declared to be against public policy, unlawful and void; and any person offending "shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a conspiracy to defraud, and be subject to the penalties" provided.

By § 10,304 of the Revised Statutes of 1909, it is provided that domestic offending corporations shall forfeit their charters and all or any part of their property as shall be adjudged by a court of competent jurisdiction, or be fined in lieu of the forfeiture of charters or of property.

Foreign offending corporations shall forfeit their right to do business in the state, with forfeiture also of property, or, in lieu thereof, the payment of a fine.

In State ex rel. Hadley v. Standard Oil Co. 218 Mo. 1, 370, 372, 116 S. W. 902, the supreme court held that the anti-trust statutes of the state "are limited in their scope and operation to persons and corporations dealing in commodities, and do not include combinations of persons engaged in labor pursuits." And, justifying the statutes against a charge of illegal discrimination, the court further said that "it must be borne in mind that the differentiation between labor and property is so great that they do not belong to the same [209] general or natural classification of rights or things, and have never been so recognized by the common law or by legislative enactments."

Accepting the construction put upon the statute, but contesting its legality as thus construed, plaintiff in error makes three contentions: (1) The statutes, as so construed, unreasonably and arbitrarily limit the right of contract; (2) discriminate between the vendors of commodities and the vendors of labor and services; and (3) between vendors and purchasers of commodities.

(1) The specification under this head is that the supreme court found, it is contended, benefit—not injury—to the public had resulted from the alleged combination. Granting that this is not an overstatement of the opinion, the answer is immediate. It is too late in the day to assert against statutes which forbid combinations of competing companies that a particular combination was induced by good intentions and has had some good effect. Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 62, 52 L. ed. 681, 684, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. United States, 226 U. S. 20, 49, 57 L. ed. 107, 117, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9. The purpose of such statutes is to secure competition and preclude combinations which tend to defeat it. And such is explicitly the purpose and policy of the Missouri statutes; and they have been sustained by the Supreme Court. There is nothing in the Constitution of the United States which precludes a state from adopting and enforcing such policy. To so decide would be stepping backwards. Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 199 U. S. 401, 50 L. ed. 246, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Central Lumber Co. v. South Dakota, 226 U. S. 157, 57 L. ed. 164, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66.

It is true that the supreme court did not find a definite abuse of its powers by plaintiff in error, but it did find that there was an offending against the statute, a union of able competitors, and a cessation of their competition, and the court said: "Some of the smaller concerns that were competitors in the market have ceased their struggle for existence and retired from the field." This is one [210] of the results which the statute was intended to prevent,—the unequal struggle of individual effort against the power of combination. The preventing of the engrossment of trade is as definitely the object of the law as is price regulation of commodities, its prohibition being against combinations "made with a view to lessen, or which tend to lessen, lawful trade or full and free competition in the importation, transportation, manufacture, or sale of any commodity, or article, or thing bought or sold." See Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; United States v. American Tobacco Co. 221 U. S. 106, 55 L. ed. 663, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; United States v. Patten, 226 U. S. 525, 57 L. ed. 333, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 325, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

(2) and (3). These contentions may be considered together, both involving a charge of discrimination,—the one because the law does not embrace vendors of labor; the other because it does not cover purchasers of commodities as well as vendors of them. Both, therefore, invoke a consideration of the power of classification which may be exerted in the legislation of the state. And we shall presently see that power has very broad range. A classification is not invalid because of simple inequality. We said in Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 106, 43 L. ed. 909, 913, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609, by Mr. Justice Brewer: "The very idea of classification is that of inequality, so that it goes without saying that the fact of inequality in no manner determines the matter of constitutionality." Therefore, it may be there is restraint of competition in a combination of laborers and in a combination of purchasers, but that does not demonstrate that legislation which does not include either combination is illegal. Whether it would have been better policy to have made such comprehensive classification it is not our province to decide. In other words, whether a combination of wage earners or purchasers of commodities called for repression by law under the conditions in the state was for the legislature of the state to determine.

Digitized by Google

[211] In Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co. supra, a statute of Iowa was considered which made it unlawful for two or more fire insurance companies doing business in the state, or their officers or agents, to make or enter into combinations or agreements in relation to the rates to be charged for insurance, and certain other matters. The provision was held invalid by the circuit court of the United States for the district of Iowa on the ground of depriving of liberty of contract secured by the 14th Amendment and of the equal protection of the laws. This court reversed the decision, saying, after stating that there was a general statute of Iowa which prohibited combinations to fix the price of any article of merchandise or commodity, or to limit the quantity of the same produced or sold in the state: "Therefore, the act in question does little, if anything, more than apply and work out the policy of the general law in a particular case." Again, "If an evil is specially experienced in a particular branch of business, the Constitution embodies no prohibition of laws confined to the evil, or doctrinaire requirement that they should be couched in all-embracing terms." And, "If the legislature of the state of Iowa deems it desirable artificially to prevent, so far as it can, the substitution of combination for competition, this court cannot say that fire insurance may not present so conspicuous an example of what that legislature thinks an evil as to justify special treatment. The imposition of a more specific liability upon life and health insurance companies was held valid in Fidelity Mutual Life Asso. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 922, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662." Other cases were also cited in illustration.

Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co. supra, is especially apposite. It contains the elements of the case at bar and a decision upon them. It will be observed that the statute, which it was said declared the general policy of Iowa, was a prohibition against a combination of producers and sellers. There was the same distinction, therefore, between [212] vendors and purchasers of commodities as in the Missouri statute, and the same omission of prohibition of combinations of vendors of labor and services as in the Missouri law. The distinction and omission were continued when the policy of the state was extended to insurance companies. The law was not condemned because it went no farther,—because it did not prohibit the combination of all trades, businesses, and persons. We held that the omission was not for judicial cognizance, and that a court could not say that fire insurance might not present so conspicuous an example of what the legislature might think an evil "as to justify special treatment."

We might leave the discussion with that and the other cases. They decide that we are helped little in determining the legality of a legislative classification by making broad generalizations, and it is for a broad generalization that plaintiff in error contends,—indeed, a generalization which includes all the activities and occupations of life; and there is an enumeration of wage earners in emphasis of the discrimination in which manufacturers and sellers are singled out from all others. The contention is deceptive, and yet it is earnestly urged in various ways which it would extend this opinion too much to detail. "In dealing with restraints of trade," it is said, "the proper basis of classification is obviously neither in commodities nor services, nor in persons, but in restraints." A law, to be valid, therefore, is the inflexible deduction, cannot distinguish between "restraints," but must apply to all restraints, whatever their degree or effect or purpose; and that because the Missouri statute has not this universal operation it offends against the equality required by the 14th Amendment. This court has decided many times that a legislative classification does not have to possess such comprehensive extent. Classification must be accommodated to the problems of legislation; and we decided in Ozan Lumber Co. v. Union County

Digitized by Google

Nat. Bank, 207 U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. 195, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89, [213] that it may depend upon degrees of evil without being arbitrary or unreasonable. We repeated the ruling in Heath & M. Mfg. Co. v. Worst, 207 U. S. 338, 52 L. ed. 236, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114, in Engel v. O'Malley, 219 U. S. 128, 55 L. ed. 128, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190, in Mutual Loan Co. v. Martell, 222 U. S. 225, 56 L. ed. 175, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 529, and again in German Alliance Ins. Co. v. Lewis, 233 U. S. 389, 418, ante, 1011, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612. In the latter case a distinction was sustained against a charge of discrimination between stock fire insurance companies and farmers' mutual insurance companies insuring farm property. If this power of classification did not exist, to what straits legislation would be brought. We may illustrate by the examples furnished by plaintiff in error. In the enumeration of those who, it is contended, by combination are able to restrain trade, are included, among others, "persons engaged in domestic service" and "nurses;" and because these are not embraced in the law, plaintiff in error, it is contended, although a combination of companies uniting the power of $120,000,000, and able thereby to engross 85 per cent or 90 per cent of the trade in agricultural implements, is nevertheless beyond the competency of the legislature to prohibit. As great as the contrast is, a greater one may be made. Under the principle applied a combination of all the great industrial enterprises (and why not railroads as well?) could not be condemned unless the law applied as well to a combination of maidservants or to infants' nurses, whose humble functions preclude effective combination. Such contrasts and the considerations they suggest must be pushed aside by government, and a rigid and universal classification applied, is the contention of plaintiff in error; and to this the contention must come. Admit exceptions, and you admit the power of the legislature to select them. But it may be said the comparison of extremes is forensic, and, it may be, fallacious; that there may be powerful labor combinations as well as powerful industrial combinations, and weak ones of both, and that the law, to be valid, cannot distinguish [214] between strong and weak offenders. This may be granted (Engel v. O'Malley, 219 U. S. 128, 55 L. ed. 128, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190), but the comparisons are not without value in estimating the contentions of plaintiff in error. The foundation of our decision is, of course, the power of classification which a legislature may exercise, and the cases we have cited, as well as others which may be cited, demonstrate that some latitude must be allowed to the legislative judgment in selecting the "basis of community." We have said that it must be palpably arbitrary to authorize a judicial review of it, and that it cannot be disturbed by the courts "unless they can see clearly that there is no fair reason for the law that would not require with equal force its extension to others whom it leaves untouched." Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. May, 194 U. S. 267, 269, 48 L. ed. 971, 972, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Williams v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 79, 90, 54 L. ed. 673, 677, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 18 Ann. Cas. 865; Watson v. Maryland, 218 U. S. 173, 179, 54 L. ed. 987, 990, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644.

The instances of these cases are instructive. In the first there was a difference made between landowners as to liability for permitting certain noxious grasses to go to seed on the lands. In the second, the statute passed on made a difference between businesses in the solicitation of patronage on railroad trains and at depots. In the third, a difference based on the evidence of qualification of physicians was declared valid.

In Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Commercial Mill. Co. 218 U. S. 406, 54 L. ed. 1088, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 220, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59, 21 Ann. Cas. 815, a distinction was made between common carriers in the power to limit liability for negligence. In Engel v. O'Malley, supra, a distinction between bankers was sustained; and in Provident Inst. for Sav. v. Malone, 221 U. S. 660, 55 L. ed. 899, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1129, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 661, deposits in savings banks were distinguished from deposits in other banks in the application of the statute of limitations.

Other cases might be cited whose instances illustrate the same principle, in which this court has refused to accept the higher generalizations urged as necessary to the fulfilment of the constitutional guaranty of the equal protection [215] of the law, and in which we, in effect, held that it is competent for a legislature to determine upon what differences a distinction may be made for the purpose of statutory classification between objects otherwise having resemblances. Such power, of course, cannot be arbitrarily exercised. The distinction made must have reasonable basis. Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 44 L. ed. 392, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Petit v. Minnesota, 177 U. S. 164, 44 L. ed. 716, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S.

Digitized by Google

270, 45 L. ed. 186, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Griffith v. Connecticut, 218 U. S. 563, 54 L. ed. 1151, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Arkansas, 219 U. S. 453, 466, 55 L. ed. 290, 296, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 79, 55 L. ed. 369, 377, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 160; Fifth Ave. Coach Co. v. New York, 221 U. S. 467, 55 L. ed. 815, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Murphy v. California, 225 U. S. 623, 56 L. ed. 1229, 41 L.R.A. (N.S.) 153, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 697; Rosenthal v. New York, 226 U. S. 269, 270, 57 L. ed. 216, 217, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Cade, 233 U. S. 642, ante, 1135, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678.

And so in the case at bar. Whether the Missouri statute should have set its condemnation on restraints generally, prohibiting combined action for any purpose and to everybody, or confined it as the statute does to manufacturers and vendors of articles, and permitting it to purchasers of such articles; prohibiting it to sellers of commodities and permitting it to sellers of services, was a matter of legislative judgment; and we cannot say that the distinctions made are palpably arbitrary, which we have seen is the condition of judicial review. It is to be remembered that the question presented is of the power of the legislature, not the policy of the exercise of the power. To be able to find fault, therefore, with such policy, is not to establish the invalidity of the law based upon it.

It is said that the statute as construed by the supreme court of the state comes within our ruling in Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431, but we do not think so. If it did, we should, of course, apply that ruling here.

Judgment affirmed.

---

[216] INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY OF AMERICA, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 216–224.)

Error to state court — following decision below — statutory construction.

1. The meaning derived by the highest state court by construing together several statutes somewhat far apart in time, and of seemingly contradictory import, is as conclusive upon the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to the state court as though such legislation were embodied in a single act.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2124–2151, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — indefiniteness in criminal statutes — state anti-trust laws.

2. The uncertainty as to what the selling price of an article would have been had there been no combination of its manufacturers renders invalid convictions under the Kentucky anti-trust legislation (Ky. Const. 1891, § 198; Carroll's Ky. Stat. §§ 3915–3917; Ky. Laws 1906, chap. 117), under which, as construed by the state courts, combinations for the purpose of controlling prices are made unlawful only when for the purpose, or with the effect, of fixing a price for an article greater or less than its real value, which is further declared by such courts to be the market value under fair competition and under normal conditions.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 9; Criminal Law, I. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 276, 291, 292.]

Argued April 23 and 24, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

THREE WRITS of Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review judgments which affirmed convictions respectively of the Circuit Courts of Bullitt, Grayson, and Todd Counties, in that state, of combining to control prices. Reversed.

See same case below in 276, 147 Ky. 564, 144 S. W. 1064; in 291, 148 Ky. 572, 147 S. W. 1199; in 292, 147 Ky. 795, 146 S. W. 12.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Alexander Pope Humphrey and Edgar A. Bancroft argued the cause, and, with Mr. Victor A. Remy, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

To hold, as the decision below does, that

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

As to state decisions and laws as rules of decision in Federal courts—see notes to Elmendorf v. Taylor, 6 L. ed. U. S. 290; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 6 L. ed. U. S. 583; United States ex rel. Buts v. Muscatine, 19 L. ed. U. S. 490; Clark v. Graham, 5 L. ed. U. S. 334; Mitchell v. Burlington, 18 L. ed. U. S. 351; Forepaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 5 L.R.A. 508; and Snare & T. Co. v. Friedman, 40 L.R.A. (N.S.) 380.

On illegal trusts under modern anti-trust acts—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689.

Digitized by Google

a merchant cannot take into consideration the superior quality of his goods, in fixing their price, not only deprives him of all freedom of contract, but denies him equal protection.

Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 94, 104, 46 L. ed. 92, 103, 106, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

This question was properly saved under the Kentucky practice.

Louisville, H. & St. L. R. Co. v. Roberts, 144 Ky. 824, 139 S. W. 1073.

In Owen County Burley Tobacco Soc. v. Brumback, 128 Ky. 137, 107 S. W. 710, and Com. v. International Harvester Co. 131 Ky. 551, 133 Am. St. Rep. 256, 115 S. W. 703, the court of appeals held that the constitutional provision (Ky. Const. § 198) and the acts of 1890 and 1906 were to be construed together, and the act of 1906 was in effect an amendment of the act of 1890; that under each the offense consisted in continuing to fix prices or to sell goods above or below their real value.

The anti-trust law was thus rendered too obscure and indefinite for a penal statute.

United States v. Sharp, Pet. C. C. 118, Fed. Cas. No. 16,264; United States v. Brewer, 139 U. S. 278, 288, 35 L. ed. 190, 193, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538; Com. v. International Harvester Co. 131 Ky. 551, 133 Am. St. Rep. 256, 115 S. W. 703.

The indefiniteness and obscurity of the law were emphasized by the later Kentucky decisions.

International Harvester Co. v. Com. 137 Ky. 668, 126 S. W. 352, 144 Ky. 403, 138 S. W. 248.

The act of 1890 was held not to be limited by § 198 of the Kentucky Constitution.

Com. v. Grinstead, 108 Ky. 59, 55 S. W. 720, 57 S. W. 471; Com. v. Bavarian Brewing Co. 112 Ky. 925, 66 S. W. 1016.

The sole purpose of the act of 1906 was to legalize all contracts for pooling farm products.

Owen County Burley Tobacco Soc. v. Brumback, 128 Ky. 137, 107 S. W. 710.

The act of 1908 aided and emphasized the purpose of the act of 1906, by making it a misdemeanor for breaking, or inducing another to break, such pooling contract. It was held, however, to apply only to pools of farm products.

O'Bannion v. Com. — Ky. —, 113 S. W. 907; Com. v. Hodges, 137 Ky. 233, 125 S. W. 689; Collins v. Com. 141 Ky. 565, 133 S. W. 233; Malone v. Com. 141 Ky. 570, 133 S. W. 235.

The character and explanation of this class of legislation are common knowledge.

Census 1910, vol. II. p. 702: vol. VI. pp. 606–608, 617; vol. IX. pp. 391, 392; 15 Enc. Britannica, 11th ed. p. 741c; Robinson v. Van Hooser, 116 C. C. A. 294, 196 Fed. 621; Steers v. United States, 112 C. C. A. 423, 192 Fed. 3.

The forced construction given to the statutes in Com. v. International Harvester Co. 131 Ky. 551, 133 Am. St. Rep. 256, 115 S. W. 703, does not cure the vital defect.

Even as construed, the law denies equal protection, because, in the case of farmers, the combination is judicially presumed not to seek an enhancement of price above the real value.

Owen County Burley Tobacco Soc. v. Brumback, 128 Ky. 137, 107 S. W. 710; Com. v. Hodges, 137 Ky. 233, 125 S. W. 689; Collins v. Com. 141 Ky. 565, 133 S. W. 233; Malone v. Com. 141 Ky. 570, 133 S. W. 235.

Whereas, in the case of manufacturers and dealers, including plaintiff in error, the legal presumption indulged was that any increase in price following a combination is an increase above the real value.

International Harvester Co. v. Com. 137 Ky. 677, 126 S. W. 352, 144 Ky. 410, 138 S. W. 248, 147 Ky. 564, 144 S. W. 1070.

The statutes, as construed and enforced, furnish a double standard, and deny the equal protection of the law. No combination among farmers has been prosecuted, though their many pools have doubled or trebled the price of tobacco, while the advance in prices of the different machines sold by plaintiff in error has amounted only to from 5 to 15 per cent. The 14th Amendment, against denial of the equal protection of the laws, applies to all agencies of the state: it forbids discrimination, not only in the law itself, but in its unequal enforcement.

Henderson v. New York Immigration Comrs. (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 268, 23 L. ed. 543, 547; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 346, 25 L. ed. 676, 679, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 547; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

As construed and enforced, the Kentucky anti-trust law falls within the scope of Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 560, 46 L. ed. 679, 690, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431, and within the reasoning of the opinion in Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 104, 105, 112, 46 L. ed. 92, 106, 107, 109, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

A court cannot, by judicial legislation, save a statute clearly unconstitutional upon its face. The statute itself must preserve the fundamental, constitutional rights of parties. They cannot be left to the discretion of courts.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock

Digitized by Google

Yards Co. 212 U. S. 133, 143, 144, 53 L. ed. 441, 445, 446, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246.

Mr. James Garnett, Attorney General of Kentucky, and Mr. Charles Carroll argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. R. Mallory, J. Robert Layman, and Frank E. Daugherty, filed a brief for defendant in error:

This court will consider the construction placed upon the Constitution or statute of a state by the court of last resort in that state, as a correct construction, and determine whether or not that Constitution or statute, so construed, is prohibited by any provision of the Federal Constitution.

National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, 197 U. S. 130, 49 L. ed. 694, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 73, 55 L. ed. 375, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 160.

Under the laws of Kentucky prior to the institution of the instant cases, and upon which they were based, it was no offense to form a pool, trust, or combination for the purpose of receiving a higher price for the commodity or article pooled, or concerning which the combination or trust was formed. Trusts, pools, and combinations may be formed for the purpose of selling manufactured articles or agricultural products at a higher price than before the combination, and carried out by actual sale at a higher price. The law only prohibits a trust or combination formed for the purpose of selling the manufactured articles or agricultural products at a price in excess of their real or market value. This is all the laws of Kentucky prohibit.

Com. v. International Harvester Co. 131 Ky. 551, 133 Am. St. Rep. 256, 115 S. W. 703; Com. v. Hodges, 137 Ky. 233, 125 S. W. 689.

The standard adopted for determining whether or not there has been a violation of the Kentucky anti-trust law is fixed and certain.

Com. v. International Harvester Co. 131 Ky. 576, 133 Am. St. Rep. 256, 115 S. W. 703, 137 Ky. 677, 126 S. W. 352, 144 Ky. 410, 138 S. W. 248, 147 Ky. 564, 144 S. W. 1070.

If the policy adopted by the Kentucky courts is reasonable, this court will not review it.

Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 47 L. ed. 323, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 55 L. ed. 328, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; McLean v. Arkansas, 211 U. S. 539, 53 L. ed. 315, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Hunter v. Pittsburgh, 207 U. S. 176, 52 L. ed. 158, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

The question as to instructions was not raised in the Kentucky courts, hence cannot avail here.

Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 199, 43 L. ed. 666, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Bolin v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 90, 44 L. ed. 384, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287.

The statutes as construed and enforced do not deny the equal protection of the law.

Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 547; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Louisiana & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 133, 53 L. ed. 441, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error was prosecuted, convicted, and fined in three different counties for having entered into an agreement with other named companies for the purpose of controlling the price of harvesters, etc., manufactured by them, and of enhancing it above their real value; and for having so fixed and enhanced the price, and for having sold their harvesters, etc., at a price in excess of their real value, in pursuance of the agreement alleged. The judgments were affirmed by the court of appeals. 147 Ky. 564, 144 S. W. 1064, id. 144 Ky. 795, 146 S. W. 12, 148 Ky. 572, 147 S. W. 1199. The plaintiff in error saved its rights under the 14th Amendment and brought the cases here.

The law of Kentucky in its present form is the result of the construction of several statutes somewhat far apart in time and of seemingly contradictory import. It was argued that construction could not take the place of express language in a statute, and Louisville & N. [220] R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 144, 53 L. ed. 441, 446, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246, was cited for the proposition. But the case gives no sanction to it. The point there was that a defect in a law could not be cured by precautions in a judgment; not that what seemed a defect could not be cured by the construction given to the words by the court having final authority to declare their intent. We follow the Kentucky court of appeals in taking what they derive from the legislation of the state as if it were embodied in a single act.

The history in brief is this: By an act of May 20, 1890, agreements for the purpose of fixing or limiting the amount or quantity of any article of merchandise to be produced or manufactured, mined, bought, or sold; as also combinations by corporations with others to put the business of the combination under control with intent to limit, fix, or change the price of articles of commerce, or in any way to diminish the output of such articles, were made punishable by fine, imprisonment, or both. Carroll's Stat. (Ky.) §§ 3915–3917. In 1891 a new Constitution was adopted by the state, by § 198 of which it was made the duty of the general assembly "from time to time, as necessity may require, to enact such laws as may be necessary to prevent all trusts . . . from combining to depreciate below its real value any article, or to enhance the cost of any article above its real value." (This was held not to repeal the earlier statute. Com. v. International Harvester Co. 131 Ky. 551, 566, 133 Am. St. Rep. 256, 115 S. W. 703). But Kentucky grows tobacco, and the farmers were dissatisfied with the prices that they were able to get, being oppressed, as they alleged, by a combination of buyers. So, on March 21, 1906, a statute was enacted that made it lawful for any number of persons to combine the crops of wheat, tobacco, corn, oats, hay, or other farm products raised by them, for the purpose of obtaining a higher price than they could get by selling them separately. Session Laws 1906, chap. 117, p. 429. And later, by an act of [221] March 13, 1908, not only was the legality of these last-mentioned combinations reaffirmed, but they were protected by injunction, and the sale by or purchase from the owner contrary to his agreement was punished by a fine.

Digitized by Google

When the court of appeals came to deal with the act of 1890, the Constitution of 1891, and the act of 1906, it reached the conclusion, which now may be regarded as the established construction of the three, taken together, that by interaction and to avoid questions of constitutionality, they were to be taken to make any combination for the purpose of controlling prices lawful unless for the purpose or with the effect of fixing a price that was greater or less than the real value of the article. Owen County Burley Tobacco Soc. v. Brumback, 128 Ky. 137, 151, 107 S. W. 710; Com. v. International Harvester Co. 131 Ky. 551, 568, 571–573, 133 Am. St. Rep. 256, 115 S. W. 703; International Harvester Co. v. Com. 137 Ky. 668, 126 S. W. 352. The result seems to be that combinations of tobacco growers are held to do no more than restore an equilibrium that has been disturbed by a combination of buyers (Owen County Burley Tobacco Soc. v. Brumback, 128 Ky. 137, 152, 107 S. W. 710; Collins v. Com. 141 Ky. 564, 133 S. W. 233); whereas, if prices rise after a combination of manufacturers, it very nearly is presumed that the advance is above the real value, and that there is a crime. International Harvester Co. v. Com. 144 Ky. 403, 410, 411, 138 S. W. 248.

The plaintiff in error contends that the law as construed offers no standard of conduct that it is possible to know. To meet this, in the present and earlier cases the real value is declared to be "the market value under fair competition, and under normal market conditions." 147 Ky. 566. Com. v. International Harvester Co. 131 Ky. 551, 576, 133 Am. St. Rep. 256, 115 S. W. 703; International Harvester Co. v. Com. 137 [222] Ky. 668, 677, 678, 126 S. W. 352. We have to consider whether, in application, this is more than an illusory form of words, when, nine years after it was incorporated, a combination invited by the law is required to guess at its peril what its product would have sold for if the combination had not existed and nothing else violently affecting values had occurred. It seems that since 1902 the price of the machinery sold by the plaintiff in error has risen from 10 to 15 per cent. The testimony on its behalf showed that meantime the cost of materials used had increased from 20 to 25 per cent and labor 27½ per cent. Whatever doubt there may be about the exact figures, we hardly suppose the fact of a rise to be denied. But, in order to reach what is called the real value,—a price from which all effects of the combination are to be eliminated,—the plaintiff in error is told that it cannot avail itself of the rise in materials because it was able to get them cheaper through one of the subsidiary companies of the combination, and that the saving through the combination more than offset all the rise in cost.

This perhaps more plainly concerns the justice of the law in its bearing upon the plaintiff in error, when compared with its operation upon tobacco raisers who are said to have doubled or trebled their prices, than on the constitutional question proposed. But it also concerns that, for it shows how impossible it is to think away the principal facts of the case as it exists, and say what would have been the price in an imaginary world. Value is the effect in exchange of the relative social desire for compared objects expressed in terms of a common denominator. It is a fact, and generally is more or less easy to ascertain. But what it would be with such increase of a never extinguished competition as it might be guessed would have existed had the combination not been made, with exclusion of the actual effect of other abnormal influences, and, it would seem, with exclusion also of any increased [223] efficiency in the machines, but with inclusion of the effect of the combination so far as it was economically beneficial to itself and the community, is a problem that no human ingenuity could solve. The reason is not the general uncertainties of a jury trial, but that the elements necessary to determine the imaginary ideal are uncertain both in nature and degree of effect to the acutest commercial mind. The very community, the intensity of whose wish relatively to its other competing desires determines the price that it would give, has to be supposed differently organized and subject to other influences than those under which it acts. It is easy to put simple cases; but the one before us is at least as complex as we have supposed, and the law must be judged by it. In our opinion it cannot stand.

Digitized by Google

We regard this decision as consistent with Nash v. United States, 229 U. S. 373, 377, 57 L. ed. 1232, 1235, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780, in which it was held that a criminal law is not unconstitutional merely because it throws upon men the risk of rightly estimating a matter of degree,—what is an undue restraint of trade. That deals with the actual, not with an imaginary condition other than the facts. It goes no further than to recognize that, as with negligence, between the two extremes of the obviously illegal and the plainly lawful there is a gradual approach, and that the complexity of life makes it impossible to draw a line in advance without an artificial simplification that would be unjust. The conditions are as permanent as anything human, and a great body of precedents on the civil side, coupled with familiar practice, make it comparatively easy for common sense to keep to what is safe. But if business is to go on, men must unite to do it and must sell their wares. To compel them to guess, on peril of indictment, what the community would have given for them if the continually changing conditions were other than they are, to an uncertain extent; to divine prophetically what the reaction of only partially determinate [224] facts would be upon the imaginations and desires of purchasers, is to exact gifts that mankind does not possess.

Judgments reversed.

Mr. Justice McKenna and Mr. Justice Pitney dissent.

KEOKEE CONSOLIDATED COKE COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
W. W. TAYLOR, Isaac Taylor, James Taylor, and S. T. Witt, Partners under the Firm Name of W. W. Taylor, Sons & Witt. (No. 372.)

KEOKEE CONSOLIDATED COKE COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
J. P. KELLY, A. P. Hickam, and G. E. Woliver, Partners under the Firm Name of Kelly, Hickam Company. (No. 373.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 224-227.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — freedom to contract — redemption of store orders in money.

1. Freedom to contract is not infringed contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., by Va. act of February 13, 1888, amending and re-enacting Laws 1887, chap. 391, § 3, forbidding any person, firm, or corporation engaged in mining coal or ore, or manufacturing iron or steel, or any other kind of manufacturing, to issue, for the payment of labor, any order unless the same purports to be redeemable for its face value in lawful money of the United States.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 605-607, 894, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — classification — redemption of store orders in money.

2. Singling out persons, firms, or corporations engaged in mining and manufacturing as the ones to be forbidden to issue orders for the payment of labor not purporting to be redeemable in money, as is done by Va. act of February 13, 1888, amending and re-enacting Laws 1887, chap. 391, § 3, does not render such statute invalid under U. S. Const., 14th Amend., as class legislation denying the equal protection of the laws.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 5, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 372, 373.]

Submitted May 7, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

TWO WRITS of Error to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of Virginia to review judgments which affirmed judgments of the Circuit Court of Lee County, in that state, in favor of plaintiffs in NOTE.—On validity and effect of statutes requiring wages to be paid in lawful money —see note to Avent-Beattyville Coal Co. v. Com. 28 L.R.A. 273.

On the constitutionality of statutes restricting contracts and business, generally —see note to State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

Digitized by Google

actions of assumpsit brought upon store orders. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. F. Bullitt submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. R. T. Irvine was on the brief:

The Virginia act complained of is repugnant to the 1st section of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, because it is class legislation, and because it seeks to deprive certain citizens of their liberty and property without due process of law.

State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 286; Millett v. People, 117 Ill. 294, 57 Am. Rep. 869, 7 N. E. 631; Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 22 L.R.A. 340, 37 Am. St. Rep. 206, 35 N. E. 62; Avent-Beattyville Coal Co. v. Com. 96 Ky. 218, 28 L.R.A. 273, 28 S. W. 502; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L.R.A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; Frorer v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L.R.A. 492, 31 N. E. 395.

The Virginia act cannot be upheld as a valid exercise of the police power.

Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133.

An act of the legislature is certainly unconstitutional if it does not apply to all of a class; but the reverse does not follow—it may apply to all of a class and still be unconstitutional.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 561; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

If an act of the legislature is clearly repugnant to the Constitution, then it is not saved by the police power doctrine.

State ex rel. Jones v. Froehlich, 115 Wis. 32, 58 L.R.A. 757, 95 Am. St. Rep. 894, 91 N. W. 115.

The usual statement of the "police power" doctrine is much too broad.

People v. Jackson & M. Pl. Road Co. 9 Mich. 307.

Mr. J. C. Noel submitted the cause for defendants in error. Mr. C. T. Duncan was on the brief:

The statute in question does not conflict either with the state or Federal Constitution.

26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 574; Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 349, 45 L. ed. 228, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Cooper v. Telfair, 4 Dall. 18, 1 L. ed. 723; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Knoxville Iron Co. v. Harbison, 183 U. S. 17, 46 L. ed. 59, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Lawrence v. Rutland R. Co. 80 Vt. 370, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 350, 67 Atl. 1091, 13 Ann. Cas. 475; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Pine Grove Twp. v. Talcott, 19 Wall. 666, 22 L. ed. 227; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Jones v. Brim, 165 U. S. 180, 41 L. ed. 677, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282, 1 Am. Neg. Rep. 547; Trehy v. Marye, 100 Va. 40, 40 S. E. 126; Virginia Development Co. v. Crozer Iron Co. 90 Va. 126, 44 Am. St. Rep. 893, 17 S. E. 806.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

These are actions of assumpsit brought by the defendants in error upon orders signed by employees of the plaintiff in error and addressed to it, directing it to pay to bearer "in merchandise only from your store," to the value specified. These orders were upon scrip issued by the plaintiff in error as an advance of monthly wages in payment for labor performed, and the only controversy between the parties arises from the refusal of the plaintiff in error to pay the indicated amounts in money. The facts were agreed, the circuit court gave judgment for the plaintiffs, and a writ of error was refused by the supreme court of appeals. The ground of the judgment was an act of February 13, 1888, amending and re-enacting an act of 1887, chap. 391, § 3, forbidding any person, firm, or corporation engaged in mining coal or ore, or manufacturing iron or steel or any other kind of manufacturing, to issue for the payment of labor any order unless the same purported to be redeemable for its face value in lawful money of the United States. The plaintiff in error saved its rights under the 14th Amendment, and, when the court of appeals refused to hear the cases, brought them here. The writ of error was allowed on September 25, 1912. Norfolk & S. Turnp. Co. v. Virginia, 225 U. S. 264, 269, 56 L. ed. 1082, 1086, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 828.

Of course we do not go behind the construction given to the state law by the state courts. The objections that are urged here are that the statute interferes with freedom of contract, and, more especially, that it is class legislation [227] of a kind supposed to be inconsistent with the 14th Amendment; a West Virginia decision upon a similar statute being cited to that effect. State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L.R.A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285. The former of these objections, however, is disposed of by Knoxville Iron Co. v.

Digitized by Google

Harbison, 183 U. S. 13, 46 L. ed. 55, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1, and Dayton Coal & I. Co. v. Barton, 183 U. S. 23, 46 L. ed. 61, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 5.

It is more pressed that the act discriminates unconstitutionally against certain classes. But while there are differences of opinion as to the degree and kind of discrimination permitted by the 14th Amendment, it is established by repeated decisions that a statute aimed at what is deemed an evil, and hitting it presumably where experience shows it to be most felt, is not to be upset by thinking up and enumerating other instances to which it might have been applied equally well, so far as the court can see. That is for the legislature to judge unless the case is very clear. Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 81, 55 L. ed. 369, 378, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 160; Central Lumber Co. v. South Dakota, 226 U. S. 157, 160, 57 L. ed. 164, 169, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Patsone v. Pennsylvania, 232 U. S. 138, 144, ante, 539, 543, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281. The suggestion that others besides mining and manufacturing companies may keep shops and pay their workmen with orders on themselves for merchandise is not enough to overthrow a law that must be presumed to be deemed by the legislature coextensive with the practical need.

Judgments affirmed.

---

[228] UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.
BUFFALO PITTS COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 228–236.)

United States — implied contract — use of mortgaged property.

The United States must be held liable upon an implied contract to pay the chattel mortgagee of a traction engine for its use by the government in the Reclamation Service in completing a contract which the public contractor, who was the chattel mortgagor, had assigned to the United States, where the government's representatives knew of the existence of the mortgage, and represented that it would continue to use the engine, and that, if left in its possession, payment for the use would be recommended, and the mortgagee left such engine with the government, relying upon such representations, and upon the fact that its title under the mortgage, because of the mortgagor's breach of condition, was undisputed, and consented to such retention of possession by the government in the expectation of receiving due compensation, —especially since the government was authorized by the act of June 17, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 1093, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 662), § 7, under which the improvement was being made, to acquire any property necessary for the purpose, and, if need be, to appropriate it.

[For other cases, see United States, VI. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 369.]

Submitted May 15, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Western District of New York against the United States for the value of the use of certain property under an implied contract for payment. Affirmed.

See same case below, 114 C. C. A. 119, 193 Fed. 905.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Underwood submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The United States cannot be sued in their own courts without their consent, and have never permitted themselves to be sued in any court for torts committed in their name by their officers. Nor can the settled distinction, in this respect, between contract and tort, be evaded by framing the claim as upon an implied contract.

Hill v. United States, 149 U. S. 593, 598, 37 L. ed. 862, 864, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1011.

In order to give the court of claims jurisdiction under the act of March 3, 1887, the demand sued on must be founded on a convention between the parties,—a coming together of minds; and contracts or obligations implied by law from torts do not meet this condition.

Harley v. United States, 198 U. S. 229, 49 L. ed. 1029, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634.

Implied contracts in fact do not arise from the denials and contentions of parties, but from their common understanding in the ordinary course of business whereby mutual intent to contract, without formal words therefor, is shown.

Knapp v. United States, 46 Ct. Cl. 643.

No officer of the government, however high in rank, had authority to make a valid contract to pay plaintiff's claim unless the special fund provided by Congress therefor was sufficient to cover same.

Hooe v. United States, 218 U. S. 322, 54 L. ed. 1055, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85.

The engine having been taken under a claim of right, and not in recognition of a paramount title in plaintiff, no action upon an implied contract will lie.

Hill v. United States, 149 U. S. 593, 599, 37 L. ed. 862, 864, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1011;

Digitized by Google

Gibbons v. United States, 8 Wall. 269, 275, 19 L. ed. 453, 454; Langford v. United States, 101 U. S. 341, 344, 25 L. ed. 1010, 1012.

Mr. Edward Payson White submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The Buffalo Pitts Company was the lawful owner of the engine, and became entitled to possession of it as soon as the mortgagor attempted to dispose of it to the government, unless the government exercised the right of eminent domain.

Jones, Chat. Mortg. § 1; Conard v. Atlantic Ins. Co. 1 Pet. 386, 7 L. ed. 189; Hall v. Sampson, 35 N. Y. 274, 91 Am. Dec. 56; Coles v. Clark, 3 Cush. 402; Kitchen v. Schuster, 14 N. M. 164, 89 Pac. 261; First Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 13 N. M. 551, 86 Pac. 622.

The United States is bound to pay the Buffalo Pitts Company for devoting its property to public use.

Gibbons v. United States, 8 Wall. 269, 19 L. ed. 453; United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 455, 465, 47 L. ed. 542, 546, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349.

The law implies a contract that the United States will pay the Buffalo Pitts Company just compensation.

Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 450, 459, 17 L. ed. 805, 807; 1 Parsons, Contr. p. 5; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 1078; Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 179, 20 L. ed. 557, 560; United States v. Jones, 109 U. S. 513, 27 L. ed. 1015, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; United States v. Great Falls Mfg. Co. 112 U. S. 645, 28 L. ed. 846, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Hollister v. Benedict & B. Mfg. Co. 113 U. S. 59, 28 L. ed. 901, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717; United States v. Palmer, 128 U. S. 262, 32 L. ed. 442, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104; United States v. Berdan Fire-Arms Mfg. Co. 156 U. S. 552, 39 L. ed. 530, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420; Dooley v. United States, 182 U. S. 222, 45 L. ed. 1074, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762; United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 47 L. ed. 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; United States v. Cornell S. B. Co. 202 U. S. 184, 50 L. ed. 987, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; United States v. Russell, 13 Wall. 623, 20 L. ed. 474.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought by the Buffalo Pitts Company in the circuit court of the United States for the western district of New York to recover for the value of the use of a certain engine which it was alleged the United States was under an implied contract to pay. The action was begun under the Tucker act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 505, chap. 359, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 752), and the court of original jurisdiction, as required by the statute, § 7, made findings of fact and conclusions of law under which it held the government liable and rendered judgment for the plaintiff's claim. On writ of error the circuit court of appeals affirmed that judgment (114 C. C. A. 119, 193 Fed. 905), and the case is brought here.

The findings of fact show that: The plaintiff is a corporation organized under the laws of New York, and having its principal place of business at Buffalo, New York, manufacturing, among other things, traction engines. On May 20, 1905, it sold a traction engine with appurtenances to the Taylor-Moore Construction Company, delivered [230] at Roswell, New Mexico, and took a chattel mortgage thereon to secure the payment of $1,600 of the purchase price. The chattel mortgage conveyed the engine and appurtenances to the plaintiff on condition that if the mortgagor should fail to pay the sum of $1,600 according to certain notes, or should attempt to dispose of or injure the property, or remove the same from the county of Chaves, New Mexico, or if the mortgagor should not take proper care of the property, or if the mortgagee should at any time deem itself unsafe or insecure, then the whole amount unpaid should be considered immediately due and payable, and it should be lawful for the mortgagee to take the property and remove the same, and hold or sell it and all equity of redemption at public auction, with notice as provided by law. The mortgage was duly recorded May 22, 1905, and no part of the money thereby secured has ever been paid to the mortgagee, which has ever since been the owner and holder of the mortgage. The engine was put to work by the construction company upon the so-called Hondo Project, being part of the Reclamation Service undertaken by the Department of the Interior of the United States, which work was being prosecuted under a contract between the United States and the construction company, the engine being located at or near Roswell, New Mexico.

The construction company having made default in the performance of its contract, on or about June 7, 1905, work was suspended thereunder, and the construction company then assigned all its interest in the contract to the United States, which, pursuant to the contract, took possession of all material, supplies, and equipment belonging to the construction company, including the engine and appurtenances. On June 16, 1905, at Roswell, New Mexico, the plaintiff, by its agents, made a demand upon the defendant through Wendell M.

Digitized by Google

Reed, District Engineer of the Reclamation Service under the Department of the Interior, [231] for the possession of the engine and appurtenances, which the defendant then and there refused, and thereafter it retained and used the property in the work under the contract until June 21, 1906. Reed was, during, and before, and after, such period, the local representative of the government in charge of the work under the contract at and near Roswell, and as such took possession of the engine and appurtenances for the United States. Thereafter the defendant, by the Director of the United States Geological Survey, to whom the Secretary of the Interior referred the matter, and by the Chief Engineer and Assistant Chief Engineer of the Reclamation Service, under the direction of the Department, ratified and adopted the acts of Reed in respect to the possession of the engine and appurtenances. The mortgagor has never made any claim to the property since the suspension and assignment of the contract to the defendant.

Plaintiff, on or about June 16, 1905, and also on or about September 30, 1905, notified the defendant of the execution and filing of the chattel mortgage, and that the plaintiff claimed the property under the title thereby vested in it, and claimed the right of possession because of the default by the mortgagor in the conditions thereof, and the defendant at all times well knew of the existence and filing of the chattel mortgage, and did not at any time dispute the validity thereof. On September 30, 1905, the defendant represented to the plaintiff that it was using and would continue to use the engine and appurtenances in its work, and that any legal proceedings to recover the possession thereof would be resisted by the defendant, and further represented to the plaintiff that if such property was left in the defendant's possession, its attorney would recommend payment therefor. The plaintiff relied upon the fact that its title to the property under the chattel mortgage was not disputed by the defendant, and upon the representations made to it as aforesaid, and consented [232] to defendant's retaining possession of the property in expectation of receiving due compensation therefor.

The question in this case is, did these facts warrant the deduction that the government was liable upon an implied contract to pay for the use of the engine? In cases brought under this act coming up from a district or circuit court of the United States, the findings of fact of the trial court are conclusive, and the question is whether the conclusions of law were warranted by the facts found (Chase v. United States, 155 U. S. 489, 500, 39 L. ed. 234, 288, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174). Exceptions to the rule may exist if the record enables the court to conclude that the ultimate facts found are not supported by any evidence whatever (Collier v. United States, 173 U. S. 79, 43 L. ed. 621, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330).

We think the circuit court and the circuit court of appeals were right in concluding that, under the facts found, the United States was liable upon an implied contract. As to the plaintiff, it is specifically found that it left the property with the defendant, relying upon the fact that its title to the property under the mortgage was not disputed, and upon the representations made to it, and consented to the defendant's retaining possession of the property in expectation of receiving compensation for it; as to the government, it is found that it was well known to it that the chattel mortgage existed, and its validity was undisputed, and that it would continue the use of the engine and appurtenances, and, if left in its possession, payment would be recommended for such use.

True it is that under the Tucker act there is no jurisdiction in the court of claims or district courts of the United States to recover for acts merely tortious, the statute providing that there shall be no recovery except in cases not sounding in tort. It has been said in the case cited for the government, Harley v. United States, 198 U. S. 229, 49 L. ed. 1029, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634, that there must be some meeting of the minds of the parties upon the fact that compensation will be made. In [233] that case it was found that there was no demand based upon a convention between the parties, or coming together of minds, for while the plaintiff, an employee of the government in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, supposed and understood he would be entitled to compensation for certain improvements made in printing presses which were used for many years by the Bureau, the findings also set forth in express terms that it was supposed and understood by the officers of the government that the claimant would neither expect nor demand remuneration, and this fact, said this court, distinguished it from McKeever v. United States, 14 Ct. Cl. 396, affirmed by this court; also from United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 47 L. ed. 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349, and the other cases cited by appellant.

In the present case, as we have said, there is nothing to show that the government expected to use the engine and appurtenances without compensation. It did not dispute the mortgage, and the findings of fact clearly show that if the government had the right to take the property, notwithstanding the mortgage interest which the plaintiff had in it, it made no claim of right to take and use it without compensation as against the prior outstanding mortgage, which distinctly reserved the right to take and sell the property under the circumstances shown, and which, after the breach of condition, vested the right of possession and the right to convert the property in the mortgagee. Kitchen v. Schuster, 14 N. M. 164, 89 Pac. 261.

Digitized by Google

Furthermore, the government was authorized by § 7 of the act of June 17, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 1093, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 662), under which this improvement was being made, to acquire any property necessary for the purpose, and, if need be, to appropriate it. It may be said, as contended, that under the contract with the construction company the government had a right to take possession of this engine, which was in possession of the company as mortgagor, and by virtue of the terms of the agreement complete the work, but it could not in this [234] manner extinguish the rights of the mortgagee, nor did it undertake to do so. Under such circumstances we think the former decisions of this court, recognizing the general principles of justice which give rise to implied obligations, and enforcing the right of compensation when private property is taken for a public use, require the government to make compensation for the use of this engine, and that the facts bring this case within United States v. Great Falls Mfg. Co. 112 U. S. 645, 28 L. ed. 846, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306, and United States v. Lynah, supra. In the latter case, where it was sought to recover damages for the alleged taking of the plaintiff's property in the construction of a dam which had the effect to overflow lands belonging to him, and destroy their value, after an extended review of the previous cases in this court, it was said (p. 464):

"The rule deducible from these cases is that when the government appropriates property which it does not claim as its own, it does so under an implied contract that it will pay the value of the property it so appropriates. It is earnestly contended in argument that the government had a right to appropriate this property. This may be conceded, but there is a vast difference between a proprietary and a governmental right. When the government owns property, or claims to own it, it deals with it as owner and by virtue of its ownership, and if an officer of the government takes possession of property under the claim that it belongs to the government (when in fact it does not), that may well be considered a tortious act on his part, for there can be no implication of an intent on the part of the government to pay for that which it claims to own. Very different from this proprietary right of the government in respect to property which it owns is its governmental right to appropriate the property of individuals. All private property is held subject to the necessities of government. The right of eminent domain underlies all such rights of property. The government may take personal or real [235] property whenever its necessities or the exigencies of the occasion demand. So the contention that the government had a paramount right to appropriate this property may be conceded, but the Constitution, in the 5th Amendment, guarantees that when this governmental right of appropriation—this asserted paramount right—is exercised, it shall be attended by compensation.

" . . . Whenever, in the exercise of its governmental rights, it takes property, the ownership of which it concedes to be in an individual, it impliedly promises to pay therefor. Such is the import of the cases cited as well as of many others."

In Hooe v. United States, 218 U. S. 322, 54 L. ed. 1055, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85, the attempt to make the government liable for rent was in the face of a statute of the United States which provided that no contract should be made for rent until an appropriation for that purpose had been made by Congress. In the present case, the government had the right to contract for this work under statutory authority, and to acquire property necessary to that end. Under the contract it might take possession of the construction company's property, and, it may be conceded, finish the contract with such property, but it had no right to use the property of others without compensation, and in this case it did not assume to do so. The mortgagee had a distinct right in the property, which had accrued to it before the property was entered upon, and was authorized to take and hold the same as against the attempted transfer of the mortgagor. While the government claimed the right to thus take and use the property, it nevertheless held it without denying the right of the owner to compensation. When it takes property under such circumstances for an authorized governmental use, it impliedly promises to pay therefor. This accords with the principles declared in the previous cases in this court, and arises because of the Constitutional obligation embodied in the 5th Amendment to the Constitution of the United [236] States, guarantying the owner of property against its appropriation for a governmental use without compensation.

Digitized by Google

We find no error in the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals, and it is affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.
UNITED ENGINEERING & CONTRACTING COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 236–244.)

Damages — stipulated — delay in completing public contract — fault of government.

1. A contractor who unreasonably delays the completion of a public work under a supplemental contract which fixes no definite time for performance cannot be charged therefor by the rule of the original contract stipulating liquidated damages for each day's delay, where the work under the original contract was delayed solely because of the government's fault beyond the time fixed therein for completion, since the government must, under such circumstances, be deemed to have waived the stipulation for liquidated damages, and, in order to recover on account of the contractor's subsequent delays, must show the actual damages sustained, no matter how impracticable it may be to prove actual damages.

[For other cases, see Damages, V., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

United States — contracts — extra expense.

2. The extra cost of inclosing certain machinery in casing, necessitated by the building of a plank walk across the top of a pipe in a pumping plant, to protect the workmen from high-speed gearing, must be allowed the contractor for the construction of such pumping plant for the government, where the expense was made necessary by the government.

[For other cases, see United States, VI. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

United States — contracts — extra expense.

3. A contractor for the construction of a pumping plant for the government should be allowed the cost of repairs made necessary by the breakage of certain pipes, due to the sudden increase in the pressure in the salt and fresh-water system in a government Navy Yard, which was caused by the government without notice to the contractor, and without his fault.

[For other cases, see United States, VI. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On stipulation for damages in building contract as penalty or liquidated damages—see note to Crawford v. Heatwole, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 588.

On applicability of provision for stipulated damages or penalty for delay in the completion of a contract, where the entire contract is abandoned or repudiated—see note to Moses v. Autuono, 20 L.R.A.(N.S.) 350.

[No. 381.]

Submitted May 8, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment against the United States in a suit upon a contract for public work. Affirmed.

See same case below, 47 Ct. Cl. 489.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson submitted the cause for appellant:

The court of claims was in error in holding that the rights of the government under the liquidated clause of the contract were waived by the government preventing the completion of the work within the contract time.

Wallis v. Wenham, 204 Mass. 83, 90 N. E. 396, 17 Ann. Cas. 644; Wilkens v. Wilkerson, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 41 S. W. 178; Mason v. Rempe, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 41 S. W. 694; Neblett v. McGraw, 41 Tex. Civ. App. 244, 91 S. W. 309; Hebert v. Weil, 115 La. 425, 39 So. 389; Vanderhoof v. Shell, 42 Or. 591, 72 Pac. 126; Reichenbach v. Sage, 13 Wash. 364, 52 Am. St. Rep. 51, 43 Pac. 354; Wiley v. Hart, 74 Wash. 142, 132 Pac. 1015; Pittsburg Iron & Steel Engineering Co. v. National Tube Works Co. 184 Pa. 261, 39 Atl. 76; Coal & I. R. Co. v. Reherd, 123 C. C. A. 155, 204 Fed. 879; Morse Dry Dock & Repair Co. v. Seaboard Transp. Co. 88 C. C. A. 263, 161 Fed. 99; Schmulbach v. Caldwell, 115 C. C. A. 650, 196 Fed. 24; McGowan v. American Pressed Tan Bark Co. 121 U. S. 575, 30 L. ed. 1027, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1315; United States v. Bethlehem Steel Co. 205 U. S. 105, 51 L. ed. 731, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 450.

Mr. P. M. Ashford also submitted the cause for appellant.

Messrs. Frederic D. McKenney, John Spalding Flannery, and William Hitz submitted the cause for appellee:

Forfeitures or penalties for delay or failure to deliver articles under a contract cannot be recovered if strict performance by the plaintiff has been prevented or waived by the defendant.

District of Columbia v. Camden Iron Works, 181 U. S. 453, 45 L. ed. 948, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680; King v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 428; N. P. Pratt Laboratory v. Buffalo Forge Co. 106 C. C. A. 429, 184 Fed. 287; United States v. Gleason, 175 U. S. 588, 609, 44 L. ed. 284, 292, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 228.

Digitized by Google

The abandonment of rights under a contract by executing a later substituted contract for the same work is not prevented by protesting that the rights still exist under the former contract.

United States ex rel. International Contracting Co. v. Lamont, 155 U. S. 303, 39 L. ed. 160, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; Wait, Engineering & A. Jur. §§ 325, 726, 727, pp. 269, 270, 667, 669; Flynn v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co. 63 Iowa, 491, 19 N. W. 312; Phillips & C. Constr. Co. v. Seymour, 91 U. S. 646, 23 L. ed. 341; Anson, Contr. p. 337; Lawson v. Hogan, 93 N. Y. 44; Sinclair v. Tallmadge, 35 Barb. 602; Dunn v. Steubing, 120 N. Y. 232, 24 N. E. 315; Foster v. Worthington, 58 Vt. 65, 4 Atl. 565.

The power to establish a forfeiture must be exercised within the time mentioned in the contract, and before the time for the completion of the work has expired.

Wait, Engineering & A. Jur. §§ 723, 724, p. 664; Walker v. London & N. W. R. Co. L. R. 1 C. P. Div. 518, 45 L. J. C. P. N. S. 787, 36 L. T. N. S. 53, 25 Week. Rep. 10; Henderson Bridge Co. v. O'Connor, 88 Ky. 303, 11 S. W. 18, 957.

To sustain the assessment of $25 a day as "liquidated damages," the appellant was bound to show strict compliance with the letter of the contract, and establish a fixed date of completion, which was not abandoned, and a delay which was not waived, but declared to be a default, as the contract expressly provided. Failing to do this, the appellant could only justify the assessment of this large penalty as unliquidated damages by proving that the contractor was bound to complete within a reasonable time; that it failed to do so, and that, by reason of such failure, the appellant sustained a pecuniary loss equivalent to the amount deducted.

The Conqueror, 166 U. S. 110, 125, 41 L. ed. 937, 944, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510.

The action of the appellant was not predicated upon the terms of the contract, with which it was bound to comply before it could assess this penalty of $6,000 as liquidated damages, but was based upon the theory that it could substitute for a fixed date of completion what it deemed to be a reasonable time for such completion, and assess damages at the contract rate for failure to complete within such time; in other words, that it could arbitrarily adjudicate and settle by this deduction the government's claim against the contractor for unliquidated and unproven damages growing out of the delay which it found to exist,—exactly what this court in William Cramp & Sons Ship & Engine Bldg. Co. v. United States, 216 U. S. 494, 502, 54 L. ed. 587, 589, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392, decided the executive officers of the government had no power to do.

Exactions for delay, whether they be characterized as "penalties," "forfeitures," "fines," or "liquidated damages," take an agreed portion of the contract price for a contractor's admitted or ascertained delays in completing the work by the required date. The court, in construing and interpreting the words in such agreements, looks to substance rather than to form, and seeks the intention of the parties instead of wholly relying upon their expressions.

Sun Printing & Pub. Co. v. Moore, 183 U. S. 642, 46 L. ed. 366, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240.

The construction of the contract should be taken most strongly against the government, whose officers prepared it.

United States v. Gibbons, 109 U. S. 200, 27 L. ed. 906, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 117.

When nothing to the contrary appears, the well-known usage of trade prevails in the construction of a contract.

Clark v. United States, 6 Wall. 543, 18 L. ed. 916; Robinson v. United States, 13 Wall. 363, 20 L. ed. 653.

Where, in a contract for the construction of waterworks, the size or cost of valve boxes was not mentioned, this court held the usual size and cost was to be understood, and the extra cost of those of unusual size required by the defendant might be recovered.

Wood v. Ft. Wayne, 119 U. S. 312, 30 L. ed. 416, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219.

A specific provision in a contract calling for one injector and one pump controls a general provision of a contract that everything needed for a lighthouse shall be supplied to make it ready for use.

Erickson v. United States, 107 Fed. 204.

Alterations increasing or varying the quantity of work from that contemplated by the parties when they made their agreement constitute a new and different work, not covered by the agreement, for which the contractor may recover its reasonable value.

Salt Lake City v. Smith, 43 C. C. A. 637, 104 Fed. 466; Henderson Bridge Co. v. McGrath, 134 U. S. 260, 33 L. ed. 934, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

Suit was brought in the court of claims by the United Engineering & Contracting Company to recover of the United States upon a contract, dated the 15th of September, 1900, for the construction within seven calendar months from the date of the contract, namely, by April 15, 1901, of a pumping plant for Dry Dock No. 3 at the New York Navy Yards, the work to be done in accordance with certain plans and specifications annexed to and forming a part of the contract. The claimant recovered a judgment (47 Ct. Cl. 489), and the United States brings this appeal.

Digitized by Google

The principal question in the case involves the correctness of that part of the judgment of the court of claims which permitted the claimant to recover $6,000, which the government had deducted as liquidated damages for 240 days' delay in the completion of the work, at the rate of $25 per day. To understand this question the terms of the contract and certain facts found by the court of claims, upon which the case is to be considered here, must be had in view.

The claimant commenced the construction of the work in accordance with the contract, and after a portion thereof had been done the Navy Department concluded to connect Dry Dock No. 2 with Dry Dock No. 3, and to build a single pumping plant for both docks. To that end, on July 21, 1901, [238] a supplemental contract was entered into with the United States, whereby the claimant agreed, for an additional sum, to furnish all the material and labor necessary to carry out the changes in and additions to the plant originally contracted for, and to complete the work on or before October 15, 1901, to which date the original contract was extended.

While the work was progressing under the original and supplemental contracts, a controversy arose between the claimant and the civil engineer in charge as to the proper method of designing and constructing the floor of the pump well, and as to the correct interpretation of the requirements of the specifications concerning other matters, which resulted in considerable delay and the cessation of work without the fault of the claimant. On January 13, 1903, the chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks appointed a board to consider changes in the bottom of the pump well, and the compensation to be paid therefor, of which the claimant was advised by letter, and it was informed that it would be expected to immediately resume work under its contract, and push the same to completion with utmost despatch, otherwise the Bureau would annul the contract and take over the entire work. The claimant thereupon promised to push the work to completion as rapidly as possible, with which promise the Bureau appears to have been satisfied.

On February 15, 1903, after the date fixed for the completion of the work under the original and supplemental contracts, a second supplemental contract was entered into, whereby the claimant agreed to construct three hatches in the roof of the pump well for additional compensation. Nothing was said in this contract as to the time of completion, or as to delays under prior contracts.

The board of officers appointed to consider the design of the floor of the pump well and other matters in controversy reported February 16, 1903, that there were, as [239] conceded by the Bureau, errors in the design of the pump well floor; that the work done and materials furnished by the claimant complied with the specifications, and that it was not chargeable with improper work or procedure, and the board estimated the increased compensation for the new work, and made certain allowances to the claimant. On March 7, 1903, a third supplemental contract was entered into, which embodied the changes found necessary in the original plan for the construction of the floor of the pump well, and the increased compensation to claimant therefor. Nothing was said in this contract as to the date of the completion of the work theretofore contracted for, nor as to prior delays.

The claimant proceeded under the contracts with reasonable despatch and without delay on its part until May 1, 1903, when the work was ready for the installation of the machinery. Up to this date the claimant was delayed by the government in making changes and alterations in the work, and in the use of the docks for docking vessels while the work was going forward. No delays were chargeable to the claimant up to October 15, 1901, the time fixed for the completion of the work, nor thereafter to May 1, 1903. During this period, due to the delays of the government, the claimant incurred additional expenses for superintendence and maintenance. During the period from May 1, 1903, to April 21, 1904, the work was delayed by the claimant's subcontractors in not getting the pump castings in place, for which the government was not responsible. The claimant was also delayed for a few days during said period by the government while using the docks for docking vessels.

At the request of the Bureau a civil engineer made a review of the matter of delays, and in February, 1905, reported that, notwithstanding the increased work required by the supplemental agreements and the restrictions placed upon the work, the claimant was up to time [240] on its contracts to May 1, 1903, but that subsequent to that date, and up to April 21, 1904, it had taken seven calendar months' more time than was necessary. After the plant was completed a board was appointed to pass upon it, which recommended certain deductions from the contract price for failure to strictly comply with the specifications. On March 24, 1905, the civil engineer in charge transmitted to the claimant a supplemental agreement covering the deductions, which agreement contained a reservation that nothing therein and no action taken under it should affect the rights of either party in the matter of delay and the completion of the work, or otherwise, except as specifically stated, which supplemental agreement claimant refused to execute. In February, 1906, long after the plant had been accepted, the Bureau held the claimant responsible for 240 days' delay at the rate of $25 per day, or $6000, as liquidated damages, and deducted the same from the balance due under the contract, which the claimant accepted under protest, and it subsequently filed with the Bureau a written protest against the deductions for delays and disallowances. The work was completed and accepted finally by the government on April 5, 1905.

Digitized by Google

Notwithstanding the delays of the government, the court of claims found that the claimant, with reasonable diligence, could have completed the plant for tests during the period by about September 21, 1903, and found that if it was chargeable for the delay according to the liquidated damage clause of paragraph 12 of the specifications of $25 per day, the deduction would be $750 less than the government had deducted. But it found that, if the claimant was only liable for actual damages, and it did so determine, since there was no evidence as to such damages, the claimant was entitled to recover the entire amount deducted.

In the original contract the specifications provided, [241] paragraph 12, for liquidated damages for delay, as follows:

"12. Damages for delay.—In case the work is not completed within the time specified in the contract, or the time allowed by the Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks under paragraph 11 of this specification, it is distinctly understood and agreed that deductions at the rate of $25 per day shall be made from the contract price for each and every calendar day after and exclusive of the date within which completion was required up to and including the date of completion and acceptance of the work, said sum being specifically agreed upon as the measure of damage to the United States by reason of delay in the completion of the work; and the contractor shall agree and consent that the contract price, reduced by the aggregate of damages so deducted, shall be accepted in full satisfaction for all work done under the contract."

Under the provisions of this paragraph, if there had been nothing subsequently changing the rights of the parties, and the delay had resulted from the failure of the claimant to complete the work within the time specified, the deduction at the rate of $25 per day might have been made by the United States as liquidated damages. This was the sum estimated and agreed upon between the parties as the damages which might be regarded as sustained by the government in event of the breach of the claimant's obligation to complete the work within the stipulated time. Such contracts for liquidated damages, when reasonable in their character, are not to be regarded as penalties, and may be enforced between the parties. See Sun Printing & Pub. Asso. v. Moore, 183 U. S. 642, 46 L. ed. 366, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240, in which the matter is fully discussed.

The precise question here is whether, when the work was delayed solely because of the government's fault beyond the time fixed for its completion, and afterwards the work was completed without any definite time being fixed in [242] which it was to be done, the claimant can be charged for the subsequent delays for which he was at fault by the rule of the original contract, stipulating liquidated damages, or was that stipulation waived by the conduct of the government, and was it obligatory upon it, in order to recover for the subsequent delays, to show the actual damages sustained. We think the better rule is that when the contractor has agreed to do a piece of work within a given time, and the parties have stipulated a fixed sum as liquidated damages, not wholly disproportionate to the loss for each day's delay, in order to enforce such payment the other party must not prevent the performance of the contract within the stipulated time; and that where such is the case, and thereafter the work is completed, though delayed by the fault of the contractor, the rule of the original contract cannot be insisted upon, and liquidated damages measured thereby are waived. Under the original and first supplemental agreements, the claimant knew definitely that he was required to complete the work by a fixed date. Presumably the claimant had made its arrangements for completion within the time named. Certainly the other contracting party ought not to be permitted to insist upon liquidated damages when it is responsible for the failure to complete by the stipulated date; to do this would permit it to recover damages for delay caused by its own conduct.

It may be that damages were sustained by the failure to carry out the subsequent agreement. But the government, as well as the claimant, saw fit to go on with the work with no fixed rule for the time of its completion, so that it be reasonable, and the government required no stipulation in the second and third supplemental contracts as to damages in a fixed and definite sum for failure to complete the work as required. Under such circumstances we think it must be content to recover such damages as it is able to prove were actually suffered.

Digitized by Google

[243] This conclusion is in accord with the rule of the English cases. In Dodd v. Churton, [1897] 1 Q. B. 562, Chitty, L. J., said:

"The law on the subject is well settled. The case of Holme v. Guppy, 3 Mees. & W. 387, 1 Jur. 825, and the subsequent cases in which that decision has been followed, are merely examples of the well-known principle stated in Comyns's Digest, Condition L, (6), that, where performance of a condition has been rendered impossible by the act of the grantee himself, the grantor is exonerated from performance of it. The law on the subject was very neatly put by Byles, J., in Russell v. Sa da Bandeira, 13 C. B. N. S. 149, 32 L. J. C. P. N. S. 68, 9 Jur. N. S. 718, 7 L. T. N. S. 804. This principle is applicable not to building contracts only, but to all contracts. If a man agrees to do something by a particular day, or, in default, to pay a sum of money as liquidated damages, the other party to the contract must not do anything to prevent him from doing the thing contracted for within the specified time."

The same rule was followed with approval by the New York Court of Appeals in a well-considered case, Mosler Safe Co. v. Maiden Lane S. D. Co. 199 N. Y. 479, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 363, 93 N. E. 81, in which it was held that, even where both parties are responsible for the delays beyond the fixed time, the obligation for liquidated damages is annulled, and, in the absence of a provision substituting another date, it cannot be revived, and the recovery for subsequent delays must be for actual loss proved to have been sustained.

This principle is applicable here; the conduct of the government's agents had caused the delays up to May 1, 1913, and the subsequent delays, though chargeable to the claimant, would only give rise to a claim for damages measured by the actual loss sustained. Mosler Safe Co. v. Maiden Lane S. D. Co. supra. We think the application of this rule is not changed by the difficulty suggested, that it might be impracticable to prove actual damages. This fact, if such it be, would not permit the government [244] by its own fault to prevent the performance of the contract, and to do that which amounts to a waiver of the stipulation, and then insist upon it as a rule of damages. We think the court of claims was right upon this principal branch of the case.

There are certain minor assignments of error to the conclusions and judgment of the court of claims. The government was held responsible for the extra cost of enclosing certain machinery in casing necessitated by its building a plank walk across the top of the pipe in the pumping plant to protect its workmen from high speed gearing. The court of claims found that this expense was made necessary by the government, and allowed for it. We find no error in this. Also, as to the assignment of error to the judgment of the court of claims under finding 11, awarding damages for repairs made necessary by the breakage of certain pipes, caused by sudden increase in the pressure in the salt and fresh water systems in the Navy Yard, the court of claims found that these breaks were caused by the government without notice to the claimant, and without its fault. We find no error in the judgment of the court of claims awarding damages under this finding.

It follows that the judgment of the Court of Claims is affirmed.

---

[245] UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.
FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MINNESOTA. (No. 873.)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.
NICHOLS-CHISHOLM LUMBER COMPANY, the Minneapolis Trust Company, and Hiram R. Lyon. (No. 874.)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.
NICHOLS-CHISHOLM LUMBER COMPANY, the Minneapolis Trust Company, and Hovey C. Clark. (No. 875.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 245-262.)

Indians — restrictions on alienation — removal — mixed bloods.

Every Chippewa Indian having an identifiable admixture of white blood, however small, is a "mixed-blood" Indian within the meaning of the Clapp amendment (act of June 21, 1906 [34 Stat. at L. 325, chap. 3504], act of March 1, 1907 [34 Stat. at L. 1015, chap. 2285]), removing all restrictions as to sale, encumbrance, or taxation of allotments within the White Earth Indian Reservation, held by mixed-blood Indians, and providing that the right of full-blood Indians to be free from such restrictions shall rest with the Secretary of the Interior, who may remove the same when satisfied that such full-blood Indians are competent to handle their own affairs.

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 873, 874, 875.]

Digitized by Google

Argued April 7, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

TWO APPEALS from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review decrees which reversed decrees of the District Court for the District of Minnesota, in favor of the government in a suit to set aside Indian conveyances. Affirmed. Also an APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree dismissing the bill in a suit by the United States to set aside an Indian conveyance. Affirmed.

See same case below, 126 C. C. A. 76, 208 Fed. 988.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

These suits were brought by the United States in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Minnesota against the appellees, to set aside certain conveyances under and through which the appellees claimed title to lands, particularly described, in the White Earth Indian Reservation in Minnesota. The decree of the district court (which had succeeded the circuit court) in the first two cases in favor of the government was reversed by the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit, while the decree dismissing the bill in the last case was affirmed (126 C. C. A. 76, 208 Fed. 988).

By the treaty of March 19, 1867 (16 Stat. at L. 719), creating the White Earth Indian Reservation, the Chippewas of the Mississippi ceded all their land in Minnesota, except certain described tracts, to the United States, and the government set apart the White Earth Reservation for their use, and provision was made for the certification to each Indian of not to exceed 160 acres of the land of such reservation in lots of 40 acres each, upon the cultivation of 10 acres, provided, that the land should be exempt from taxation and sale for debt, and should not be alienated [247] except with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, and then only to a Chippewa Indian. The act of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 119), provided for the allotment of land in the Indian reservations in severalty to the Indians, and that (§ 5) upon the approval of the allotments patents should issue therefor in the name of the allottees, which should be of the legal effect and declare that the United States held the land for twenty-five years, in trust for the sole use and benefit of the Indian to whom the allotment was made, or, in case of his death, of his heirs, according to the laws of the state or territory where the land was located, and that, at the expiration of that time, the United States would convey the same to the Indian or his heirs in fee, discharged of the trust, and free of all charge or encumbrance whatsoever; provided that the President of the United States might, in his discretion, extend the period, and provided that any conveyance or contract touching the lands before the expiration of the trust period should be null and void. The Nelson act of January 14, 1889 (25 Stat. at L. 642, chap. 24), provided for the relinquishment to the United States of that part of the reservation remaining after the allotment, subject to the act of February 8, 1887, supra, in severalty, to the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota, the act to become operative only upon the assent of a certain number of Indians being obtained. By the act of February 28, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 794, chap. 383), the allotments were limited to 80 acres to each Indian; but by the Steenerson act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stat. at L. 539, chap. 1786), the maximum allotments of the White Earth Reservation were made 160 acres. The acts of June 21, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 325, 353, chap. 3504), and March 1, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1015, 1034, chap. 2285), in what is known as the Clapp amendment, removed the restrictions upon alienation as respects mixed-blood Indians, but left the matter, so far as full bloods were concerned, to the Secretary of the Interior.

The government relied, in the first case, upon its title [248] to a certain parcel of land as a part of the public domain set apart as the White Earth Reservation, and the fact that, although, under the various acts of Congress above mentioned, authority was given to segregate certain parcels of land from others in the reservation, and to allot them to members of the band, and O-bah-baum, an Indian woman of that tribe, had been given a trust patent, as provided for by the act of February 8, 1887, supra, and had given a mortgage to the defendant in that case upon such land, she had no right or authority so to do. It prayed that the mortgage be annulled, as being a cloud upon the government's title.

The allegations of the complaints in the second and third cases are the same, except that the allottee in the former is named Bay-bah-mah-ge-wabe, and in the latter Equay-zaince, and in both cases that there are outstanding warranty deeds and mortgages, that there were intermediate parties not made parties of record, and that an accounting was asked for timber already cut, and an injunction from cutting standing timber.

The defendant in the first case, besides denying that the reservation was a part of the public domain, and alleging that the property was that of the Indians, and that, after selection, the allottee acquired a fee-simple title, notwithstanding the acts of Congress, particularly set up the fact that O-bah-baum is a mixed-blood Chippewa Indian, and one of the class referred to in the Clapp amendment, and therefore emancipated from the pretended supervision of the government, and able to transfer her property as a citizen of the United States. The defendant also alleged that, under the facts, the Indians having made affidavit that they were mixed bloods and the good faith of the defendant, the government should be required to place the defendant in statu quo before the relief asked could be granted. The lumber company, defendant in the second case, and the defendants in the third case, filed [249] answers of similar purport, with the additional averment that, under the facts stated, the matter relating to the timber was immaterial; but, if the court found against defendants' title, they would account for the timber cut by them.

Digitized by Google

By stipulation or introduction in evidence the following facts were made to appear:

The three Indians here involved are adult Chippewa Indians, residing upon the White Earth Reservation. O-bah-baum has some white blood, derived from a remote ancestor, but not to exceed one thirty-second; Bay-bah-mah-ge-wabe has one sixteenth of white blood, and Equay-zaince has one eighth of white blood.

A question having arisen with reference to the construction of the term "mixed blood," as used in the treaty of September 30, 1854 (10 Stat. at L. 1109), between the United States and the Chippewa Indians of Lake Superior and the Mississippi, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, in a letter to the Indian agent at Detroit, Michigan, said that "the term 'mixed-bloods' has been construed to mean all who are identified as having a mixture of Indian and white blood. The particular proportion of each blood is therefore immaterial, where the provision is so broad as that stated in the treaty."

The Indian agent at the White Earth Reservation, after the passage of the Clapp amendment, came to Washington to consult the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and was referred by him to the Land Division; and, after discussing the situation with a man represented to be in charge of such matters, it was agreed that the act did not require a showing of any definite quantum of foreign blood to constitute a mixed blood, and to his knowledge this was the construction generally adopted by those who dealt with the Indians on the White Earth Reservation. The Chief of the Land Division at the time of the passage of the Clapp amendment testified that, to his knowledge, no question [250] was raised as to the quantum of foreign blood. In a communication dated October 6, 1910, to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the Special Assistant to the Attorney General and the special Indian agent at Detroit, Minnesota, expressed the belief that the attorneys for the government were going to contend that the term "mixed blood" should be interpreted to embrace only those of half or less of Indian blood, and cited a certain act of the United States (of February 6, 1909, 35 Stat. at L. 600, chap. 80) in which the term "Indian" was defined to include the aboriginal races inhabiting Alaska when annexed to the United States, and their descendants of the whole or half blood, which act concerned the sale of liquor or firearms to an Indian or half breed. They also cited certain treaties with the Chippewas wherein it was shown that half breeds are persons of less than half blood, and not regarded as Indians or members of the Chippewa nation: article 3 of the treaty of July 29, 1837 (7 Stat. at L. 536), article 4 of the treaty of October 4, 1842 (7 Stat. at L. 591), article 4 of the treaty of August 2, 1847 (9 Stat. at L. 904), article 6 of the treaty of February 22, 1855 (10 Stat. at L. 1165), and article 4 of the treaty of March 19, 1867 (16 Stat. at L. 719), from which it was summarized that in these treaties persons classed as half breeds or mixed bloods, or less than half blood, were not recognized by the government or the Chippewas as Indians entitled to the rights and privileges of Chippewa Indians unless by special provisions of treaties, as theretofore shown. The Second Assistant Commissioner, in his reply of November 19, 1910, stated that the Office was inclined to give the expressions "full bloods" and "mixed bloods" their ordinary meaning, which would be more reasonable than to hold that the term "full bloods" included those of admitted pure blood and others above the half blood. It was also said in his letter, however, that a conference would be had with the Department of Justice, and further advice given. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs [251] said that he had never given an official construction to the term "mixed blood."

It was stipulated that, in administering the Bureau of Indian Affairs under the Clapp amendment, and especially in issuing patents thereunder, the Department had not required any statement as to the quantum of foreign blood, but had issued patents upon the showing that the applicant was a mixed blood. Several instances were shown by the records of allotments having been made to allottees on the White Earth Reservation having but one sixteenth or one thirty-second of Indian blood, while other instances were shown where allotment had been denied because applicant was of "doubtful blood."

Digitized by Google

A white man who had resided for a long time among the Chippewa Indians stated that in the early period the terms "mixed blood" and "half breed" were synonymous, applying to one of mixed white and Indian blood, irrespective of the percentage, and that later the term "mixed blood" was more commonly used, while the term "half breed" was applied to one having nearly equal parts of white and Indian blood. The general impression of business men in and about the White Earth Reservation was that any Indian who had white blood in his veins was a mixed blood.

Several very elderly Indians testified, however, that the Indians regarded the term "mixed blood" as applying to those having practically half white and half Indian blood.

The district court, after stating that the question was one of first impression, said that Congress intended competency to be the test, and came to the conclusion that an Indian having an admixture of one eighth white blood might come within the term, but that beyond that the white blood would not affect the capacity of the Indian to manage his own affairs, and therefore dismissed the bill in the third case and entered a decree in favor of the complainants in the other two cases. The circuit court of appeals reached the conclusion that every Chippewa [252] Indian having an identifiable mixture of other than Indian blood, however small, is a mixed-blood Indian, and all others are full-blood Indians within the meaning of the Clapp amendment, and accordingly reversed the decree of the district court in the first two cases and affirmed the decree in the third case.

Solicitor General Davis argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. A. Norton, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, and Mr. C. C. Daniels, filed a brief for appellant:

The act should be so construed as to subserve the well-defined and well-established policy of Congress.

Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 459, 36 L. ed. 226, 228, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Durousseau v. United States, 6 Cranch, 307, 3 L. ed. 232; Llonberger v. Rouse, 9 Wall. 468, 475, 19 L. ed. 721, 724; United States v. Freeman, 3 How. 556, 11 L. ed. 724; United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 33 L. ed. 1080, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625.

It has been the settled policy of Congress in dealing with the Indians to make competency alone the test for removing these restrictions.

Smith v. Stevens, 10 Wall. 321, 326, 19 L. ed. 933, 935.

Congress having declared in plain and unmistakable language that lands allotted to these Indians would be held in trust for them for a period of twenty-five years, and the assent of the Indians to a cession of their reservation having been given in reliance upon that promise, no subsequent act of Congress should be construed to revoke this promise unless couched in language so plain and certain as to leave room for no other interpretation.

Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 47 L. ed. 299, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216.

Assuming the competency of the white man and the incompetency of the Indians, it is but reasonable, in making a classification based on blood, to include in the competent class all who have more than one-half white blood, and in the incompetent class all who have more than one-half Indian blood.

Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511.

The act is to be interpreted according to the understanding of its terms among the Indians themselves.

Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Starr v. Long Jim, 227 U. S. 613, 57 L. ed. 670, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358.

The meaning for which the government contends is not foreclosed either by departmental construction or judicial decisions.

Northern P. R. Co. v. United States, 227 U. S. 355, 57 L. ed. 544, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Merritt v. Cameron, 137 U. S. 542, 551, 34 L. ed. 772, 775, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Deweese v. Smith, 66 L.R.A. 971, 45 C. C. A. 408, 106 Fed. 438; Jeffries v. Ankeny, 11 Ohio, 375; Thacker v. Hawk, 11 Ohio, 376; Lane v. Baker, 12 Ohio, 237.

Mr. Ransom J. Powell argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George T. Simpson and Ernest C. Carman, filed a brief for appellees:

The Clapp act was obviously designed to create an arbitrary classification.

(a) The language is clear and explicit, and the term "mixed blood" had acquired a definite and well-understood meaning.

Standard Dict.; Century Dict.; 14 Enc. Britannica, p. 467; Hodge, Hand Book of American Indians, Government Printing Office, 1907, pp. 365, 850, 913; 5 Words & Phrases, p. 4546; 27 Cyc. 811; Hamilton v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 21 Mo. App. 152; Daniel v. Guy, 19 Ark. 121; Thurman v. State, 18 Ala. 276; Johnson v. Norwich, 29 Conn. 407; Van Camp v. Board of Education, 9 Ohio St. 407; Gentry v. McMinnis, 3 Dana, 382; Scott v. Raub, 88 Va. 727, 14 S. E. 178; Jones v. Com. 80 Va. 538; State v. Dempsey, 31 N. C. (9 Ired. L.) 384; State v. Chavers, 50 N. C. (5 Jones, L.) 11; Hopkins v. Bowers, 111 N. C. 175, 16 S. E. 1; State v. Davis, 2 Bail. L. 558; Thacker v. Hawk, 11 Ohio, 377.

Digitized by Google

(b) The tendency at that time was toward the removal of restrictions by arbitrary act of Congress.

(c) If competency was the controlling element of the classification in the Clapp act, there was no excuse for its passage. All cases of competency were provided for by the Burke act of May 8, 1906.

(d) The interpretation of the term "mixed blood" necessitates the interpretation of the term "full blood." Congress made two classes, not three.

In seeking the intent of the legislature, the first consideration is the natural, ordinary, and generally understood meaning of the terms used.

United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 358, 2 L. ed. 304; Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 32 L. ed. 1060, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Sloan v. United States, 118 Fed. 285; United States v. Temple, 105 U. S. 97, 26 L. ed. 967; Maillard v. Lawrence, 16 How. 251, 14 L. ed. 925; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 72, 23 L. ed. 224; Parsons v. Hunter, 2 Sumn. 422, Fed. Cas. No. 10,778; Levy v. M'Cartee, 6 Pet. 102, 110, 8 L. ed. 334, 337; United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 102, 42 L. ed. 394, 398, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3; The Cherokee Tobacco (Boudinot v. United States) 11 Wall. 616, 20 L. ed. 227; Edison Electric Light Co. v. United States Electric Lighting Co. 35 Fed. 138.

A dispute over the meaning of a statute does not, of itself, show an ambiguity in the act.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Sanders, 47 Fed. 610; Webber v. St. Paul City R. Co. 38 C. C. A. 79, 97 Fed. 140; Swarts v. Siegel, 117 Fed. 13; Shreve v. Cheesman, 16 C. C. A. 413, 32 U. S. App. 676, 69 Fed. 789.

Subsequent experience is no guide to interpretation.

United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 72, 23 L. ed. 224; Platt v. Union P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 48, 25 L. ed. 424.

Where Congress has by apt terms created a class, or drawn distinctions between classes of persons or objects, it is not competent for the courts, under the guise of interpretation, to extend or limit the operation of the statute.

United States v. Colorado & N. W. R. Co. 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 167, 85 C. C. A. 27, 157 Fed. 321, 13 Ann. Cas. 893; Brun v. Mann, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 154, 80 C. C. A. 513, 151 Fed. 145; United States v. Temple, 105 U. S. 97, 26 L. ed. 967; Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. 46, 7 L. ed. 47; Folsom v. United States, 160 U. S. 121, 40 L. ed. 363, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; United States v. Choctaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 45 L. ed. 291, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 149; Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 438, 451, 45 L. ed. 1171, 1178, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; The Paulina v. United States, 7 Cranch, 52, 61, 3 L. ed. 266, 269; Barnitz v. Casey, 7 Cranch, 456, 468, 3 L. ed. 403, 407; United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 102, 42 L. ed. 394, 398, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3; Maxwell v. Moore, 22 How. 185, 191, 16 L. ed. 251, 253; Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 55 L ed. 738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Thurman v. State, 18 Ala. 276.

The court is not at liberty to amend the statute, or read words into it to make it conform to what the court may believe to be the spirit of the act, or in order to escape the injustice of the law.

Maxwell v. Moore, 22 How. 185, 16 L. ed. 251; United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 42 L. ed. 394, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3; Hobbs v. McLean, 117 U. S. 567, 29 L. ed. 940, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870; Re Conway, 17 Wis. 527; 17 Ops. Atty. Gen. 65; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464; Hadden v. The Collector (Hadden v. Barney) 5 Wall. 107, 18 L. ed. 518; Gardner v. Collins, 2 Pet. 92, 7 L. ed. 359.

The practical construction by the departments of the government, and the dealings of the citizens with the subject in reliance upon that construction, are entitled to consideration in cases of doubt.

United States v. Union P. R. Co. 37 Fed. 555, 148 U. S. 562, 37 L. ed. 560, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Le Marchal v. Tegarden, 99 C. C. A. 236, 175 Fed. 682; Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 363, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Malonny v. Mahar, 1 Mich. 26; Westbrook v. Miller, 56 Mich. 148, 22 N. W. 256; United States v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 142 U. S. 615, 35 L. ed. 1134, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Kelly v. Multnomah County, 18 Or. 356, 22 Pac. 1110; Schell v. Fauché, 138 U. S. 562, 34 L. ed. 1040, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760, 763, 24 L. ed. 588, 589; Kirkman v. McClaughry, 90 C. C. A. 86, 160 Fed. 436; United States v. State Bank, 6 Pet. 29, 8 L. ed. 308; 2 Ops. Atty. Gen. 558; Re State Lands, 18 Colo. 359, 32 Pac. 986; United States v. Hill, 120 U. S. 169, 182, 30 L. ed. 627, 632, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Bloxham v. Consumers' Electric Light & Street R. Co. 36 Fla. 519, 29 L.R.A. 507, 51 Am. St. Rep. 44, 18 So. 444; Harrison v. Com. 83 Ky. 162; Iowa v. Carr, 112 C. C. A. 477, 191 Fed. 257; Heckman v. United States, 224 U. S. 413, 56 L. ed. 820, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424; Johnson v. Ballou, 28 Mich. 378; State Tax Comrs. v. Holliday, 150 Ind. 216, 42 L.R.A. 826, 49 N. E. 14; United States v. Chandler-Dunbar Water Power Co. 81 C. C. A. 221, 152 Fed. 25; United States v. Walker, 139 Fed. 409; St. Paul, S. & T. F. R. Co. v. First Div. St. Paul & P. R. Co. 26 Minn. 31, 49 N. W. 303; Menard v. Massey, 8 Haw. 293, 12 L. ed. 1085; Magee v. Doe, 22 Ala. 718.

Digitized by Google

Congress was familiar with apt terms to create a classification based upon a given quantum of Indian and other than Indian blood. If it had intended to make the classification urged by the government, it could easily have said so.

Pennock v. Franklin County, 103 U. S. 44, 26 L. ed. 367; Smith v. Bonifer, 154 Fed. 883; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679, 689, 24 L. ed. 558, 561; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 627, 25 L. ed. 188, 189; United States v. Koch, 5 L.R.A. 130, 40 Fed. 252; Re Drake, 114 Fed. 229; Moore v. American Transp. Co. 24 Haw. 1, 32, 16 L. ed. 674; Shaw v. North Pennsylvania R. Co. (Shaw v. Merchants' Nat. Bank) 101 U. S. 557, 565, 25 L. ed. 892, 894; Harrington v. Herrick, 12 C. C. A. 231, 29 U. S. App. 103, 64 Fed. 469; Austin v. United States, 155 U. S. 417, 39 L. ed. 206, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 167; Re Downing, 5 C. C. A. 575, 14 U. S. App. 434, 56 Fed. 470; 21 Ops. Atty. Gen. 418; Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 73 Fed. 726; Parker v. United States, 22 Ct. Cl. 104; Grace v. Collector of Customs, 24 C. C. A. 606, 48 U. S. App. 225, 79 Fed. 319; Strode v. Stafford Justices, 1 Brock. 162, Fed. Cas. No. 13,537; Ryan v. Carter, 93 U. S. 83, 23 L. ed. 809; Tompkins v. Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. 125 U. S. 127, 31 L. ed. 624, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762; United States v. Ryder, 110 U. S. 739, 28 L. ed. 311, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196; Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 744, 23 L. ed. 638; Butz v. Muscatine. 8 Wall. 580, 19 L. ed. 492; James v. Milwaukee, 16 Wall. 161, 21 L. ed. 267; United States v. Anderson, 9 Wall. 66, 19 L. ed. 617; Lawrence v. Allen, 7 How. 796, 12 L. ed. 918; Northern P. R. Co. v. Dudley, 85 Fed. 86; Re Baker, 96 Fed. 957; Re Baumann, 96 Fed. 948; Steele v. Buel, 44 C. C. A. 287, 104 Fed. 970; United States v. Slazenger, 113 Fed. 524; Ex parte Byers, 32 Fed. 409; Ullman v. Meyer, 10 Fed. 243; Hall's Case, 17 Ct. Cl. 46; The Cherokee Tobacco (Boudinot v. United States) 11 Wall. 616, 20 L. ed. 227; Gardner v. Collins, 2 Pet. 87, 7 L. ed. 357.

Mr. Justice Day, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Before the transfers here complained of, and while the lands were held in trust, subject to the provisions of the act of February 8, 1887, supra, the Clapp amendment was passed, having the purpose of removing the restrictions upon alienation in certain cases. This act provides:

"That all restrictions as to the sale, encumbrance, or taxation for allotments within the White Earth Reservation in the state of Minnesota, heretofore [amended March 1, 1907, the word 'heretofore' being substituted for the word 'now'] or hereafter held by adult mixed-blood Indians, are hereby removed, and the trust deeds heretofore or hereafter executed by the Department for such allotments are hereby declared to pass the title in fee simple, or such mixed bloods upon application shall be entitled to receive a patent in fee simple for such allotments; and as to full bloods, said restrictions shall be removed when the Secretary of the Interior is satisfied that said adult full-blood Indians are competent to handle their own affairs, and in such case the Secretary of the Interior shall issue to such Indian allottee a patent in fee simple upon application."

[258] It is at once apparent from reading this act that it deals with two classes,—adult mixed-blood Indians, concerning whom all restrictions as to sale, encumbrance, or taxation are removed, and full-blood Indians, whose right to be free from restrictions shall rest with the Secretary of the Interior, who may remove the same upon being satisfied that such full-blood Indians are competent to handle their own affairs.

This case turns upon the construction of the words "mixed-blood Indians." It is the contention of the government that mixed blood means those of half white or more than half white blood, while the appellees insist, and this was the view adopted by the circuit court of appeals, that the term "mixed blood" includes all who have an identifiable mixture of white blood. If the government's contention be correct, it follows that, for the purposes of this suit, all of less than half white blood must be regarded as full-blood Indians, all others as mixed bloods. Upon the appellees' contention the line is drawn between full bloods as one class, and all having an identifiable admixture of white blood as the other.

If we apply the general rule of statutory construction that words are to be given their usual and ordinary meaning, it would seem clear that the appellees' construction is right; for a full blood is obviously one of pure blood, thoroughbred, having no admixture of foreign blood. That this natural and usual signification of plain terms is to be adopted as the legislative meaning in the absence of clear showing that something else was meant is an elementary rule of construction frequently recognized and followed in this court. United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 358, 399, 2 L. ed. 304, 317; Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 670, 32 L. ed. 1060, 1063, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Dewey v. United States, 178 U. S. 510, 521, 44 L. ed. 1170, 1174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 981. Interpreted according to the plain import of the words, the persons intended to be reached by the clause are divided into two, and only two, well-defined classes—full-blood Indians and mixed [259] bloods. There is no suggestion of a third class, having more than half of white blood or any other proportion than is indicated in the term "mixed blood," as contrasted with full blood. If the government's contention is correct, the Indians of full blood must necessarily include half bloods, and mixed bloods must mean all having less than half white blood, and none others. Such construction is an obvious wresting of terms of plain import from their usual and well-understood signification.

Digitized by Google

But the government insists that to effect the legislative purpose the words must be interpreted as the Indians understood them, and cases from this court (Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Starr v. Long Jim, 227 U. S. 613, 57 L. ed. 670, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358) are cited to the effect that Indian treaties and acts to which the Indians must give consent before they become operative must be interpreted so as to conform to the understanding of the Indians as to the meaning of the terms used. The justice and propriety of this method of interpretation are obvious and essential to the protection of an unlettered race, dealing with those of better education and skill, themselves framing contracts which the Indians are induced to sign. But the legislation here in question is not in the nature of contract, and contains no provision that makes it effectual only upon consent of the Indians whose rights and privileges are to be affected. Evidently this legislation contemplated in some measure the rights of others who might deal with the Indians, and obviously was intended to enlarge the right to acquire as well as to part with lands held in trust for the Indians.

The government refers, in support of its contention, to reports of congressional committees, showing after effects of this legislation, which was followed, as the reports tend to show, by improvident sales and encumbrances of Indian lands and wasteful extravagance in the disposition of the proceeds of sales, resulting in suffering to the former proprietors of the lands sold and mortgaged. But [260] these after effects can have little weight in determining the meaning of the legislation, and certainly cannot overcome the meaning of plain words used in legislative enactments. If the effect of the legislation has been disastrous to the Indians, that fact will not justify the courts in departing from the terms of the act as written. If the true construction has been followed with harsh consequences, it cannot influence the courts in administering the law. The responsibility for the justice or wisdom of legislation rests with the Congress, and it is the province of the courts to enforce, not to make, the laws. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 294, 52 L. ed. 1061, 1067, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464; United States ex rel. Texas Portland Cement Co. v. McCord, 233 U. S. 157, 163, ante, 893, 897, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550.

The government further insists that its interpretation of the act is consistent with its policy to make competency the test of the right to alienate, and that the legislation in question proceeds upon the theory that those of half or more white blood are more likely to be able to take care of themselves in making contracts and disposing of their lands than those of lesser admixture of such blood. But the policy of the government in passing legislation is often an uncertain thing, as to which varying opinions may be formed, and may, as is the fact in this case, afford an unstable ground of statutory interpretation. Hadden v. The Collector (Hadden v. Barney), 5 Wall. 107, 111, 18 L. ed. 518, 519. And again, Congress has in other legislation not hesitated to place full-blood Indians in one class and all others in another. Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 55 L. ed. 738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578. In that case this court had occasion to deal with certain sections of the act of April 26, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 137, chap. 1876), providing that no full-blood Indian of certain tribes should have power to alienate or encumber allotted lands for a period of twenty-five years, unless restrictions were removed by act of Congress. By § 22 of the act all adult heirs of deceased Indians were given the right to convey their lands, but for the last sentence of the section, which kept full-blood [261] Indians to their right to convey under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior. Therefore all adult heirs of any deceased Indian other than a full blood might convey, but the full blood only with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. In this important provision the restrictions were removed as to all classes of Indians other than full bloods. In other words, there as here, the Indians were divided into two classes,—full bloods in one class and all others in the second class.

Digitized by Google

Furthermore, the appellees' construction accords with the departmental construction, as shown by the facts stipulated. Such was the construction given by the Indian Commissioner to the treaty of September 30, 1854, 10 Stat. at L. 1109, wherein provision was made for mixed-blood Indians among the Chippewas, and the Indian agent at Detroit, Michigan, was instructed by the Indian Commissioner that the term "mixed blood" had been construed to mean all who are identified as having a mixture of Indian and white blood. Such was the interpretation of the Department of Interior, in the first place, at least, in administering the matter under the Clapp amendment. It is true that the government representatives at Detroit, Minnesota, were of the opposite opinion, for the reasons we have stated above, and that the Second Assistant Commissioner, in his reply, while reaching the conclusion we have, stated that he would confer with the Department of Justice.

While departmental construction of the Clapp amendment does not have the weight which such constructions sometimes have in long-continued observance, nevertheless it is entitled to consideration,—the early administration of that amendment showing the interpretation placed upon it by competent men having to do with its enforcement. The conviction is very strong that if Congress intended to remove restrictions only from those who had half white blood or more, it would have inserted in the [262] act the words necessary to make that intention clear; that is, we deem this a case for the application of the often expressed consideration, aiding interpretation, that if a given construction was intended, it would have been easy for the legislative body to have expressed it in apt terms. Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679, 689, 24 L. ed. 558, 561; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 627, 25 L. ed. 188, 189; Tompkins v. Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. 125 U. S. 109, 127, 31 L. ed. 615, 624, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762; United States v. Lexington Mill & Elevator Co. 232 U. S. 399, 410, ante, 658, 662, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337.

Congress was very familiar with the situation, the subject having been before it in many debates and discussions concerning Indian affairs. This was a reservation inhabited by Indians of full blood and others of all degrees of mixed blood, some with a preponderance of white blood, others with less, and many with very little. If Congress, having competency in mind, and that alone, had intended to emancipate from the prevailing restriction on alienation only those who were half white or more, by a few simple words it could have effected that purpose. We cannot believe that such was the congressional intent, and we are clearly of opinion that the courts may not supply the words which Congress omitted. Nor can such course be induced by any consideration of public policy or the desire to promote justice, if such would be its effect, in dealing with dependent people.

We reach the conclusion that the Circuit Court of Appeals rightly construed this statute, and its decrees are affirmed.

---

[263] LAZARUS, MICHEL, & LAZARUS, etc., Appts.,
v.
EZRA P. PRENTICE, Ancillary Receiver of A. Musica & Son, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 263-269.)

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals — bankruptcy case.

1. A controversy in bankruptcy, appealable under the Judicial Code, § 128 (36 Stat. at L. 1133, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 193), to the circuit court of appeals, and thence to the Federal Supreme Court, was not initiated by an attempted intervention in a summary proceeding in a court of ancillary jurisdiction to restore certain property of bankrupts in the custody of those having no right to it to the bankruptcy court of original jurisdiction, where the interveners claim solely under alleged assignments of the property, made after the filing of the petition in the bankruptcy proceedings in the original case. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 804, 805, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — motion to dismiss — prematurity — record not printed.

2. A motion to dismiss, for want of jurisdiction, an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a circuit court of appeals, is not premature because the record has not

---

NOTE.—On appellate jurisdiction of Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

On appellate jurisdiction of Federal Supreme Court in bankruptcy cases—see note to James v. Stone, 57 L. ed. U. S. 573.

On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

Digitized by Google

been printed, where the Supreme Court is sufficiently advised as to the situation of the case from a printed transcript of the proceedings in the district court to dispose of the motion without doing injustice to the parties.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VII. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 1012.]

Submitted May 4, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, dismissing a petition in intervention in an ancillary bankruptcy proceeding. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 211 Fed. 326.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Henry L. Lazarus, David Sessler, and Girault Farrar submitted the cause for appellants. Messrs. Herman Michel and Eldon S. Lazarus were on the brief:

This court has jurisdiction.

Houghton v. Burden, 228 U. S. 161, 57 L. ed. 780, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Greey v. Dockendorff, 231 U. S. 513, ante, 339, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co. 216 U. S. 545, 54 L. ed. 610, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, 194 U. S. 206, 48 L. ed. 986, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690.

No printed record having been submitted to appellants or to the court, the motion to dismiss or affirm should be denied, or be postponed until the regular hearing of this cause.

Power v. Baker, 112 U. S. 710, 28 L. ed. 825, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361; Crane Iron Co. v. Hoagland, 108 U. S. 5, 27 L. ed. 630, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17; St. Louis Nat. Bank v. United States Ins. Co. 100 U. S. 43, 25 L. ed. 547; Waterville v. Van Slyke, 115 U. S. 290, 29 L. ed. 406, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39.

A motion to affirm, coupled with a motion to dismiss, will not be entertained unless there is color of ground in the motion to dismiss.

Chanute v. Trader, 132 U. S. 213, 33 L. ed. 346, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

The question of jurisdiction in this case cannot be determined without opening the record and looking into the merits of the controversy; and hence the motion to dismiss should be denied, or referred to the hearing on the merits.

Lynch v. DeBarnal, 131 U. S. xciv, App. and 19 L. ed. 395.

Messrs. H. Generes Dufour and Edwin T. Rice submitted the cause for appellees:

This is a "proceeding in bankruptcy" within the meaning and intendment of the bankruptcy statute, as distinguished from a "controversy in bankruptcy."

Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 46 L. ed. 405, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Re Franklin Suit & Skirt Co. 197 Fed. 599; Re Friedman, 88 C. C. A. 306, 161 Fed. 260; Re Norris, 177 Fed. 598; Re Weinreb, 76 C. C. A. 609, 146 Fed. 243; Re Frankfort, 144 Fed. 721.

It would seem that the judgment of the district court should have been reviewed in the circuit court of appeals upon a petition for review, and that the decree of the circuit court of appeals upon such petition to review is final, and not subject to review in this court. Notwithstanding the fact that the review in the court of appeals was on appeal, it was proper to consider the same as on petition for review.

Holden v. Stratton, 191 U. S. 115, 48 L. ed. 116, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

[265] Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a motion to dismiss the appeal of Lazarus, Michel, & Lazarus, interveners in a certain bankruptcy proceeding in the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Louisiana, where the intervening petition was dismissed (205 Fed. 413), which order was affirmed on appeal to the circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit (211 Fed. 326). The interveners now attempt to bring the case to this court by appeal on the ground that the judgment of the circuit court of appeals was not final in the proceeding.

The facts are not materially in dispute, and, as found by both the district court and the circuit court of appeals, appear to be: Antonio Musica and Philip Musica were partners in trade under the firm name of A. Musica & Son, importers of hair in the city of New York. They had become largely indebted, and on the 19th of March, 1913, a petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed in the district court of the United States for the southern district of New York against the firm and the individual members thereof, and a receiver was appointed of the bankrupt estate, the partnership and its members being subsequently adjudicated bankrupts. On the same day the petition was filed the bankrupts and Arthur Musica were arrested as fugitives from justice in the city of New Orleans, and Lucy Grace Musica was held as a material witness. Upon search there was found upon their persons, variously distributed among them and concealed in divers ways, about $75,000 in money, and notes, mortgages, and insurance policies amounting in value to some $50,000 more. Without going into detail, upon the admissions of the parties it became perfectly apparent that the property in question belonged to the bankrupt estate. The district court for the eastern district of Louisiana, upon petition, confirmed the receiver [266] as temporary receiver of that court, and directed that all the property be turned over to him, to be transmitted to the trustee or trustees in bankruptcy of A. Musica & Son, elected and qualified in the district court for the southern district of New York, to be disposed of under and subject to the orders of that court.

Digitized by Google

While the Musicas took the case to the Circuit court of appeals, no appeal has been sued out by them to this court, and the only questions here concern the intervention of Lazarus, Michel, & Lazarus, who, on April 28, 1913, filed an intervening petition in the district court for the eastern district of Louisiana, claiming $15,000 as attorney fees for services rendered the Musicas in the proceedings against them in the courts of Louisiana to protect their property rights and possession, and for services to be rendered in representing them in proceedings in New York, if their services were there required. The decree of the district court, which was affirmed in the circuit court of appeals, dismissed the petition in intervention of Lazarus, Michel, & Lazarus, reserving their right to assert whatever claim they may have in the bankruptcy court of original and primary jurisdiction.

The filing of the petition and adjudication in the bankruptcy court in New York brought the property of the bankrupts, wherever situated, into custodia legis, and it was thus held from the date of the filing of the petition, so that subsequent liens could not be given or obtained thereon, nor proceedings had in other courts to reach the property, the court of original jurisdiction having acquired the full right to administer the estate under the bankruptcy law. Muller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 46 L. ed. 405, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Acme Harvester Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co. 222 U. S. 300, 56 L. ed. 208, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96. Under clause 3 of § 2 of the bankruptcy act of 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418) the receiver in the original case would have had the right, acting under authority of the court to take possession in a summary [267] proceeding of the bankrupts' property, found as was this, in possession of those admittedly holding it for the bankrupts, and to hold the property until the qualification of the trustee, or until the bankruptcy petition should be dismissed, if that should happen. Bryan v. Bernheimer, 181 U. S. 188, 45 L. ed. 814, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; Mueller v. Nugent, supra. Prior to the amendment of June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 838, chap. 412, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1493), this court had held that in cases where the bankruptcy court of original jurisdiction could itself make a summary order for the delivery of property to the trustee or receiver, the court of ancillary jurisdiction could do so (Babbitt v. Dutcher, 216 U. S. 102, 54 L. ed. 402, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372, 17 Ann. Cas. 969), and by clause 20, added to § 2 by the amendment of June 25, 1910, the bankruptcy courts were specifically given ancillary jurisdiction over persons or property within their respective territorial limits in aid of a trustee or receiver appointed in any court of bankruptcy. Under this amendment there can be no question that the district court in Louisiana had authority to appoint a receiver, and to take summary proceedings for the restoration of the bankrupts' estate, which was in the custody of people having no right to it, in order that the same might be turned over to the bankruptcy court having jurisdiction for administration. Under the circumstances here shown, there can be no question that this authority was properly exercised in this case.

The property, when seized, was, by virtue of the terms of the bankruptcy act, held for and to be turned over to the court of original jurisdiction, and no right could be acquired in it by assignment subsequent to the filing of the petition which would defeat this purpose. Such assignment was a mere nullity, properly disregarded by the bankruptcy court, and notwithstanding which it could direct the delivery of the bankrupts' property to the receiver by summary order. Babbitt v. Dutcher, supra. There is no contention that Lazarus, Michel, & Lazarus had any lien upon this property at the time of the apprehension [268] of the parties and the seizure of the property. Whatever rights they had are asserted to arise by virtue of the assignments made April 1, 1913, and after the filing of the original petition in bankruptcy.

For an attorney fee for services to be rendered in contemplation of bankruptcy the act makes specific provision in subdivision d of § 60, and the amount thus attempted to be used in contemplation of bankruptcy proceedings is subject to revision in the court of original jurisdiction, and not elsewhere. See Re Wood & Henderson, 210 U. S. 246, 52 L. ed. 1046, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621.

The contention of the appellants, and the proposition upon which they rely to sustain jurisdiction in this court, is that, by their intervention in the proceeding in the United States district court in Louisiana, they initiated a controversy in the bankruptcy proceeding which is appealable to this court from the circuit court of appeals, as are ordinary cases in equity where original jurisdiction does not rest on diverse citizenship entirely (Judicial Code, § 128 [36 Stat. at L. 1133, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 193]). To maintain that proposition Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, 194 U. S. 296, 48 L. ed. 986, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 53 L. ed. 772, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008; Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co. 216 U. S. 545, 54 L. ed. 610, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; Houghton v. Burden, 228 U. S. 161, 57 L. ed. 780, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491, and cases of that character, are cited. In those cases it was held that controversies arising in bankruptcy, in the nature of plenary suits, concerning property claimed by others than the bankrupt, do not come under the special provisions of the bankruptcy act governing petitions for review and appeals, but take the course of ordinary cases in equity, and are not final in the circuit court of appeals where other cases of a similar character would not be.

Digitized by Google

The bankruptcy act provides for review under § 24b of administrative orders and decrees in the course of bankruptcy proceedings which are not made specially appealable under § 25a. And controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings, of the character of which we [269] have spoken, under § 24a, are appealable like other equity cases. See Re Loving, 224 U. S. 183, 56 L. ed. 725, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446. In this case the merely ancillary jurisdiction invoked in the seizure of this property in the hands of those holding it for the bankrupts was in a mere summary proceeding in bankruptcy, and its character could not be changed or its jurisdiction enlarged, by the attempted intervention of Lazarus, Michel, & Lazarus under alleged assignments of the property, made after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy proceedings in the original case. We think the district court was right in holding, and the circuit court of appeals right in affirming its decision, that whatever claim Lazarus, Michel, & Lazarus had under the circumstances here shown must be asserted in the court of original jurisdiction. The attempted intervention in the ancillary proceeding did not give jurisdiction over a controversy in bankruptcy appealable under the Judicial Code to the court of appeals, and thence to this court. This conclusion must result in the dismissal of the attempted appeal here.

It is contended, however, that this motion is premature, because the record in this case has not been printed. It is true that ordinarily such motions, made before the record is printed, must be accompanied by a statement of facts upon which they rest, or by printed copies of so much of the record as will enable the court to understand the case. Under the present practice it is permissible to file the record printed in the court below, and we have a printed transcript of the proceedings in the district court. In this printed record matters which the briefs do not dispute are shown, and we think we are sufficiently advised as to the situation of the case to dispose of it now without doing injustice to the parties. St. Louis Nat. Bank v. United States Ins. Co. 100 U. S. 43, 25 L. ed. 547.

We reach the conclusion that this appeal must be dismissed.

---

[270] STONE, SAND, & GRAVEL COMPANY and American Surety Company of New York, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 270–280.)

Damages — contract for public work — excess cost of reletting.

The exclusive measure of damages in case the government annuls a contract for public work because of the contractor's failure to commence the work by a stipulated day is to be found in a provision in such contract that the contractor shall forfeit all moneys and retained percentages due or to become due under the contract upon the giving of notice of annulment in case he fails to commence the performance of the work on the day specified therein, or, having commenced the work, fails, in the judgment of the engineer in charge, to prosecute the same faithfully and diligently, and the government therefore cannot recover, as damages sustained by reason of the contractor's default, the excess cost of reletting the contract.

[For other cases, see Damages, VI. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 302.]

Argued April 23, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which, on a second writ of error, affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana in favor of the United States in a suit to recover from a public contractor and its surety the excess cost of reletting the contract after the contractor's default. Reversed and a new trial awarded.

Digitized by Google

See same case below on first writ of error, 100 C. C. A. 651, 177 Fed. 321; on second writ of error, 115 C. C. A. 252, 195 Fed. 68.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William Marshall Bullitt argued the cause and, with Messrs. Henry C. Willcox and T. M. Miller, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

This case turns upon the rights of the parties under a standard printed form of contract prepared and in general use by the United States; and hence, in case of doubt, should be construed most strongly against it.

United States v. O'Brien 220 U. S. 321, 327, 328, 55 L. ed. 481, 484, 485, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Noonan v. Bradley, 9 Wall. 394, 407, 19 L. ed. 757, 761; Garrison v. United States, 7 Wall. 688, 690, 19 L. ed. 277, 278; Royal Ins. Co. v. Martin, 192 U. S. 149, 165, 48 L. ed. 385, 390, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Reiss, 183 U. S. 621, 626, 46 L. ed. 358, 360, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Christian v. First Nat. Bank, 84 C. C. A. 53, 155 Fed. 709; Farrelly v. United States, 86 C. C. A. 539, 159 Fed. 674; Mt. Vernon Refrigerating Co. v. Fred W. Wolf Co. 110 C. C. A. 200, 188 Fed. 168.

It is precisely the same clause that was construed in United States v. O'Brien, 220 U. S. 321, 55 L. ed. 481, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406, and the construction then given it should be either authoritatively controlling or conclusively persuasive here.

United States v. Harvey Steel Co. 227 U. S. 165, 166, 57 L. ed. 464, 465, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258.

As such clause did not contain any provision for charging the excess cost of completion against the contractor, the contractor should neither be charged with such excess cost (United States v. O'Brien, 220 U. S. 321, 327, 55 L. ed. 481, 484, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406), nor receive the profit from a cheaper completion (Quinn v. United States, 99 U. S. 30, 32, 25 L. ed. 269, 270).

The United States would have had no right to rescind or refuse to permit the contractor to perform further, merely because he did not begin on January 24, 1900, or even because he was slow and it seemed likely he had taken too big a job, and could not complete it within the contract time.

Kenedy Town & Improv. Co. v. First Nat. Bank, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 136 S. W. 558; Dingley v. Oler, 117 U. S. 490, 502, 503, 29 L. ed. 984, 987, 988, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850; Smoot's Case (United States v. Smoot) 15 Wall. 36, 49, 21 L. ed. 107, 111; Holt v. United Security L. Ins. & T. Co. 21 L.R.A. (N.S.) 695, and note, 76 N. J. L. 585, 72 Atl. 301; King Iron Bridge & Mfg. Co. v. St. Louis, 10 L.R.A. 828, and note, 43 Fed. 768; Brady v. Oliver, 41 L.R.A.(N.S.) 67 and note, 125 Tenn. 595, 147 S. W. 1135, Ann Cas. 1913C, 376.

When the United States annulled the contract and retained the money or reserve percentage due the contractor, then, ipso facto, the United States exercised the sole, exclusive, and entire right it had under the contract, and it cannot hold the contractor liable for the excess cost of completing the work, which it had, by annulment, prohibited the contractor from further trying to perform.

Farrelly v. United States, 86 C. C. A. 539, 159 Fed. 674; United States v. O'Brien, 89 C. C. A. 664, 163 Fed. 1022, 220 U. S. 321, 327, 55 L. ed. 481, 484, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406.

The forfeiture of retained pay is liquidated damages.

United States v. O'Brien, 220 U. S. 321, 55 L. ed. 481, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Crawford v. Heatwole, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 587, and note, 110 Va. 358, 66 S. E. 46; Madler v. Silverstone, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1, and note, 55 Wash. 159, 104 Pac. 165; King Iron Bridge & Mfg. Co. v. St. Louis, 10 L.R.A. 826, and note, 43 Fed. 768; K. P. Min. Co. v. Jacobson, 4 L.R.A.(N.S.) 755, and note, 30 Utah, 115, 83 Pac. 728; Sun Printing & Pub. Asso. v. Moore, 183 U. S. 642, 669, 46 L. ed. 366, 380, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; United States v. Bethlehem Steel Co. 205 U. S. 105, 119, 51 L. ed. 731, 736, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 450.

It is obvious that the present case is wholly different from those cases where the employer annulled the contract because the contractor, although still at work, had not completed the work by the time specified (Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Howard, 13 How. 307, 14 L. ed. 157; Quinn v. United States, 99 U. S. 30, 25 L. ed. 269; Baer v. Sleicher, 82 C. C. A. 281, 153 Fed. 129; United States v. McGee, 171 Fed. 206); or where the contractor, failing to complete the work within the contract time, the employer refused to let him continue on it longer (United States v. Gleason, 175 U. S. 588, 44 L. ed. 284, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 228); or where, before the time for completion arrived, the contractor, having done some work, absolutely abandoned the work, and the employer waited until after the date specified for completion, and then annulled it (United States v. McMullen, 222 U. S. 460, 56 L. ed. 269, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Hayes v. Nashville, 26 C. C. A. 59, 47 U. S. App. 713, 80 Fed. 641); or where, after the time for completion passed, the contractor abandoned the contract, left the work unfinished, and the employer then annulled the contract (Graham v. United States, 231 U. S. 474, 58 L. ed. 319, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148); or where the contractor abandoned the contract ab initio and refused to do any work whatever (United States v. Grosjean, 106 C. C. A. 573, 184 Fed. 593; Sparhawk v. United States, 67 C. C. A. 274, 134 Fed. 720; Chesapeake Transit Co. v. Walker, 158 Fed. 850); or where the contractor, while engaged on the work, abandoned and repudiated the contract before the time for completion (American Surety Co. v. Woods, 45 C. C. A. 282, 105 Fed. 741).

Digitized by Google

It is equally unlike those cases where the contractor abandoned the work because wrongfully interfered with by the other party (Anvil Min. Co. v. Humble, 153 U. S. 540, 38 L. ed. 814, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 97), or where the employer stopped a contractor who was not in default (United States v. Behan, 110 U. S. 338, 28 L. ed. 168, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 81), or where the employer annulled the contract while the contractor was in full prosecution of the work, with no intention of abandoning it (American Bonding Co. v. United States, 93 C. C. A. 310, 167 Fed. 915).

Solicitor General Davis argued the cause, and, with Mr. Francis H. McAdoo, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The government's right of action on the breach was not lost by annulling the contract.

United States v. McMullen, 222 U. S. 460, 56 L. ed. 269, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; United States v. O'Brien, 220 U. S. 321, 55 L. ed. 481, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406.

The measure of recovery for the breach was the excess cost of completing the work, and was not limited to liquidated damages.

United States v. Maloney, 4 App. D. C. 505.

The government had a right to repudiate the contract on common-law principles, and is entitled to recover actual damages for the breach.

Bollman v. Burt, 61 Md. 415; Cleveland Rolling Mill Co. v. Rhodes, 121 U. S. 255, 30 L. ed. 920, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 882; Johnson v. Allen, 78 Ala. 387, 56 Am. Rep. 34; Norrington v. Wright, 115 U. S. 188, 29 L. ed. 366, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; Pope v. Porter, 102 N. Y. 366, 7 N. E. 304.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action by the United States against the Stone, Sand, & Gravel Company, a corporation, hereinafter styled the contractor, and its surety, the American Surety Company of New York, to recover the excess cost of completion of a certain contract for excavating 7,500,000 cubic yards of earth within certain designated localities in the work of improving the harbor of Vicksburg, Mississippi. For this work the United States agreed to pay 8.49 cents per cubic yard as the work progressed, and the contractor agreed to begin active work on or before December 5, 1899, with sufficient force and plant for an output of not less than 260,000 cubic yards per month, to be increased on or before January 5, 1900, to a plant adequate for an output of 330,000 cubic yards per month. Subsequently, upon application of the contractor, the time for beginning was extended to January 24, 1900. While by [275] January 24th the contractor had made large expenditures in preparing to commence work, it had not on that day assembled the necessary force or plant. For this reason the Chief of Engineers on the following day confirmed a prior, anticipatory recommendation of the engineer in charge that the contract should be annulled. An application for an extension of time was denied by the Secretary of War, and on March 7, 1900, formal notice was given to the contractor, as required by the contract, that it had failed to prosecute the work of excavation, etc., "in accordance with specifications and requirements . . . and the said contract is hereby annulled." The work was relet at a price of 12.4 cents per cubic yard, making an excess cost of $228,201.91, and an action was brought and judgment had against the contractor for that sum, minus a credit of $6,206.69, on account of certain voluntary work of an experimental character, which sum had been retained by the United States. There was also judgment against the surety company for $75,000, the full penalty of the bond.

The only breach of contract alleged was the failure to begin active operations on the day stipulated with a plant and force adequate to produce the monthly output required. The breach is confessed, but the error insisted upon here is that the contract, for such a breach, limits the measure of recovery to liquidated damages; namely, a forfeiture of all money or retained percentages due or to become due under the contract, and that the court below erred in allowing as damages the excess cost of the work under the reletting.

The clauses of the contract which give rise to this contention occur in the standard form of contract used by the War Department, known as form 19, and are the same clauses construed by this court in United States v. O'Brien, 220 U. S. 321, 55 L. ed. 481, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406. The clauses involved for purposes of reference may be described as clauses A and B. In clause A [276] it is expressly provided that if the contractor "fail to commence with the performance of the work on the day specified herein, or shall, in the judgment of the engineer in charge, fail to prosecute faithfully and diligently the work in accordance with the specifications and requirements of this contract, then, in either case . . . the engineer in charge shall have power, with the sanction of the Chief of Engineers, to annul this contract by giving notice in writing to that effect . . . and upon the giving of such notice all money or reserved percentage due or to become due . . . by reason of this contract shall be and become forfeited to the United States. . . ." The engineer in charge is thereupon authorized, if an immediate performance of the work "be, in his opinion, required by the public exigency, to proceed to provide for the same . . ." as prescribed in § 3709, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2484).

Digitized by Google

Following clause A are three other clauses dealing with changes in the work, cost of extra work, and liabilities for labor and material furnished. Then comes B, which reads as follows:

"It is further understood and agreed that in case of failure on the part of the party of the second part to complete this contract as specified and agreed upon, that all sums due and percentages retained shall thereby be forfeited to the United States, and that the said United States shall also have the right to recover any or all damages due to such failure in excess of the sums so forfeited, and also to recover from the party of the second part, as part of said damages, whatever sums may be expended by the party of the first part in completing the said contract, in excess of the price herein stipulated to be paid to the party of the second part for completing the same."

That there was no abandonment of the contract by the plaintiffs in error is too plain to need discussion. Large expenditures were made to get ready, and further extensions [277] of time were sought both before and after notice of annulment. The explanation of the failure to get ready lies in the obvious fact that the contract was larger than the financial capacity of the contractor, and the United States was plainly within its contract right in putting it off the job and in reletting the work.

What is the measure of recovery against the contractor where the government "annuls" the contract for failure to commence the work upon a stipulated day? The right to "annul," that is, to prohibit the contractor from going on under the contract, is plainly conferred in two distinct cases by clause A,—first, when the contractor fails to begin upon the day stipulated, and, second, when, having commenced the work, the contractor fails, "in the judgment of the engineer in charge, to prosecute the work faithfully and diligently." In either case the same section specifically declares that upon the giving of the notice of annulment, "all money or reserved percentages due or to become due to the contractor . . . shall be and become forfeited to the United States."

It is therefore obvious that if the right to annul this contract depends upon clause A, the measure of damages recoverable in this action is limited by that clause to the forfeiture of all moneys or retained percentages due or to become due under the contract. United States v. O'Brien, supra. This is plainly conceded in the brief of the Solicitor General.

To escape confession of error in the judgment below, in so far as the United States was permitted to recover the excess cost of reletting the job, it has been argued that the right to annul the contract did not arise out of clause A, but was "a right inherent" in this and every other contract when time is of the essence, and that when there was, as in this case, a breach of an express agreement to begin the work upon a certain day, the right to annul was complete; and upon annulment the right to [278] recover all actual damages followed. Of course, this so-called "inherent right" to annul a contract, with the consequent right to recover all actual damages as for a complete breach, are rights supposed to arise not out of any express agreement, but out of the common law. But the assumption that, aside from clause A, an agreement to begin such a work on a particular day would be such a vital term of the contract as to justify the other party in an immediate annulment if the work was not so begun is seriously challenged. The vital character of time to the contract would depend upon its nature and particular circumstances. These might be such that time would not be of the essence of the contract at all. Any resort to the contract here involved as making time the essence of the agreement must include clause A, which expressly determines the consequences. Such an appeal to the contract would naturally result detrimentally to the argument here made, since the contract, while making time vital, provides also for the consequence of a breach in that respect. The benefit and the burden of clause A must hang together.

But we need not deal with the consequences as if clause A had been omitted. The right might have been inherent, or not so vital as to justify the rigor of annulment. Both parties elected to deal with the matter by express stipulation, and that should be and is the end of it. In such a situation there would be no justice in straining the contract for a construction which would limit its application to cases where the right of annulment would not exist without it. This contract was prepared in advance of the bidding by the United States. The bidder was required to bid with strict reference to its terms. One term was that the work should begin with a plant and force of definite capacity on or before a particular day. Another was that if this term was not complied with the United States might annul the contract, and that, as a consequence [279] of such annulment, all money earned under it should be forfeited. This forfeiture is not made dependent upon the existence of any actual damage. Thus, damages were, by stipulation, liquidated. That such damages may be in this instance inadequate may be true, but the fact affords no ground for frittering away the agreement by fanciful distinctions which never entered the head of either party to it.

Digitized by Google

The plain purpose was to obtain for the United States the right to take the contract from a bidder who should break his agreement at its threshhold and let the work to another, possibly for a better price. At any rate, the right to annul for a breach in respect of the time of beginning was a valuable right, and for it the government stipulated and liquidated the damages in the event of its exercise. The contractor would not only lose his contract, but also would forfeit everything due him. The agreement settled the right and all the consequences of its exercise.

There is nothing in the case of United States v. O'Brien, supra, which would justify the limitation that the United States would now have us place upon this plain provision of the contract. The contract in that case was a dredging contract. The work was to begin on a day named and be completed on another. The contract was according to form 19, and included the two clauses, A and B, above set out. The work was begun on time. The first member of clause A was therefore eliminated from any consideration. The dredging did not progress to the satisfaction of the engineer in charge, who elected to stop the contractor from going on, when, confessedly, time enough remained to complete the work within contract time. The United States, under these circumstances, sought to recover the excess cost of completing the work, but this court held that such excess cost could only be recovered under clause B for failure to complete according to the terms of the agreement. There had been no breach of the agreement, [280] as time remained to finish the work had the contractor not been prohibited from going on because the engineer in charge was not satisfied with the progress of the job. But the right to annul for the later reason was a right conferred by clause A, with the damages limited as therein provided. The United States was precluded from the rule of damages prescribed by clause B, and, being forced to justify under clause A, was held bound by the limitation of that clause.

The right to annul is expressly conferred by clause A for a failure to begin on the stipulated day. The United States resorted to that clause for its authority, and pursued the procedure therein pointed out. It is plainly bound by the limitation of damages therein prescribed. For the error in not so confining the recovery, the judgment is reversed and a new trial awarded.

ATLANTIC COAST LINE RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
STATE OF GEORGIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 280-294.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — liberty to contract — police power — requiring electric headlights on locomotives.

1. Requiring railway locomotives running on the main line to be equipped with electric headlights which shall consume not less than 300 watts at the arc, with reflectors not less than 23 inches in diameter, as is done by Georgia Pub. Laws 1908, pp. 50, 51, does not deprive the carriers of liberty of contract and property without due process of law, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., but such requirement is a

---

Note.—On state regulations of equipment of railroad rolling stock as interference with interstate commerce—see note to Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. State, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 20.

On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107, and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

As to what constitutes due process of law, generally—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to the validity of class legislation, generally—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection, generally—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

Digitized by Google

valid exercise of the police power of the state.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 3; IV. b, 5; IV. c, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — requiring electric headlights on locomotives.

2. The equal protection of the laws clause of U. S. Const., 14th Amend., cannot be deemed to be infringed by the provisions of Georgia Pub. Laws 1908, pp. 50, 51, requiring railway locomotives running on the main line to be equipped with electric headlights, merely because the act may not apply to receivers operating railways, in view of the temporary and special character of receivers' management.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 3, b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — requiring electric headlights on locomotives.

3. The exceptions in favor of tram roads, mill roads, and roads engaged principally in lumber or logging transportation in connection with mills, made by Georgia Pub. Laws 1908, pp. 50, 51, when requiring railway locomotives running on the main line to be equipped with electric headlights, do not render the statute repugnant to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., as denying equal protection of the laws.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 3, b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — congressional inaction — requiring electric headlights on locomotives.

4. The incidental application to railway locomotives, equipped with oil headlights, and regularly used in hauling interstate freight trains over the carrier's main line, of the provisions of Georgia Pub. Laws 1908, pp. 50, 51, requiring railway locomotives running on the main line to be equipped with electric headlights which shall consume not less than 300 watts at the arc, with reflectors not less than 23 inches in diameter, does not render such statute invalid, in the absence of congressional legislation on the subject, as constituting an unwarrantable interference with interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c; III. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — conflicting state and Federal regulations — requiring electric headlights on locomotives.

5. The subject of electric headlights for locomotives has not been so far covered by the various acts of Congress relating to safety appliances and to the functions of the Interstate Commerce Commission respecting such appliances and the prevention of accidents, i. e., act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 943, chap. 976, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1314), act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 324, 325, chap. 200, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1325), act of May 30, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 476, chap. 225, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1326), act of April 14, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 298, chap. 160, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1327), act of May 6, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 350, chap. 208, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1329), act of February 17, 1911 (36 Stat. at L. 913, chap. 103, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1333), or by any regulation established by the Commission, acting under the authority of Congress, as to invalidate, as applied to railway locomotives equipped with oil headlights, and regularly used in hauling interstate freight trains over the carrier's main line, the provisions of Georgia Pub. Laws 1908, pp. 50, 51, requiring railway locomotives running on the main line to be equipped with electric headlights which shall consume not less than 300 watts at the arc, with reflectors not less than 23 inches in diameter.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c; III. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 24.]

Argued April 17, 1913. Decided June 8, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Georgia to review a judgment which, conformably to the answers of the Supreme Court of the state to certified questions, affirmed a conviction of a carrier in the City Court of Richmond County for violating the headlight law. Affirmed.

See same case below, 135 Ga. 545, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 20, 69 S. E. 725.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry L. Stone argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Alfred P. Thom, Alexander Hamilton, and Robert C. Alston, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The act known as the Georgia headlight law is violative of the due process clause of the 14th Amendment.

Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 589, 41 L. ed. 832, 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Baxendale v. Great Western R. Co. 5 C. B. N. S. 336, 28 L. J. C. P. N. S. 81, 4 Jur. N. S. 1279, 7 Week. Rep. 64; E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 46 L. ed. 1058, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Bonnett v. Vallier, 136 Wis. 193, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 492, 128 Am. St. Rep. 1061, 116 N. W. 885; Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 22 L.R.A. 340, 37 Am. St. Rep. 206, 35 N. E. 62; Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Bowling Green, 57 Ohio St. 336, 41 L.R.A. 426, 49 N. E. 121; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Connersville, 147 Ind. 277, 37 L.R.A. 175, 62 Am. St. Rep. 418, 46 N. E. 579; Cleveland v. Clements Bros. Constr. Co. 67 Ohio St. 197, 59 L.R.A. 775, 93 Am. St. Rep. 670, 65 N. E. 885; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 49 L. ed. 169, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; 2 Elliott, Railroads, 2d ed. § 668, note, p. 24; Harbison v. Knoxville Iron Co. 103 Tenn. 421, 56 L.R.A. 316, 76 Am. St. Rep. 682, 53 S. W. 955; Health Dept. v. Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 41, 27 L.R.A. 710, 45 Am. St. Rep. 579, 39 N. E. 833; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 329, 50 L. ed. 772, 775, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Hollister v. Benedict & B. Mfg. Co. 113 U. S. 59, 28 L. ed. 901, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 192, 43 Fed. 52; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. ed. 705, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; McLean v. Arkansas, 211 U. S. 547, 53 L. ed 319, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; National Phonograph Co. v. Schlegel, 64 C. C. A. 594, 128 Fed. 733; Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L.R.A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454; Shelbyville v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 146 Ind. 66, 44 N. E. 929; United States v. Palmer, 128 U. S. 262, 271, 32 L. ed. 442, 445, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104; Welch v. Swasey, 214 U. S. 105, 53 L. ed. 929, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; State ex rel. Zillmer v. Kreutzberg, 114 Wis. 530, 58 L.R.A. 751, 91 Am. St. Rep. 934, 90 N. W. 1098.

Digitized by Google

The act in question violates the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 49 L. ed. 169, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 155, 159, 160, 165, 41 L. ed. 666, 668-671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Harding v. People, 160 Ill. 459, 32 L.R.A. 445, 52 Am. St. Rep. 344, 43 N. E. 624; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. ed. 543; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; Los Angeles County v. Hollywood Cemetery Asso. 124 Cal. 344, 71 Am. St. Rep. 75, 57 Pac. 153; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

The headlight act of the state of Georgia is unenforceable and void, under the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, and because Congress by its legislation has pre-empted and occupied the field of regulation of the same subject-matter.

1. The act interferes with and places a burden upon interstate commerce.

Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 214 U. S. 218, 223, 53 L. ed. 972, 973, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Wharton, 207 U. S. 328, 334, 52 L. ed. 230, 234, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 209-212, 38 L. ed. 962, 965-967, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485-488, 24 L. ed. 547, 548; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. ed. 543; Union P. R. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 163 U. S. 564, 41 L. ed. 265, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1173; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 347; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

2. Congress by its legislation has pre-empted and occupied the field of regulation of the same subject-matter, to the exclusion of state legislation.

Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Miller, 226 U. S. 513, 57 L. ed. 323, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Latta, 226 U. S. 519, 57 L. ed. 328, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hardwick Farmers' Elevator Co. 226 U. S. 426, 57 L. ed. 284, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 203, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Arkansas, 219 U. S. 453, 466, 55 L. ed. 290, 296, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 55, 56 L. ed. 327, 348, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Vreeland, 227 U. S. 59, 57 L. ed. 417, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 632, 41 L. ed. 853, 854. 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Hudson County, 227 U. S. 248, 57 L. ed. 499, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 222 U. S. 370, 56 L. ed. 237, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, 56 L. ed. 72, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, 3 N. C. C. A. 822; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 56 L. ed. 257, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 444, 56 L. ed. 263, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145.

Mr. Thomas S. Felder, Attorney General of Georgia, argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

Statutes of states of the character of the one under consideration, being designed for the protection of the property and lives of the people, are not unconstitutional because they may in a manner affect interstate commerce, nor do they violate the due process clause of the Constitution because an expense may be incurred in obeying their regulations.

Digitized by Google

New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. 211 U. S. 622, 53 L. ed. 360, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 299, 41 L. ed. 166, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 567, 38 L. ed. 272, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Arkansas, 219 U. S. 453, 55 L. ed. 290, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Savage v. Jones, 225 U. S. 501, 56 L. ed. 1182, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Southern R. Co. v. King, 217 U. S. 524, 54 L. ed. 868, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 47 L. ed. 108, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. 778, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 14 Ann. Cas. 1101; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 352, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

The act does not violate the equal protection clause of the Constitution because it excepts from its operation tram roads, mill roads, and roads engaged principally in lumber or logging transportation in connection with mills.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Arkansas, 219 U. S. 453, 55 L. ed. 290, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; People v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 55 Hun, 409, 8 N. Y. Supp. 672; Missouri & N. A. R. Co. v. State, 92 Ark. 1, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 861, 135 Am. St. Rep. 164, 121 S. W. 930; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 173 Ind. 469, 87 N. E. 1030, 90 N. E. 1011.

Nor is the statute subject to the criticism made that it interferes with the right of the railroad company to contract.

New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 567, 38 L. ed. 269, 272, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; McGehee, Due Process of Law, 345.

It is not a taking of property without due proceses of law, in contemplation of this provision of the Constitution, because the railroad, in order to comply with the statute, would have to discard the headlight used by it, which it considers a good headlight, and replace the same with the headlights required under the act. All property is held subject to the police regulations of the state.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Bacon v. Boston & M. R. Co. 83 Vt. 421, 76 Atl. 128; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110.

Courts always presume that a legislature, in enacting statutes, acts advisedly and with full knowledge of the situation, . . . and they must accept its action as that of a body having full power to act, and only acting when it has acquired sufficient information to justify its action.

Chesapeake & P. Teleg. Co. v. Manning, 186 U. S. 238, 46 L. ed. 1144, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881.

Assuming that several measures are equally efficient to avert danger to health or safety, it would still seem to be within the legislative power to select one method and require its adoption; for it is easier to enforce uniform police regulations than a great variety of measures, the efficiency of each of which would be a question of fact in each particular case.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 102, 43 L. ed. 909, 912, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Freund, Pol. Power, § 34.

This statute is in the interest of the public, and its wisdom cannot be questioned by the courts. The lawmaking body has determined the matter in this regard. The public policy of the government is to be found in its statutes, and when the lawmaking power speaks upon a particular subject over which it has constitutional power to legislate, public policy in such cases is what the statute enacts.

Logan v. Postal Teleg. & Cable Co. 157 Fed. 570; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 340, 41 L. ed. 1027, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 569, 55 L. ed. 328, 339, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259.

This act of the legislature of Georgia does not in any way conflict with any act of Congress or any rule or regulation of the Interstate Commerce Commission: and in the absence of such conflict the Federal courts will not declare the act invalid as interfering with interstate commerce. As long as the field has not been completely covered by Congress, the states have the right, under their reserved police power, to legislate upon the subject.

Digitized by Google

Savage v. Jones, 225 U. S. 501, 533, 56 L. ed. 1182, 1194, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Four Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 623, 53 L. ed. 352, 361, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 148, 47 L. ed. 108, 114, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company, the plaintiff in error, was convicted of violating a statute of the state of Georgia known as the "headlight law." Pub. Laws (Ga.) 1908, pp. 50, 51; Civil Code, §§ 2697, 2698. In defense it was insisted that the act contravened the commerce clause and the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. On appeal from the judgment of conviction, the court of appeals of the state of Georgia certified the questions thus raised, together with others involving the application of the state Constitution, to the supreme court of the state. Answering these questions, that court sustained the validity of the statute (135 Ga. 545, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 20, 69 S. E. 725), whereupon final judgment was entered and this writ of error was sued out.

The material portions of the statute are as follows:

[287] "Section 1. Be it enacted by the general assembly of Georgia, and it is hereby enacted by authority of the same, that all railroad companies are hereby required to equip and maintain each and every locomotive used by such company to run on its main line after dark with a good and sufficient headlight, which shall consume not less than 300 watts at the arc, and with a reflector not less than 23 inches in diameter, and to keep the same in good condition. The word main line as used herein means all portions of the railway line, not used solely as yards, spurs, and side tracks.

"Section 2. Be it further enacted that any railroad company violating this act in any respect shall be liable to indictment as for a misdemeanor in any county in which the locomotive not so equipped and maintained may run, and on conviction shall be punished by fine as prescribed in § 1039 of the Code of 1895. . . .

"Section 4. Provided this act shall not apply to tram roads, mill roads, and roads engaged principally in lumber or logging transportation in connection with mills."

The contention is made that this act deprives the company of its liberty of contract, and of its property without due process of law. It compels the disuse of a material part of the company's present equipment, and the substitution of a new appliance. The use of locomotive headlights, however, is directly related to safety in operation. It cannot be denied that the protective power of government, subject to which the carrier conducts its business and manages its property, extends as well to the regulation of this part of the carrier's equipment as to apparatus for heating cars or to automatic couplers. The legislature may require an adequate headlight and whether the carrier's practice is properly conducive to safety, or a new method affording greater protection should be substituted, is a matter for the legislative judgment. But it is insisted that the legislature has gone beyond the [288] limits of its authority in making the specific requirements contained in the act as to the character and power of the light and the dimensions of the reflector. This argument ignores the established principle that if its action is not arbitrary,—is reasonably related to a proper purpose,—the legislature may select the means which it deems to be appropriate to the end to be achieved. It is not bound to content itself with general directions when it considers that more detailed measures are necessary to attain a legitimate object. Particularization has had many familiar illustrations in cases where there has been a conviction of the need of it; as, for example, in building regulations and in provisions for safeguarding persons in the use of dangerous machinery. So far as governmental power is concerned, we know of no ground for an exception in the case of a locomotive headlight.

It cannot be said that the legislature acted arbitrarily in prescribing electric light, in preference to others, or that, having made this selection, it was not entitled to impose minimum requirements to be observed in the use of the light. Witnesses for the plaintiff in error, including its general superintendent of motive power and other employees holding important positions and conversant with the exigencies of operation, presented their objections to the use of the electric headlight. Locomotive engineers who, for many years, had driven locomotives with such a light, testified for the state, expressing a decided opinion in favor of the use of electric headlights in the interest of safe operation, and submitting their views in answer to the objections that had been urged. Assuming that there is room for differences of opinion, this fact does not preclude the exercise of the legislative discretion. So far as the question was one simply of expediency,—as to the best method to provide the desired security,—it was within the competency of the legislature to decide it. New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 571, 38 L. ed. 269, 274, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Chicago, B. & Q. [289] R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 583, 584, 50 L. ed. 596, 605, 606, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; McLean v. Arkansas, 211 U. S. 539, 547, 548, 53 L. ed. 315, 319, 320, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 568, 569, 55 L. ed. 328, 338, 339, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259, and cases there cited.

Digitized by Google

As to the objection that the statute makes no provision for conditions beyond the carrier's control, it is sufficient to say that in the light of the construction placed upon the act by the supreme court of the state, we are not at liberty to regard it as open to this criticism (135 Ga. pp. 561, 562); certainly, no such case is here presented. We conclude that there is no valid objection to the statute upon the ground that it deprives the carrier of liberty or property without due process of law.

The further contention is that the statute offends in denying to the plaintiff in error the equal protection of the laws. Specifically, the complaint is that the act does not apply to receivers operating railroads, and that it expressly excepts tram roads, mill roads, and roads engaged principally in lumber or logging transportation in connection with mills. As to the first, it cannot be said that the act does exclude receivers from its requirements. The state court has ruled that the words "railroad company" in the statute include natural persons as well as corporations. It declined to decide that receivers were not included; but, conceding, without deciding, that they were not, it was held that the statute would not for that reason violate the equal protection clause in view of the temporary and special character of receivers' management. 135 Ga. pp. 555, 556. We concur in this view. As to the exceptions made by the statute of tram roads, mill roads, etc., it is impossible to say that the differences with respect to operation and traffic conditions did not present a reasonable basis for classification. Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 78, 81, 55 L. ed. 369, 377, 378, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 160; Barrett v. Indiana, 229 U. S. 26, 30, 57 L. ed. 1050, 1052, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; German Alliance Ins. Co. v. Kansas, 233 U. S. 389, 418, ante, 1011, 1024, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612.

[290] Finally, it is urged that the statute constitutes an unwarrantable interference with interstate commerce. The locomotive with respect to which the accusation was made was at the time being regularly used in the hauling of interstate freight trains over the company's main line of railroad, and was equipped with an oil headlight. The statute, as the supreme court of the state said, was not directed against interstate commerce, but it was held that it incidentally applied to locomotives used in hauling interstate trains while these were moving on the main line in the state of Georgia. This being so, the act is said to be repugnant to the exclusive power of Congress. It is argued that if Georgia may prescribe an electric headlight, other states through which the road runs may require headlights of a different sort; that, for example, some may demand the use of acetylene, and that others may require oil; and that, if state requirements conflict, it will be necessary to carry additional apparatus and to make various adjustments at state lines, which would delay and inconvenience interstate traffic.

The argument is substantially the same as that which was strongly presented to the court in New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418, where the plaintiff in error was held subject to penalty for the violation of a New York statute which in substance made it unlawful for any steam railroad doing business in that state to heat its passenger cars, on any other than mixed trains, by any stove or furnace kept inside of the car or suspended therefrom. The railroad company was a Connecticut corporation having but a few miles of road within the state of New York, and operating through trains from New York through Connecticut to Massachusetts. As this court said in its opinion, the argument was made that "a conflict between state regulations in respect of the heating of passenger cars used in interstate commerce would make safe and rapid [291] transportation impossible; that to stop an express train on its trip from New York to Boston at the Connecticut line in order that passengers may leave the cars heated as required by New York, and get into other cars heated in a different mode, in conformity with the laws of Connecticut, and then at the Massachusetts line to get into cars heated by still another mode, as required by the laws of that commonwealth, would be a hardship on travel that could not be endured." But the court ruled that these "possible inconveniences" could not affect "the question of power in each state to make such reasonable regulations for the safety of passengers on interstate trains as, in its judgment, all things considered, is appropriate and effective." Supra, pp. 632, 633.

Digitized by Google

In thus deciding, the court applied the settled principle that, in the absence of legislation by Congress, the states are not denied the exercise of their power to secure safety in the physical operation of railroad trains within their territory, even though such trains are used in interstate commerce. That has been the law since the beginning of railroad transportation. It was not intended that, pending Federal action, the use of such agencies, which, unless carefully guarded, was fraught with danger to the community, should go unregulated, and that the states should be without authority to secure needed local protection. The requirements of a state, of course, must not be arbitrary, or pass beyond the limits of a fair judgment as to what the exigency demands, but they are not invalid because another state, in the exercise of a similar power, may not impose the same regulation. We may repeat what was said in Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 481, 482, 31 L. ed. 508, 513, 514, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564: "It is to be remembered that railroads are not natural highways of trade and commerce. . . . The places where they may be located, and the plans according to which they must be constructed, are prescribed by the legislation of the state. Their operation requires the use of instruments [292] and agencies attended with special risks and dangers, the proper management of which involves peculiar knowledge, training, skill, and care. The safety of the public in person and property demands the use of specific guards and precautions. . . . The rules prescribed for their construction and for their management and operation, designed to protect persons and property, otherwise endangered by their use, are strictly within the limits of the local law. They are not per se regulations of commerce; it is only when they operate as such in the circumstances of their application, and conflict with the expressed or presumed will of Congress exerted on the same subject, that they can be required to give way to the supreme authority of the Constitution." See also Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 352, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 299, 41 L. ed. 166, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, supra; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 53 L. ed. 352, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 262, 54 L. ed. 472, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Arkansas, 219 U. S. 453, 55 L. ed. 290, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 402, 410, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1542, 1546, 48 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

If there is a conflict in such local regulations, by which interstate commerce may be inconvenienced,—if there appears to be need of standardization of safety appliances, and of providing rules of operation which will govern the entire interstate road, irrespective of state boundaries,—there is a simple remedy; and it cannot be assumed that it will not be readily applied if there be real occasion for it. That remedy does not rest in a denial to the state, in the absence of conflicting Federal action, of its power to protect life and property within its borders, but it does lie in the exercise of the paramount authority of Congress, in its control of interstate commerce, to establish such regulations as, in its judgment, may be deemed appropriate and sufficient. Congress, when it pleases, may give the rule and make the standard to be observed on the interstate highway.

[293] It is suggested that Congress has acted in the present instance. Reference is made to the act of March 2, 1893, chap. 196 (27 Stat. at L. 531, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), relating to power driving-wheel brakes for locomotives, grab irons, automatic couplers, and height of drawbars; to the act of March 2, 1903, chap. 976 (32 Stat. at L. 943, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1314), amending the act of 1893; to the act of May 27, 1908, chap. 200 (35 Stat. at L. 324, 325, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1325) authorizing the Interstate Commerce Commission to keep informed regarding compliance with the safety-appliance act, and to investigate and report on the need of any appliances or systems intended to promote the safety of railway operations; to the act of May 30, 1908, chap. 225 (35 Stat. at L. 476, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1326), relating to locomotive ash pans; to the act of April 14, 1910, chap. 160 (36 Stat. at L. 298, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1327), relating to sill steps, hand brakes, ladders, running boards, and hand holds, and providing that the Interstate Commerce Commission should, after hearing, designate the number, dimensions, location, and manner of application of these appliances, and of those required by the act of 1893; to the detailed regulations prescribed by the Commission, on March 13, 1911, pursuant to this authority; to the act of May 6, 1910, chap. 208 (36 Stat. at L. 350, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1329), requiring the Commission to investigate accidents and make report as to their causes, with such recommendations as they may deem proper; and to the act of February 17, 1911, chap. 103 (36 Stat. at L. 913, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1333), relating to locomotive boilers.

Digitized by Google

But it is manifest that none of these acts provides regulations for locomotive headlights. Attention is also called to the investigations conducted by what is known as the "block signal and train control board" (organized by the Commission), and the reports of that board with respect to sundry devices and appliances, including headlights. It does not appear, however, either that Congress has acted, or that the Commission, under the authority of Congress, has established any regulation so far as headlights are concerned. As to these, the situation has not been altered by any exertion of Federal power, and the [294] case stands as it has always stood, without regulation, unless it be supplied by local authority. The most that can be said is that inquiries have been made, but that Congress has not yet decided to establish regulations, either directly or through its subordinate body, as to the appliance in question. The intent to supersede the exercise of the state's police power with respect to this subject cannot be inferred from the restricted action which thus far has been taken. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 53 L. ed. 352, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Savage v. Jones, 225 U. S. 501, 533, 56 L. ed. 1182, 1194, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715.

The judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, the United States of America, Associated Jobbers of Los Angeles, and Pacific Coast Jobbers & Manufacturers Association, Appts.,

v.

ATCHISON, TOPEKA, & SANTA FE RAILWAY COMPANY, Southern Pacific Company, and San Pedro, Los Angeles, & Salt Lake Railroad Company.[1]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 294–314.)

Carriers — rates — added service — discrimination — switching charge.

1. The delivery and receipt on industrial spur tracks within the switching limits in a city of carload freight moving in interstate commerce, incidentally to a system-line haul, is not necessarily an added service, for which the carrier is entitled to make, or should make, a charge additional to the line-haul rate to or from such city, where that rate embraces a receiving and delivery service at team tracks or at freight sheds within such switching limits, for which the spur-track service is a substitute.

[For other cases, see Carriers, III. e; III. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — powers — inquiry into facts — carrier's switching charges.

2. The question whether there is at any point an additional service performed by the carrier in the receipt and delivery on industrial spur tracks within the switching limits in a city of carload freight moving in interstate commerce, upon which such carrier may base an extra charge, in addition to the line-haul rate to or from such city, or whether there is merely a substituted service which is substantially a like service to that included in the line-haul rate, and not received, is a question of fact to be determined according to the actual conditions of operation, and one upon which it is manifestly the province of the Interstate Commerce Commission to pass.

[Matters as to Interstate Commerce Commission, see Interstate Commerce Commission, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — judicial review — findings of fact.

3. The findings of the Interstate Commerce Commission that industrial spur tracks within the switching limits in a city constituted part of the carrier's terminals, and that under the conditions there existing the receipt and delivery on these spurs of carload freight moving in interstate commerce was a like service as compared with such receipt and delivery at team tracks and freight sheds within such switching limits, are conclusive upon the courts, if based upon the evidence.

[Matters as to Interstate Commerce Commission, see Interstate Commerce Commission, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Estoppel — by agreement — carrier's charge for switching service — discrimination.

4. Shippers subjected to unreasonable or unjustly discriminatory charges for the delivery and receipt on industrial spur tracks within the switching limits in a city of carload freight moving in interstate commerce are not estopped to bring the matter before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and to secure its order directing the carriers to stop the objectionable practice, because, when making the contracts under which the spur tracks were constructed, the shippers consented to a special charge when freight should be received and delivered thereon.

[For other cases, see Estoppel, III. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 98.]

Argued January 14 and 15, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

[1] Reported by the Official Reporter under the title of "The Los Angeles Switching Case."

NOTE.—On estoppel by agreement—see note to Keokuk & W. R. Co. v. County Ct. 38 L. ed. U. S. 458.

Digitized by Google

APPEAL from the United States Commerce Court to review an order suspending an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission prohibiting carriers from making an additional charge for receiving or delivering carload freight on industrial spur traks within switching limits. Reversed, and cause remanded to the United States District Court for the Southern District of California, with instructions to dismiss the bill.

See same case below, 188 Fed. 229, 929.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Blackburn Esterline, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Davis, filed a brief for the United States:

The findings of the Commission were in line with the facts before it, and accorded with the provisions of the act to regulate commerce as well as with certain well-considered judicial decisions, all of which the commerce court ignored.

Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. People, 56 Ill. 365, 8 Am. Rep. 690; Coe v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 3 Fed. 775; Covington Stock Yards Co. v. Keith, 139 U. S. 128, 35 L. ed. 73, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469; Vincent v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 49 Ill. 33.

The present case is not that of a carrier making delivery by means of a terminal company "to a point off its line," for which delivery it is entitled to make an extra charge, as in the case of Interstate Commerce Commission v. Stickney, 215 U. S. 98, 54 L. ed. 112, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66, but the controversy is limited to the narrow question of the right of appellees to make an extra charge for deliveries on spurs which are found to constitute a part of their own terminals, tracks, etc.

On a mixed question of law and fact the findings of the Commission are conclusive.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441, 455, 459, 51 L. ed. 1128, 1134, 1135, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700.

Mr. P. J. Farrell argued the cause and filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission:

In substituting its own judgment for the judgment of the Commission, and finding that the charge of $2.50 per car is not unjustly discriminatory, the commerce court acted beyond its power.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. ed. 448, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392.

Where called upon to suspend or set aside an order of the Commission based upon a discrimination found by the Commission to be unjust, the duty of the court does not include a right to determine whether the finding of the Commission is correct.

Procter & G. Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. ed. 1091, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 761.

Messrs. Gardiner Lathrop and Fred H. Wood argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. F. Herrin, J. P. Blair, Robert Dunlap, T. J. Norton, and C. W. Durbrow, filed a brief for appellees:

Outside of special agreement the duty of a railway company at common law and under the interstate commerce act is only to the public in general, and a single shipper can demand the performance of such duty only as he puts himself in the position or situation of one of the general public entitled to demand performance of the service in question.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Tiedt, 40 L.R.A.(N.S.) 848, 116 C. C. A. 168, 196 Fed. 348.

The phrase "terminal charges" was well understood in the English statutes and in the English decisions based thereon, made prior to the adoption of the interstate commerce act. As is well known, the latter act adopted certain terms and provisions found in the English statutes.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 264, 284, 36 L. ed. 699, 706, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844.

A switching service rendered within a terminal to make a special delivery of freight is appropriately regarded as a terminal service, and one for which a separate, reasonable charge, commensurate with the value of the same, may be imposed upon the party desiring and obtaining the benefit thereof.

National Tube-Works Co. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 4 Sadler (Pa.) 361, 8 Atl. 6; 4 Elliott, Railroads, 2d ed. § 1566; Owen v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 83 Mo. 454; Sowerby & Co. v. Great Northern R. Co. 7 Eng. Ry. & C. Traffic Cas. 156; Manchester R. Co. v. Pidcock & Co. 10 Eng. Ry. & C. Traffic Cas. 150; Macnamara, Carr. pp. 226, 227; Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 21 C. C. A. 103, 42 U. S. App. 308, 74 Fed. 803, affirmed on appeal in 167 U. S. 633, 644, 645, 42 L. ed. 306, 309, 310, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986; 1 Boyle & W. Traffic on Railways & Canals, p. 112; Hall v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 505, 53 L. T. N. S. 345, 5 Eng. Ry. & C. Traffic Cas. 28; 2 Boyle & W. Traffic on Railways & Canals, pp. 258, 286, 296; Stone v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 66.

The charge was separately stated in the tariff, as required by § 6 of the interstate commerce law concerning terminal charges, etc.

Digitized by Google

Beale v. W. Railroad Rate Regulation, § 912; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 192, 43 Fed. 42, 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 699, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Fitchburg R. Co. v. Gage, 12 Gray, 396.

The Chicago live stock switching cases are in point.

Walker v. Keenan, 19 C. C. A. 668, 34 U. S. App. 691, 73 Fed. 755; Stickney v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 164 Fed. 638, 215 U. S. 98, 54 L. ed. 112, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66.

It was not obligatory on the railway company to construct industrial spurs and deliver or receive freight thereon. Its obligation in that respect is wholly voluntary and contractual, and it is therefore proper to impose a separate charge.

Jones v. Newport News & M. Valley Co. 13 C. C. A. 95, 31 U. S. App. 92, 65 Fed. 736; Mercantile Trust Co. v. Columbus, S. & H. R. Co. 90 Fed. 148; Harp v. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. 118 Fed. 178; Mann v. Pere Marquette R. Co. 135 Mich. 219, 19 N. W. 721; Gulf Compress Co. v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 100 Miss. 582, 56 So. 666.

A railway company would not have power or authority to appropriate or condemn a right of way in order to construct a spur track to be operated for the special accommodation of one or a few shippers, as such use would be for a private, and not a public, purpose.

Pittsburg, W. &. K. R. Co. v. Benwood Iron Works, 31 W. Va. 710, 2 L.R.A. 680, 8 S. E. 453; Re Split Rock Cable Road Co. 128 N. Y. 408, 28 N. E. 506; Chattanooga Terminal R. Co. v. Felton, 69 Fed. 279; Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Wiltse, 116 Ill. 449, 6 N. E. 49; Brown v. Gerald, 100 Me. 351, 70 L.R.A. 472, 109 Am. St. Rep. 526, 61 Atl. 785.

The cost of performing a particular service among a number of others, if, indeed, the same could be approximated, is not the only element which is to be considered in determining the reasonableness of a charge. The railway company is entitled to something more than cost.

Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. 214 U. S. 297, 53 L. ed. 1004, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Stickney, 215 U. S. 98, 54 L. ed. 112, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66.

The value of the service is an important and necessary element for consideration, and if we were to assume, for the sake of argument, that it costs no more to deliver a car at some particular industry than to deliver a car upon the public team tracks, yet it is admittedly of more value to the shipper to have the car delivered at his industry than upon the public team tracks. It is the value of the service which, after all, is to ascertained.

Beale & W. Railroad Rate Regulation, § 320; Canada Southern R. Co. v. International Bridge Co. L. R. 8 App. Cas. 731; Kennebec Water Dist. v. Waterville, 97 Me. 185, 60 L.R.A. 856, 54 Atl. 6.

The discrimination condemned by the 2d section is one in favor of a particular shipper, and against other shippers in a like situation, which destroys that equality of treatment in rates which it is the great purpose of the law to enforce.

American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 125 C. C. A. 251, 207 Fed. 733; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 192, 43 Fed. 47.

It could not be pretended that an absolute refusal on the part of the railway company to construct these spur tracks, or to make deliveries at the private plants located thereon, constituted any unjust discrimination as against any such shippers, and in favor of shippers using the public team tracks.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 63 L.R.A. 213, 55 C. C. A. 63, 118 Fed. 113.

How, then, can it be contended that when the railway company does undertake to make such a special delivery at a private plant, that the imposition of a reasonable charge therefor results in an unjust discrimination against such shipper, and in favor of those served only by the public team tracks? Is it not by virtue of his contract with the railway company that the spur track shipper gets a better and more desirable service than that received by one of the public at large at the public team tracks?

Penn Ref. Co. v. Western New York & P. R. Co. 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. ed. 456, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268; Denaby Main Colliery Co. v. Manchester, S. & L. R. Co. L. R. 11 App. Cas. 110, 6 Eng. Ry. & C. Traffic Cas. 133, 55 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 181, 54 L. T. N. S. 1, 50 J. P. 340, L. R. 14 Q. B. Div. 223; Finnie v. Glasgow & S. W. R. Co. 2 Macq. H. L. Cas. 183; Murray v. Glasgow & S. W. R. Co. 11 Sc. Sess. Cas. 4th series, 205.

We do not understand that the court is precluded from inquiring whether the Commission has erred in the application of the law, or misconstrued the same, and that it has no power to correct such error by holding the Commission's decision and order to be invalid. See United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 231 U. S. 274, ante, 218, 34

Digitized by Google

Sup. Ct. Rep. 75. On the contrary, this court has held that whether, under a given state of facts, there is a violation of either the 2d or 3d section is a question of law upon which the conclusion of the Commission is not final. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 225 U. S. 326, 56 L. ed. 1107, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 504. We do not understand that in our bill we have gone farther than was sanctioned by this court in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. ed. 83, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22, or in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Stickney, 215 U. S. 98, 54 L. ed. 112, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66.

The legal effect of evidence is a question of law. A finding without evidence is beyond the power of the Commission. An order based thereon is contrary to law, and must, in the language of the statute, "be set aside by a court of competent jurisdiction."

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 227 U. S. 88, 57 L. ed. 431, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

Any charge of violation of the undue-preference clause must be confined to a consideration of places and shippers served by the particular railroad complained of; and it is immaterial what its connections or other railroads may do or fail to do in other places.

Eau Claire Bd. of Trade v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 78.

Again, it would be necessary for the Commission to determine and point out in what other localities industrial spur track shippers upon the line in question were in competition with those in Los Angeles. For if there was no competition between them, there could be no complaint that one received an undue advantage to the unreasonable disadvantage of the other.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 192, 43 Fed. 47; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 282, 36 L. ed. 699, 705, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Hozier v. Caledonian R. Co. 1 Eng. Ry. & C. Traffic Cas. 27; Nicholson v. Great Western R. Co. 1 Eng. Ry. & C. Traffic Cas. 150; Lees v. Lancashire & Y. R. Co. 1 Eng. Ry. & C. Traffic Cas. 352; Lincolnshire Patent Fuel Co. v. London & N. W. R. Co. 12 Eng. Ry. & C. Traffic Cas. 77; 1 Boyle & W. Traffic on Railways & Canals, p. 159; Phipps v. London & N. W. R. Co. 8 Eng. Ry. & C. Traffic Cas. 83, [1892] 2 Q. B. 229, 61 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 379, 66 L. T. N. S. 721; United States v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 62 C. C. A. 465, 127 Fed. 785.

Again, whether the alleged preference is undue or not depends largely upon whether at the one place or locality the railway company is forced by competition of markets or of other carriers to forego making a charge which it is not compelled to forego at the other point. That is an important element to be considered and to be given due effect by the Commission in any determination.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 48, 56 L. ed. 83, 88, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 119, 52 L. ed. 705, 712, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

The terms "custom" and "usage" seem to be confounded and inappropriately used by the Commission in its opinion. A custom which has the binding effect of law in the absence of agreement is one which must have existed from a time "whence the memory of man runneth not to the contrary." It must have the force of law independent of persons consenting to it. It is a local common law.

1 Chitty's Bl. Com. 74–80; Ocean Beach Asso. v. Brinley, 34 N. J. Eq. 448; Robinson v. Mollett, L. R. 7 H. L. 802; Hammerton v. Honey, 24 Week. Rep. 603; Hursh v. North, 40 Pa. 243.

Custom and usage, in the way of practice, are generally shown in particular trades to show the understanding of parties to contracts where the practice or usage is not in contravention of agreement, and is therefore supposed to be incorporated in the contract by assent of the parties. It then becomes a part of the contract where there is no stipulation or understanding to the contrary. In the case at bar it could not become a part of the contract, as it would be contrary to a tariff provision, as the tariff provision has the effect of law, and must be observed by the parties.

Tilley v. Cook County (Tilley v. Chicago) 103 U. S. 155, 162, 26 L. ed. 374, 377; Ulmer v. Farnsworth, 80 Me. 500, 15 Atl. 65, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 134; Eager v. Atlas Ins. Co. 14 Pick. 141, 25 Am. Dec. 363; First Nat. Bank v. Burkhardt, 100 U. S. 692, 25 L. ed. 769; Thompson v. Riggs, 5 Wall. 663, 18 L. ed. 704; Albright v. Cortright, 64 N. J. L. 330, 48 L.R.A. 616, 81 Am. St. Rep. 504, 45 Atl. 634; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Miami S. S. Co. 30 C. C. A. 142, 52 U. S. App. 732, 86 Fed. 407.

The spirit of the interstate commerce law would seem to require that this species of favoritism might well be discontinued or qualified by the imposition of an adequate and reasonable charge for the special service rendered.

Providence Coal Co. v. Providence & W.

Digitized by Google

R. Co. 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 368; Texarkana & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Sabine Tram Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 129 S. W. 198.

Beyond the specific requirements and prohibitions of that act the carriers are at liberty to adjust and apportion their rates so as to meet the necessities of commerce and of their own situation and relation to it, and generally to manage their important interests upon the same principles which are regarded as sound and adopted in other trades and pursuits.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 119, 52 L. ed. 712, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 554, 50 L. ed. 593, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330.

Messrs. Fred H. Wood, C. W. Durbrow, J. P. Blair, and W. F. Herrin also filed a brief for the Southern Pacific Company:

The Commission may not require the carriers to extend any service without compensation, nor can it look to the charge made for one service for any part or all of the compensation to which the carrier is entitled for another service.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Stickney, 215 U. S. 98, 54 L. ed. 112, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66.

By the plain intendment of the language used, carriers performing a road service between termini may separately state the charges for carriage between places named in the tariffs and their own terminal services performed at the places between which such transportation is conducted.

7 Century Dict. "Terminal," p. 6242.

The Commission's construction is contrary to the construction of the English act at the time of the passage of the act to regulate commerce.

2 Boyle & W. Traffic on Railways & Canals, p. 258; Hall v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 505, 53 L. T. N. S. 345, 5 Eng. Ry. & C. Traffic Cas. 28.

All charges made by the carriers are presumptively lawful and right, and the burden is upon the complainant before the Commission to show that they are in violation of some provision of the act to regulate commerce.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. ed. 705, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Missouri Rate Cases (Knott v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co.) 230 U. S. 474, 57 L. ed. 1571, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 975.

This presumption can only be overthrown by the production of competent evidence before the Commission, and the Commission must first find upon the record that a violation exists, and the evidence of this violation must be found in the record made before the Commission itself, and cannot be the result of conjecture or fiat.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 227 U. S. 88–100, 57 L. ed. 431–436, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

The facts are not in dispute. Whether, under the facts stated, a violation of either § 2 or 3 of the act results, is a question of law upon which the conclusion of the Commission is reviewable by the courts.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 225 U. S. 326, 56 L. ed. 1107, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 504; United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 231 U. S. 274, ante, 218, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 75.

The principal purpose of the 2d section is to prevent unjust discrimination between shippers. It implies that, in deciding whether differences in charges, in given cases, were or were not unjust, there must be a consideration of the several questions whether the services rendered were like and contemporaneous, whether the kinds of traffic were like, and whether the transportation was effected under substantially similar circumstances and conditions.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197–219, 40 L. ed. 940–947, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

Neither the legal likeness of services rendered nor the similarity of circumstances and conditions under which performed can be determined by comparison of their cost.

Union P. R. Co. v. United States, 117 U. S. 355, 29 L. ed. 920, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 772; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, supra.

The carrier was not required at common law to deliver at the rails of the shipper, nor anywhere else, except at its own public stations and yards.

Fenner v. Buffalo & State Line R. Co. 44 N. Y. 505, 4 Am. Rep. 709: Witbeck v. Holland, 45 N. Y. 13, 6 Am. Rep. 23; Chalk v. Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. 85 N. C. 423; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Wood, 66 Ala. 167, 41 Am. Rep. 749; New Orleans, J. & G. N. R. Co. v. Tyson, 46 Miss. 729; State ex rel. Mattoon v. Republican Valley R. Co. 17 Neb. 647, 52 Am. Rep. 424, 24 N. W. 329; Francis v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. 25 Iowa, 60, 95 Am. Dec. 765; Evershed v. London & N. W. R. Co. L. R. 2 Q. B. Div. 254, 46 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 289, 36 L. T. N. S. 12, 25 Week. Rep. 411.

No provision of the interstate commerce act requires it to do so. It must provide adequate public facilities for the receipt and delivery of freight. It is not required and cannot be required, by any provision of the interstate commerce act, to provide industry tracks for the receipt and delivery of freight at private stations, nor can it be required except by contract to operate any such tracks when constructed. It may be required to install and operate upon reasonable terms switch connections between its own tracks, already constructed, and industry spur tracks which may have been already built up to the carrier's right of way, but it cannot be required to construct or operate the industry spur itself.

Digitized by Google

Winters Metallic Paint Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 16 Inters. Com. Rep. 587; Ralston Townsite Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 22 Inters. Com. Rep. 354; Imperial Wheel Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 20 Inters. Com. Rep. 56.

Prior to the amendment of 1906, a carrier could not even be required to construct and operate such switching connection; but, having established public facilities for the receipt and delivery of freight, could demand that all freight be received and delivered thereon.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339.

The value of the service is an element or standard of reasonable and just charges.

Re Investigation & Suspension Docket, 22 Inters. Com. Rep. 604.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe Railway Company, the Southern Pacific Company, and the San Pedro, Los Angeles, & Salt Lake Railroad Company, brought this suit against the Interstate Commerce Commission in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Kansas, first division, to restrain the enforcement of an order of the Commission made in April, 1910. The order required these companies to desist "from exacting their present charge of $2.50 per car for delivering and receiving carload freight to and from industries located upon spurs and side tracks within their respective switching limits" in Los Angeles, California, when such carload freight "is moving in interstate commerce incidentally to a system-line haul." It also prohibited the exaction of any charge whatever, other than the charge for transportation from points of origin to destination, for delivering or receiving carload freight in such cases.[1]

[303] After answer had been filed by the Commission, the suit was transferred to the commerce court, and the United States, the Associated Jobbers of Los Angeles, and the Pacific Coast Jobbers' & Manufacturers' Association, intervened. The United States thereupon moved to dismiss the bill for want of equity, and the petitioners asked for a preliminary injunction. The commerce court, denying the government's motion, suspended the Commission's order until the further order of the court (188 Fed. 229, 929); and this appeal is prosecuted.

The complaint of the petitioners in substance is that they have established in the city of Los Angeles their public terminals, including what are known as team tracks and freight sheds, for the accommodation of the public in receiving and delivering carload freight; that these facilities are entirely adequate for the purpose, and are [304] sufficient to handle all the carload freight shipped or delivered in the city, including that now received or delivered upon the industrial spur tracks in question; that the spur-track service has been established simply for the convenience of the shippers thus served; that it is a service essentially distinct from the line haul, and additional thereto, being of great benefit in the saving of cartage charges to the favored shippers for whose use the spur tracks were constructed; that the industries or plants located upon the spurs are distant from the main tracks, in the case of the Atchison Company, from ½ mile to 3½ miles, in that of the Southern Pacific Company from 200 feet to 7 miles, and in that of the San Pedro Company from ½ mile to 4 miles, and that the special switching service involves a much greater expense than if the carload freight were received or delivered on the team tracks or at the freight sheds of the carriers respectively; that the charge of $2.50 per car for this service is entirely reasonable, and one which the carriers are entitled to make in addition to the line haul rate; and that, as such, it has been duly specified in their published tariffs. It is also averred that, while in the contracts governing the construction and maintenance of the spur tracks no specific sum was prescribed for the service of receiving and delivering carload freight thereon, the charge above mentioned had been generally established; that at the time of the making of these contracts the shippers understood and willingly consented that, if the railway company performed this special service, there should be additional compensation, and that such charge has generally been maintained and collected. The adequacy of the public terminal facilities for carload freight in Los Angeles (consisting of the team tracks and freight sheds of the carriers respectively), the facts set forth with respect to the construction of the spur tracks, their location, the acquiescence in the switching charge and its maintenance, were established before the Commission, [305] it is alleged, by undisputed evidence. It is further stated that on account of water and other competition, the rates of transportation to and from Los Angeles have been forced to an exceedingly low basis, so that the companies do not receive the amount to which they are justly entitled, and that they ought not to be required to perform the service in question without reasonable reward. The Commission's order was assailed as beyond its authority, involving a discrimination in favor of the owners of plants located upon the spur tracks, and a deprivation of the property of the carriers without due process of law.

[1] The order is as follows:

"This case being at issue on complaint and answer on file, and having been duly heard and submitted by the parties, and full investigation of the matters and things involved having been had, and the Commission having, on the date hereof, made and filed a report containing its findings of fact and conclusions thereon, which said report is hereby referred to and made a part here-

Digitized by Google

The report of the Commission (18 Inters. Com. Rep. 310) was made a part of the bill. It appears that the proceeding before the Commission was instituted by the Associated Jobbers of Los Angeles, and was directed against two distinct practices, involving the spur-track switching charges incident to a system-line haul and to a foreigu-line haul respectively. The propriety of such a charge when the line haul was by a foreign carrier was sustained, and the prohibitory order was confined to cases where the charge was made in connection with a system-line haul. The pertinent facts, as found by the Commission, are substantially as follows:

Each of the carriers has designated certain territory as within its switching or yard limits in the city of Los Angeles, extending for 6 or 7 miles in a general easterly and westerly direction, and including numerous tracks, main lines, branch lines, industry spurs, classification tracks, team tracks, freight-shed tracks, hold tracks, repair tracks, and others, and also their stations, freight sheds, derricks, roundhouses, and other structures. Freight moving in carloads is delivered at team tracks, at freight sheds, or at industry spurs. At team tracks and freight sheds no charge is imposed for the receipt or delivery of such carload freight over the freight rate named in the tariffs, while at industry spurs an additional [306] charge of $2.50 is imposed on every loaded car moving either in or out. These industry spurs vary in length, some leading directly from the main track into or alongside of the industries served, while others are of greater length and branch at one or more points, short spurs running off from what is known as the "lead" to serve other industries in the immediate neighborhood. These spurs have been constructed under substantially uniform contracts.[2] None of the industries at Los of, and having found that the present charge of $2.50 per car, exacted by the several defendants for delivering and receiving carload freight to and from industries located upon spurs and side tracks within their respective switching limits at Los Angeles, California, when such carload freight is moving in interstate commerce incidentally to a system-line haul, is in violation of the act to regulate commerce:

"It is ordered, That said defendants be, and they are hereby, notified and required to cease and desist, on or before the 1st day of July, 1910, and for a period of not less than two years thereafter abstain, from exacting their present charge of $2.50 per car for delivering and receiving carload freight to and from industries located upon spurs and side tracks within their respective switching limits in the said city of Los Angeles, California, when such carload freight is moving in interstate commerce incidentally to a system-line haul.

"It is further ordered, That said defendants be, and they are hereby, notified and required to cease and desist, on or before the 1st day of July, 1910, and for a period of not less than two years thereafter abstain, from exacting any charge whatever, other than the charge for transportation from points of origin to destination, for delivering or receiving carload freight to or from industries located upon spurs or side tracks within their respective switching limits in the said city of Los Angeles, California, when such carload freight is moving in interstate commerce incidentally to a system-line haul."

[2] The standard form of the Southern Pacific Company provides as follows:

"1. Undersigned (shipper) will pay cost of constructing above-described track (rails, splices, bolts, switches, frogs, switch stands, and connections to be furnished by and at the cost of Southern Pacific Company), whether such cost may be more or less than amount of foregoing approximate estimate.

"2. Said track shall be under full control of Southern Pacific Company, and may be used at discretion of said company for shipments or delivery of any freight, but the business of the undersigned shall always have preference.

"3. All material in said track furnished at expense of Southern Pacific Company, whether in original construction or by any way of replacements or repairs, shall be and remain exclusive property of Southern Pacific Company, and said Southern Pacific Company shall keep said track in repair.

"4. In case said track shall not be used by undersigned for period of one year, said

Digitized by Google

Angeles furnishes [307] its own motive power, and interline switching is done from the interchange track to the industry by the locomotives of the delivering line, the carrier performing the switching service.

The Commission found that these spur tracks were portions of the terminal facilities of the carriers with whose lines they connected, being distinguished from mere plant facilities such as were under consideration in Chicago & A. R. Co. v. United States, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 551, 84 C. C. A. 324, 156 Fed. 558, and in the cases of the General Electric Co. and Solvay Process Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 237, 246. Each of the spurs here considered, said the Commission, is, in a real sense, a railroad terminal at which the carrier receives and delivers freight. It further appears from the report that the charge for spur-track delivery has been made by all of the carriers at Los Angeles as long as the railroads have had access to that city; that it was first imposed by the Southern Pacific, and as the other lines came in they adopted the policy of the line already there; that, as to certain commodities, the charge was not imposed until quite recently, and at all times until the Hepburn act [Act of June 29, 1906, 34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288] went into effect there was great variation in charge as between individual shippers. It is added that there are 97 places in California to which what are known as coast terminal rates apply, rates lower than to intermediate points; only in Los Angeles, San Francisco, and San Diego is there such a charge for spur-track delivery, though in many of these places such delivery is furnished. To the north, in Portland, Seattle, Tacoma, and a large number of other points which also enjoy coast terminal [308] rates, the Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, and Great Northern lines impose no such charge, and to the east, where defendants' lines have their termini in cities competing with Los Angeles, this charge is also unknown.

The Commission thus described the character of the service in question: "Spur-track delivery is a substitute service,—a service which it has solicited the right to give, as the evidence here shows,—a service which costs the industry for the installation of the track and the use of its property as a railway terminal. It is a service over the carrier's own rails to a point where it yields possession of the property transported, and which involves no greater expense than would team-track delivery. It relieves the carrier's team tracks and sheds, necessitating less outlay for expense of yards in a crowded city, promotes the speedy release of equipment, and vastly aids in conducting a commerce which is greater than the carrier's own facilities could freely, adequately, and economically handle.

"Again, it is not to be overlooked that the delivery given on an industry spur is not supplemental to any other delivery. Cars destined to industry spurs are not placed first at a spur, depot, or on the team tracks, or at the sheds, and later switched to oblige the consignee. A train of freight cars goes to the breaking-up yards which lie at the entrance to the city, and there it is divided up with respect to the character of the freight in the various cars and their destination. No one has access to the cars at this point. This yard is purely a railroad facility. After the cars are segregated they are taken to the tracks to which they are ordered,—some to the various team tracks distributed along the main line, some to different industries; some, perhaps, to the railroad shops or to freight sheds or to the stock yards. Before the cars are placed, the consignees are given notice of the tracks to which they are to be sent, so that there is no confusion, and the switch [309] engines which place the cars on one track also serve to haul the "loads" in and "empties" out at the other tracks. After a most exhaustive inquiry we cannot find, taking this service as a whole in the same way that it is treated by the carriers, that the service

---

Southern Pacific Company may, at its option, remove said track.

"5. All goods shipped from or to said track by rail, routing of which is controlled, or may be reasonably held to be controlled, by or through undersigned, shall, when forwarded, be over such railroads as may be selected by Southern Pacific Company, provided rate of charge shall be as low as that from or to point in question by any other rail route."

The Santa Fe contract contains this provision:

"The title to said track, and to all the rails, ties, bolts, switches, fastenings, and fixtures connected therewith, and to all other property which may be furnished by the railway company in the maintenance of said track, shall at all times be and remain in said railway company, and said railway company may use the same for other purposes than the delivery of freight to, or the receipt of freight from, the second party, provided that such use shall inconvenience the business of the second party as little as possible consistent therewith; and at any time after the termination of this contract or the obligation of the railway company, as herein provided, to maintain such track, the railway company shall have the right to remove said track and every part thereof."

Digitized by Google

is more expensive to the carrier than if all cars were given team-track delivery.

"An additional charge may be made when an additional service is given. But the service here given is not additional to that for which the rate pays. If the shipper pays for team-track delivery and does not receive it, but asks instead and is given a side track delivery, which costs the carrier no more, he may not be compelled to pay an additional charge upon the assumption that he has received a terminal team-track service which has not been given. A carrier may not so construct its rates as to compel an extra charge for like service, and this, in our judgment, the defendants at Los Angeles have done." 18 Inters. Com. Rep. pp. 317, 318.

1. It is urged that the Commission's order rests upon a construction of the statute which would forbid any carrier from separating its terminal and haulage charges on the same shipment, and that this is a fundamental misconception of the law.

We do not think that the order is open to this objection. It is true that the Commission directed attention to the distinction between the American and English methods of stating rates, pointing out that the English practice of fixing separate schedules for "conveyance" and "station terminal" rates had not obtained in this country so far as the records of the Commission show. The opinion was expressed that the provisions of the act to regulate commerce were enacted with reference to the American method of rate-making, and that the rate which the statute requires to be published is "a complete rate," including "not only the charge for hauling, but the charge for the use of [310] the terminals at both ends of the line." 18 Inters. Com. Rep. pp. 315, 316. We need not stop to consider whether this is a correct interpretation of the act, for the question of a segregation of haulage and terminal charges (meaning, by the latter, charges for the use of ordinary terminal stations in receiving and delivering goods) was not before the Commission, and its propriety was not necessarily involved in the decision. No such segregation had been attempted by the carriers here. On the contrary, it was undisputed that the line-haul carload rate comprehended receipt and delivery on team tracks or at freight sheds.

The Commission conceded the right of the carrier to charge for any terminal service that was accessorial. But it was held that an additional charge was not justified if additional service was not in fact rendered.

2. Nor do we understand that the Commission ruled that the receipt and delivery of goods at plants located upon spurs or side tracks could not, in any circumstances, be regarded as a distinct service for which separate compensation might be demanded. Cases of an interior movement of plant traffic to and from various parts of the establishment, and of deliveries through a system of interior switching tracks constructed as plant facilities, were expressly distinguished by the Commission (18 Inters. Com. Rep. pp. 313, 314); and it is apparent that the ruling of the Commission would not apply in any case where, by reason of the location and extent of the spur tracks and the character of the movement, the facts were essentially different from those upon which the decision was based. (Interstate Commerce Commission v. Stickney, 215 U. S. 98, 105, 54 L. ed. 112, 113, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66.)

3. On the other hand, it cannot be maintained that the delivery and receipt of goods on industrial spur tracks within the switching limits in a city is necessarily an added service for which the carrier is entitled to make, or should make, a charge additional to the line-haul rate to [311] or from that city, when the line-haul rate embraces a receiving and delivering service for which the spur-track service is a substitute. It is said that carriers are bound to carry only to or from their terminal stations. But when industrial spur tracks have been established within the carrier's switching limits, within which, also, various team tracks are located, these spurs may in fact constitute an essential part of the carrier's terminal system. It was stated by the Commission that carriers throughout the country treat industry spurs of the kind here in question "as portions of their terminals, making no extra charge for service thereto when the carrier receives the benefit of the line haul out or in." It was added that while this general statement covered perhaps ten thousand cities and towns in the United States, the carriers before the Commission could name only three exceptions; to wit, the cities of Los Angeles, San Francisco, and San Diego. But, laying the generalization on one side, it is plain that the question whether or not there is at any point an additional service in connection with industrial spur tracks upon which to base an extra charge, or whether there is merely a substituted service, which is substantially a like service to that included in the line-haul rate, and not received, is a question of fact to be determined according to the actual conditions of operation.

Such a question is manifestly one upon which it is the province of the Commission to pass.

Digitized by Google

4. We must therefore take the findings of the Commission in the present case as to the character and manner of use of the industrial spurs in Los Angeles—that they constituted part of the carrier's terminals, and that under the conditions there existing, the receipt and delivery of goods on these spurs was a like service as compared with the receipt and delivery of goods at team tracks and freight sheds—as conclusions of fact. Assuming that they were based upon evidence, they are not open to review. Baltimore & [312] O. R. Co. v. United States, 215 U. S. 481, 495, 54 L. ed. 292, 297, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 251, 55 L. ed. 448, 456, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Union P. R. Co. 222 U. S. 541, 547, 548, 56 L. ed. 308, 311, 312, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 227 U. S. 88, 92, 57 L. ed. 431, 433, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. United States, 232 U. S. 199, 221, ante, 568, 577, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291.

In this view, we find no ground for holding the order of the Commission to be invalid. It is not denied that the complaining shippers and these carriers were heard before the Commission, and that evidence disclosing the terminal situation in Los Angeles, and the nature and use of the various tracks within the switching limits, was presented; and it cannot be doubted that the case demanded an appreciation of a variety of details, or minor facts, in order that the ultimate questions of fact could be determined. It is said that it was established by undisputed evidence that the team tracks and freight sheds provided by the carriers were fully adequate for all carload freight. Putting aside the denial by the Commission of this allegation, it is evident that the question was not simply as to such adequacy, but as to the actual use of the various tracks, the services thereon relatively considered, and whether there was really an extra service in the circumstances shown. Again, it is said that the Commission did not find the switching charge in itself, that is, taken separately, to be unreasonable, but the inquiry was whether, in view of the conditions of the distribution of the carload freight through a large area, there was in fact such a similarity of movement as to negative the basis for a separate charge. It is further urged that while the contracts for the construction of these spurs did not fix the charge, it was proved by undisputed evidence that at the time these contracts were made the shippers consented to a special charge if freight were received and delivered thereon, and that the charge in question had been generally [313] maintained. The service, however, was performed subject to the law of the land requiring that the carrier's charges should not be unreasonable or unjustly discriminatory. See Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 482, 55 L. ed. 297, 303, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. v. Schubert, 224 U. S. 603, 613, 614, 56 L. ed. 911, 916, 917, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 589, 1 N. C. C. A. 892. If it became apparent that the shippers were subjected to an arbitrary and unwarranted exaction, they were in no way estopped from bringing the matter before the body created by law to deal with such questions, and from securing its order directing the carriers to stop the objectionable practice.

But it is contended that the finding of the Commission is opposed to the admitted physical facts, and reference is made to the transportation to and from industrial plants located from ½ of a mile to 7 miles from the main track of the carrier. We find no such fundamental unsoundness in the Commission's conclusions. It appeared, as already stated, that the carrier had designated certain territory as within its switching or yard limits in Los Angeles, extending for 6 or 7 miles, and "including numerous tracks, main lines, branch lines, industry tracks, team tracks, freight-shed tracks, and various structures." It does not appear how many industries were within a short distance, or to how many the statement as to the greatest distance abovementioned applied. The carrier did not fix a charge according to the comparative service in the case of these various industrial plants. It made the same switching charge whether the distance was 200 feet or 7 miles; that is, it dealt with the situation upon an average basis, making the same charge for all this switching in a given area which constituted its terminal district. It was the service within these switching limits that the Commission was considering. Manifestly it was permissible to establish such a district, and taking the team-track and freight-shed service in that area, and the average spur-track service, the Commission reached the conclusion set forth. It is said [314] that the finding of the Commission as to the comparative cost of the service was not affirmative, but was merely a negative statement to the effect that the Commission was unable to find that the cost of spur-track delivery was more expensive to the carrier. While this form of expression was used at one place in the Commission's report, at another the service in question was described as one which involved "no greater expense than would team-track delivery," and we cannot but regard this as the Commission's finding upon the evidence. It is then insisted that the contrary of this finding is self-evident; but the facts with respect to the movement of freight in a great terminal district are by no means so simple that the deliberate judgment of the Commission can be regarded as contradicting the obvious.

Digitized by Google

The argument for the petitioners necessarily invites the court to substitute its judgment for that of the Commission upon matters of fact within the Commission's province. This is not the function of the court. We cannot regard the act to regulate commerce as justifying an increased or extra charge for a substantially similar service, and upon the case made it cannot be said that the Commission has overstepped its authority in forbidding the charge in question as one which was unjustly discriminatory.

In our opinion the Commerce Court erred in denying the government's motion to dismiss, and in granting the petitioners' motion for injunction. The order of the Commerce Court is therefore reversed, and the cause is remanded to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of California, Southern Division, with instructions to dismiss the bill. Act of Oct. 22, 1913, chap. 32, Stat. 1913, p. 221.

It is so ordered.

---

[315] INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, the United States of America, Associated Jobbers of Los Angeles, and Pacific Coast Jobbers & Manufacturers Association, Appts.,

v.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY and the Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe Railway Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 315, 316.)

This case is governed by the decision in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe R. Co. ante, page 1319.

[No. 97.]

Argued January 14 and 15, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

APPEAL from the United States Commerce Court to review an order suspending an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission prohibiting carriers from making an additional charge for receiving or delivering carload freight on industrial spur tracks within switching limits. Reversed, and cause remanded to the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, with instructions to dismiss the bill.

See same case below, 188 Fed. 241.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Blackburn Esterline, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Davis, filed a brief for the United States.

Mr. P. J. Farrell argued the cause and filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Messrs. Gardiner Lathrop and Fred H. Wood argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. F. Herrin, J. P. Blair, Robert Dunlap, T. J. Norton, and C. W. Durbrow, filed a brief for appellees.

Messrs. Fred H. Wood, C. W. Durbrow, J. P. Blair, and W. F. Herrin filed a brief for the Southern Pacific Company.

For contentions of counsel, see their briefs as reported in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. ante, 1319.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The Pacific Coast Jobbers' Manufacturers' Association complained before the Interstate Commerce Commission of a switching charge of $2.50 per car maintained by the respondents for delivering and receiving carload freight to and from industries located upon spurs and side tracks within the carriers' switching limits in San Francisco. [316] The Commission, finding the facts to be similar to those found in the case of the complaint of the Associated Jobbers of Los Angeles with respect to switching charges in the latter city (18 Inters. Com. Rep. 310), entered a similar order prohibiting the carriers from continuing the charge. This suit was thereupon brought in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Kansas, first division, against the Interstate Commerce Commission, to restrain the enforcement of the order. Upon its transfer to the commerce court, the United States intervened and moved to dismiss the proceeding. This motion was denied, and upon the application of the petitioners an injunction was granted.

The questions presented on the appeal from this order are the same as those which have been considered in the opinion of the court in No. 98 Los Angeles Switching Case (Interstate Commerce Commission v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co.) decided this day [234 U. S. 294, ante, 1319, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 814], and for the reasons there set forth the order of the Commerce Court is reversed and the cause is remanded to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of California, with instructions to dismiss the bill.

Digitized by Google

It is so ordered.

---

[317] PORT RICHMOND & BERGEN POINT FERRY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS OF THE COUNTY OF HUDSON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 317–333.)

Commerce — state regulation — congressional inaction — rates for interstate ferriage.

1. A state may fix reasonable rates for ferriage from its shore to the shore of another state over a boundary stream, until Congress undertakes to regulate such rates.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c; III. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — interstate ferriage.

2. The fact that ferry rates over a boundary stream were fixed by the state of incorporation of the ferry company did not preclude the state on the other side of such stream from establishing, subject to the paramount authority of Congress, the rates to be charged for ferriage from its own shore to the shore of the other state.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c; III. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — rates for interstate ferriage — round trips.

3. State regulation of the rates to be charged for a ticket for a round trip over an interstate ferry from the shore of such state to the shore of another state, and return, is valid until Congress undertakes to regulate such rates, where the ferry company is not thereby required to issue round-trip tickets at its office within the state.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c; III. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 225.]

Argued March 4, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Court of Errors and Appeals of the State of New Jersey, to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the state, sustaining, on certiorari, the validity of resolutions of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Hudson, fixing interstate ferry rates. Affirmed.

See same case below, 82 N. J. L. 536, 82 Atl. 729.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frank Bergen argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The states have not the power to prescribe rates or tolls on interstate bridges.

Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; Covington & C. Elev. R. & Transp. & Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 224, 38 L. ed. 970, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094.

There is no substantial distinction between an interstate bridge and an interstate ferry as instruments of commerce, which can sustain an effort of a state to prescribe rates for commerce on interstate ferries.

International Transit Co. v. Sault Ste. Marie, 194 Fed. 522; Charles River Bridge Co. v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 620, 9 L. ed. 773, 853; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826.

It is no doubt true that states have exercised control in some instances over commerce by means of interstate ferries and bridges since the Federal Constitution was adopted, and there are expressions in a few opinions of this court that have been supposed to recognize the authority of the states to do so; notably in the cases of Fanning v. Gregoire, 16 How. 524, 14 L. ed. 1043; Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black, 603, 17 L. ed. 191; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. ed. 419, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257. But there is no decision of this court to that effect.

The expressions in those cases, and perhaps similar observations in a few other cases, appear to rest on a statement of Chief Justice Marshall in Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 203, 6 L. ed. 23, 71.

This remark of Chief Justice Marshall is a frail support for the conclusion that states may directly regulate the business carried on by owners of interstate ferries. The current of his opinion runs strongly against it. The misapprehension of the remark is pointed out and corrected in Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826.

Nearly every important instrument of interstate commerce was created by authority of the states; but that fact does not justify or support the conclusion that com-

---

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107, and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

On the establishment, regulation, and protection of ferries—see note to Sistersville Ferry Co. v. Russell, 59 L.R.A. 513.

Digitized by Google

merce carried on by those instruments may be directly regulated by the states.

Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 219, 38 L. ed. 969, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087.

It is unnecessary to review and analyze the cases in which expressions based on the remark of Chief Justice Marshall appear. It has been done repeatedly in subsequent cases, especially in St. Clair County v. Interstate Sand & Car Transfer Co. 192 U. S. 454, 48 L. ed. 518, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Hudson County, 227 U. S. 248, 57 L. ed. 499, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269. Whatever conclusions might have been drawn from the dicta referred to in respect of the power of the states to regulate interstate commerce by ferries in the absence of regulation under congressional authority were rejected by the case of Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4. See also St. Clair County v. Interstate Sand & Car Transfer Co. 192 U. S. 454, 470, 48 L. ed. 518, 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300.

The history of the commerce clause of the Constitution confirms the opinion that it was intended to transfer the power to regulate directly foreign commerce and commerce among the states of all kinds and by every means, from the states to the national government. See Letters by Madison to Cabell (1829) and to Davis (1832); Letters & Writings of Madison, vol. 4, pp. 14, 247; 1 Curtis, History of U. S. Const. p. 231, note; 1 Elliott, Debates, 1876 ed. p. 115; 4 Webster's Works, 8th ed. 1854, p. 9; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 226, 6 L. ed. 77; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 445, 6 L. ed. 687.

No state has succeeded in a direct attempt to regulate commerce with foreign nations since the Constitution was adopted.

The power of Congress over interstate commerce is as absolute as it is over foreign commerce.

Story, Const. § 1065; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 57, 58, 35 L. ed. 649, 652, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

Federal laws not only show that Congress has undertaken to regulate ferryboats engaged in commerce, but they also indicate the will of Congress that no other regulations shall be made until Congress decides to take further action.

Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 493, 30 L. ed. 694, 696, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592.

State legislation which seeks to impose a direct burden upon interstate commerce, or to interfere directly with its freedom, encroaches upon the exclusive power of Congress.

Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, 488, 24 L. ed. 547, 548.

Mr. James J. Murphy argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The ferry in question does not come within the meaning of interstate commerce over which the Constitution confers on Congress the power of regulation.

People v. Babcock, 11 Wend. 586; Elizabethport & N. Y. Ferry Co. v. United States, 5 Blatchf. 198, Fed. Cas. No. 4,362; Hudson County v. State, 24 N. J. L. 718; Mills v. St. Clair County, 7 Ill. 197, affirmed in 8 How. 569, 12 L. ed. 1201; Chilvers v. People, 11 Mich. 43; Marshall v. Grimes, 41 Miss. 27.

The resolution of the board of chosen freeholders of the county of Hudson, state of New Jersey, now under review, is a legitimate and lawful exercise of the police power of the state, the purpose of it being manifestly to prevent the extortion of excessive rates of ferriage from the people using that public utility.

Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black, 603, 17 L. ed. 191; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. ed. 419, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257, affirming 102 Ill. 560.

That this court does not understand the Covington Bridge Case to overrule the previous cases appears from two subsequent decisions: Williams v. Wingo, 177 U. S. 601, 44 L. ed. 905, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 793; Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. ed. 513, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463.

Such regulation has been sustained in a recent and well-reasoned case.

State v. Sickmann, 65 Mo. App. 499.

A ferry is in respect of the landing place, and not of the water. The water may be to one, and the ferry to another.

Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black, 603, 17 L. ed. 191; People v. Babcock, 11 Wend. 590.

The ferry act of New Jersey had in view the ferry establishment, and not the way across the river; it applies to a ferry having one of its termini in this state.

Hudson County v. State, 24 N. J. L. 722.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error, Port Richmond & Bergen Point Ferry Company, was incorporated in 1848 by special act of the legislature of New York for the purpose of maintaining a ferry across the Kill von Kull from Port Richmond, Staten Island, New York, to Bergen Point, Hudson county, New Jersey.[1] This act prescribed rates of ferriage, as did also the amendatory acts of 1857 (chap. 692) and 1868 (chap. 778).

Digitized by Google

The ferry is not operated in connection with any railroad.

In July, 1905, the board of chosen freeholders of the county of Hudson, New Jersey, passed two resolutions [321] fixing the rates to be taken at the ferry of this company within the county of Hudson for the transportation of foot passengers for single trips to the New York terminal, and for round trips to that terminal and return, respectively. This action was taken under the authority of an act of the legislature of New Jersey, passed in 1799, providing as follows: "That the board of chosen freeholders shall be, and they hereby are, empowered and directed to fix the rates to be taken at the several ferries within their respective counties, and the same, from time to time, to revise, alter, amend, or make anew at their discretion." Comp. Stat. (N. J.) p. 2308. On certiorari, the supreme court of the state of New Jersey sustained the validity of these resolutions against the objection that they were repugnant to the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution (80 N. J. L. 614, 77 Atl. 1046), and its judgment was affirmed by the court of errors and appeals. 82 N. J. L. 536, 82 Atl. 729. This writ of error is prosecuted.

The plaintiff in error contends that the action of the board is void for the reason that the transportation is interstate, and the fixing of rates therefor is a direct regulation of interstate commerce.

At common law, the right to maintain a public ferry lies in franchise; in England such a ferry could not be set up without the King's license; and, in this country, the right has been made the subject of legislative grant. Blissett v. Hart, Willes, Rep. 508; Re Fay, 15 Pick. 243, 249, 253; New York v. Starin, 106 N. Y. 1, 10, 11, 12 N. E. 631; 3 Kent, Com. 458; 2 Washb. Real Prop. 4th ed. 292. The states have been accustomed to grant such franchises not only for ferries wholly intrastate, but also for those to be operated from their shores to other states. Cooley, Const. Lim. 740. They have fixed the rates for such ferriage; and this has been done both directly by the legislature and also through designated courts and local boards acting under legislative sanction. The practice [322] has had continuous illustration in a great variety of instances, from the foundation of the government to the present day.[2]

The court of errors and appeals of New Jersey in the case of Hudson County v. State (1853) 24 N. J. L. 718, sustained the authority of the board to prescribe ferry rates between New Jersey and New York. Speaking through Elmer, J., the court thus described conditions existing at the time of the passage of the above-mentioned act of 1799 and its purpose: "When the act was passed, long before the invention of steamboats, ferries were generally the property of one or two individuals, established for the public convenience and private gain, by the owners of the shore, sometimes by virtue of a grant or law, and sometimes without any public authority. The owner or keeper resided on the one bank or the other of the river over which the ferry passed, and kept his boats and other apparatus where he resided. The ferry was commonly known and designated by the name of the place from which it started, and where such owner resided, as Paulus Hook ferry; or from the name of the [323] owner or keeper as Dunk's ferry, Corriel's ferry, etc. In many cases, where the river was not too wide, a bell or horn, or some other signal, was established on the side of the river opposite to that where the owner lived, so that persons coming there who desired to pass over could make known their wishes. Probably but few, if any, of the keepers, had a boat constantly running, or started at any particular hour. In some cases, there were ferry owners on both sides of the river; but the ferry or ferries on each side were considered and spoken of

[1] See also Laws of New York, 1857, chap. 692; 1860, chap. 266; 1864, chap. 290; 1868, chap. 778; 1873, chap. 300; 1881, chap. 652.

[2] A few of these instances may be cited:

New York.—Across Lake Champlain: Laws of 1803, chap. 37; 1810 chap. 61; 1812, chap. 60. (These are referred to in the argument of counsel in Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 97, 6 L. ed. 23, 46; see 3 C. R. & G. Webster ed. Laws of New York, p. 321; 6 Webster & Skinner ed. p. 16; id. p. 394.) See also Laws of 1831, chap. 105; 1847, chap. 288; 1886, chap. 674; 1901, chap. 442; 1907, chap. 392. Between New York and New Jersey: Laws of 1850, chap. 314; 1870, chap. 731.

Vermont.—Across Lake Champlain: Laws of 1799, p. 63; 1801, p. 72; 1820, chap. 115; 1890, chap. 116; 1896, chap. 298.

New Hampshire.—Across Connecticut river: Laws of 1863, chap. 2822; 1867, chap. 86.

Missouri.—Mississippi river: Laws of 1855, p. 516; 1870, p. 231. Des Moines river: Laws of 1855, p. 517. Missouri river: Laws of 1855, p. 229; 1863-64, p. 312.

Nebraska.—Compiled Statutes of 1909, § 3549.

Digitized by Google

as distinct ferries, and had distinct owners or keepers. This was the case with most, if not all, the ferries between Philadelphia and what is now called Camden; and the ferries on each side were regulated and governed by the laws of the state in which such owner or keeper resided. Sail and rowboats, and flats or scows, were the vessels in use, as is manifest from the act itself. . . . The act meant to authorize, and did authorize, the boards of freeholders in the several counties, to regulate the fares to be taken at the ferry situate within that county; that is, at the ferry establishment of the owner or keeper. . . . Even if it might happen, upon this construction, that one board might establish one set of rates at one side, and another board another set on the other side, or that each state might have different regulations, where the ferry was over one of the rivers forming the boundary between this and another state, I do not see that there would be any important conflict of authority. Each power regulated what was done within its own jurisdiction, and left to others to regulate what was done in theirs. Existing ferries between this state and New York, and this state and Pennsylvania, are now, in numerous instances, regulated by the laws of this state, without the occurrence of any difficulty. . . . Without deeming it necessary to go over and specially refer to the different acts . . . it is sufficient to say, that they show a course of legislation, [324] commencing in 1714, and continued till near the passage of the act of 1799, by which the ferries over the waters dividing this state from the adjoining states were regulated by the laws of New Jersey, in those cases where ferry establishments were within this state. . . . To effect this object [i. e., of the act] the word 'ferries' must be interpreted to mean, what in those laws it had obviously included, ferries the owners or keepers of which resided in this state, or which had one of their termini, where fares were demanded, in this state, and not merely ferries in the technical meaning, of an entire passage across a river or other water. . . . If set up without public authority, it [the ferry] was liable at any time to be stopped, or, in the discretion of the legislature, to be regulated. . . . It is sufficient, to authorize these rates, that it is a public ferry, and that there is no law prescribing rates for it, inconsistent with the exercise of the power by the board of chosen freeholders." Supra, pp. 721-724, 726. This decision was followed by the state court in the present case.[3]

In view of the extended consideration which the decisions of this court bearing upon the questions involved have received in recent opinions (St. Clair County v. Interstate Sand & Car Transfer Co. 192 U. S. 454, 48 L. ed. 518, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Hudson County, 227 U. S. 248, 57 L. ed. 499, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269), it is not necessary to review them at length. The authority of the state to grant franchises for ferries to be operated from its shores across boundary waters was distinctly recognized in Fanning v. Gregoire, 16 How. 524, 14 L. ed. 1043; Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black, 603, 17 L. ed. 191; and Wiggins Ferry Co. v. [325] East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. ed. 419, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257. While in Fanning v. Gregoire, supra, the plaintiff's license for a ferry across the Mississippi river from Dubuque, Iowa, was held, under the terms of the grant, not to be exclusive as against the subsequent licensee, the court said that the commercial power of Congress did not "interfere with the police power of the states in granting ferry licenses." In Conway v. Taylor, supra, the court upheld a judgment which restrained the appellants (the owners of a ferry from Cincinnati, Ohio, to Newport, Kentucky) from conducting the ferry from the Kentucky shore to Ohio in violation of the rights of the appellees under their Kentucky franchise. Referring to the latter, the court said:

"The franchise is confined to the transit from the shore of the state. The same rights which she claims for herself she concedes to others. . . . It was shown in the argument at bar that similar laws exist in most, if not all, the states bordering upon those streams. They exist in other states of the Union bounded by navigable waters." With respect to "ordinary commercial navigation," the authority of the appellants to transport persons and property from the Kentucky shore was undoubted. The owners of the Kentucky franchise, it was said, had no right to exclude or restrain those who were prosecuting

[3] As to the views of other states' courts upon this subject, see People v. Babcock 11 Wend. 586; Newport v. Taylor, 16 B. Mon. 699; Marshall v. Grimes, 41 Miss. 27; Carroll v. Campbell, 108 Mo. 550, 17 S. W. 884; Memphis v. Overton, 3 Yerg. 387, 390; Burlington & H. County Ferry Co. v. Davis, 48 Iowa, 133, 30 Am. Rep. 390; Tugwell v. Eagle Pass Ferry Co. 74 Tex. 480, 9 S. W. 120, 13 S. W. 654; State v. Faudre, 54 W. Va. 122, 63 L.R.A. 877, 102 Am. St. Rep. 927, 46 S. E. 269, 1 Ann. Cas. 104; Chilvers v. People, 11 Mich. 42.

Digitized by Google

"the business of commerce in good faith, without the regularity or purposes of ferry trips," but, as the appellants' boat was run "openly and avowedly as a ferryboat," as "that was her business," the injunction was sustained. After referring to the commerce clause, the opinion concluded: "Undoubtedly, the states, in conferring ferry rights, may pass laws so infringing the commercial power of the nation that it would be the duty of this court to annul or control them. . . . There has been now nearly three-quarters of a century of practical interpretation of the Constitution. During all that time, as before the Constitution had its birth, the states have exercised [326] the power to establish and regulate ferries; Congress never. We have sought in vain for any act of Congress which involves the exercise of this power. That the authority lies within the scope of 'that immense mass' of undelegated powers which 'are reserved to the states respectively,' we think too clear to admit of doubt." These cases were cited with approval in Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. ed. 419, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257. There, the ferry company was an Illinois corporation and held a franchise granted by the legislature of that state for the operation of a ferry from East St. Louis, Illinois, to St. Louis, Missouri. The payment of a license tax imposed upon the company in Illinois, for the privilege of conducting the ferry, was resisted under the commerce clause, but the contention was overruled, the court holding that "the levying of a tax upon vessels or other water-craft, or the exaction of a license fee by the state within which the property subject to the exaction has its situs, is not a regulation of commerce within the meaning of the Constitution." (Id. p. 373.)

It is manifest, however, that the transportation of persons and property from one state to another is none the less interstate commerce because conducted by ferry; and it is not open to question that ferries maintained for that purpose are subject to the regulating power of Congress. It necessarily follows that whatever may properly be regarded as a direct burden upon interstate commerce, as conducted by ferries operating between states, it is beyond the competency of the states to impose. This was definitely decided in Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826. The commonwealth of Pennsylvania had imposed a tax upon the ferry company, based upon the estimated value of its capital stock, upon the ground that it was doing business within the state. The company was incorporated in New Jersey and maintained a ferry from Gloucester, in that state, to Philadelphia. Save for the wharf that it leased at the latter place, its [327] property, including its boats, had its situs in New Jersey; and its entire business consisted in ferrying. The tax upon the "receiving and landing of passengers and freight at the wharf in Philadelphia," which was a necessary incident to the transportation across the Delaware river, was a tax upon that transportation; and in this view the tax was held to be void as one laid upon interstate commerce. "The only interference of the state with the landing and receiving of passengers and freight, which is permissible," said the court, "is confined to such measures as will prevent confusion among the vessels, and collision between them, insure their safety and convenience, and facilitate the discharge or receipt of their passengers and freight, which fall under the general head of port regulations." Id. p. 206. It was said that the statement of Chief Justice Marshall in Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 203, 6 L. ed. 23, 71, had relation to ferries entirely within the state. "Ferries," continued the court, "between one of the states and a foreign country cannot be deemed . . . beyond the control of Congress under the commercial power, . . . neither are ferries over waters separating states." And it was pointed out that Congress had passed various laws respecting international and interstate ferries, the validity of which was not open to question (Rev. Stat. §§ 2792, 4233 (Rule 7), 4370, 4426).

But, in view of the nature of the subject and the diversified regulation which was necessary, it was recognized that the states were entitled to exercise a measure of regulatory power not inconsistent with the Federal authority. The court said: "It is true that, from the earliest period in the history of the government, the states have authorized and regulated ferries, not only over waters entirely within their limits, but over waters separating them; and it may be conceded that in many respects the states can more advantageously manage [328] such interstate ferries than the general government; and that the privilege of keeping a ferry, with a right to take toll for passengers and freight, is a franchise grantable by the state, to be exercised within such limits and under such regulations as may be required for the safety, comfort, and convenience of the public. Still the fact remains that such a ferry is a means, and a necessary means, of commercial intercourse between the states bordering on their dividing waters, and it must therefore be conducted without the imposition by the states of taxes or other burdens upon the commerce between them. Freedom from such impositions does not, of course, imply exemption from reasonable charges, as compensation for the carriage of persons, in the way of tolls or fares, or from the ordinary taxation to which other property is subjected, any more than like freedom of transportation on land implies such exemption." (Id. p. 217.)

Digitized by Google

In Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087, the question related to the power of the state of Kentucky to regulate tolls upon an interstate bridge built pursuant to the concurrent action of Kentucky and Ohio. The power was denied under the commerce clause. Reviewing the authorities, the opinion was expressed that the principle involved was identical with that applied in Wabash, St. L. & P. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4, with respect to interstate railroad rates, and that (at least, in the absence of mutual action) it was impossible for either state to fix a tariff of charges. It was said that it did not follow that because a state might "authorize a ferry or bridge from its own territory to that of another state," it might "regulate the charges upon such bridge or ferry." It was pointed out, however, that the state of Kentucky, by the statute in question, attempted "to reach out and secure for itself a right to prescribe a rate of toll applicable not only to persons crossing from Kentucky to Ohio, but from Ohio to Kentucky,"—a right which practically nullified [329] "the corresponding right of Ohio to fix tolls from her own state." (Id. p. 220.) And this was an adequate basis for the judgment. Four of the justices of the court, concurring in the judgment, announced their view that "the several states have the power to establish and regulate ferries and bridges, and the rates of toll thereon, whether within one state, or between two adjoining states, subject to the paramount authority of Congress over interstate commerce."

In Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. ed. 513, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463, where a Kentucky corporation conducting a ferry across the Ohio river between Kentucky and Indiana held ferry franchises from both states, it was decided that the franchise from Indiana could not be taxed by Kentucky. The court said that the franchises were distinct; that each was "property entitled to the protection of the law;" and that the Indiana franchise must be regarded as an incorporeal hereditament, having its situs in that state, and hence, as beyond the jurisdiction of Kentucky. The case of St. Clair County v. Interstate Sand & Car Transfer Co. 192 U. S. 454, 48 L. ed. 518, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300, involved the right of a county in Illinois to recover statutory penalties for carrying on, without a ferry license, the transportation of cars across the Mississippi river between points in Illinois and Missouri. Conceding, arguendo, that the police power of a state extends "to the establishment, regulation, and licensing of ferries on a navigable stream, being the boundary between two states," it was held that the business of transporting railroad cars was not a ferry business in the proper sense; and that the requirements of the ordinance in question made it a direct burden upon interstate commerce. The ordinance was therefore held to be invalid. In New York C. & H. R. R. Co v. Hudson County, 227 U. S. 248, 57 L. ed. 499, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269, the question concerned the authority of the New Jersey board to fix rates for a ferry between Weehawken, New Jersey, and New York City. [330] It appeared that the ferry was operated in connection with a railroad, and it was concluded that the action of Congress with respect thereto (act to regulate commerce, § 1, 24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154) had the effect of freeing the subject from state control.

Coming, then, to the question now presented,—whether a state may fix reasonable rates for ferriage from its shore to the shore of another state,—regard must be had to the basic principle involved. That principle is, as repeatedly declared, that as to those subjects which require a general system or uniformity of regulation, the power of Congress is exclusive; that, in other matters, admitting of diversity of treatment according to the special requirements of local conditions, the states may act within their respective jurisdictions until Congress sees fit to act; and that, when Congress does act, the exercise of its authority overrides all conflicting state legislation. Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 319, 13 L. ed. 996, 1004; Ex parte McNiel, 13 Wall. 236, 240, 20 L. ed. 624, 625; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 280, 23 L. ed. 347, 349; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 697, 26 L. ed. 238, 239; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 204, 29 L. ed. 162, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 481, 485, 31 L. ed. 700, 705, 707, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 103, 104, 39 L. ed. 910, 912, 913, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 222 U. S. 370, 378, 56 L. ed. 237, 239, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Southern R.

Digitized by Google

Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 436, 56 L. ed. 257, 260, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 399, 400, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1541, 1542, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729. It is this principle that is applied in holding that a state may not impose direct burdens upon interstate commerce, for this is to say that the states may not directly regulate or restrain that which, from its nature, should be under the control of the one authority, and be free from restriction save as it is governed by valid Federal rule. Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 204, 29 L. ed. 162, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826. It was this principle which governed the decision in Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4, as to interstate railroad rates. Considering the conditions of interstate railroad transportation, [331] which might extend not only from one state to another, but through a series of states, or across the continent, and the consequences which would ensue if each state should undertake to fix rates for such portions of continuous interstate hauls as might be within its territory, the conclusion was reached that "this species of regulation" was one "which must be, if established at all, of a general and national character," and could not be "safely and wisely remitted to local rules." (Id. p. 577.)

But, in the case of ferries, we have a subject of a different character. We dismiss from consideration those ferries which are operated in connection with railroads, and cases, if any, where the ferriage is part of a longer and continuous transportation. Ferries, such as are involved in the present case, are simply means of transit from shore to shore. These have always been regarded as instruments of local convenience, which, for the proper protection of the public, are subject to local regulation; and where the ferry is conducted over a boundary stream, each jurisdiction with respect to the ferriage from its shore has exercised this protective power. There are a multitude of such ferries throughout the country, and, apart from certain rules as to navigation, they have not engaged the attention of Congress. We also put on one side the question of prohibitory or discriminatory requirements, or burdensome exactions imposed by the state, which may be said to interfere with the guaranteed freedom of interstate intercourse, or with constitutional rights of property. The present question is simply one of reasonable charges. It is argued that the mere fact that interstate transportation is involved is sufficient to defeat the local regulation of rates, because, it is said, that it amounts to a regulation of interstate commerce. But this would not be deemed a sufficient ground for invalidating the local action without considering the nature of the regulation and the special subject to which it relates. Quarantine and pilotage [332] regulations may be said to be quite as direct in their operation, but they are not obnoxious when not in conflict with Federal rules. The fundamental test, to which we have referred, must be applied; and the question is whether, with regard to rates, there is any inherent necessity for a single regulatory power over these numerous ferries across boundary streams; whether, in view of the character of the subject and the variety of regulation required, it is one which demands the exclusion of local authority. Upon this question we can entertain no doubt. It is true that in the case of a given ferry between two states there might be a difference in the charge for ferriage from one side, as compared with that for ferriage from the other. But this does not alter the aspect of the subject. The question is still one with respect to a ferry, which necessarily implies transportation for a short distance, almost invariably between two points only, and unrelated to other transportation. It thus presents a situation essentially local, requiring regulation according to local conditions. It has never been supposed that because of the absence of Federal action the public interest was unprotected from extortion, and that in order to secure reasonable charges in a myriad of such different local instances, exhibiting an endless variety of circumstance, it would be necessary for Congress to act directly, or to establish for that purpose a Federal agency. The matter is illuminated by the consideration of this alternative, for the point of the contention is that, there being no Federal regulation, the ferry rates are to be deemed free from all control. The practical advantages of having the matter dealt with by the states are obvious, and are illustrated by the practice of one hundred and twenty-five years. And in view of the character of the subject, we find no sound objection to its continuance. If Congress at any time undertakes to regulate such rates, its action will, of course, control.

If the state may exercise this power, it necessarily [333] follows that it may not, in its exercise, derogate from the similar authority of another state. The state power can extend only to the transactions within its own territory and the ferriage from its own shore. It follows that the fact that rates were fixed by New York did not preclude New Jersey from establishing reasonable rates with respect to the ferry establishment maintained on its side.

Digitized by Google

With respect to the rates for round trips, we do not construe the ordinance as requiring the company to issue round-trip tickets at its office in New Jersey. We may not look into the testimony, and it does not appear that such a construction has been placed upon the ordinance by the state court. Viewed as a limitation upon rates charged for such round-trip tickets, when sold by the company in New Jersey, we think that the ordinance is valid, being one relating to the transactions of the company in New Jersey, and the charges there enforced. Whether it would be competent for the state, through the local board, to require the company to issue round-trip tickets, is a question not presented by the record, and we express no opinion upon it.

The judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed.

CITY OF SAULT STE. MARIE, Andrew J. Short, Mayor, et al., Appts.,
v.
INTERNATIONAL TRANSIT COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 333–342.)

Commerce — license tax — conducting ferry over boundary stream.

A state, or a municipality acting under its authority, may not, consistently with the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, require a Canadian corporation operating a ferry over the boundary stream lying between such state and Canada to take out a license and pay a license fee as a condition precedent to receiving and landing persons and property at its wharf in such municipality.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III. d, 13, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 323.]

Argued March 20, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of a municipal ordinance requiring a Canadian corporation operating a ferry between Canada and the United States to take out a license and pay a license fee as a condition to conducting its business at its wharf in such municipality. Affirmed.

See same case below, 194 Fed. 522.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John W. Shine argued the cause, and, with Mr. F. T. McDonald, filed a brief for appellants:

A ferry is in respect to the landing, and not of the water. The point of departure is the seat, the base, the home of the ferry.

Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black, 603, 17 L. ed. 191; Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 394, 47 L. ed. 513, 517, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Memphis v. Overton, 3 Yerg. 390; State v. Faudre, 54 W. Va. 122, 63 L.R.A. 877, 102 Am. St. Rep. 927, 46 S. E. 269, 1 Ann. Cas. 104; Powers v. Athens, 99 N. Y. 592, 2 N. E. 609.

Ferries are local in their nature, and the regulation of ferries is a matter of local concern.

Chilvers v. People, 11 Mich. 51; St. Clair County v. Interstate Sand & Car Transfer Co. 192 U. S. 454, 48 L. ed. 518, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300.

In all local matters state statutes are valid until superseded by act of Congress.

Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 310, 13 L. ed. 1001; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 702, 26 L. ed. 238, 241; Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 47 L. ed. 995, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 507, 31 L. ed. 700, 714, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Stoutenburgh v. Hennick, 129 U. S. 141, 32 L. ed. 637, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126; Ouachita Packet Co. v. Aiken, 121 U. S. 444, 30 L. ed. 976, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 379, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 907; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Board of Health, 118 U. S. 455, 30 L. ed. 237, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Cardwell v. American River Bridge Co. 113 U. S. 205, 210, 28 L. ed. 959, 961, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Willoughby, Const. § 309.

The privilege of keeping a ferry over boundary streams, with the right to take tolls for passengers and property, is grantable by the state.

Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 217, 29 L. ed. 158, 166, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; State v. Faudre, 54 W. Va. 122, 63 L.R.A. 877.

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107, and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

On the establishment, regulation, and protection of ferries—see note to Sistersville Ferry Co. v. Russell, 59 L.R.A. 513.

Digitized by Google

102 Am. St. Rep. 927, 46 S. E. 269, 1 Ann. Cas. 104; Sistersville Ferry Co. v. Russell, 52 W. Va. 356, 59 L.R.A. 513, 43 S. E. 107; Cross v. Hopkins, 6 W. Va. 323; Carroll v. Campbell, 108 Mo. 550, 17 S. W. 884; State v. Sickmann, 65 Mo. App. 499; Tugwell v. Eagle Pass Ferry Co. 74 Tex. 480, 9 S. W. 120, 13 S. W. 654; Parsons v. Hunt, 98 Tex. 420, 84 S. W. 644; Nixon v. Reid, 8 S. D. 507, 32 L.R.A. 315, 67 N. W. 57; Hatten v. Turman, 123 Ky. 844, 97 S. W. 770, 98 S. W. 1000.

The right to establish and regulate ferries over boundary streams is among the powers reserved to the state.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Young's Case, 2 Cranch, C. C. 453, Fed. Cas. No. 18,150; Memphis v. Overton, 3 Yerg. 387; People v. Babcock, 11 Wend. 587; United States ex rel. Jones v. Fanning, Morris (Iowa) 348; Mills v. St. Clair County, 7 Ill. 225, affirmed in 8 How. 569, 12 L. ed. 1201; Phillips v. Bloomington, 1 G. Greene, 498; Fanning v. Gregoire, 16 How. 524, 14 L. ed. 1043; Hudson County v. State, 24 N. J. L. 718; Newport v. Taylor, 16 B. Mon. 699; Chiapella v. Brown, 14 La. Ann. 185; Minturn v. Larue, 23 How. 435, 16 L. ed. 574; Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black, 603, 17 L. ed. 191; Chilvers v. People, 11 Mich. 43; Marshall v. Grimes, 41 Miss. 27; Burlington & H. County Ferry Co. v. Davis, 48 Iowa, 133, 30 Am. Rep. 390; St. Louis v. Waterloo-Carondelet Turnp. & Ferry Co. 14 Mo. App. 216; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. ed. 419, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257; Tugwell v. Eagle Pass Ferry Co. 74 Tex. 486, 9 S. W. 120, 13 S. W. 654; Madison v. Abbott, 118 Ind. 337, 21 N. E. 28; Carroll v. Campbell, 108 Mo. 550, 17 S. W. 884; State v. Sickmann, 65 Mo. App. 499; Nixon v. Reid, 8 S. D. 507, 32 L.R.A. 315, 67 N. W. 57; Sistersville Ferry Co. v. Russell, 52 W. Va. 356, 59 L.R.A. 513, 43 S. E. 107; State v. Faudre, 54 W. Va. 122, 63 L.R.A. 877, 102 Am. St. Rep. 927, 46 S. E. 269, 1 Ann. Cas. 104; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Hudson County, 76 N. J. L. 664, 74 Atl. 954, 16 Ann. Cas. 858; Port Richmond & B. Pt. Ferry Co. v. Hudson County, 80 N. J. L. 614, 77 Atl. 1046.

The right of the state to establish and regulate ferries over boundary streams between states and foreign countries has been sustained.

People v. Babcock, 11 Wend. 587; Chilvers v. People, 11 Mich. 43; Tugwell v. Eagle Pass Ferry Co. 74 Tex. 486, 9 S. W. 120, 13 S. W. 654.

This court has repeatedly held that the power over ferries on boundary streams is reserved to the states.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Young's Case, 2 Cranch, C. C. 453, Fed. Cas. No. 18,150; Mills v. St. Clair County, 8 How. 569, 12 L. ed. 1201; Fanning v. Gregoire, 16 How. 524, 14 L. ed. 1043; Minturn v. Larue, 23 How. 435, 16 L. ed. 574; Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black, 603, 17 L. ed. 191; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. ed. 419, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257.

Ferries are in aid of commerce, and not an interference with commerce.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 235, 6 L. ed. 79; Fanning v. Gregoire, 16 How. 524, 14 L. ed. 1043; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 378, 27 L. ed. 419, 424, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257.

Where a doubt arises as to the restriction of the commerce clause, it is to be decided in favor of the state.

Bank of Commerce v. Tennessee, 104 U. S. 495, 26 L. ed. 811; Annapolis & E. Ridge R. Co. v. Anne Arundel County, 103 U. S. 1, 26 L. ed. 359; Wilson v. Gaines, 103 U. S. 417, 26 L. ed. 401; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Hamblen County, 102 U. S. 273, 26 L. ed. 152; Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Gaines, 97 U. S. 697, 24 L. ed. 1091; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 373, 27 L. ed. 422, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257.

If the reserved power in the states to regulate ferries over boundary streams is divisible into those that are exclusive in the state, and those that are merely reserved to the states until Congress acts, and if the case at bar falls within the latter class, then the power to regulate ferries on the St. Mary's river is still in the state of Michigan, as Congress has not, by any act of Congress, deprived the state of this power.

Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black, 603, 17 L. ed. 191.

The power of the states over the general subject of commerce, according to some of the adjudications, is divisible into three classes:

First. Those in which the power of the state is exclusive.

Second. Those in which the state may act in the absence of legislation by Congress.

Third. Those in which the action of Congress is exclusive and the state cannot interfere at all.

Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962, 4 Interst. Com. Rep. 649, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087.

The acts of Congress relative to the licensing and enrolment of vessels do not interfere with the regulation of ferries by the states.

Conway v. Taylor, supra; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. ed. 419, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257; The Nassau, 182 Fed. 696, affirmed in 110 C. C. A. 184, 188 Fed. 46.

The fact that some articles of freight are also carried on the ferryboat does not change or affect the rule applied to ferries.

Digitized by Google

St. Clair County v. Interstate Sand & Car Transfer Co. 192 U. S. 454, 458–468, 48 L. ed. 518, 520–525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300.

A license fee imposed as a condition of granting a ferry license is not a tax on commerce within the meaning of the commerce clause of the Constitution.

Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 102 Ill. 560, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. ed. 419, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257; Chilvers v. People, 11 Mich 43; Ash v. People, 11 Mich. 347, 83 Am. Dec. 740; Kitson v. Ann Arbor, 26 Mich. 325; McQuillin, Mun. Ord. § 409.

The power of the state to license and regulate ferries includes the power to fix rates for the ferriage of persons and property.

Fanning v. Gregoire, 16 How. 524, 14 L. ed. 1043; Hudson County v. State, 24 N. J. L. 718; State v. Sickmann, 65 Mo. App. 499.

The fact that appellee is a foreign corporation does not affect the right of the state to regulate ferries.

Port Richmond & B. Pt. Ferry Co. v. Hudson County, 80 N. J. L. 614, 77 Atl. 1046.

Mr. Henry E. Bodman argued the cause, and, with Messrs. James Turner, Herbert E. Boynton, and Alexis C. Angell, filed a brief for appellee:

The appellee is engaged in foreign commerce.

Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 702, 26 L. ed. 238, 241; The Hazel Kirke, 23 Blatchf. 292, 25 Fed. 601; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 47 L. ed. 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 497, 52 L. ed. 297, 308, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Hudson County, 227 U. S. 248, 57 L. ed. 499, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Hall v. DeCuin, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547.

The commerce in which appellee is engaged is not subject to regulation by the ordinance in question because such ordinance is a burden upon it and conflicts with the Federal Constitution.

Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 48 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. 232, 279, 21 L. ed. 146, 162; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 272, 273, 23 L. ed. 543, 549; West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 221 U. S. 229, 55 L. ed. 716, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1193, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283, 408, 409, 12 L. ed. 702, 754, 755; St. Clair County v. Interstate Sand & Car Transfer Co. 192 U. S. 454, 461, 48 L. ed. 518, 521, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 57, 58, 35 L. ed. 649, 652, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 21, 54 L. ed. 355, 363, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

Even if such regulations could be sustained on the ground that Congress has not acted, in relation to commerce between the states, it would not necessarily follow that foreign commerce could be similarly burdened by local authority. A distinction is drawn in this regard between interstate and foreign commerce.

Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 482, 483, 31 L. ed. 700, 706, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought by the International Transit Company, a Canadian corporation, to restrain the enforcement of [338] an ordinance adopted, in the year 1911, by the city of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan. The ordinance related to the maintaining of ferries from that city across the St. Mary's river to the opposite shore, in the province of Ontario; and the complainant contended that, as applied to it, the ordinance was a violation of the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution and of article 1 of the treaty of January 11, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. 2449), between the United States and Great Britain. The district court granted the relief as prayed (194 Fed. 522); and this appeal is brought.

The transit company holds a license from the Dominion government to operate a ferry between Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario and Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan. It owns, and uses in this business, two steam ferryboats of British registry; it leases a private wharf in the city of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, and there maintains an office where fares are received. The Canadian license prescribes the frequency of the service and fixes the maximum fares to be charged; it also provides that the licensee shall not "infringe any of the laws or bylaws or of the regulations" of the United States or of the state of Michigan or "of the town of Sault Ste. Marie, U. S. A.," in reference to ferriage, "which may be applicable to the said ferry or such portion thereof as may be within the jurisdiction of any of them."

The city of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, was authorized by its charter to "establish, license, and regulate ferries to and from the city," and to prescribe rates. The charter also provided: "The council may regulate and license ferries from the city or any place or landing therein to the opposite shore . . . and may require the payment of such reasonable sum for such license as the council shall deem proper; and may impose such reasonable terms and restrictions in relation to the keeping and management of such ferries, and the time, manner, and rates of carriage and transportation of persons and property, as may be [339] proper; and provide for the revocation of any such license, and for the punishment, by proper fines and penalties, for the violation of any ordinance prohibiting unlicensed ferries and regulating those established and licensed." Under this authority, the city adopted the ordinance in question. Section 1 is as follows:

Digitized by Google

"No person, persons, or company shall operate a ferryboat, or engage in the business of carrying or transporting persons or property thereon from the city of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, and across the St. Mary's river to the opposite shore, without first obtaining a license therefor from the mayor, and by otherwise complying with the provisions of this ordinance."

The mayor was empowered to grant a license upon the payment of $50 annually for each ferryboat engaged in such transportation, and it was further provided that, before any license should be issued, the person or company desiring the same should make application setting forth a schedule of the rates proposed to be charged within the prescribed territory. Additional provisions fixed the period and frequency of service and the rates to be charged from the licensee's dock within the city to the opposite shore. The mayor was authorized to revoke the license if he was satisfied that any of the provisions of the ordinance were violated. After the passage of this ordinance, one Pocock, operating a ferryboat belonging to the transit company without a license having been obtained therefor, was arrested and fined. Alleging the purpose of the city to enforce the ordinance, and its invalidity, the transit company then brought this suit.

It will be observed that the question is not simply as to the power of the state to prevent extortion and to fix reasonable ferry rates from the Michigan shore; it is not as to the validity of a mere police regulation governing the manner of conducting the business in order to secure safety and the public convenience. (See Port Richmond & B. Pt. [340] Ferry Co. v. Hudson County, decided this day [234 U. S. 317, ante, 1330, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821].) The ordinance goes beyond this. The ordinance requires a municipal license; and the fundamental question is whether, in the circumstances shown, the state, or the city, acting under its authority, may make its consent a condition precedent to the prosecution of the business. If the state, or the city, may make its consent necessary, it may withhold it. The appellee, having its domicil in Canada, is engaged in commerce between Canada and the United States. At the wharf which it leases for the purpose on the American shore, it receives and lands persons and property. Has the state of Michigan the right to make this commercial intercourse a matter of local privilege, to demand that it shall not be carried on without its permission, and to exact as the price of its consent—if it chooses to give it—the payment of a license fee?

This question must be answered in the negative. It is urged, on behalf of the city, that the state, either directly or through its municipalities, may establish and license ferries,—may grant ferry franchises (Fanning v. Gregoire, 16 How. 524, 14 L. ed. 1043; Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black, 603, 17 L. ed. 191; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. ed. 419, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257). But, since the decision in Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826, it has been clear that, whatever authority the state may have for this purpose, it does not go so far as to enable the state to interdict one in the position of the appellee from conducting the commerce in which it is engaged, or justify the state in imposing exactions upon that commerce in the view that business of this character may be carried on only by virtue of its consent, express or implied. In that case the ferry company was a New Jersey corporation, receiving and landing its passengers and property at its wharf in Philadelphia in substantially the same manner as the appellee transacts its business at its wharf in Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan. The court held that it was [341] not within the power of the state to prevent the ferry company from so doing; that this was an essential part of the interstate transportation which the state could not forbid, or burden by a privilege tax. See Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 343, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1204, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118. Referring to foreign commerce, the court said in Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 57, 35 L. ed. 649, 652, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851: "Would anyone pretend that a state legislature could prohibit a foreign corporation—an English or a French transportation company, for example—from coming into its borders and landing goods and passengers at its wharves, and soliciting goods and passengers for a return voyage without first obtaining a license from some state officer, and filing a sworn statement as to the amount of its capital stock paid in? And why not? Evidently because the matter is not within the province of state legislation, but within that of national legislation." Ferry transportation is placed upon the same footing in this respect by the holding in the Gloucester Case (supra, pp. 203, 205), the point of the decision being that the transportation was within the protection of the constitutional grant to Congress. "It matters not," said the court, "that the transportation is made in ferryboats, which pass between the states every hour of the day."

Digitized by Google

The fundamental principle involved has been applied by this court in recent decisions in a great variety of circumstances, and it must be taken to be firmly established that one otherwise enjoying full capacity for the purpose cannot be compelled to take out a local license for the mere privilege of carrying on interstate or foreign commerce. Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 496, 30 L. ed. 694, 697, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 645, 32 L. ed. 311, 313, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Stoutenburgh v. Hennick, 129 U. S. 141, 148, 32 L. ed. 637, 639, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; McCall v. California, 126 U. S. 104, 109, 34 L. ed. 391, 392, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 181, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 34 L. ed. 394, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 178, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 58, 35 L. ed. 652, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 51 L. ed 295, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 21, 54 L. ed. 355, 363, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; [342] International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 109, 54 L. ed. 678, 686, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 221 U. S. 229, 260, 55 L. ed. 716, 728, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1193, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Bucks Stove & Range Co. v. Vickers, 226 U. S. 205, 215, 57 L. ed. 189, 192, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; Crenshaw v. Arkansas, 227 U. S. 389, 57 L. ed. 565, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 294; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 400, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1541, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Barrett v. New York, 232 U. S. 14, 31, 32, ante, 483, 490, 491, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203.

Assuming that, by reason of the local considerations pertinent to the operation of ferries, there exists, in the absence of Federal action, a local protective power to prevent extortion in the rates charged for ferriage from the shore of the state, and to prescribe reasonable regulations necessary to secure good order and convenience, we think that the action of the city in the present case in requiring the appellee to take out a license, and to pay a license fee, for the privilege of transacting the business conducted at its wharf, was beyond the power which the state could exercise either directly or by delegation. In this view it is unnecessary to consider the question raised with respect to the treaty with Great Britain.

The decree restraining the enforcement of the ordinance in question as against the appellee is affirmed.

Affirmed.

HOUSTON, EAST & WEST TEXAS RAILWAY COMPANY and Houston & Shreveport Railroad Company et al., Appts.,
v.
UNITED STATES, the Interstate Commerce Commission et al. (No. 567.)

TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY et al., Appts.,
v.
UNITED STATES, the Interstate Commerce Commission et al. (No. 568.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 342–360.)

Commerce — power of Congress — internal commerce.

1. Congress, in the exercise of its paramount power, may prevent the common instrumentalities of interstate and intrastate commercial intercourse from being used in their intrastate operations to the injury of interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — power of Congress — regulating intrastate rates.

2. Congress has the power to control the intrastate rates maintained by a carrier under state authority to the extent neces-

---

NOTE.—As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection, generally—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

On delegation by legislature of power to regulate carriers—see note to State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 639.

Generally, on legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 177.

Digitized by Google

sary to remove the resulting unjust discrimination against interstate commerce arising out of the relation between such intrastate rates and interstate rates which are reasonable in themselves.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — delegation of power — to Interstate Commerce Commission.

3. Congress may delegate to the Interstate Commerce Commission authority to control the intrastate rates maintained by a carrier under state authority to the extent necessary to remove the resulting unjust discrimination against interstate commerce arising out of the relation between such intrastate rates and interstate rates which are reasonable in themselves.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, III. b, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — powers — regulating intrastate rates.

4. The authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission to remove discriminations against interstate traffic under the act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, 380, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3154, 3155), includes the power to control the intrastate rates maintained by a carrier under state authority to the extent necessary to remove the resulting unjust discrimination against interstate commerce arising out of the relation between such intrastate rates and interstate rates which are reasonable in themselves, notwithstanding the proviso in § 1 of that act, that its provisions shall not apply to purely intrastate traffic.

[Matters as to Interstate Commerce Commission, see Interstate Commerce Commission.]

[Nos. 567 and 568.]

Argued October 28 and 29, 1913. Decided June 8, 1914.

TWO APPEALS from the United States Commerce Court to review judgments dismissing the petitions in suits to set aside an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission regulating railway rates. Affirmed.

See same case below, in No. 567, 205 Fed. 391; in No. 568, 205 Fed. 380.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Hiram M. Garwood argued the cause, and, with Messrs. James G. Wilson and Maxwell Evarts, filed a brief for appellants in No. 567:

The act to regulate commerce does not confer upon the Interstate Commerce Commission jurisdiction or authority to regulate or control purely intrastate rates, and the order complained of is void for lack of jurisdiction.

Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Missouri Rate Cases (Knott v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co.) 230 U. S. 474, 57 L. ed. 1571, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 975; Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Mississippi R. Commission, 203 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 289, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 177; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 193 Fed. 699; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Siler, 186 Fed. 176; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Campbell, 173 Fed. 957; Woodside v. Tonapah & G. R. Co. 184 Fed. 360; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Hadley, 168 Fed. 341; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403, 51 L. ed. 540, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360.

Continuously the Interstate Commerce Commission has disclaimed the jurisdiction here sought to be exercised, and its decision herein marks a radical departure from the views and practices obtaining since its creation.

Re Freight Rates, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 180; E. E. Saunders & Co. v. Southern Exp. Co. 18 Inters. Com. Rep. 415; Andy's Ridge Coal Co. v. Southern R. Co. 18 Inters. Com. Rep. 405; New Jersey Fruit Exch. v. Central R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 84; Southwestern Shippers' Traffic Asso. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 24 Inters. Com. Rep. 570; P. P. Williams Co. v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 16 Inters. Com. Rep. 482.

The Texas intrastate rates complained of are not voluntary rates applied by the carriers, but are rates prescribed by the duly constituted authorities of the state of Texas, obedience to which is compelled by the Texas law, and such obedience cannot constitute an illegal discrimination under the act to regulate commerce.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Re Freight Rates, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 180.

The whole course of decision in all of the great rate cases, where the validity of state legislation and the action of state authority have been questioned, either as in conflict with the due process or the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, presents no suggestion or intimation that Congress possesses the power to regulate purely domestic commerce. This historic fact, of course, weighs heavily as a rule of construction negativing the contention that, in the act to regulate commerce, it was intended to clothe the Interstate Commerce Commission with an authority never asserted or claimed by Congress itself. It is equally potent as an argument against the very existence of the power. Beginning with Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77, and proceeding step by step through Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191;

Digitized by Google

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 31 L. ed. 841, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 339, 36 L. ed. 176, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 39 L. ed. 567, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; and Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418, each and every case proceeds upon the theory and assumption that the right to control purely intrastate and domestic commerce is a high sovereign power of the individual state, and that within this domain the jurisdiction of the state is as complete and exclusive as is that of the Federal government in the regulation of commerce among the states.

Equally strong is the assertion in all the great tax cases, and in those where the act of the state, attacked as an interference with interstate commerce, finds its basis in the police power of the state, that, in order to constitute an interference with, or burden upon, interstate commerce, the effect of the state's action must be proximate and direct; and that a mere incidental or consequential effect upon interstate commerce does not constitute an invasion of the Federal domain. Time and again, this court has stated the principle that railroad building and rate making are, in reality, functions of the state itself, delegated by legislative authority to private carriers, and that the regulation of rates is a high sovereign power of the state; and where the exercise of this high power is confided to commerce wholly within the state, it does not fall within the terms of the commerce clause of the Constitution.

Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Sands v. Manistee River Improv. Co. 123 U. S. 288, 31 L. ed. 149, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; Hopkins v. United States, 177 U. S. 578, 597, 43 L. ed. 290, 297, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 13, 39 L. ed. 325, 329, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 349, 45 L. ed. 224, 227, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 212, 40 L. ed. 940, 945, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; New Jersey Fruit Exch. v. Central R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 84; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403, 51 L. ed. 540, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 196, 6 L. ed. 70.

Messrs. R. G. Pleasant and Luther M. Walter argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. M. Barrow, M. W. Borders, and John S. Burchmore, filed a brief for intervener, the Railroad Commission of Louisiana, in No. 567:

Congress has the power under the Constitution to confer jurisdiction upon the Interstate Commerce Commission to make the order complained of.

Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

Congress has given the Commission jurisdiction to make the order complained of.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. ed. 729, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. ed. 280, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. United States, 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. ed, 292, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164.

Messrs. Thomas J. Freeman, George Thompson, and W. L. Hall filed a brief for appellants in No. 568.

Since the appeal in this case was perfected, the cases of Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729, and Missouri Rate Cases (Knott v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co.) 230 U. S. 474, 57 L. ed. 1571, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 975, have been submitted and decided by this court, and we submit that the decision of this court in these cases is decisive of the questions involved in the case at bar, and renders unnecessary the further citation of authorities.

See also Southwestern Shippers' Traffic Asso. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 24 Inters. Com. Rep. 570; P. P. Williams Co. v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 16 Inters. Com. Rep. 482; Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Mississippi R. Commission, 203 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 289, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 177; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 193 Fed. 699; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Siler, 186 Fed. 176; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Campbell, 173 Fed. 957; Woodside v. Tonapah & G. R. Co. 184 Fed. 360; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Hadley, 168 Fed. 341; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403, 51 L. ed. 540, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360.

The Interstate Commission was under the necessity of overruling its own opinions in the following cases: Re Freight Rates, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 180; E. E.

Digitized by Google

Saunders & Co. v. Southern Exp. Co. 18 Inters. Com. Rep. 415; Andy's Ridge Coal Co. v. Southern R. Co. 18 Inters. Com. Rep. 405; New Jersey Fruit Exch. v. Central R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 84.

The Texas interstate rates complained of are not voluntary rates applied by the carriers, but are rates prescribed by the duly constituted authorities of the state of Texas, obedience to which is compelled by the Texas law, and such obedience cannot constitute an illegal discrimination under the act to regulate commerce.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Re Freight Rates, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 180.

The Congress of the United States has no power under the Constitution of the United States to regulate or control purely intrastate commerce and rates; if Congress does possess such power it has never exercised the same, and has never vested the exercise of such right in the Interstate Commerce Commission; on the contrary, it has expressly declined to invest such authority in the Interstate Commerce Commission, and has expressly taken from the Interstate Commission any right or jurisdiction over purely intrastate rates.

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 31 L. ed. 841, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 339, 36 L. ed. 176, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 39 L. ed. 567, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Sands v. Manistee River Improv. Co. 123 U. S. 288, 31 L. ed. 149, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; Hopkins v. United States, 177 U. S. 578, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; New Jersey Fruit Exch. v. Central R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 84; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403, 51 L. ed. 540, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 196, 6 L. ed. 70.

Assistant Attorney General Denison argued the cause, and, with Mr. Thurlow M. Gordon, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, filed a brief for the United States:

The power to deal with the relation between the two kinds of rates (as a relation) lies exclusively in Congress, and was beyond the power of the states, even in the absence of congressional action.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 36, 46 L. ed. 416, 420, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 429, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1554, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

Section 3 of the act to regulate commerce intended to prohibit all discriminations over which the power of Congress was exclusive.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 211, 212, 40 L. ed. 940, 944, 945, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 391, 50 L. ed. 515, 521, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 221 U. S. 229, 55 L. ed. 716, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1193, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 207, 56 L. ed. 734, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Hampton v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 227 U. S. 456, 57 L. ed. 596, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 221 U. S. 612–618, 55 L. ed. 878–882, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 222 U. S. 370, 56 L. ed. 237, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, 26, 56 L. ed. 72, 74, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, 3 N. C. C. A. 822; Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 56 L. ed. 327, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875; Pederson v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 229 U. S. 146, 57 L. ed. 1125, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, 3 N. C. C. A. 779.

The proviso, at the end of the section, that its terms shall not apply to the transportation of passengers or property wholly within one state, was inserted for the purpose of showing the congressional purpose not to undertake to regulate a commerce wholly domestic.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 207, 56 L. ed. 734, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

The words "wholly within one state," if taken as relating to interstate commerce, are merely the converse of the phrase "among the states," used in the Constitution; and following the construction given to that phrase by Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23, and ever since, it means commerce "which does not extend to or affect other states."

Digitized by Google

Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 56 L. ed. 327, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875.

Mr. P. J. Farrell argued the cause and filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission:

The power of the Congress to regulate interstate commerce does not depend upon the effect such regulation may have upon intrastate commerce.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 46, 47, 56 L. ed. 327, 344, 345, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

Section 1 of the act covers all interstate and foreign commerce carried on by railroad.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

The proviso in § 1 of the act does not create an exception, but is simply a disclaimer as to transportation wholly within a state, which does not concern or affect any other state.

Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 195 Fed. 968; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 194, 207, 56 L. ed. 729, 734, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

The Congress may regulate interstate commerce, even though such regulation may materially affect intrastate commerce; but the power of a state over intrastate commerce is less comprehensive.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 194–196, 6 L. ed. 23, 69, 70; Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 46, 47, 54, 56 L. ed. 327, 344, 345, 347, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 346, 47 L. ed. 492, 497, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 473, 31 L. ed. 508, 510, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 203, 204, 29 L. ed. 158, 161, 162, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 65, 54 L. ed. 378, 385, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 221 U. S. 229, 261, 55 L. ed. 716, 728, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1193, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, 26, 27, 56 L. ed. 72, 74, 75, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, 3 N. C. C. A. 822; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 633, 29 L. ed. 257, 261, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 36, 46 L. ed. 416, 420, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 474, 54 L. ed. 280, 289, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 193 Fed. 84; Shepard v. Northern P. R. Co. 184 Fed. 795.

The view that a discrimination against interstate commerce may not be removed by Federal authority because it results from intrastate rates prescribed by a state authority, and applied to the transportation of intrastate traffic, is based upon an erroneous theory.

Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 46, 47, 54, 56 L. ed. 327, 344, 345, 347, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

These suits were brought in the commerce court by the Houston, East & West Texas Railway Company and the Houston & Shreveport Railroad Company, and by the Texas & Pacific Railway Company, respectively, to set aside an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, dated March 11, 1912, upon the ground that it exceeded the Commission's authority. Other railroad companies[1] intervened in support of the petitions, and the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Railroad Commission of Louisiana intervened in opposition. The petitions were dismissed. 205 Fed. 380, 391.

The order of the Interstate Commerce Commission was made in a proceeding initiated in March, 1911, by the Railroad Commission of Louisiana. The complaint was that the appellants, and other interstate carriers, maintained unreasonable rates from Shreveport, Louisiana, to various points in Texas, and, further, that these carriers, in the adjustment of rates over [1]The Missouri, Kansas, & Texas Railway Company of Texas, the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Company, and the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Company of Texas.

Digitized by Google

their respective lines, unjustly discriminated in favor of traffic within the state of Texas, and against similar traffic between Louisiana and Texas. The carriers filed answers; numerous pleas of intervention by shippers and commercial bodies were allowed; testimony was taken and arguments were heard.

The gravamen of the complaint, said the Interstate [346] Commerce Commission, was that the carriers made rates out of Dallas and other Texas points into eastern Texas which were much lower than those which they extended into Texas from Shreveport. The situation may be briefly described: Shreveport, Louisiana, is about 40 miles from the Texas state line, and 231 miles from Houston, Texas, on the line of the Houston, East & West Texas and Houston & Shreveport Companies (which are affiliated in interest); it is 189 miles from Dallas, Texas, on the line of the Texas & Pacific. Shreveport competes with both cities for the trade of the intervening territory. The rates on these lines from Dallas and Houston, respectively, eastward to intermediate points in Texas, were much less, according to distance, than from Shreveport westward to the same points. It is undisputed that the difference was substantial, and injuriously affected the commerce of Shreveport. It appeared, for example, that a rate of 60 cents carried first-class traffic a distance of 160 miles to the eastward from Dallas, while the same rate would carry the same class of traffic only 55 miles into Texas from Shreveport. The first-class rate from Houston to Lufkin, Texas, 118.2 miles, was 50 cents per 100 pounds, while the rate from Shreveport to the same point, 112.5 miles, was 69 cents. The rate on wagons from Dallas to Marshall, Texas, 147.7 miles, was 36.8 cents, and from Shreveport to Marshall, 42 miles, 56 cents. The rate on furniture from Dallas to Longview, Texas, 124 miles, was 24.8 cents, and that from Shreveport to Longview, 65.7 miles, was 35 cents. These instances of differences in rates are merely illustrative; they serve to indicate the character of the rate adjustment.

The Interstate Commerce Commission found that the interstate class rates out of Shreveport to named Texas points were unreasonable, and it established maximum class rates for this traffic. These rates, we understand, were substantially the same as the class rates fixed by the [347] Railroad Commission of Texas, and charged by the carriers, for transportation for similar distances in that state. The Interstate Commerce Commission also found that the carriers maintained "higher rates from Shreveport to points in Texas" than were in force "from cities in Texas to such points under substantially similar conditions and circumstances," and that thereby "an unlawful and undue preference and advantage" was given to the Texas cities, and a "discrimination" that was "undue and unlawful" was effected against Shreveport. In order to correct this discrimination, the carriers were directed to desist from charging higher rates for the transportation of any commodity from Shreveport to Dallas and Houston, respectively, and intermediate points, than were contemporaneously charged for the carriage of such commodity from Dallas and Houston toward Shreveport for equal distances, as the Commission found that relation of rates to be reasonable. 23 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 46–48.

The order in question is set forth in the margin.[2] The [348] report states that under this order it will be the duty of the companies "to duly and justly equalize the terms and conditions" upon which they will extend "transportation to traffic of a similar character, moving into Texas from [349] Shreveport, with that moving wholly within Texas," but that, in effecting such equalization, the class scale rates as prescribed shall not be exceeded.

In their petition in the commerce court, the appellants assailed the order in its entirety, but subsequently they withdrew their opposition to the fixing of maximum class rates, and these rates were put in force by the carriers in May, 1912. The attack was continued upon that portion of the order which prohibited the charge of higher rates for carrying articles from Shreveport into Texas than those charged for eastward traffic from Dallas and Houston, respectively, for equal distances. There are, it appears, commodity rates fixed by the Railroad Commission of Texas for intrastate hauls, which are substantially less than the class, or standard, rates prescribed by that Commission; and thus the commodity rates charged by the carriers from Dallas and Houston eastward to Texas points are less than the rates which they demand for

[2] "This case being at issue upon complaint and answers on file, and having been duly heard and submitted by the parties, and full investigation of the matters and things involved having been had, and the Commission having, on the date hereof, made and filed a report containing its findings of fact and conclusions thereon, which said report is hereby referred to and made a part hereof:

"It is ordered, that defendants the Texas & Pacific Railway Company, the Houston, East & West Texas Railway Company, and Houston & Shreveport Railroad Company, be, and they are hereby, notified and required to cease and desist, on or before the

Digitized by Google

the transportation of the same articles for like distances from Shreveport into Texas. The present controversy relates to these commodity rates.

The point of the objection to the order is that, as the discrimination found by the Commission to be unjust arises out of the relation of intrastate rates, maintained under state authority, to interstate rates that have been upheld as reasonable, its correction was beyond the Commission's power. Manifestly the order might be complied with, and the discrimination avoided, either by reducing the interstate rates from Shreveport to the level of the competing intrastate rates, or by raising these intrastate [350] rates to the level of the interstate rates, or by such reduction in the one case and increase in the other as would result in equality. But it is urged that, so far as the interstate rates were sustained by the Commission as reasonable, the Commission was without authority to compel their reduction in order to equalize them with the lower intrastate rates. The holding of the commerce court was that the order relieved the appellants from further obligation to observe the intrastate rates, and that they were at liberty to comply with the Commission's requirements by increasing these rates sufficiently to remove the forbidden discrimination. The invalidity of the order in this aspect is challenged upon two grounds:

(1) That Congress is impotent to control the intrastate charges of an interstate carrier even to the extent necessary to prevent injurious discrimination against interstate traffic; and

(2) That, if it be assumed that Congress has this power, still it has not been exercised, and hence the action of the Commission exceeded the limits of the authority which has been conferred upon it.

First. It is unnecessary to repeat what has frequently been said by this court with respect to the complete and paramount character of the power confided to Congress to regulate commerce among the several states. It is of the essence of this power that, where it exists, it dominates. Interstate trade was not left to be destroyed

---

1st day of May, 1912, and for a period of not less than two years thereafter abstain, from exacting their present class rates for the transportation of traffic from Shreveport, Louisiana, to the points in Texas hereinafter mentioned on their respective lines, as the Commission in said report finds such rates to be unjust and unreasonable.

"It is further ordered, that defendant the Texas & Pacific Railway Company be, and it is hereby, notified and required to establish and put in force, on or before the 1st day of May, 1912, and maintain in force thereafter during a period of not less than two years, and apply to the transportation of traffic from Shreveport, Louisiana, to the below-named points in Texas, class rates which shall not exceed the following, in cents per 100 pounds, which rates are found by the Commission in its report to be reasonable, to wit: (rates inserted).

"It is further ordered that defendants the Houston, East & West Texas Railway Company and Houston & Shreveport Railroad Company be, and they are hereby, notified and required to establish and put in force, on or before the 1st day of May, 1912, and maintain in force thereafter during a period of not less than two years, and apply to the transportation of traffic from Shreveport, Louisiana, to the below-named points in Texas, class rates which shall not exceed the following, in cents per 100 pounds, which rates are found by the Commission in its report to be reasonable, to wit: (rates inserted).

"It is further ordered, that defendant the Texas & Pacific Railway Company be, and it is hereby, notified and required to cease and desist, on or before the 1st day of May, 1912, and for a period of not less than two years thereafter abstain, from exacting any higher rates for the transportation of any article from Shreveport, Louisiana, to Dallas, Texas, and points on its lines intermediate thereto, than are contemporaneously exacted for the transportation of such article from Dallas, Texas, toward said Shreveport for an equal distance, as said relation of rates has been found by the Commission in said report to be reasonable.

"It is further ordered, that defendants the Houston, East & West Texas Railway Company and Houston & Shreveport Railroad Company be, and they are hereby, notified and required to cease and desist, on or before the 1st day of May, 1912, and for a period of not less than two years thereafter abstain, from exacting any higher rates for the transportation of any article from Shreveport, Louisiana, to Houston, Texas, and points on its line intermediate thereto, than are contemporaneously exacted for the transportation of such article from Houston, Texas, toward said Shreveport for an equal distance, as said relation of rates has been found by the Commission in said report to be reasonable.

"And it is further ordered, that said defendants be, and they are hereby, notified and required to establish and put in force, on or before the 1st day of May, 1912, and maintain in force thereafter during a period of not less than two years, substantially similar practices respecting the concentration of interstate cotton at Shreveport, Louisiana, to those which are contemporaneously observed by said defendants respecting the concentration of cotton within the state of Texas, provided the practices adopted shall be justifiable under the act to regulate commerce, and applicable fairly under like conditions elsewhere on the lines of such defendants."

Digitized by Google

or impeded by the rivalries of local government. The purpose was to make impossible the recurrence of the evils which had overwhelmed the Confederation, and to provide the necessary basis of national unity by insuring "uniformity of regulation against conflicting and discriminating state legislation." By virtue of the comprehensive terms of the grant, the authority of Congress is at all times adequate to meet the varying exigencies that arise, and to protect the national interest by securing the freedom of interstate [351] commercial intercourse from local control. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 196, 224, 6 L. ed. 23, 70, 76; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 446, 6 L. ed. 678, 688; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 696, 697, 26 L. ed. 238, 240; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 473, 31 L. ed. 508, 510, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 47, 53, 54, 56 L. ed. 327, 345, 347, 348, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 398, 399, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1540, 1541, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

Congress is empowered to regulate,—that is, to provide the law for the government of interstate commerce; to enact "all appropriate legislation" for its "protection and advancement" (The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 564, 19 L. ed. 999, 1001); to adopt measures "to promote its growth and insure its safety" (Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 696, 697, 26 L. ed. 238–240); "to foster, protect, control, and restrain" (Second Employers' Liability Cases [Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.] 223 U. S. 1, 47, 53, 54, 56 L. ed. 327, 345, 347, 348, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875). Its authority, extending to these interstate carriers as instruments of interstate commerce, necessarily embraces the right to control their operations in all matters having such a close and substantial relation to interstate traffic that the control is essential or appropriate to the security of that traffic, to the efficiency of the interstate service, and to the maintenance of conditions under which interstate commerce may be conducted upon fair terms and without molestation or hindrance. As it is competent for Congress to legislate to these ends, unquestionably it may seek their attainment by requiring that the agencies of interstate commerce shall not be used in such manner as to cripple, retard, or destroy it. The fact that carriers are instruments of intrastate commerce, as well as of interstate commerce, does not derogate from the complete and paramount authority of Congress over the latter, or preclude the Federal power from being exerted to prevent the intrastate operations of such carriers from being made a means of injury to that which has been confided to Federal care. Wherever the interstate and intrastate transactions of carriers are so related that the government of the one involves the control of the other, it is Congress, and not the state, that is entitled to prescribe [352] the final and dominant rule, for otherwise Congress would be denied the exercise of its constitutional authority, and the state, and not the nation, would be supreme within the national field. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 221 U. S. 612, 618, 55 L. ed. 878, 882, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, 26, 27, 56 L. ed. 72, 74, 75, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, 3 N. C. C. A. 822; Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 48, 51, 56 L. ed. 345, 346, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 194, 205, 213, 56 L. ed. 729, 733, 737, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 431, 57 L. ed. 1554, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Behrens, decided April 27, 1914 [233 U. S. 473, ante, 1051, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646].

In Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, supra, the argument against the validity of the hours of service act (March 4, 1907, chap. 2939, 34 Stat. at L. 14, 15, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1321) involved the consideration that the interstate and intrastate transactions of the carriers were so interwoven that it was utterly impracticable for them to divide their employees so that those who were engaged in interstate commerce should be confined to that commerce exclusively. Employees dealing with the movement of trains were employed in both sorts of commerce; but the court held that this fact did not preclude the exercise of Federal power. As Congress could limit the hours of labor of those engaged in interstate transportation, it necessarily followed that its will could not be frustrated by prolonging the period of service through other requirements of the carriers, or by the commingling of duties relating to interstate and intrastate operations. Again, in Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, 26, 27, 56 L. ed. 72, 74, 75, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, 3 N. C. C. A. 822, the question was presented whether the amendment to the safety appliance act (March 2, 1903, 32 Stat. at L. 943, chap. 976, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp.

Digitized by Google

1911, p. 1314) was within the power of Congress in view of the fact that the statute was not confined to vehicles that were used in interstate traffic, but also embraced those used in intrastate traffic. The court answered affirmatively, because there was such a close relation between the two classes of traffic moving over the same railroad as to make it certain that the safety [353] of the interstate traffic, and of those employed in its movement, would be promoted in a real and substantial sense by applying the requirements of the act to both classes of vehicles. So, in the Second Employers' Liability Cases, supra, it was insisted that while Congress had the authority to regulate the liability of a carrier for injuries sustained by one employee through the negligence of another, where all were engaged in interstate commerce, that power did not embrace instances where the negligent employee was engaged in intrastate commerce. The court said that this was a mistaken theory, as the causal negligence, when operating injuriously upon an employee engaged in interstate commerce, had the same effect with respect to that commerce as if the negligent employee were also engaged therein. The decision in Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141, is not opposed, for the statute there in question (June 11, 1906, chap. 3073, 34 Stat. at L. 232, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1316) sought to regulate the liability of interstate carriers for injuries to any employee even though his employment had no connection whatever with interstate commerce. See Illinois C. R. Co. v. Behrens, 233 U. S. 473, ante, 1051, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646.

While these decisions sustaining the Federal power relate to measures adopted in the interest of the safety of persons and property, they illustrate the principle that Congress, in the exercise of its paramount power, may prevent the common instrumentalities of interstate and intrastate commercial intercourse from being used in their intrastate operations to the injury of interstate commerce. This is not to say that Congress possesses the authority to regulate the internal commerce of a state, as such, but that it does possess the power to foster and protect interstate commerce, and to take all measures necessary or appropriate to that end, although intrastate transactions of interstate carriers may thereby be controlled.

This principle is applicable here. We find no reason to doubt that Congress is entitled to keep the highways of [354] interstate communication open to interstate traffic upon fair and equal terms. That an unjust discrimination in the rates of a common carrier, by which one person or locality is unduly favored as against another under substantially similar conditions of traffic, constitutes an evil, is undeniable; and where this evil consists in the action of an interstate carrier in unreasonably discriminating against interstate traffic over its line, the authority of Congress to prevent it is equally clear. It is immaterial, so far as the protecting power of Congress is concerned, that the discrimination arises from intrastate rates as compared with interstate rates. The use of the instrument of interstate commerce in a discriminatory manner so as to inflict injury upon that commerce, or some part thereof, furnishes abundant ground for Federal intervention. Nor can the attempted exercise of state authority alter the matter, where Congress has acted, for a state may not authorize the carrier to do that which Congress is entitled to forbid and has forbidden.

It is to be noted—as the government has well said in its argument in support of the Commission's order—that the power to deal with the relation between the two kinds of rates, as a relation, lies exclusively with Congress. It is manifest that the state cannot fix the relation of the carrier's interstate and intrastate charges without directly interfering with the former, unless it simply follows the standard set by Federal authority. This question was presented with respect to the long and short haul provision of the Kentucky Constitution, adopted in 1891, which the court had before it in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277. The state court had construed this provision as embracing a long haul, from a place outside to one within the state, and a shorter haul on the same line and in the same direction between points within the state. This court held that, so construed, the provision was invalid as being a regulation of interstate commerce [355] because "it linked the interstate rate to the rate for the shorter haul, and thus the interstate charge was directly controlled by the state law." See 230 U. S. pp. 428, 429. It is for Congress to supply the needed correction where the relation between intrastate and interstate rates presents the evil to be corrected, and this it may do completely, by reason of its control over the interstate carrier in all matters having such a close and substantial relation to interstate commerce that it is necessary or appropriate to exercise the control for the effective government of that commerce.

It is also clear that, in removing the injurious discriminations against interstate traffic arising from the relation of intrastate to interstate rates, Congress is not bound to reduce the latter below what it may deem to be a proper standard, fair to the carrier and to the public. Otherwise, it could prevent the injury to interstate commerce only by the sacrifice of its judgment as to interstate rates. Congress is entitled to maintain its own standard as to these rates, and to forbid any discriminatory action by interstate carriers which will obstruct the freedom of movement of interstate traffic over their lines in accordance with the terms it establishes.

Digitized by Google

Having this power, Congress could provide for its execution through the aid of a subordinate body; and we conclude that the order of the Commission now in question cannot be held invalid upon the ground that it exceeded the authority which Congress could lawfully confer.

Second. The remaining question is with regard to the scope of the power which Congress has granted to the Commission.

Section 3 of the act to regulate commerce provides (24 Stat. at L. 379, 380, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3154, 3155):

"Sec. 3. That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act to make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to [356] any particular person, company, firm, corporation, or locality, or any particular description of traffic, in any respect whatsoever, or to subject any particular person, company, firm, corporation, or locality, or any particular description of traffic, to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever."

This language is certainly sweeping enough to embrace all the discriminations of the sort described which it was within the power of Congress to condemn. There is no exception or qualification with respect to an unreasonable discrimination against interstate traffic produced by the relation of intrastate to interstate rates as maintained by the carrier. It is apparent from the legislative history of the act that the evil of discrimination was the principal thing aimed at, and there is no basis for the contention that Congress intended to exempt any discriminatory action or practice of interstate carriers affecting interstate commerce which it had authority to reach. The purpose of the measure was thus emphatically stated in the elaborate report of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce which accompanied it: "The provisions of the bill are based upon the theory that the paramount evil chargeable against the operation of the transportation system of the United States as now conducted is unjust discrimination between persons, places, commodities, or particular descriptions of traffic, The underlying purpose and aim of the measure is the prevention of these discriminations" (Senate Report No. 46, 49th Cong. 1st Sess. p. 215).

The opposing argument rests upon the proviso in the 1st section of the act which, in its original form, was as follows: "Provided, however, that the provisions of this act shall not apply to the transportation of passengers or property, or to the receiving, delivering, storage, or handling of property, wholly within one state, and not shipped to or from a foreign country from or to any state or territory [357] as aforesaid." When the act was amended so as to confer upon the Commission the authority to prescribe maximum interstate rates, this proviso was re-enacted; and when the act was extended to include telegraph, telephone, and cable companies engaged in interstate business, an additional clause was inserted so as to exclude intrastate messages. See acts of June 20, 1906, chap. 3591, 34 Stat. at L. 584; June 18, 1910, chap. 309, 36 Stat. at L. 539, 545, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288.

Congress thus defined the scope of its regulation, and provided that it was not to extend to purely intrastate traffic. It did not undertake to authorize the Commission to prescribe intrastate rates, and thus to establish a unified control by the exercise of the rate-making power over both descriptions of traffic. Undoubtedly—in the absence of a finding by the Commission of unjust discrimination—intrastate rates were left to be fixed by the carrier, and subject to the authority of the states, or of the agencies created by the states. This was the question recently decided by this court in the Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729. There, the state of Minnesota had established reasonable rates for intrastate transportation throughout the state, and it was contended that, by reason of the passage of the act to regulate commerce, the state could no longer exercise the state-wide authority for this purpose which it had formerly enjoyed; and the court was asked to hold that an entire scheme of intrastate rates, otherwise validly established, was null and void because of its effect upon interstate rates. There had been no finding by the Interstate Commerce Commission of any unjust discrimination. The present question, however, was reserved, the court saying (230 U. S. p. 419): "It is urged, however, that the words of the proviso" (referring to the proviso above-mentioned) "are susceptible of a construction which would permit the provisions of § 3 of the act, prohibiting carriers from giving an undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any locality, to apply to unreasonable discriminations [358] between localities in different states, as well when arising from an intrastate rate as compared with an interstate rate as when due to interstate rates exclusively. If it be assumed that the statute should be so construed, and it is not necessary now to decide the point, it would inevitably follow that the controlling principle governing the enforcement of the act should be applied t. such cases as might thereby be brought within its purview; and the question whether the carrier, in such a case, was giving an undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to one locality as against another, or subjecting any locality to an undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage, would be primarily for the investigation and determination of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and not for the courts."

Digitized by Google

Here, the Commission expressly found that unjust discrimination existed under substantially similar conditions of transportation, and the inquiry is whether the Commission had power to correct it. We are of the opinion that the limitation of the proviso in § 1 does not apply to a case of this sort. The Commission was dealing with the relation of rates injuriously affecting, through an unreasonable discrimination, traffic that was interstate. The question was thus not simply one of transportation that was "wholly within one state." These words of the proviso have appropriate reference to exclusively intrastate traffic, separately considered; to the regulation of domestic commerce, as such. The powers conferred by the act are not thereby limited where interstate commerce itself is involved. This is plainly the case when the Commission finds that unjust discrimination against interstate trade arises from the relation of intrastate to interstate rates as maintained by a carrier subject to the act. Such a matter is one with which Congress alone is competent to deal, and, in view of the aim of the act and the comprehensive terms of the provisions against unjust discrimination, [359] there is no ground for holding that the authority of Congress was unexercised, and that the subject was thus left without governmental regulation. It is urged that the practical construction of the statute has been the other way. But, in assailing the order, the appellants ask us to override the construction which has been given to the statute by the authority charged with its execution, and it cannot be said that the earlier action of the Commission was of such a controlling character as to preclude it from giving effect to the law. The Commission, having before it a plain case of unreasonable discrimination on the part of interstate carriers against interstate trade, carefully examined the question of its authority, and decided that it had the power to make this remedial order. The commerce court sustained the authority of the Commission, and it is clear that we should not reverse the decree unless the law has been misapplied. This we cannot say; on the contrary, we are convinced that the authority of the Commission was adequate.

The further objection is made that the prohibition of § 3 is directed against unjust discrimination or undue preference only when it arises from the voluntary act of the carrier, and does not relate to acts which are the result of conditions wholly beyond its control. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 18, 45 L. ed. 719, 725, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516. The reference is not to any inherent lack of control arising out of traffic conditions, but to the requirements of the local authorities, which are assumed to be binding upon the carriers. The contention is thus merely a repetition in another form of the argument that the Commission exceeded its power; for it would not be contended that local rules could nullify the lawful exercise of Federal authority. In the view that the Commission was entitled to make the order, there is no longer compulsion upon the carriers by virtue of any inconsistent local requirement. We are not unmindful of the gravity of the [360] question that is presented when state and Federal views conflict. But it was recognized at the beginning that the nation could not prosper if interstate and foreign trade were governed by many masters, and, where the interests of the freedom of interstate commerce are involved, the judgment of Congress and of the agencies it lawfully establishes must control.

In conclusion: Reading the order in the light of the report of the Commission, it does not appear that the Commission attempted to require the carriers to reduce their interstate rates out of Shreveport below what was found to be a reasonable charge for that service. So far as these interstate rates conformed to what was found to be reasonable by the Commission, the carriers are entitled to maintain them, and they are free to comply with the order by so adjusting the other rates, to which the order relates, as to remove the for-bidden discrimination. But this result they are required to accomplish.

Digitized by Google

The decree of the Commerce Court is affirmed in each case.

Affirmed.

Mr. Justice Lurton and Mr. Justice Pitney dissent.

CITIZENS BANKING COMPANY
v.
RAVENNA NATIONAL BANK OF RAVENNA, OHIO, and Cora M. Curtis.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 360–369.)

Bankruptcy — acts of — preference through legal proceedings — discharge.

1. The failure of an insolvent judgment debtor for a period one day less than four months after the levy of an execution upon his real estate to vacate or discharge such levy is not a "final disposition" of the property affected by the levy, within the meaning of the provisions of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418), § 3a (3), declaring that acts of bankruptcy by a person shall consist of his having, inter alia, suffered or permitted, while insolvent, any creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings, and not having at least five days before a sale or final disposition of any property affected by such preference, vacated or discharged the preference.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — acts of — preference through legal proceedings — discharge.

2. An insolvent debtor cannot be said to have committed an act of bankruptcy rendering him subject to involuntary adjudication as a bankrupt under the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898, merely by inaction for the period of four months after the levy of an execution upon his real estate, in view of the declaration of § 3a (3) of such act, that a person commits an act of bankruptcy when he has, inter alia, suffered or permitted, while insolvent, any creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings, and not having, at least five days before a sale or final disposition of any property affected by such preference, vacated or discharged the preference, which manifestly means that to avoid an act of bankruptcy it will be sufficient if the lien is lifted five days before final sale or disposition of any of the property affected, such meaning not being disturbed by the provisions of § 3b, dealing with and limiting to four months after the act of bankruptcy the time for filing petitions in bankruptcy, and §§ 67c and 67f, dealing with the retrospective effect of adjudications in bankruptcy.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 288.]

Argued March 16, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, presenting questions as to whether an insolvent judgment debtor commits an act of bankruptcy by mere inaction for four months after the levy of an execution on his real estate. Answered in the negative.

See same case below, 121 C. C. A. 250, 202 Fed. 892.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. G. Ray Craig argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Edward H. Rhoades, Jr., and John D. Rhoades, filed a brief for the Citizens Banking Company:

To dispose of property means to exercise finally one's power of control over it; to pass it over into the control of another; to part with it; and finally to get rid of it. The words "final disposition," as used by the Congress, mean a disposition which is no less final than an actual sale of the property; the mere continued existence of a judgment lien upon real estate for a period of four months is no such "final disposition."

"Final," Bouvier's Law Dict. 1897 ed.; "Final," Standard Dict.; "Dispose," Anderson, Law Dict. 365; 14 Cyc. 516, 517; Re Heller, 9 Fed. 373; Re Brightman, 14 Blatchf. 130, Fed. Cas. No. 1,878; Colcord v. Fletcher, 50 Me. 401; Ex parte Russell, 13 Wall. 664, 667, 20 L. ed. 632, 633; 3 Words & Phrases, 2798.

No person can be adjudged a bankrupt for any acts except those specifically enumerated in the bankruptcy statute. This has always been the rule under this act as well as the former acts of bankruptcy.

Re Truitt, 203 Fed. 550; Wilson v. City Bank, 17 Wall. 473, 21 L. ed. 723.

It is true, as pointed out by this court in Wilson Bros. v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 191, 46 L. ed. 147, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74, that the bankruptcy law of 1898 differs from that of 1867 in that the intent of the debtor is not now an essential fact in establishing this ground of bankruptcy, but, as pointed out in Re Truitt, 203 Fed. 557, nothing which was said in the case of Wilson Bros. v. Nelson in any way modifies the general rule of construction laid down in Wilson v. City Bank to the effect that, a proceeding in involuntary bankruptcy being against common right, all substantial doubts must be resolved in favor of the debtor.

Digitized by Google

An insolvent debtor does not commit an act of bankruptcy merely by inaction for a period of four months after the levy of an execution upon his real estate.

Re Empire Metallic Bedstead Co. 39 C. C. A. 372, 98 Fed. 982; Re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 815; Bogen v. Protter, 64 C. C. A. 63, 129 Fed. 533; Re Vastbinder, 126 Fed. 417; Re Windt, 177 Fed. 584.

A consummation of the act of bankruptcy under § 3 of the bankruptcy act of 1898 is not the date of an actual sale of the bankrupt's property under an execution, but the act of bankruptcy is completed five days before the day of such sale, if at that time the bankrupt fails to dissolve the levy.

Re National Hotel & Café Co. 138 Fed. 947.

A petition in bankruptcy which alleges, among other things, that an attachment has been made in a legal proceeding and levied on the debtor's property, without any allegation as to the disposition thereof, is sufficient.

Re Vetterman, 135 Fed. 443; Seaboard Steel Casting Co. v. William R. Trigg Co. 124 Fed. 76.

When a respondent's conduct is considerably analogous to some of the statutory acts of bankruptcy, but is not fairly covered by any statutory definition, such a respondent will not be adjudged a bankrupt.

Re Baker-Ricketson Co. 97 Fed. 489.

Where Congress makes a plain provision, without making any exception, the courts can make none.

French v. Spencer, 21 How. 228, 16 L. ed. 97; Yturbide v. United States, 22 How. 290, 16 L. ed. 342.

Where the meaning of a statute is plain, it is the duty of the courts to enforce it according to its obvious terms. In such case there is no necessity for construction.

Thornley v. United States, 113 U. S. 310, 28 L. ed. 999, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Doe ex dem. Poor v. Considine, 6 Wall. 458, 18 L. ed. 869.

Mr. A. T. Brewer argued the cause and filed a brief for the Ravenna National Bank:

The failure by an insolvent judgment debtor for a period of one day less than four months after the levy of an execution upon his real estate, to vacate or discharge such levy, is a "final disposition of the property" affected by the levy, under the provisions of § 3a (3) of the bankruptcy act of 1898, making the debtor subject to involuntary adjudication as a bankrupt under such § 3a (3), and it is not essential that the debtor shall do anything at all.

Wilson Bros. v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 191, 46 L. ed. 147, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Bogen v. Protter, 64 C. C. A. 63, 129 Fed. 533; Folger v. Putnam, 114 C. C. A. 513, 194 Fed. 793; Re Tupper, 163 Fed. 766; Re McCartney, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

Upon a petition filed in the district court for the northern district of Ohio by one of her creditors, Cora M. Curtis was adjudged a bankrupt. In addition to matters not requiring notice, the petition charged that within four months next preceding its filing the respondent committed an act of bankruptcy, in that (a), while insolvent, she suffered and permitted the Citizens Banking Company to recover a judgment against her for $1,598.78 and costs, in the common pleas court of Erie county, Ohio, and to have an execution issued under the judgment and levied on real estate belonging to her, whereby the company obtained a preference over her other creditors, and (b) at the time of the filing of the petition, which was one day less than four months after the levy of the execution, she had not vacated or discharged the levy and resulting preference.

The company appeared in the bankruptcy proceedings and challenged the petition on the ground that it disclosed no act of bankruptcy, but the court, deeming that such an act was charged, overruled the objection, and, there being no denial of the facts stated in the petition, adjudged the respondent a bankrupt. The company appealed to the circuit court of appeals, and that court, having briefly reviewed the opposing views touching the point in controversy (121 C. C. A. 250, 202 Fed. 892), certified the case here, with a request that instruction be given on the following questions:

"(1) Whether the failure by an insolvent judgment [364] debtor, and for a period of one day less than four months after the levy of an execution upon his real estate, to vacate or discharge such levy, is a 'final disposition of the property' affected by the levy, under the provisions of § 3a (3) of the bankruptcy act of 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 546, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3422].

"(2) Whether an insolvent debtor commits an act of bankruptcy, rendering him subject to involuntary adjudication as a bankrupt under the bankruptcy act of 1898, merely by inaction for the period of four months after the levy of an execution upon his real estate."

It will be observed that no reference is made to an accomplished or impending disposal of the property in virtue of the levy, although the mode of disposal prescribed by the local law is by advertisement and sale. 2 Bates's Anno. Stat. (Ohio) §§ 5381, 5393.

Digitized by Google

The answers to the questions propounded turn upon the true construction of § 3a (3) of the bankruptcy act, which declares:

"Acts of bankruptcy by a person shall consist of his having . . . (3) suffered or permitted, while insolvent, any creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings, and not having at least five days before a sale or final disposition of any property affected by such preference vacated or discharged such preference." 30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418.

Looking at the terms of this provision, it is manifest that the act of bankruptcy which it defines consists of three elements. The first is the insolvency of the debtor; the second is suffering or permitting a creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings; that is, to acquire a lien upon property of the debtor by means of a judgment, attachment, execution, or kindred proceeding, the enforcement of which will enable the creditor to collect a greater percentage of his claim than other creditors of the same class; and the third is the failure of the debtor to vacate or discharge the lien and resulting preference five days [365] before a sale or final disposition of any property affected. Only through the combination of the three elements is the act of bankruptcy committed. Insolvency alone does not suffice, nor is it enough that it be coupled with suffering or permitting a creditor to obtain a preference by legal proceedings. The third element must also be present, else there is no act of bankruptcy within the meaning of this provision. All this is freely conceded by counsel for the petitioning creditor.

The questions propounded assume the existence of the first two elements, and are intended to elicit instruction respecting the proper interpretation of the clause describing the third; namely, "and not having, at least five days before a sale or final disposition of any property affected by such preference, vacated or discharged such preference." It is to this point that counsel have addressed their arguments.

Without any doubt this clause shows that the debtor is to have until five days before an approaching or impending event within which to vacate or discharge the lien out of which the preference arises. What, then, is the event which he is required to anticipate? The statute answers, "a sale or final disposition of any property affected by such preference." As these words are part of a provision dealing with liens obtained through legal proceedings, and as the enforcement of such a lien usually consists in selling some or all of the property affected, and applying the proceeds to the creditor's demand, it seems quite plain that it is to such a sale that the clause refers. And as there are instances in which the property affected does not require to be sold, as when it is money seized upon execution or attachment, or reached by garnishment,† it seems equally [366] plain that the words "or final disposition" are intended to include the act whereby the debtor's title is passed to another when a sale is not required. No doubt, the terms "sale or final disposition," explained as they are by the context, are comprehensive of every act of disposal, whether by sale or otherwise, which operates as an enforcement of the lien or preference.

But we do not perceive anything in the clause which suggests that the time when the lien is obtained has any bearing upon when the property must be freed from it to avoid an act of bankruptcy. On the contrary, the natural and plain import of the language employed is that it will suffice if the lien is lifted five days before a sale or final disposition of any of the property affected. This is the only point of time that is mentioned, and the implication is that it is intended to be controlling.

To enforce a different conclusion counsel for the petitioning creditor virtually contends that the clause has the same meaning as if it read, "and having failed to vacate or discharge the preference at least five days before a sale or final disposition of any of the property affected, or, at most, not later than five days before the expiration of four months after the lien was obtained." But we think such a meaning cannot be ascribed to it without rewriting it, and that we cannot do. The contention puts into it an alternative which is not there, either in terms or by fair implication, and to which Congress has not given assent. Indeed, it appears that in the early stages of its enactment the bankruptcy bill contained a provision giving the same effect to a failure to discharge the lien within a prescribed period after it attached as to a failure to discharge it within a designated number of days before an intended sale; and that during the final consideration of the bill that provision was eliminated and the one now before us was adopted. This, of course, lends strength to the implication otherwise arising that the clause names the sole test of [367] when the lien must be vacated or discharged to avoid an act of bankruptcy.

†See Turner v. Fendall, 1 Cranch, 117, 133, 2 L. ed. 53, 59; Sheldon v. Root, 16 Pick. 567, 28 Am. Dec. 266; Crane v. Freese, 16 N. J. L. 305; Green v. Palmer, 15 Cal. 411, 418, 76 Am. Dec. 492; 2 Bates's Anno. Stat. (Ohio) §§ 5374, 5383, 5469, 5470, 5483, 5531, 5548, 5555.

Digitized by Google

The contention to the contrary is sought to be sustained by a reference to §§ 3b, 67c, and 67f. But we perceive nothing in those sections to disturb the plain meaning of § 3a (3). It defines a particular act of bankruptcy, and purports to be complete in itself, as do other subsections defining other acts of bankruptcy. Section 3b deals with the time for filing petitions in bankruptcy and limits it to four months after the act of bankruptcy is committed. It says nothing about what constitutes an act of bankruptcy, but treats that as elsewhere adequately defined. Sections 67c and 67f deal with the retrospective effect of adjudications in bankruptcy, the former declaring that certain liens obtained in suits begun within four months before the filing of the petition shall be dissolved by the adjudication, and the latter that certain levies, judgments, attachments, and other liens obtained through legal proceedings within the same period shall become null and void upon the adjudication. Both assume that the adjudication will be grounded upon a sufficient act of bankruptcy, as elsewhere defined, and give to every adjudication the same effect upon the liens described, whether it be grounded upon one act of bankruptcy or another. And what is more in point, there is no conflict between § 3a (3) and the sections indicated. All can be given full effect according to their natural import without any semblance of interference between § 3a (3) and the others.

But it is said that unless § 3a (3) be held to require the extinguishment of the lien before the expiration of four months from the time it was obtained the result will be that in some instances the lien will not be dissolved or rendered null through the operation of §§ 67c and 67f, because occasionally the full four months will intervene before an act of bankruptcy is committed, and therefore before a petition can be filed. Conceding that this is so, [368] it proves nothing more than what is true of all liens obtained through legal proceedings more than four months prior to the filing of the petition. And while it may be true, as is suggested, that if the debtor is not restricted to less than four months within which to extinguish the lien there will be instances in which general creditors will be affected disadvantageously, it must be reflected that there also will be instances in which an honest and struggling debtor will be able to extinguish the lien the requisite number of days before a sale or final disposition of any of the property affected, and thereby to avoid bankruptcy, without injury to any of his creditors. But with this we are not concerned. The advantages and disadvantages have been balanced by Congress, and its will has been expressed in terms which are plain and therefore controlling.

Lastly, it is said that the term "final disposition" is not used in the sense hereinbefore indicated, but as denoting the status which a lien acquires through the lapse of four months before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy. This is practically a reiteration of the contention already noticed, but probably is intended to present it from a different angle. It overlooks, as we think, the influence which rightly must be given to the context, and also the manifest inaptness of the term to express the thought suggested. When one speaks of a sale or final disposition of property, he means by final disposition an act having substantially the effect of a sale,—a transfer of ownership and control from one to another,—and especially is this true when he is referring to a sale or final disposition in the enforcement of a lien. We regard it as entirely clear that the term is so used in this instance, and that it signifies an affirmative act of disposal, not a mere lapse of time which leaves the lien intact and still requiring enforcement. To illustrate, let us take the instance of a provisional attachment of real property, which the creditor is not entitled to enforce unless he sustains the demand which is the subject [369] of the principal suit; and let us suppose that the debtor defends against the demand, and that the suit is pending and undetermined four months after the levy. Of course, an adjudication in bankruptcy upon a petition filed thereafter would not disturb the attachment. But could it be said that the property attached was finally disposed of at the end of the four months? An affirmative answer seems quite inadmissible.

We conclude that both of the questions propounded by the circuit court of appeals should be resolved in the negative.

As shown by the reported cases, some diversity of opinion has arisen in other Federal courts in disposing of similar questions (Re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812, 815; Re Vastbinder, 126 Fed. 417, 420; Re Tupper, 163 Fed. 766, 770; Re Windt, 177 Fed. 584, 586; Re Crafts-Riordon Shoe Co. 185 Fed. 931, 934; Folger v. Putnam, 114 C. C. A. 513, 194 Fed. 793, 797; Re Truitt, 203 Fed. 550, 554), and so we deem it well to observe that the conclusion here stated has been reached only after full consideration of those cases.

Questions answered "No."

Digitized by Google

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 369–380.)

Federal courts — territorial jurisdiction — suits to remove cloud on title.

1. Suits to remove clouds on title, when founded upon the remedial statutes of the several states, as well as when resting upon established usages and practices in equity, are embraced by the provision of the Judicial Code, § 57, which authorizes the exercise of jurisdiction by Federal district courts over nonresident defendants, in suits to enforce any legal or equitable lien upon, or claim to, or to remove any encumbrance or lien or cloud upon the title to, real or personal property within the district where such suit is brought.

[For other cases, see Courts, V. c, 7, a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — territorial jurisdiction — suits to remove cloud on title.

2. A suit by a Kentucky railway company seeking to annul judgments of special courts of eminent domain, purporting to condemn portions of its right of way in the state of Mississippi for the use of a New York telegraph company, upon the ground that they are clearly invalid under the local law, and operate to becloud the railway company's title, is a suit to remove a "cloud upon the title," within the meaning of the Judicial Code, § 57, authorizing the exercise of jurisdiction by Federal district courts as to the property of nonresident defendants, and is therefore justiciable in the Federal district court of the district wherein the property is located, even though the judgments are void upon their face, if the attack upon them in the bill is well founded, where, under the local law as construed by the state courts, the rightful owner of real property within the state may maintain a suit to dispel a cloud cast upon his title by an invalid deed or other instrument, even though it be one which, when tested by applicable legal principles, is void upon its face, and may challenge the judgment of a special court of eminent domain by a bill in equity, upon the ground that the condemnation is not for a public use, which is one of the grounds upon which the judgments are challenged in the present case.

[For other cases, see Courts, V. c, 7, a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 337.]

Argued March 20, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Mississippi to review a decree which dismissed the bill in a suit to annul judgments in eminent domain proceedings, as amounting to clouds on title. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Gregory L. Smith argued the cause, and, with Mr. Henry L. Stone, filed a brief for appellant:

The judgments complained of operate to subject complainant's right of way to the use of defendant, and the only way of testing their validity is by a bill in equity, such as that filed in this case.

Vinegar Bend Lumber Co. v. Oak Grove & G. R. Co. 89 Miss. 84, 43 So. 292.

When the suit is between citizens of different states, and is to establish a claim to, or to remove encumbrances or clouds from, property, it is properly brought in the United States judicial district where the property is situated.

Dick v. Foraker, 155 U. S. 404, 39 L. ed. 201, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Jellenik v. Huron Copper Min. Co. 177 U. S. 9, 44 L. ed. 650, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559.

Every right to or interest in land, granted to the diminution of the value of the land, but consistent with the passage of the fee of it by a conveyance, is an encumbrance upon the land.

Farrington v. Tourtelott, 39 Fed. 739; Oman v. Bedford-Bowling Green Stone Co. 67 C. C. A. 190, 134 Fed. 65; 4 Words & Phrases, pp. 3519, 3522.

The general, but not universal, rule, is that equity will not entertain a bill to cancel, as a cloud upon the title to real estate, an instrument void on its face. In some jurisdictions the rule does not apply to cases where it requires legal learning and acumen to determine whether the instrument is valid or void upon its face.

Merchants' Bank v. Evans, 51 Mo. 335; Polliham v. Reveley, 181 Mo. 622, 81 S. W. 182; Center Creek Min. Co. v. Coyne, 164 Mo. App. 492, 147 S. W. 148; Perkins v. Baer, 95 Mo. App. 70, 68 S. W. 939; Verdin v. St. Louis, 131 Mo. 26, 33 S. W. 480, 36 S. W. 52.

In other jurisdictions the rule is repudiated entirely.

Scofield v. Lansing, 17 Mich. 437; Day Land & Cattle Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526, 4 S. W. 865; 3 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1399.

In other jurisdictions, the rule is changed by statute, and this is true of the state of Mississippi.

Bogert v. Elizabeth, 27 N. J. Eq. 568;

NOTE.—On the effect of state statutes on Federal jurisdiction of suit to remove cloud on title—see note to Whitehouse v. Jones, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 57.

On the adoption by Federal courts of remedies created by state statutes—see note to Leighton v. Young, 18 L.R.A. 266.

On proper Federal district for suit—see note to Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

Digitized by Google

Cook v. Friley, 61 Miss. 1; People's Bank v. West, 67 Miss. 729, 8 L.R.A. 727, 7 So. 516; Hurley v. Mississippi Levee Comrs. 76 Miss. 141, 23 So. 580; Gambrell Lumber Co. v. Saratoga Lumber Co. 87 Miss. 773, 40 So. 485.

Where the statute of the state authorizes the cancelation of an instrument void on its face, the Federal courts will enforce the right so given.

Reynolds v. First Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 405, 28 L. ed. 733, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Cowley v. Northern P. R. Co. 159 U. S. 583, 40 L. ed. 267, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 333, 50 L. ed. 1053, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Chapman v. Brewer, 114 U. S. 158, 29 L. ed. 83, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; More v. Steinbach, 127 U. S. 70, 32 L. ed. 51, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1067.

Upon a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, the court will only consider the relief sought, and not whether the allegations of the bill entitled the complainant to such relief.

Citizens' Sav. & T. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 205 U. S. 46, 51 L. ed. 703, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Western Loan & Sav. Co. v. Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co. 210 U. S. 368, 52 L. ed. 1101, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; Texas Co. v. Central Fuel Oil Co. 114 C. C. A. 21, 194 Fed. 9.

Where one to whom the power of eminent domain has been delegated threatens to make a permanent appropriation of property in excess of the power granted, or without complying with the conditions upon which the power is granted, a court of equity will prevent the threatened wrong, without regard to the question of the irreparable damage.

Hurley v. Mississippi Levee Comrs. 76 Miss. 141, 23 So. 580; Canadian P. R. Co. v. Moosehead Teleph. Co. 106 Me. 363, 29 L.R.A.(N.S.) 703, 76 Atl. 885, 20 Ann. Cas. 721; Hyde v. Minnesota, D. & P. R. Co. 24 S. D. 386, 123 N. W. 849; Spurlock v. Dornan, 182 Mo. 242, 81 S. W. 412.

For the purpose of Federal jurisdiction, the averments of the bill as to the value of the property in controversy will be accepted, unless, upon the face of the bill, the averments are manifestly false, or unless they are tested by proper motion based upon a charge of fraud upon the jurisdiction of the court.

Smithers v. Smith, 204 U. S. 642, 51 L. ed. 660, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.

Mr. Rush Taggart argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. B. Harris and George H. Fearons, filed a brief for appellee:

Section 57 of the Judicial Code of the United States, under which the bill was admittedly drawn, localizing certain actions, restricted those actions to suits to enforce liens upon or claims to property, or to remove encumbrances or liens or clouds upon title; what constitutes clouds upon title has a well settled and defined legal meaning and signification; an instrument void on its face, as shown by the bill of complaint, constitutes no cloud, and in such a case a court of equity has no jurisdiction.

Peirsoll v. Elliott, 6 Pet. 95, 8 L. ed. 332; Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 313, 50 L. ed. 1046, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Phelps v. Harris, 101 U. S. 370, 25 L. ed. 855; Mackall v. Casilear, 137 U. S. 556, 34 L. ed. 776, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178; Lyon v. Alley, 130 U. S. 177, 32 L. ed. 899, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480; Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 15 Wall. 547, 21 L. ed. 231.

There is nothing in the Mississippi cases which indicates any purpose to abrogate or depart from the general rule.

Boyd v. Thornton, 13 Smedes & M. 344; Huntington v. Allen, 44 Miss. 654; Carlisle v. Tindall, 49 Miss. 233; Phelps v. Harris, 51 Miss. 793; Ezelle v. Parker, 41 Miss. 526; Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Neighbors, 51 Miss. 412; Griffin v. Harrison, 52 Miss. 824; Hart v. Bloomfield, 66 Miss. 100, 5 So. 620; Wilkinson v. Hiller, 71 Miss. 678, 14 So. 442; Jones v. Rogers, 85 Miss. 826, 38 So. 742.

Conferring jurisdiction upon the Federal court is one thing, while the Federal court administering certain relief in cases where it has jurisdiction is quite another. The bill in this case cannot be maintained unless it is held that the state statute has enlarged original jurisdiction upon the Federal court to the same extent that the jurisdiction of the state court was enlarged. The Federal court, as such, has jurisdiction of bills to remove clouds from title; that, however, is determined not by any state statute, but by the general rules of equity jurisprudence and Federal statutes. Under the state statute the state court has jurisdiction in cases where the owner of property is out of possession; the Federal court has not (Whitehead v. Shattuck, 138 U. S. 146, 34 L. ed. 873, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276). Under the state statute the state court has jurisdiction of a bill where the adverse claim consists of threats or mere verbal assertions of ownership; the Federal court has not (Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 335, 50 L. ed. 1054, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652). Under the state statute, if claim of counsel is correct, the state court can entertain a bill to cancel as clouds upon title an instrument void upon its face; the Federal court cannot (Ibid.; Peirsoll v. Elliott, 6 Pet. 95, 8 L. ed. 332; Ewing v. St. Louis, 5 Wall. 413, 18 L. ed. 657; Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 15 Wall. 547, 21 L. ed. 231; Phelps v. Harris, 101 U. S. 370, 25 L. ed. 855; Mackall v. Casilear, 137 U. S. 556, 34 L. ed. 776, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178; Lyon v. Alley, 130 U. S. 177, 32 L. ed. 899, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480).

Digitized by Google

[371] Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

By a bill in equity exhibited in the district court, the appellant seeks the annulment of three judgments of special courts of eminent domain in Harrison, Jackson, and Hancock counties, Mississippi, purporting to condemn portions of its right of way in those counties for the use of the appellee. According to the allegations of the bill, when given the effect that must be given to them for present purposes, the case is this: The appellant has a fee-simple title to the land constituting the right of way, and is in possession, and the appellee is asserting a right to subject portions of the right of way to its use under the three judgments recently obtained. The appellant insists, for various reasons fully set forth, that the judgments were procured and rendered in such disregard of applicable local laws as to be clearly invalid, and that they operate to becloud its title. The matter in controversy exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value of $3,000, the right of way is within the district in which the bill was filed, and the appellant and appellee are, respectively, Kentucky and New York corporations. The prayer of the bill is, that the judgments be held null and void and the appellee enjoined from exercising or asserting any right under them. Appearing specially for the purpose, the appellee objected to the district court's jurisdiction, upon the ground that neither of the parties was a resident of that district, and that the suit was not one that could be brought in a district other than that of the residence of one of them without the appellee's consent. The court sustained the objection, dismissed the bill, and allowed this direct appeal under § 238 of the Judicial Code. [36 Stat. at L. 1157, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 228.]

We are only concerned with the jurisdiction of the district court as a Federal court; that is, with its power to entertain the suit under the laws of the United States. [372] Fore River Shipbuilding Co. v. Hagg, 219 U. S. 175, 55 L. ed. 163, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; United States v. Congress Constr. Co. 222 U. S. 199, 56 L. ed. 163, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Chase v. Wetzlar, 225 U. S. 79, 83, 56 L. ed. 990, 991, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 659. Whether, upon the showing in the bill, the appellant is entitled to the relief sought, is not a jurisdictional question in the sense of § 238, and is not before us. Smith v. McKay, 161 U. S. 355, 40 L. ed. 731, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; Citizens' Sav. & T. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 205 U. S. 46, 58, 51 L. ed. 703, 707, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; R. J. Darnell v. Illinois C. R. Co. 225 U. S. 243, 56 L. ed. 1072, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760.

As the matter in controversy is of the requisite value and the parties are citizens of different states, the suit manifestly is within the general class over which the district courts are given jurisdiction by the Judicial Code, § 24, cl. 1 [36 Stat. at L. 1091, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 135]; so the question for decision is whether the suit is cognizable in the particular district court in which it was brought.

In distributing the jurisdiction conferred in general terms upon the district courts, the Code declares, in § 51, that, "except as provided in the six succeeding sections, no civil suit shall be brought in any district court against any person by any original process or proceeding in any other district than that whereof he is an inhabitant; but where the jurisdiction is founded only on the fact that the action is between citizens of different states, suit shall be brought only in the district of the residence of either the plaintiff or the defendant." If this section be applicable to suits which are local in their nature, as well as to such as are transitory (as to which see Casey v. Adams, 102 U. S. 66, 26 L. ed. 52; Greeley v. Lowe, 155 U. S. 58, 39 L. ed. 69, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Ellenwood v. Marietta Chair Co. 158 U. S. 105, 39 L. ed. 913, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771; Kentucky Coal Lands Co. v. Mineral Development Co. 191 Fed. 899, 915), it is clear that the district court in which the suit was brought cannot entertain it, unless one of the six succeeding sections provides otherwise, or the appellee waives its personal privilege of being sued only in the district of its or the appellant's residence. Re Moore, 209 U. S. 490, 52 L. ed. 904, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 706, 14 Ann. Cas. 1164; [373] Western Loan & Sav. Co. v. Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co. 210 U. S. 368, 52 L. ed. 1101, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720.

The appellant relies upon § 57, one of the six succeeding sections, as adequately sustaining the jurisdiction. This section reads as follows:

"When in any suit commenced in any district court of the United States to enforce any legal or equitable lien upon or claim to, or to remove any encumbrance or lien or cloud upon the title to real or personal property within the district where such suit is brought, one or more of the defendants therein shall not be an inhabitant of or found within the said district, or shall not voluntarily appear thereto, it shall be lawful for the court to make an order directing such absent defendant or defendants to appear, plead, answer, or demur by a day certain to be designated, which order shall be served on such absent defendant or defendants, if practicable, wherever found, and also upon the person or persons in possession or charge of said property, if any there be; or where such personal service upon such absent defendant or defendants is not practicable, such order shall be published in such manner as the court may direct, not less than once a week for six consecutive weeks. In case such absent defendants shall not appear, plead, answer, or demur within the time so limited, or within some further time, to be allowed by the court, in its discretion, and upon proof of the service or publication of said order and of the performance of the directions contained in the same, it shall be lawful for the court to entertain jurisdiction, and proceed to the hearing and adjudication of such suit in the same manner as if such absent defendant had been served with process within the said district; but said adjudication shall, as regards said absent defendant or defendants without appearance, affect only the property which shall have been the subject of the suit and under the jurisdiction of the court therein, within such district; and when a part of the said real or personal property [374] against which such proceedings shall be taken shall be within another district, but within the same state, such suit may be brought in either district in said state: Provided, however, That any defendant or defendants not actually personally notified as above provided may, at any time within one year after final judgment in any suit mentioned in this section, enter his appearance in said suit in said district court, and thereupon the said court shall make an order setting aside the judgment therein and permitting said defendant or defendants to plead therein on payment by him or them of such costs as the court shall deem just; and thereupon said suit shall be proceeded with to final judgment according to law."

Digitized by Google

It will be perceived that this section not only plainly contemplates that a suit "to remove any encumbrance, lien, or cloud upon the title to real or personal property" shall be cognizable in the district court of the district wherein the property is located, but expressly provides for notifying the defendant by personal service outside the district, and, if that be impracticable, by publication. The section has been several times considered by this court, and, unless there be merit in an objection yet to be noticed, the decisions leave no doubt of its applicability to the present suit, even though both parties reside outside the district. Greeley v. Lowe, 155 U. S. 58, 39 L. ed. 69, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Dick v. Foraker, 155 U. S. 404, 39 L. ed. 201, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Jellenik v. Huron Copper Min. Co. 177 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 647, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Citizens' Sav. & T. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 205 U. S. 46, 51 L. ed. 703, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Chase v. Wetzlar, 225 U. S. 79, 56 L. ed. 990, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 659.

The appellee, after asserting that each of the judgments is void upon its face if the attack upon it in the bill is well taken, calls attention to the general rule that a bill in equity does not lie to cancel, as a cloud upon title, a conveyance or instrument that is void upon its face, and then insists that § 57 must be regarded as adopted in the light of that rule, and as not intended to displace it, or to embrace a suit brought in opposition to it. The difficulty [375] with this contention is that it seeks to make the usages of courts of equity the sole test of what constitutes a cloud upon title, so as to bring a suit to remove it within the operation of § 57, and disregards the bearing which the state law rightly has upon the question. As long ago as 1839 this court had occasion, in Clark v. Smith, 13 Pet. 195, 10 L. ed. 123, to consider whether a Federal court sitting in the state of Kentucky could entertain a suit to remove a cloud from the title to real property in that state where the right to such relief depended upon a remedial statute of the state; and in the opinion, which fully sustained the jurisdiction, the court pointed out that the nature of the right was such that it could only be enforced in a court of equity, and then said (p. 203): "Kentucky has the undoubted power to regulate and protect individual rights to her soil, and to declare what shall form a cloud on titles; and having so declared, the courts of the United States, by removing such clouds, are only applying an old practice to a new equity created by the legislature. . . . The state legislatures certainly have no authority to prescribe the forms and modes of proceeding in the courts of the United States; but having created a right, and at the same time prescribed the remedy to enforce it, if the remedy prescribed is substantially consistent with the ordinary modes of proceeding on the chancery side of the Federal courts, no reason exists why it should not be pursued in the same form as it is in the state courts; on the contrary, propriety and convenience suggest that the practice should not materially differ, where titles to lands are the subjects of investigation. And such is the constant course of the Federal courts." The principle of that decision has been reaffirmed and applied in many cases, one being Reynolds v. First Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 405, 28 L. ed. 733, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213. It was a suit in the circuit court for the district of Indiana to remove a cloud from title in virtue of a statute of that state, and the objection was interposed that the deed sought to be [376] canceled was void upon its face, and therefore afforded no basis for such a suit in a Federal court. But this court pronounced the objection untenable, saying (p. 410): "While, therefore, the courts of equity may have generally adopted the rule that a deed, void upon its face, does not cast a cloud upon the title which a court of equity would undertake to remove, we may yet look to the legislation of the state in which the court sits to ascertain what constitutes a cloud upon the title, and what the state laws declare to be such, the courts of the United States, sitting in equity, have jurisdiction to remove." Citing Clark v. Smith, supra. See also Cowley v. Northern P. R. Co. 159 U. S. 569, 582, 40 L. ed. 263, 266, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127. There are many state statutes of this type, and our decisions show that their enforcement in the Federal courts is subject to but three restrictions: 1. The case must be within the general class over which those courts are given jurisdiction. 2. A suit in equity does not lie in those courts where there is a plain, adequate, and complete remedy at law. 3. In those courts there can be no commingling of legal and equitable remedies, or substitution of the latter for the former, whereby the constitutional right of trial by jury in actions at law is defeated. Judicial Code, §§ 24 (cl. 1) and 267; Whitehead v. Shattuck, 138 U. S. 146, 152, 156, 34 L. ed. 873, 874, 876, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; Greeley v. Lowe, 155 U. S. 58, 75, 39 L. ed. 69, 75, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 314, 323, 39 L. ed. 167, 172, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129; Lawson v. United States Min. Co. 207 U. S. 1, 9, 52 L. ed. 65, 73, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 15.

Digitized by Google

We conclude that the provision in § 57 of the Judicial Code, respecting suits to remove clouds from title, was intended to embrace, and does embrace, suits of that nature when founded upon the remedial statutes of the several states, as well as when resting upon established usages and practice in equity.

The state of Mississippi has such a statute. Code of 1906, § 550. Although originally more restricted (Hutchinson's Code, p. 773; Rev. Code 1857, p. 541, art. 8), it has read as follows since 1871 (Rev. Code 1871, § 975):

[377] "When a person, not the rightful owner of any real estate, shall have any conveyance or other evidence of title thereto, or shall assert any claim, or pretend to have any right or title thereto, which may cast doubt or suspicion on the title of the real owner, such real owner may file a bill in the chancery court to have such conveyance or other evidence or claim of title canceled, and such cloud, doubt, or suspicion removed from said title, whether such real owner be in possession or not, or be threatened to be disturbed in his possession or not, and whether the defendant be a resident of this state or not."

While we have not been referred to any decision of the supreme court of the state passing directly upon the question whether a conveyance or other evidence of title void upon its face is within the purview of this statute, the decisions of that court brought to our attention show that it has treated the statute as embracing conveyances described as "void," whether the invalidity was shown upon the face of the instrument being left uncertain (Eztelle v. Parker, 41 Miss. 520; Wofford v. Bailey, 57 Miss. 239; Drysdale v. Biloxi Canning Co. 67 Miss. 534, 7 So. 541; Preston v. Banks, 71 Miss. 601, 14 So. 258; Wildberger v. Puckett, 78 Miss. 650, 29 So. 393); and also that it regards the statute as very comprehensive and materially enlarging existing equitable remedies. In Huntington v. Allen, 44 Miss. 654, 662, it was said: "The statute in reference to the removal of clouds from title enlarges the principle upon which courts of equity were accustomed to administer relief. It is very broad, allowing the real owner in all cases to apply for the cancelation of a deed or other evidence of title which casts a cloud or suspicion on his title. . . . The terms used in the statute, expressive of the scope of the jurisdiction, viz., 'cloud,' 'doubt,' 'suspicion,' quite distinctly imply that the instrument which creates them is apparent rather than 'real'; is 'semblance' rather than substance; obscures rather than [378] destroys or defeats." In Cook v. Friley, 61 Miss. 1, 4, it was further said: "The statute . . . not only authorises the real owner to file his bill to cancel a paper title, but also to remove the cloud, doubt, or suspicion which may spring from the assertion of claim, or pretense of right or title thereto by the defendant, who, without any muniment of title, may assert a claim or pretend to have right or title.

Digitized by Google

The purpose was to give the real owner a remedy against one who asserts any claim or pretends to have any right or title to such owner's land, in analogy to the right of action by the canon law for jactitation of marriage. The real owner is entitled to protection against jactitation of title to the disparagement of his real ownership. He may bring into court one who asserts any claim or pretends to have any right or title to his land, and require him to vindicate his claim, or submit to its extinguishment by decree of the court." And in People's Bank v. West, 67 Miss. 729, 740, 8 L.R.A. 727, 7 So. 513, the court concluded its opinion with the statement: "We know of no line by which the jurisdiction of the court is limited other than that prescribed by the law which confers it. When the complainant shows a perfect title, legal or equitable, and the title of the defendant is shown to be invalid, it is, in the nature of things, a cloud upon the title of complainant, and should be canceled."

In view of these decisions, we think the statute must be regarded as entitling the rightful owner of real property in the state to maintain a suit to dispel a cloud cast upon his title by an invalid deed or other instrument, even though it be one which, when tested by applicable legal principles, is void upon its face.

The judgments sought to be canceled as clouds upon the appellant's title were rendered by special courts of eminent domain, each composed of a justice of the peace and a jury. According to the statute controlling such proceedings (Miss. Code 1906, chap. 43) the special court is not [379] permitted to quash or dismiss the proceeding for want of jurisdiction or for any other reason, or to inquire whether the applicant has a right to condemn, or whether the contemplated use is public, but "must proceed with the condemnation" (§§ 1862, 1865, 1866); and, while an appeal lies to the circuit court, a supersedeas is not permitted, and upon the appeal the circuit court is restricted, like the special court, to an ascertainment of the compensation to be paid to the owner (§ 1871). A form of judgment is prescribed, which contains blanks for a description of the property and a recital of the compensation awarded, and then declares: "Now, upon payment of the said award, applicant can enter upon and take possession of the said property, and appropriate it to public use, as prayed for in the application" (§ 1867). An affirmative provision to the same effect also appears in the statute (§ 1868). Considering these statutory provisions and § 17 of the state Constitution, which declares that the question whether the condemnation is for a public use shall be a judicial question, the supreme court of the state holds that "the only question which can be raised in the eminent domain court, and the only jurisdiction confided to it, is the jurisdiction to ascertain the amount of damage sustained by the party whose lands are sought to be taken;" that "a new issue, involving a new question and new pleadings, cannot be raised in the appellate tribunal, that is to say, in the circuit court;" that the owner "may litigate the right to take his property at any time before acceptance of the compensation, or before the waiver of his right to have the question of the use judicially determined;" that "neither the Constitution nor the laws of the state provide any particular tribunal in which this question shall be determined, nor is it a matter of any particular concern in what court the question shall be settled, provided it be determined in that forum which is capable of deciding it," and that the [380] appropriate mode of litigating the question is by a suit in equity challenging the right of the condemnor to enter under the judgment of the court of eminent domain. Vinegar Bend Lumber Co. v. Oak Grove & G. R. Co. 89 Miss. 84, 43 So. 292. Thus it will be perceived that under the law of the state, as declared by its court of last resort, the judgment of a special court of eminent domain may be challenged by a bill in equity upon the ground that the condemnation is not for a public purpose. This being so, and the elements of Federal jurisdiction being present, the litigation may, of course, be had in a Federal court. One of the grounds upon which the judgments are challenged in the present bill is that the condemnation is not for a public purpose. If this ground be well taken, as to which we intimate no opinion, the judgments apparently confer upon the appellee a right in the appellant's right of way to which the appellee is not entitled.

We conclude that the suit is one to remove a cloud from title within the meaning of § 57 of the Judicial Code, and is cognizable in the court below, although neither of the parties resides in that district.

Decree reversed.

SILAS A. GILSON, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 380-384.)

Appeal — review of facts — concurrent findings — testimony before examiner.

The rule that the concurrent findings of two courts upon a question of fact will not be disturbed by the Federal Supreme Court unless clearly shown to be erroneous is none the less applicable because the evidence was taken before an examiner.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases see Appeal and Error, 4931-4959, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 207.]

Submitted May 6, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Washington, in favor of the United States, in a suit to cancel a patent issued on a commutated homestead entry. Affirmed.

See same case below, 107 C. C. A. 584, 185 Fed. 484.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Wade H. Ellis submitted the cause, and Messrs. Ira P. Englehart, Allen S. Davis, and George B. Holden filed a brief for appellant.

Assistant Attorney General Knaebel and Mr. S. W. Williams submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an equity action brought by the United States against appellant to cancel a patent issued to one Daniel [382] Landis for a tract of 120 acres of land in Yakima county, in the state of Washington, afterwards conveyed by Landis to appellant. Landis made a homestead entry in November, 1899, under § 2289 of the Revised Statutes as amended by act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1098, chap. 561, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1388); in November, 1902, he commuted the entry and purchased the land under § 2301 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1406), as amended by the same act; and in July, 1903, he received a patent. Upon the day on which he made the commutation entry he gave a mortgage upon the land to appellant, and from that date ceased to live upon it, and as soon as the patent was issued he made the conveyance to appellant. The grounds of the action were: that Landis did not enter the land in good faith, but for the purpose and with the intent of acquiring title to it for appellant and at his instigation; that the residence and improvements were not sufficient; that the affidavit upon which Landis's original application was allowed was false and fraudulent, in that he did not make the application in good faith for the purpose of actual settlement and cultivation, but made it for the benefit of appellant, with whom the entryman was then acting in collusion for the purpose of giving to appellant the benefit of the entry; that the proof of settlement and cultivation offered in support of the commutation entry was false and fraudulent, in that the entryman had not made settlement in November, 1899, or at any other time; had not built a house, except a partially completed shanty; had not resided on the land, and had not broken 13 acres and cultivated 3 acres, as alleged in his final proofs; and that the statement made in his affidavit that he had not alienated any part of the land was also false, in that he had alienated or agreed to alienate it to appellant.

The trial court found that Landis made the homestead entry at appellant's instigation and for his benefit; that the evidence on which the register and receiver allowed [383] the commutation entry included sworn statements by Landis and two witnesses to the effect that the claimant had lived continuously on the land and made improvements, including a corral and chicken house, and that he had cultivated 3 acres for three seasons; that this was a false statement, there having been no plowing or cultivation except during the third year; that the land was dry sage-brush land, not productive without irrigation; that Landis made only a pretense of settlement and a show of improving the land, in order to satisfy the scruples of the witnesses upon whom he depended to make final proof; and further, that appellant was cognizant of every detail of the transaction from its inception to the issuance of patent, and, indeed, directed the proceedings at every step, and therefore could not claim to be a bona fide purchaser.

The circuit court of appeals concurred in this view of the facts, and therefore sustained the conclusion reached by the trial court that the patent should be canceled, without finding it necessary to consider the question of law, suggested by appellant, that, inasmuch as final proof was not made under § 2291 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1390), but under § 2301 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1406), the fact that the claimant had made an agreement before commutation to convey the land to another would not affect the validity of the title obtained from the United States, because § 2301 prescribes as requisite to commutation, proof only that the entryman has made settlement, cultivation, and residence for fourteen months, and does not require him to make oath that he has not alienated any portion of the land. The decree was affirmed (107 C. C. A. 584, 185 Fed. 484), and the present appeal was taken.

Digitized by Google

Upon the question of fact as to the fraudulent nature of the proof upon which the commutation entry was allowed, we have the concurring findings of two courts, which, according to the settled rule, will not be disturbed by this court unless clearly shown to be erroneous. Stuart v. [384] Hayden, 169 U. S. 1, 14, 42 L. ed. 639, 643, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 274; Towson v. Moore, 173 U. S. 17, 24, 43 L. ed. 597, 600, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 332; Dun v. Lumbermen's Credit Asso. 209 U. S. 20, 23, 52 L. ed. 663, 665, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335, 14 Ann. Cas. 501; Washington Securities Co. v. United States, decided May 25, 1914 [234 U. S. 76, ante, 1220, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725.]

In behalf of appellant it is urged that this rule does not apply where the evidence is taken before an examiner, as was done in this case. The rule, however, is subject to no such exception; indeed, prior to the adoption of the new Equity Rules (226 U. S. 13, Appx. 57 L. ed. 1645, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. xxxi., Rule 46), the evidence in equity actions was usually taken before a master or examiner. And in Texas & P. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 232 U. S. 338, ante, 630, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 438, where the findings of the special master who heard the testimony were set aside by the circuit court, and the conclusions of that court were concurred in by the circuit court of appeals, we deemed the case a proper one for applying the general rule.

In the present case, not only does the argument submitted in behalf of appellant fail to show clear ground for disturbing the concurring findings of the two courts, but it raises no reasonable doubt of their correctness.

This renders it unnecessary to deal with the question raised as to the effect of an agreement for alienation made after entry and before commutation. However, it is settled adversely to the contention of appellant by our recent decision in Bailey v. Sanders, 228 U. S. 603, 608, 57 L. ed. 985, 988, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 602.

Decree affirmed.

[385] HENRY J. GRANNIS, Plff. in Err.,
v.
ALBERT L. ORDEAN, Margaret Sullivan, Alfred Jaques, Theodore T. Hudson, et al. (No. 325.)

HENRY J. GRANNIS, Plff. in Err.,
v.
ROBERT B. WHITESIDE, Margaret Sullivan, Alfred Jaques, Theodore T. Hudson, et al. (No. 326.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 385-398.)

Error to state court — Federal question — raising on rehearing.

1. A Federal right is raised in the state courts in such a manner as to support a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to the highest state court, although such right was first clearly asserted in the latter court in a petition for reargument, where such Federal right was first denied, if at all, by the decision of the highest state court, and that court entertained the petition for reargument, and considered and overruled the contention that the petitioner's Federal rights were infringed, declaring that its decision was to be interpreted as holding against such contention, and therefore refused the reargument.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1292-1310, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — service of process on nonresident — misnomer.

2. Service by publication and mailing of a summons in a partition suit, conformably to the local law with respect to constructive service of nonresidents, naming as party defendant and addressee, "Albert Guilfuss, assignee," and "Albert B. Guilfuss," satisfied

---

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

As to when Federal question is raised in time to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over state courts—see note to Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 49 L. ed. U. S. 414.

As to what service of process is sufficient to constitute due process of law—see note to Pinney v. Providence Loan & Invest. Co. 50 L.R.A. 577.

Digitized by Google

the requirement of the due process of law clause of U. S. Const., 14th Amendment, conferring jurisdiction, notwithstanding the misnomer, to render a judgment binding upon "Albert B. Geilfuss, assignee," with respect to his lien upon, or interest in, the land, he not having appeared.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 698-719; Judgment, 231-243, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 325, 326.]

Argued April 27 and 28, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

TWO WRITS of Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review judgments which reversed judgments of the District Court for St. Louis County, in that state, in actions to determine adverse claims to real property, in so far as the defendant was adjudged to be the owner of an undivided interest therein. Affirmed.[1]

See same case below, 118 Minn. 117, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 136 N. W. 575, 1026.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Henry J. Grannis and Frederic D. McKenney argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The Federal question was properly presented to and passed upon by the state court, so as to support the jurisdiction of this court, to review the judgment of the state court.

Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 45 L. ed. 1015, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 241; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 530, 46 L. ed. 673, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Leigh v. Green, 193 U. S. 79, 48 L. ed. 623, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; McKay v. Kelyton, 204 U. S. 458, 51 L. ed. 566, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Sullivan v. Texas, 207 U. S. 416, 52 L. ed. 274, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 215; Disconto Gesellschaft v. Umbreit, 208 U. S. 570, 52 L. ed. 625, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 218 U. S. 551, 54 L. ed. 1147, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Kentucky Union Co. v. Kentucky, 219 U. S. 140, 55 L. ed. 137, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171.

The lien of this judgment could not be controlled or cut off, without notice to the record owner thereof.

Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 53 L. ed. 97, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Jacob v. Roberts, 223 U. S. 261, 56 L. ed. 429, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 23 L. ed. 914.

This court will decide for itself whether there has been such notice as to constitute due process.

Central R. Co. v. Wright, 207 U. S. 127, 52 L. ed. 134, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47, 12 Ann. Cas. 463; Ballard v. Hunter, 204 U. S. 241, 260, 51 L. ed. 461, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Marx v. Hanthorn, 148 U. S. 172, 37 L. ed. 410, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 44 L. ed. 520, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Jacob v. Roberts, 223 U. S. 261, 56 L. ed. 429, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. 223 U. S. 573, 591, 56 L. ed. 556, 565, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316; Creswill v. Grand Lodge, K. P. 225 U. S. 246, 261, 56 L. ed. 1074, 1080, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Southern P. Co. v. Schuyler, 227 U. S. 601, 611, 57 L. ed. 662, 669, 43 L.R.A. (N.S.) 901, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Miedreich v. Lauenstein, 232 U. S. 236, ante, 584, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309.

Service of process by publication is a purely statutory proceeding, in derogation of the common law, and strict compliance with the statutory authorization is necessary.

Barber v. Morris, 37 Minn. 194, 5 Am. St. Rep. 836, 33 N. W. 559; Brown v. St. Paul & N. P. R. Co. 38 Minn. 506, 38 N. W. 698; Gilmore v. Lampman, 86 Minn. 493, 91 Am. St. Rep. 373, 90 N. W. 111; Godfrey v. Valentine, 39 Minn. 336, 12 Am. St. Rep. 657, 40 N. W. 163; Jewett v. Iowa Land Co. 64 Minn. 531, 58 Am. St. Rep. 555, 67 N. W. 639; Holmes v. Loughren, 97 Minn. 83, 105 N. W. 558; Guaranty Trust & S. D. Co. v. Green Cove Springs & M. R. Co. 139 U. S. 137, 35 L. ed. 116, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512; Chamberlain v. Blodgett, 96 Mo. 482, 10 S. W. 44; Meyer v. Kuhn, 13 C. C. A. 298, 25 U. S. App. 174, 65 Fed. 712; Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 369, 21 L. ed. 959, 963; Settlemier v. Sullivan, 97 U. S. 444, 24 L. ed. 1110; Cheely v. Clayton, 110 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 298, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 328; D'Autremont v. Anderson Iron Co. (D'Autremont v. Gaylord) 104 Minn. 165, 17 L.R.A. (N.S.) 236, 124 Am. St. Rep. 615, 116 N. W. 357, 15 Ann. Cas. 114; Gray v. Larrimore, 4 Sawy. 638, Fed. Cas. No. 5,721; Indiana & A. Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Brinkley, 91 C. C. A. 91, 164 Fed. 966; Fanning v. Krapfl, 61 Iowa, 417, 14 N. W. 727, 16 N. W. 293.

Where substituted service is relied upon, and the service made is defective, the fact that the summons actually reached the defendant is immaterial.

Enewold v. Olsen, 39 Neb. 64, 22 L.R.A. 573, 42 Am. St. Rep. 557, 57 N. W. 765; Miller v. Keaton, 236 Mo. 694, 139 S. W. 158.

Where jurisdiction by publication is re-

[1] Leave granted on June 22, 1914, to present petition for rehearing within thirty days.

Digitized by Google

lied upon, the name in the published notice should be given correctly.

Skelton v. Sackett, 91 Mo. 377, 3 S. W. 874; D'Autremont v. Anderson Iron Co. (D'Autremont v. Gaylord) 104 Minn. 169, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 236, 124 Am. St. Rep. 615, 116 N. W. 357, 15 Ann. Cas. 114; Ohlmann v. Clarkson Saw Mill Co. 222 Mo. 62, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 432, 133 Am. St. Rep. 506, 120 S. W. 1155; Anderson v. Qualey, 216 Mass. 106, 103 N. E. 90; Marx v. Hanthorn, 148 U. S. 172, 37 L. ed. 410, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Meyer v. Kuhn, 13 C. C. A. 298, 25 U. S. App. 174, 65 Fed. 713; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 54 Fed. 1; Hubner v. Reickhoff, 103 Iowa, 368, 64 Am. St. Rep. 191, 72 N. W. 540; Steinman v. Jessee, 108 Va. 572, 62 S. E. 275; Clary v. O'Shea, 72 Minn. 105, 71 Am. St. Rep. 465, 75 N. W. 115; Schoenfeld v. Bourne, 159 Mich. 139, 30 L.R.A. (N.S.) 122, 123 N. W. 537; Grober v. Clements, 71 Ark. 568, 100 Am. St. Rep. 91, 76 S. W. 555; Entrekin v. Chambers, 11 Kan. 368; Scarry v. Bunker-Culler Lumber Co. 233 Mo. 686, 136 S. W. 294; Chamberlain v. Blodgett, 96 Mo. 482, 10 S. W. 44; Miller v. Keaton, 236 Mo. 694, 139 S. W. 158; Milbra v. Sloss-Sheffield Steel & I. Co. — Ala. —, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 274, 62 So. 176; Hodgkin v. Boswell, 63 Or. 589, 127 Pac. 985; Heberling v. Moudy, 247 Mo. 535, 154 S. W. 65; Bloomer v. Cristler, 22 Colo. App. 238, 123 Pac. 966; Fanning v. Krapfl, 61 Iowa, 417, 14 N. W. 727, 16 N. W. 293; Thornily v. Prentice, 121 Iowa, 89, 100 Am. St. Rep. 317, 96 N. W. 728.

The absence of the middle initial from the name "Albert Guilfuss, assignee," as published, especially taken in connection with the difference in the surnames, "Geilfuss" and "Guilfuss," does not permit of the presumption being indulged in that the name described in the published summons was the same as the name of the judgment creditor, "Albert B. Geilfuss, assignee."

D'Autremont v. Anderson Iron Co. (D'Autremont v. Gaylord) 104 Minn. 165, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 236, 124 Am. St. Rep. 615, 116 N. W. 357, 15 Ann. Cas. 114; Snook's Petition, 2 Hilt. 566; Loser v. Plainfield Sav. Bank, 149 Iowa, 672, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1112, 128 N. W. 1101; note to Proctor v. Nance, 132 Am. St. Rep. 563; Ambs v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 44 Minn. 266, 46 N. W. 321; Northern Commercial Co. v. Hartke, 110 Minn. 338, 125 N. W. 508; Ordean v. Grannis, 118 Minn. 117, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 136 N. W. 575, 1026; Willard v. Marr, 121 Minn. 23, 139 N. W. 1066; Newby v. Edwards, 153 N. C. 110, 68 S. E. 1062; First Nat. Bank v. Hacoda Mercantile Co. 169 Ala. 476, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 243, 53 So. 802, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 599; Carney v. Bigham, 51 Wash. 452, 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 905, 99 Pac. 21; Wicker v. Jenkins, 49 Tex. Civ. App. 366, 108 S. W. 188; Bowen v. Mulford, 10 N. J. L. 230; Parker v. Parker, 146 Mass. 320, 15 N. E. 902; Com. v. Buckley, 145 Mass. 181, 13 N. E. 368; Dutton v. Simmons, 65 Me. 583, 20 Am. Rep. 729; Ming v. Gwatkin, 6 Rand. (Va.) 551; Davis v. Steeps, 87 Wis. 472, 23 L.R.A. 818, 41 Am. St. Rep. 51, 58 N. W. 769; Crouse v. Murphy, 140 Pa. 335, 12 L.R.A. 58, 23 Am. St. Rep. 232, 21 Atl. 358; Gibson v. Foster, 24 Colo. App. 434, 135 Pac. 121.

Mr. Alfred Jaques argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Theodore T. Hudson and John G. Williams, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The question which occurs here is whether the construction by the state court of this summons, and its decision as to its effectiveness as notice, is not a matter of common or general law. It involves no construction of any state statute, United States statute, Constitution, or treaty. It is simply a construction or a decision on the meaning of an instrument or writing, and is based upon the principles of common or general law. It would seem that such a question is exclusively for the decision of the courts of the state, involves no Federal question, and is not subject to review by this court.

Ballard v. Hunter, 204 U. S. 241, 51 L. ed. 461, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; Baltimore Traction Co. v. Baltimore Belt R. Co. 151 U. S. 137, 38 L. ed. 102, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 294; French v. Taylor, 199 U. S. 274, 50 L. ed. 189, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 660, 33 L. ed. 772, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

The rule of idem sonans, when strictly adhered to, is considered too rigid, and has been much relaxed in modern practice.

Stevens v. Stebbins, 4 Ill. 25.

The name "Albert Guilfuss, assignee," instead of "Albert Geilfuss, assignee," in the summons and proceeding, would not mislead or confuse.

Lane v. Innes, 43 Minn. 137, 45 N. W. 4; Meyer v. Kuhn, 13 C. C. A. 298, 25 U. S. App. 174, 65 Fed. 705; Clifford v. Thun, 74 Neb. 831, 104 N. W. 1052; Puckett v. Hetzer, 82 Kan. 726, 136 Am. St. Rep. 127, 109 Pac. 285; Kinney v. Harrett, 46 Mich. 87, 8 N. W. 708; Reading v. Waterman, 46 Mich. 107, 8 N. W. 691; People v. Gosch, 82 Mich. 31, 46 N. W. 101; Ruthe v. Green Bay & M. R. Co. 37 Wis. 344; Van Benschoten v. Fales, 126 Mich. 176, 85 N. W. 476.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

These two cases were heard as one, upon the record in No. 325; it being stipulated that since the cases are identical in their facts and in the questions raised, except that they pertain to different portions of the land respecting which the controversy arises, the decision in No. 326 shall abide the result in No. 325. We shall therefore discuss the record in the latter case, without further mention of No. 326.

Digitized by Google

On the 8th day of November, 1895, and for some time prior thereto, one John McKinley was the owner of an undivided fifth part of certain lands in the county of St. Louis, in the state of Minnesota. Prior to that [387] time one Albert B. Geilfuss, assignee, recovered a judgment for the sum of $2,854.02 against McKinley in the district court of that county, which was duly entered in the judgment book and appeared in the judgment roll in the name of Albert B. Geilfuss, assignee, and on the 5th day of January, 1894, was docketed by the clerk of the court as in favor of Albert Geilfuss, assignee, as judgment creditor, and against John McKinley as judgment debtor, and being so docketed became a lien upon McKinley's interest in said lands, and on November 8, 1895, was a lien thereon. Under a sale afterwards made upon an execution issued on this judgment, plaintiff in error claims title to the undivided one fifth of said lands formerly owned by McKinley, by virtue of certain proceedings and conveyances hereinafter mentioned. Albert B. Geilfuss, assignee, recovered another judgment against McKinley for the sum of $2,125.60, which was duly entered and docketed on January 10, 1894, and became a lien upon the interest of McKinley in the same lands, but plaintiff in error claims no rights thereunder.

On November 8, 1895, one George A. Elder, the owner of an undivided fifth interest in said lands, commenced a partition suit in the district court of St. Louis county against Mesaba Land Company, John McKinley, and the other owners of the fee, and also against certain other parties having judgment or other liens. The suit was brought under the provisions of chapter 74, Gen. Stat. Minnesota, and its sole purpose was to partition the lands, or, in case a partition could not be had, then to have them sold and the proceeds of the sale distributed among the parties entitled.

At the time of the partition action, Albert B. Geilfuss, assignee, resided at Milwaukee, Wisconsin. His correct name, "Albert B. Geilfuss, assignee," or "Albert Geilfuss, assignee," did not appear among the names of the defendants in the action, or in the summons or other files [388] or records therein. "Albert Guilfuss, assignee," was named as a defendant, and it was alleged in the complaint, and found and determined in the findings and judgment, that he was the owner of the judgment for $2,854.02 against McKinley. "Albert B. Guilfuss" was also named as a defendant, and it was alleged in the complaint and found and determined in the findings and judgment that he was the owner of the judgment for $2,125.60 against McKinley. There was no personal service of the summons in the partition action upon Geilfuss, however named, either as individual or as assignee, and no appearance in his behalf. There was a return by the sheriff of St. Louis county upon the summons to the effect that the defendants, "Albert Guilfuss, assignee," and "Albert B. Guilfuss" could not be found in the county, and an affidavit of one of the attorneys of plaintiff was filed, stating that he believed that the defendants "Albert Guilfuss, assignee," and "Albert B. Guilfuss," were not residents of the state of Minnesota, and could not be found therein, and that after the commencement of the action affiant had deposited copies of the summons in the postoffice, with postage prepaid, directed to each of these defendants at their respective places of residence; to wit, one to Albert Guilfuss, assignee, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and one to Albert B. Guilfuss, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and stating that the subject of said partition action was certain real property situated in the county of St. Louis and state of Minnesota, and that each of said defendants had and claimed a lien and interest in said real estate, and that the relief demanded in said action consisted in excluding the defendants and each of them from any interest or lien therein. There was also service of the summons by publication upon the defendants named therein as "Albert Guilfuss, assignee," and "Albert B. Guilfuss," the summons being published in a legal newspaper in Duluth, which is in St. Louis county, Minnesota. It is admitted [389] that (saving the effect of the misnomer), the statutory provisions respecting the service of summons upon nonresidents by mailing and publication were complied with. These are contained in Minnesota Statutes 1894, §§ 5204 and 5205 (respecting civil actions), and in §§ 5771 and 5773 (respecting actions for partition of real property).†

†CHAPTER 66.

Civil Actions.

. . . . . .

Section 5204. Service by publication, when allowed.

When the defendant cannot be found within the state, of which the return of the sheriff of the county in which the action is brought, that the defendant cannot be found in the county, is prima facie evi-

Digitized by Google

[390] All of the defendants in the action were properly served with summons, except as mentioned, and in due course a judgment was entered on May 5, 1899, adjudging and decreeing the ownership of the lands, and that they could not be divided and partitioned, and ordering that they be sold by a referee to the highest bidder, and the proceeds distributed among the defendants according to their respective rights under the law. The sale was made accordingly and confirmed by the court, and thereafter the present defendants in error, by mesne conveyances, acquired such interest in the lands as had been acquired by the purchaser under the referee's sale.

Subsequently the Geilfuss judgment against McKinley, docketed January 5, 1894, for the sum of $2,854.02, was assigned to one Timlin, and by him to one Buell, and whatever interest in the land, if any, remained in McKinley after the partition sale, was sold under execution and purchased by Buell, and subsequently acquired through mesne conveyances by the present plaintiff in error.

This action (No. 325) was brought by defendants in error to determine the adverse claims in the lands. The trial resulted in a judgment to the effect that the plaintiffs [391] were the owners of an undivided four-fifths interest, and that the present plaintiff in error was the owner of the undivided fifth interest which had been the property of McKinley. Upon appeal, the supreme court reversed the judgment so far as it adjudged plaintiff in error to be the owner of McKinley's interest. 118 Minn. 117, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 136 N. W. 575, 1026. By the present writ of error we are called upon to determine whether the supreme court of Minnesota, by its judgment giving effect to the decree in the partition suit, notwithstanding the misnomer of Albert B. Geilfuss, assignee, in the proceedings and summons, has deprived plaintiff in error of his property without due process of law, contrary to the 14th Amendment.

The trial court held that no jurisdiction was acquired in the partition suit over the judgment lien of Albert B. Geilfuss, assignee, and the supreme court declared that if this were correct, the lien of his judgment upon the McKinley interest was not affected by the decree in that action, and that the subsequent sale of that interest under execution on the judgment gave a good title to the purchaser, under whom defendant (now plaintiff in error) claims; while, on the other hand, if the court acquired jurisdiction over that judgment lien, the McKinley interest in the lands passed to the purchaser at the partition sale, and afterwards became the property of plaintiffs (now defendants in error). This was upon the assumption that the court had jurisdiction to decree a sale in the partition action, —a question of state law arising out of facts not here pertinent, and to which an affirmative answer was given in the same opinion.

The precise question now presented, there-

---

dence, and upon the filing of an affidavit of the plaintiff, his agent or attorney, with the clerk of the court, stating that he believes that the defendant is not a resident of the state, or cannot be found therein, and that he has deposited a copy of the summons in the postoffice, directed to the defendant at his place of residence, unless it is stated in the affidavit that such residence is not known to the affiant, and stating the existence of one of the cases hereinafter specified, the service may be made by publication of the summons by the plaintiff or his attorney in either of the following cases:

. . . . . .

Fifth. When the subject of the action is real or personal property in this state, and the defendant has or claims a lien or interest, actual or contingent, therein, or the relief demanded consists wholly or partly in excluding the defendant from any interest or lien therein. . . .

Section 5205. Publication, how made.

The publication shall be made in a newspaper printed and published in the county where the action is brought (and if there is no such newspaper in the county, then in a newspaper printed and published in an adjoining county, and if there is no such newspaper in an adjoining county, then in a newspaper printed and published at the capitol of the state), once in each week for six consecutive weeks; and the service of the summons shall be deemed complete at the expiration of the time prescribed for publication as aforesaid.

. . . . . .

CHAPTER 74.

Actions for the Partition of Real Property.

. . . . . .

Section 5771. Summons, to whom addressed.

The summons shall be addressed by name to all the owners and lien holders who are known, and generally to all persons unknown, having or claiming an interest in the property.

. . . . . .

Section 5773. Rules as to civil actions applicable.

Such action shall be governed by the rules and provisions applicable to civil actions, including the right of appeal, except that, when service of the summons is made by publication, it shall be accompanied by a brief description of the property sought to be divided, and except as herein otherwise expressly provided.

Digitized by Google

fore, is whether, under the circumstances, a service by the publication and mailing of a summons in the partition suit, naming as party and addressee "Albert Guilfuss, assignee," and "Albert B. Guilfuss," constituted due process of law, conferring jurisdiction to render a judgment binding [392] upon Albert B. Geilfuss, assignee, with respect to his lien upon or interest in the land, he not having appeared.

There is a motion to dismiss, upon the ground that the Federal question was not properly raised in the state court. This motion must be denied. It is true that until the decision of the supreme court of the state, the Federal right was not clearly asserted. But it was not infringed in the trial court, which held in favor of the contention of defendant (now plaintiff in error) that the decree in the partition suit was not valid because of the insufficiency of the notice to Geilfuss. It was the decision of the supreme court, upholding the notice, that first ran counter to the alleged Federal right. In a petition for reargument, filed by the now plaintiff in error, it was suggested that the necessary effect of the decision was to deprive him of his property without due process of law, contrary to the 14th Amendment. The supreme court entertained the petition, considered and overruled the contention that petitioner's rights under the Amendment were infringed, declared that its decision was to be interpreted as holding against the contention, and therefore refused a reargument. This is sufficient to confer jurisdiction upon this court. Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 592, 45 L. ed. 1015, 1017, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 241; Leigh v. Green, 193 U. S. 79, 85, 48 L. ed. 623, 626, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; McKay v. Kalyton, 204 U. S. 458, 463, 51 L. ed. 566, 569, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Sullivan v. Texas, 207 U. S. 416, 422, 52 L. ed. 274, 277, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 215; Kentucky Union Co. v. Kentucky, 219 U. S. 140, 158, 55 L. ed. 137, 156, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171.

We therefore proceed to the merits.

In determining what is due process of law within the meaning of the 14th Amendment, a distinction is to be observed between actions in personam and actions in rem, or quasi in rem. In Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 733, 24 L. ed. 565, 572, it was held that by force of the Amendment a judgment rendered by a state court in an action in personam against a nonresident served by publication of summons, but upon whom no service of process within the [393] state was made, and who did not appear to the action, was devoid of any validity, either within or without the territory of the state in which the judgment was rendered; it being, however, conceded that a different rule obtains where, in connection with initial process against a person, property in the state is brought under the control of the court and subjected to its disposition, or where the judgment is sought as a means to reach such property or affect some interest in it; in other words, where the action is in the nature of a proceeding in rem. As was said by the court (speaking by Mr. Justice Field, p. 734): "It is true that, in a strict sense, a proceeding in rem is one taken directly against property, and has for its object the disposition of the property, without reference to the title of individual claimants; but, in a larger and more general sense, the terms are applied to actions between parties, where the direct object is to reach and dispose of property owned by them, or of some interest therein. Such are cases commenced by attachment against the property of debtors, or instituted to partition real estate, foreclose a mortgage, or enforce a lien. So far as they affect property in the state, they are substantially proceedings in rem in the broader sense which we have mentioned."

But it is also settled that where a state has jurisdiction over a res,—as of course it has over the partition of lands lying within its borders,—the judgment of the court to which that jurisdiction is confided, in order to be binding with respect to the interest of a nonresident who is not served with process within the state, must be based upon constructive notice given by publication, mailing, or otherwise, substantially in the manner prescribed by the law of the state. Cheely v. Clayton, 110 U. S. 701, 705, 28 L. ed. 298, 299, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 328; Guaranty Trust & S. D. Co. v. Green Cove Springs & M. R. Co. 139 U. S. 137, 148, 35 L. ed. 116, 120, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 283, 23 L. ed. 914, 917; Hassall v. Wilcox, 130 U. S. 493, 504, 32 L. ed. 1001, 1005, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590; Thompson v. Thompson, 226 U. S. 551, 562, 57 L. ed. 347, 351, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129.

[394] In the case before us, there is no disputed question as to what steps were taken in order to give notice to Geilfuss of the partition suit. The supreme court of the state, in accepting what was done as being a sufficient compliance with the provisions of the statute, in effect construed the statute as permitting such notice to be given as was in fact given.

But, the question whether the process thus sanctioned by the court of last resort of the state constitutes due process of law within the meaning of the 14th Amendment being properly presented to this court for decision, we must exercise an independent judgment upon it. Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 45, 38 L. ed. 896, 901, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Ballard v. Hunter, 204 U. S. 241, 260, 51 L. ed. 461, 474, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; Jacob v. Roberts, 223 U. S. 261, 56 L. ed. 429, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303.

Digitized by Google

The fundamental requisite of due process of law is the opportunity to be heard. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230, 236, 44 L. ed. 747, 750, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 436, 45 L. ed. 1165, 1170, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836. And it is to this end, of course, that summons or equivalent notice is employed. But the inherent authority of the states over the titles to lands within their respective borders carriers with it, of necessity, the jurisdiction to determine rights and interests claimed therein by persons resident beyond the territorial limits of the state, and upon whom the ordinary judicial process cannot be served. The logical result is that a state, through its courts, may proceed to judgment respecting the ownership of lands within its limits, upon constructive notice to the parties concerned who reside beyond the reach of process. That this constitutes "due process" within the meaning of the 14th Amendment was recognized in Pennoyer v. Neff, supra, and is no longer open to question. Huling v. Kaw Valley R. & Improv. Co. 130 U. S. 559, 563, 32 L. ed. 1045, 1047, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603; Arndt v. Griggs, 134 U. S. 316, 320, et seq., 33 L. ed. 918, 919, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; Lynch v. Murphy, 161 U. S. 247, 251, 40 L. ed. 688, 689, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 403, 44 L. ed. 520, 522, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410. It is not disputed that the statutory scheme of publication and mailing, as established in [395] Minnesota, for giving notice to nonresident defendants in actions quasi in rem, is, in its general application, sufficient to comply with the 14th Amendment. But the statute provides that "the summons shall be addressed by name to all the owners and lien holders who are known;" and the contention is that the mistake of name in the present instance was fatal.

The "due process of law" clause, however, does not impose an unattainable standard of accuracy. If a defendant within the jurisdiction is served personally with process in which his name is misspelled, he cannot safely ignore it on account of the misnomer. The rule, established by an abundant weight of authority, is, that if a person is sued by a wrong name, and he fails to appear and plead the misnomer in abatement, the judgment binds him. Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. 404, 409, 15 L. ed. 451, 453; Crawford v. Statchwell, 2 Strange, 1218; Oakley v. Giles, 3 East, 167; Smith v. Patten, 6 Taunt, 115, s. c. 1 Marsh. 474; Smith v. Bowker, 1 Mass. 76, 79; Root v. Fellowes, 6 Cush. 29; First Nat. Bank v. Jaggers, 31 Md. 38, 47, 100 Am. Dec. 53, 54; McGaughey v. Woods, 106 Ind. 381, 7 N. E. 7; Vogel v. Brown Twp. 112 Ind. 299, 2 Am. St. Rep. 187, 14 N. E. 77; Lindsey v. Delano, 78 Iowa, 350, 354, 43 N. W. 218; Hoffield v. Board of Education, 33 Kan. 644, 648, 7 Pac. 216.

Of course, in a published notice or summons, intended to reach absent or nonresident defendants, where the name is a principal means of identifying the person concerned, somewhat different considerations obtain. The general rule, in cases of constructive service of process by publication, tends to strictness. Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 369, 373, 21 L. ed. 959, 963, 965; Priest v. Las Vegas, 232 U. S. 604, ante, 751, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449. But, even in names, "due process of law" does not require ideal accuracy. In the spelling and pronunciation of proper names there are no generally accepted standards; and the well-established doctrine of idem sonans—generally applied, [396] as it is, to constructive notice of suits—is a recognition of this.

The trial court was of the opinion that the question turned upon whether "Guilfuss" and "Geilfuss" were idem sonans, and held that since "Geilfuss" is evidently a German name, the first syllable must be pronounced with the long sound of "i," while the first syllable of "Guilfuss" would necessarily be pronounced with the short sound of "i." The court therefore concluded that the names were not idem sonans, and that the difference was fatal. The supreme court agreed that "Geilfuss" and "Guilfuss" were not idem sonans, but held that this was not the proper test; that where a summons is served by publication, the true test is not whether the names sound the same to the ear when pronounced, but whether they look substantially the same in print (following Lane v. Innes, 43 Minn. 137, 143, 45 N. W. 4; D'Autremont v. Anderson Iron Co. (D'Autremont v. Gaylord) 104 Minn. 165, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 236, 124 Am. St. Rep. 615, 116 N. W. 357, 15 Ann. Cas. 114); and assuming that the name of the judgment creditor of McKinley was Albert B. Geilfuss, assignee, the court said: "The question then is, placing the names 'Albert Guilfuss, assignee,' and 'Albert B. Geilfuss, assignee,' in juxtaposition, was there so material a change as to be misleading?" This was answered in the negative.

Were we to theorize, we might say that while each of these tests is helpful, neither is altogether acceptable if perfect accuracy were the aim; not the test of idem sonans, because it does not appear that all persons would necessarily pronounce Geilfuss with the long "i," or Guilfuss with the short "i;" and not the test of the appearance of the names as printed and placed in juxtaposition, because in fact, as the name appeared in the summons published and mailed, it was "Guilfuss" alone, without any name in juxtaposition to serve as a standard for comparison. And we think both tests are inadequate if applied without regard to what was contained in the summons besides the mere name and addition—"Albert Guilfuss, assignee." [397] The record, as it happens, contains no copy of the summons; but from findings and admissions that are in the record, we know that it was in due form, and therefore that it contained such notice of the commencement of the action and of its purpose, and such warning to appear and answer, as would constitute due process of law if served upon a defendant within the jurisdiction (Minn. Stat. 1894, §§ 5194, 5195); and that it contained, inter alia, a brief description of the property sought to be divided (Minn. Stat. 1894, § 5773, marginal note, supra). The underlying question is a practical one,—whether, notwithstanding the misnomer, the summons as published and mailed, being otherwise unexceptionable, constitutes a substantial compliance with the Minnesota statute and sufficient constructive notice to the party concerned. In determining this, we need not confine ourselves to the test of idem sonans, nor to the appearance of the name in print, but may employ both of these, with such additional tests as may be available in view of what is disclosed by the record. One such additional test, we think, is whether, when two letters reached the postoffice at Milwaukee, one addressed "Albert Guilfuss, assignee," the other addressed "Albert B. Guilfuss," they or either of them would, in reasonable probability, be delivered to Albert B. Geilfuss, then a resident of that city. Another is whether, assuming that the summons as so mailed, or as published in Duluth, and containing the misspelled names or either of them, had come to the eye of the veritable Albert B. Geilfuss, or of any person knowing him by that name, and sufficiently interested in him to acquaint him with its contents if apprised that it was intended for him, the summons, as a whole, would probably have conveyed notice that Albert B. Geilfuss was the person intended to be summoned. Both of these questions are, we think, to be answered in the affirmative. In view of the well-known skill of postal officials and employees [398] in making proper delivery of letters defectively addressed, we think the presumption is clear and strong that the letters would reach—indeed, that they did reach—the true Albert B. Geilfuss in Milwaukee. And it seems to us that any person knowing him, and knowing the correct spelling of his name, and having reason to acquaint him with the contents of a notice of this character if supposed to be intended for him, would probably realize for whom such notice was intended, notwithstanding the name was spelled "Guilfuss." The general resemblance between the names is striking, however they are to be pronounced. And the designation "assignee" was an additional means of identification. That Geilfuss himself, upon receiving the notice, would be sufficiently warned that it affected his interest in the Minnesota lands under his judgments against McKinley, is free from doubt. He would, of course, observe the misnomer; but, having received the notice which it was the purpose of the law to convey to him, he could not safely ignore it on the ground of the mistake in the name, any more than, if personally served with summons within the state of Minnesota, he could have ignored it on account of a similar misnomer.

Digitized by Google

We conclude that there was due process of law in the partition suit, and that therefore the present judgment should be affirmed.

Judgments in Nos. 325 and 326 affirmed.

---

[399] CHARLES W. DALE, Edward Rott, and Henry Ampt, Trustees in Bankruptcy of David Rohrer, Bankrupt, Appts.,

v.

EDWARD M. PATTISON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 399-411.)

Pledge — change of possession — property incapable of physical delivery.

1. A transaction in the nature of a pledge

NOTE.—As to presumption of fraud arising out of retention of possession by vendor of chattel—see note to Wilson v. Walrath, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1131.

As to whether mere inconvenience as to delivery is a satisfactory explanation of the

Digitized by Google

of personal property so situated that it is not within the power of the owner to deliver it to the pledgee, the owner having no such visible possession and apparent ownership as would probably be relied upon by creditors, purchasers, and mortgagees, will not, in the absence of a controlling decision of the state courts, be regarded by the Federal courts as embraced by the provisions of Ohio Gen. Code, § 8560, that chattel mortgages, or conveyances intended to operate as such, if not accompanied by actual change of possession, shall be invalid as against certain designated third parties unless recorded.

[For other cases see Pledge, 13-21, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Pledge — change of possession.

2. The existence in Ohio of a more stringent rule as to the delivery of possession necessary to validate a pledge as against the pledgeor's creditors, purchasers, and mortgagees than that which obtains in the case of sales cannot be deduced from the provisions of Gen. Code, § 8619, that, when goods and chattels remain for five years in the possession of a person, or those claiming under him, to whom a pretended loan thereof has been made, they shall be the property of such person, unless a reservation of a right to them is made to the lender in writing, and the instrument duly filed or recorded.

[For other cases see Pledge, 13-21, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Pledge — of distillery warehouse receipts — change of possession.

3. A physical change of possession is not essential in Ohio to validate, as against the creditors of a distiller, represented by his trustees in bankruptcy, a transaction in the nature of a pledge of a specific number of barrels of whisky stored in his own bonded distillery warehouse, accompanied by the issuance and transfer, conformably to trade usage, of the distiller's warehouse receipts representing such whisky.

[For other cases see Pledge, 13-21, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 330.]

Argued April 23, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a decree which, on a second appeal, affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Southern District of Ohio, sustaining a pledge as against the trustees in bankruptcy of the pledgeor's estate. Affirmed.

See same case below, on first appeal, 115 C. C. A. 639, 196 Fed. 5; on second appeal, 117 C. C. A. 663, 199 Fed. 987.

Statement by Mr. Justice Pitney:

David Rohrer for many years prior to November 5, 1909, owned and operated a distillery in Montgomery county, Ohio. On that day he was adjudicated a bankrupt, [400] and the appellants were appointed his trustees. In the following month they filed an application in the bankruptcy proceedings, setting forth that in the distillery warehouses of the bankrupt there were stored about 9,800 barrels of Bourbon and rye whiskies, to which there were many conflicting claims; among the claimants being certain named persons to whom it was alleged the bankrupt had pledged or hypothecated certain barrels of the whiskies. One of the parties so named was the respondent, Edward M. Pattison. The application prayed that all of the claimants be notified of the proceedings, be made parties thereto, and be required to set up their respective claims. Pattison filed an answer and intervening petition, claiming that 210 barrels of whisky (specifying them by numbers) were a part of a lot of 800 barrels that had been pledged or hypothecated to him by Rohrer as security for certain loans; the remainder of the 800 barrels having been sold by Rohrer without the knowledge of Pattison. It was denied that the whiskies were or ever had been in Rohrer's possession, it being alleged that all of them, as soon as manufactured, were placed in the storage warehouse in the possession and control of the government of the United States, and that certain moneys were loaned by Pattison to Rohrer, to secure payment of which the latter assigned and transferred in writing to the former his entire interest in certain designated barrels of whisky then on storage in said warehouse, the agreement and transfer being evidenced by retention of possession by the vendors—see note to W. P. Chamberlain Co. v. Tuttle, 25 L.R.A.(N.S.) 604.

On issuance and delivery by warehouseman of receipt for his own property as a constructive transfer of possession essential to a valid pledge—see notes to State use of Hart-Parr Co. v. Robb-Lawrence Co. 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 227, and Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Taylor, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 552.

Generally, as to delivery and possession of property pledged—see note to Yeatman v. New Orleans Sav. Inst. 24 L. ed. U. S. 589.

Digitized by Google

documents in the form of warehouse receipts, of which the following is a sample:

No. 750.
Stored in Warehouse.
56 bbls. in No. 2.
94 bbls. in No. 1.
The David Rohrer Distillery, Montgomery County.
Fire Copper Bourbon and Pure Rye.
Brand and Distillery Established in 1847.

[401] Germantown, O., Feb. 23, 1906.

Received in my distillery, Bonded Warehouse No. 11, first district of Ohio, for account and subject to the order of E. M. Pattison, deliverable only on the return of this warehouse receipt and the written order of the holder thereof, and on payment of the United States government tax and all other taxes and storage at the rate of 5 cents per barrel per month from storage free,

One hundred and fifty barrels D. Rohrer pure Bourbon whisky, entered into bond as follows: 56 bbls. Rye; 94 bbls. Bourbon.

Special number.	Net wine gallons.	Proof.	Proof gallons.	When made.	Warehouse stamp.
107,853
108,002	7,600.48	102	7,405.70	Feb. 10, 12, 13, 14, & 15/06	Y 44,953
					45,102

56 Rye.
94 Bourbon.
Gauged by F. P. Thompson, U. S. gauger.

Loss or damage by fire, the elements, riots, accidents, evaporation, and shrinkage at owner's risk. It is hereby guaranteed that the loss by natural evaporation and on account of defective cooperage on each and every barrel of this whisky shall not be more than 1 gallon in excess of the government allowance during the first seven years of the bonded period.

It is expressly provided that in the payment of excess under this guaranty the basis of settlement shall be the cost price of said whisky in bond at the date of tax, payment figured upon the original contract price therefor, and the carrying charges thereon at the rate of tax imposed by the internal law upon distilled spirits at the date of the withdrawal.

[402] The owner of the whisky under this receipt in accepting it agrees to furnish the money to pay all taxes when the same become due.

This warehouse receipt is given in conformity with the warehouse laws of the state of Ohio and the laws of the United States in force at this date.

David Rohrer, Proprietor.

By an amendment to his intervening petition, Pattison set forth:

"That for more than forty years last past, and ever since the enactment by the Congress of the United States of the laws relating to the storing by distillers of whisky in distillery bonded warehouses, it has been and still continues to be the usual and customary course of doing business by distillers of whisky to sell, pledge, and transfer whisky deposited by them in their distillery bonded warehouses by the making, issuing, and delivering by them of their warehouse receipts to the vendee or pledgee of the barrels of whisky sold or pledged (describing and identifying in said warehouse receipts the barrels of whisky sold or pledged, by their serial numbers, the date of their manufacture, the warehouse stamps thereon, and the number of the bonded warehouse in which situated), and agreeing in said warehouse receipts to hold said barrels of whisky sold or pledged for the account and subject to the order of the vendee or pledgee thereof, and in and by the sale and pledge as aforesaid of barrels of whisky in their distillery bonded warehouses to obtain money and advances of money to enable them to carry on business as distillers, and during all of said time it has been and continues to be among distillers and bankers, brokers, dealers in whisky, and all persons having transactions with distillers, an established custom and a commercial usage generally known and acted upon to regard and consider said warehouse receipts as giving constructive possession of the barrels of whisky mentioned therein, and as conveying [403] either an absolute title or a special interest, according to the nature of the transaction, and as partaking in many respects of the character of commercial paper, transferable by indorsement, either absolutely or as collateral security, and as investing the holder of the warehouse receipts with the title, property in, or possession of the barrels of whisky mentioned in said warehouse receipts according to the rights of the original parties to the transaction, and as constituting the owner of the distillery bonded warehouse issuing and delivering such warehouse receipts, as the bailee for the vendee or pledgee of the barrels of whisky in said warehouse receipts mentioned; and this practice and method of doing business has obtained for more than forty years, and become an important part of the commercial system of the country, so that it is well understood and according to the usual course of business that the use and purpose of a warehouse receipt is to enable the owner of said distillery bonded warehouse to sell, pledge, and transfer the title or the possession of the barrels of whisky in his bonded warehouse for the purpose of raising money or securing advances thereon either by sale or pledge."

Digitized by Google

The trustees filed a general demurrer, which was sustained by the referee, and the order sustaining it was affirmed by the district court (186 Fed. 997). The circuit court of appeals reversed the district court, and remanded the case for further proceedings (115 C. C. A. 639, 196 Fed. 5). Thereupon the district court, in obedience to the mandate, overruled the demurrer and rendered final judgment in favor of Pattison, which was affirmed by the court of appeals; and an appeal to this court was then allowed.

Mr. Lee Warren James argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

In Ohio there is a settled legislative policy with reference to the change of possession necessary for the creation of liens on personal property, as distinguished from the statutory policy with reference to possession, as bearing upon questions of absolute ownership thereof.

Gibson v. Chillicothe Branch of State Bank, 11 Ohio St. 311; Thorne v. First Nat. Bank, 37 Ohio St. 254; Roland v. Gundy, 5 Ohio, 202; Sanders v. Keber, 28 Ohio St. 630; Hamet v. Letcher, 37 Ohio St. 356, 41 Am. Rep. 519.

By the words "unless accompanied by immediate delivery and followed by an actual and continued change of possession," the lawmaking authorities of the state of Ohio established clearly and unmistakably the doctrine that any transaction designed to give a security in personal property where not filed as a chattel mortgage must be accompanied by an actual change of possession. True, the language of the section is "a mortgage or conveyance intended to operate as a mortgage." The difference between a pledge and a mortgage is well settled in Ohio.

Brown v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 41 Ohio St. 459; Jones, Pledges, § 7.

It may be expressed thus: A pledge is a transfer of possession that may ripen into a title by a sale had on default of the obligation; a mortgage is a transfer of title, subject to a defeasance condition. Neither can ripen into an absolute title without a sale and purchase. Obviously the language of the above statute is broad enough to cover those forms of giving security which require a change of possession to make them valid, and that language requires the change to be actual and continued.

We do not mean to say that there cannot be a symbolic delivery under the law of Ohio, such as will satisfy the requirement for change of possession in a pledge. That symbolic delivery, however, must be made in such way as to be complete; it must be the actual surrender of the muniment of title. The control of the owner must be devested.

Hunt v. Bode, 66 Ohio St. 255, 64 N. E. 126.

A custom or usage of the trade or business should not prevail against such clear and unequivocal rules of law. They are not rules emanating merely from the common law,—from decisions of courts,—but they are rules directly traceable to the statute itself. A custom cannot be urged in opposition to an established principle of law.

Columbus & H. Coal & I. Co. v. Tucker, 48 Ohio St. 60, 12 L.R.A. 577, 29 Am. St. Rep. 528, 26 N. E. 630; Niagara County Bank v. Baker, 15 Ohio St. 69.

Can the transaction be sustained on the theory that it creates an equitable lien good as against the bankrupt's trustees?

Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Millbourne Mills Co. 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 552, 96 C. C. A. 629, 172 Fed. 177.

Mr. W. H. Mackoy argued the cause, and with Messrs. John C. Healy, Howard Ferris, Malcolm McAvoy, and M. L. Buchwalter, filed a brief for appellee:

The law of Ohio recognizes the rule that actual physical delivery of pledged goods by the pledgeor to the pledgee is not essential to the validity of the pledge as against the creditors of the pledgeor when goods are so situated that actual physical delivery cannot be made, or where, by trade usage, actual physical delivery is excused.

Digitized by Google

Hunt v. Bode, 66 Ohio St. 255, 64 N. E. 126.

The rule laid down in Hunt v. Bode is the same as the Pennsylvania rule.

White v. Gunn, 205 Pa. 229, 54 Atl. 901.

The barrels of whisky shown to have been pledged in this case were identified by the warehouse receipts issued to the appellee in like manner as the warehouse receipts exhibited in Taney v. Penn Nat. Bank, 232 U. S. 174, ante, 558, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288.

In Ohio, the Pennsylvania rule that "the retention of possession by the vendor of goods which he is capable of delivering to the vendee is fraud per se" never obtained.

Hombeck v. Vanmetre, 9 Ohio, 153; Wilson v. Leslie, 20 Ohio, 166.

The general rule in the United States is that attornment is not necessary to complete symbolical delivery.

Davis v. Russell, 52 Cal. 615, 28 Am. Rep. 647; Durr v. Hervey, 44 Ark. 306, 51 Am. Rep. 594.

The government, as to its custody of distilled spirits in distillery bonded warehouses, owes no duties to third persons, and will not undertake to perform any.

Taney v. Penn Nat. Bank, 109 C. C. A. 437, 187 Fed. 689.

Chattel mortgages and instruments to secure the return of goods loaned belong to a class of securities altogether different from pledges. The class cannot be enlarged by judicial construction so as to include other instruments not described, which have been held to be valid by the common law, and entitled to enforcement in accordance with their terms.

Parshall v. Eggert, 54 N. Y. 18.

[404] Mr. Justice Pitney, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The transactions in question, as between Rohrer, the bankrupt, and Pattison, the appellee, are not distinguishable from those that were under consideration in Taney v. Penn Nat. Bank, 232 U. S. 174, ante, 558, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288. In that case the distilling company deposited as security for the loan made by the bank certain gauger's certificates, in addition to warehouse receipts issued by itself. But the sole significance of the gauger's certificates was that they constituted evidence that the whiskies had been deposited in the storehouse in barrels marked and numbered as required by the act of Congress. Since it is admitted in the present case that the whiskies in question were in fact on storage, as mentioned in the warehouse receipts delivered by Rohrer to Pattison, and that the barrels were stamped, marked, and numbered as therein stated, the fact that no gauger's certificate was delivered to Pattison is of no present consequence.

The legal effect of such a transaction depends upon the local law. In Taney v. Penn Nat. Bank, upon finding that, by the law of Pennsylvania, the ordinary rule as to the effect of the retention of physical possession by the vendor of personal property, which he is capable of delivering to the vendee, is not applied by the courts of that state to cases where the inherent nature of the transaction and the attendant circumstances are such as to preclude the possibility of a delivery by the vendor that would be consistent with the avowed and fair purpose of the sale, or where the absence of a physical delivery is excused by the usages of the trade or business in which the sale is made, we held that, considering the situation of the property and the usages of the business, the transaction between the distiller and the bank was valid, and gave to the latter a lien upon the whisky superior to that of the trustee in bankruptcy.

The question here presented is whether the local law of [405] Ohio so far differs from that of Pennsylvania that a different result should be reached. In behalf of appellants it is insisted that there is in Ohio a settled legislative policy with reference to the change of possession necessary for the creation of liens on personal property. Section 8560 of the General Code is cited (formerly § 4150, Rev. Stat.). It reads as follows:

"Sec. 8560. A mortgage, or conveyance intended to operate as a mortgage, of goods and chattels, which is not accompanied by an immediate delivery, and followed by an actual and continued change of possession of the things mortgaged, shall be absolutely void as against the creditors of the mortgagor, subsequent purchasers, and mortgagees in good faith, unless the mortgage, or a true copy thereof, be forthwith deposited as directed in the next succeeding section."

It is insisted that this clearly and unmistakably establishes the doctrine that any transaction designed to give a security in personal property, if not accompanied by an actual change of possession, must be placed in the form of a chattel mortgage and filed for record, in order to be good as against creditors. It seems to us, however, that we should not fail to consider the well-recognized distinction between a chattel mortgage and a pledge. A mortgage of chattels imports a present conveyance of the legal title, subject to defeasance upon performance of an express condition subsequent, contained either in the same or in a separate instrument. It may or may not be accompanied by a delivery of possession. On the other hand, where title to the property is not presently transferred, but possession only is given, with power to sell upon default in the performance of a condition, the transaction is a pledge, and not a mortgage.

Digitized by Google

There is no question that in Ohio, as elsewhere, a chattel mortgage, as well as a pledge, is valid between the parties, although not recorded. And, without the statute, it would [406] be good as against creditors, purchasers, and mortgagees in good faith. The primary purpose of the act is to protect persons of these classes, who might otherwise sustain losses by relying upon the possession and apparent ownership of the chattels by the mortgagor. In the case of an ordinary pledge, there is no need of recording, since the pledgeor at once parts with possession.

But what shall be said when the transaction relates to personal property which is so situated that it is not within the power of the owner to deliver it to mortgagee or pledgee, and of which he has no such visible possession and apparent ownership as would probably be relied upon by creditors, purchasers, and mortgagees? Does § 8560, Gen. Code, which declares that mortgages in such case shall be invalid against the designated third parties unless recorded necessarily apply to transactions in the nature of a pledge, which are not mentioned in terms? The effect would be to greatly hamper, sometimes to prevent, transactions in the nature of a pledge, where only constructive possession of the property could be transferred. We cannot give to the section cited so extensive a meaning, in the absence of a decision by the state court adopting that construction. None such is referred to.

It is contended that a different rule exists in Ohio as to the delivery of possession in the case of pledges from that which obtains in the case of sales. Section 8619, Gen. Code (Rev. Stat. § 4197), is cited.

"Sec. 8619. When goods and chattels remain for five years in the possession of a person, or those claiming under him, to whom a pretended loan thereof has been made, they shall be the property of such person, unless a reservation of a right to them is made to the lender in writing, and the instrument recorded within six months after the loan is made, in the recorder's office of the county where one or both of the parties reside, or unless such instrument is filed as provided by law with respect to chattel mortgages. [407] But if a loan of goods and chattels is made to an art museum association within this state, such reservation of a right to them may be so made and recorded at any time within five years from the date of the loan."

But in the Code, this section is made a part of chapter 4, entitled "Statute of Frauds and Perjuries." It partakes also of the nature of a statute of limitations. We are unable to see anything in it to establish the asserted distinction between sales and pledges, and we are unable to find that any such force has been given to it by the courts of Ohio.

The cases to which particular reference is made are Gibson v. Chillicothe State Bank, 11 Ohio St. 311; Thorne v. First Nat. Bank, 37 Ohio St. 254, and Hunt v. Bode, 66 Ohio St. 255, 64 N. E. 126. All are decisions by the supreme court of the state. In the Gibson Case, in an action of trespass for levying upon and detaining certain property by virtue of an execution against their bailees, plaintiffs, in order to prove their property and right of possession, gave in evidence certain warehouse receipts, reading in substance as follows: "Received, Chillicothe, November 13, 1852, of Messrs. Gibson, Stockwell, & Company, and for their account, the following property, in good order, which we agree to hold irrevocably subject to their order, they having a lien thereon for the full cost of the same." It was held that the legal effect of such a receipt was to pass the general property and right of possession to the holder, and that this effect was not impaired by the recital that the holder had a lien upon the property. The court, in its opinion, recognized that receipts of this kind, from long and general use in commerce and trade, had come to have a well-understood import amoung business men, which (as the court said) ought not to be confounded or perhaps even qualified by a strict construction of the literal and grammatical meaning of the words employed. And the court proceeded to say: "The receipts in this case are in [408] some particulars variant from each other; and yet we have no doubt they would all be recognized by commercial men as of like import and equal validity as warehouse receipts. And if so, they as absolutely transfer the general property of the goods and chattels therein expressed as would a bill of sale. They are a kind of instrument extensively used by commercial men as the most convenient mode of transfer and constructive delivery of property, and facilitating the ready realization of the price of products by the producer remote from market. Public policy, as well as respect to good faith, requires that those, like other instruments of commerce, should be so regarded in courts as not to unjustly impair confidence in them elsewhere. And this view of the legal effect of such instruments, we think fully sustained by the authorities cited by counsel; and especially by the case of Gibson v. Stevens, 8 How. 384, 12 L. ed. 1123." It was therefore held that, in spite of the recital that Gibson, Stockwell, & Company had a "lien thereon for the full cost of the same," the warehouse receipts tended to prove that the plaintiffs had a general ownership in the property, and that the trial court erred in ruling otherwise. The citation of Gibson v. Stevens is significant, because in that case this court, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Taney, recognized that where personal property is, from its character or situation, not capable of actual delivery, the delivery of a warehouse receipt or other evidence of title is sufficient to transfer the property and right of possession to another; and also because this decision was based in large part upon the usages of trade and commerce.

Digitized by Google

In Thorne v. First Nat. Bank, ubi supra, it was held that an instrument in the form of a warehouse receipt, executed by a debtor to his creditor, upon property owned by the debtor, who was not a warehouseman, and made for the sole purpose of securing the creditor, was void as against other creditors where the property remained in the possession of the debtor. The court cited and relied upon Rev. [409] Stat. § 4150, above quoted, and in effect held that the attempt by the warehouse receipts to establish a lien upon the personal property was in conflict with the policy of that section, and therefore invalid as to a creditor. Gibson v. Chillicothe State Bank was distinguished upon the ground that in that case the warehouse receipts were offered to show ownership, and not a mere agreement for securing an indebtedness. It will, however, be observed that in the Thorne Case the property in question was in the possession of the borrowers, and there was nothing in its character or situation to prevent an actual delivery of it to the lender.

In Hunt v. Bode, ubi supra, which is the most recent case upon the subject to which our attention has been called, one Stothfang had delivered to a bank certain warehouse receipts for whisky as collateral for a loan of money made to him by the bank, and thereafter undertook to make a second transfer or pledge to another party, subject to the claim of the bank. A copy of this instrument was served upon the bank, and it was notified to retain possession of the warehouse receipts pledged with it as collateral security for its claim against the pledgeor, and after it was duly paid, the balance of the receipts were to be turned over to the second pledgee. The transaction was sustained, the court remarking: "Delivery of the property pledged is generally essential to a valid pledge, and it is equally true that to make a valid sale or transfer of any species or article of personal property, a delivery of the property sold or transferred is necessary. . . . But it does not follow that actual or physical delivery should always accompany the sale or transfer, and this is also true as to the pledging of choses in action or other kinds of personal property. The delivery in some cases may be symbolical, such as the handing over the writing which constitutes the title to the property, just as was done in this case, to secure the Atlas National Bank [410] for the money it had loaned to Stothfang. He delivered to the bank, not the 165 barrels of whisky, but the warehouse receipts for the same, which were its muniment of title and control of the property they represented. And when the pledgeor desired to secure the payment of the note held against him by Dieckmann, he executed and delivered to him the transfer of all interest in the receipts which would remain after the bank's claim should be satisfied. This transfer was not strictly a pledge, but an assignment and transfer of the stated interest in the warehouse receipts; but if it is desired that we call it a pledge, as has been done by counsel, we still observe that constructive possession in the second pledgee would be sufficient, if the intent to deliver such possession is clearly apparent. It is the application of the familiar rule that the transfer is complete and delivery made when the owner has done all that he can do in the premises, and has given such possession to the pledgee or transferee as the nature of the property and its situation will permit. In this case Stothfang owned a valuable equity in the warehouse receipts held by the bank, as their sale afterwards made manifest, and it was such interest in them that could be made the subject of sale and transfer, and even pledge; and certainly Stothfang gave to Dieckmann possession of all interest in and title to the receipts which would remain after the debt due the bank was satisfied. This was all the delivery that could then be made, and it was at least a constructive delivery, and this, we think, meets the demands of the law."

We are unable to find in these decisions a recognition of the distinctions insisted upon by counsel for appellants. On the contrary, the supreme court of Ohio clearly recognizes the effectiveness of a symbolical delivery.

It is evident, also, that that court recognizes the force of a long-continued commercial usage. And this lends peculiar significance to the conceded existence for more [411] than forty years of the custom and commercial usage set up by appellee in the amendment to his intervening petition, quoted in the prefatory statement. It is no answer to say that a trade custom or usage should not prevail against clear and unequivocal rules of law. This is a petitio principii. The question under consideration is whether certain portions of the written law are to be given by construction an effect different from that expressed in their language, on the ground that, by authoritative decisions of the supreme court of the state, the asserted policy has been found to be implied in them. Since it seems to us that neither the statutes nor the decisions go to the extent that is claimed for them by appellants, we may refer to the established custom as evidence of what has long been understood as the law; for, as this court held in Gibson v. Stevens, and as the supreme court of Ohio held in Gibson v. Chillicothe State Bank, such usages are to be judicially recognized as a part of the law.

Digitized by Google

It results that by the local law the transactions in question as between Rohrer and Pattison, had the effect of transferring to the latter the legal title and right to possession for the purposes of the agreement between them; and we think it is a matter of indifference whether the transaction be called a pledge, or an equitable pledge, or an equitable lien. The substance of the matter is, for present purposes, the same.

This being so, the superiority of Pattison's right over that of the trustees in bankruptcy is established by the decision of this court in Taney v. Penn Nat. Bank, 232 U. S. 174, ante, 558, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288.

Decree affirmed.

---

[412] MISSOURI, KANSAS, & TEXAS RAILWAY COMPANY OF TEXAS, Plff. in Err.,

v.

S. O. HARRIS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 412–422.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — allowing attorney's fee to successful plaintiff.

1. Due process of law is not denied, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., by the provisions of Texas Laws 1909, p. 93, for the allowance of a reasonable attorney's fee of not over $20 to the successful plaintiff in a suit in which an attorney is actually employed upon a claim not exceeding $200, against "any person or corporation doing business in this state, for personal services rendered, or for labor done, or for material furnished, or for overcharges on freight or express, or for any claim for lost or damaged freight, or for stock killed or injured by such person or corporation, its agents or employees," where such claim is not paid within thirty days after demand, and the recovery is for the full amount claimed.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — allowing attorney's fee to successful plaintiff.

2. There is no denial of the equal protection of the laws, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., in the provisions of Texas Laws 1909, p. 93, for the allowance of a reasonable attorney's fee of not over $20 to the successful plaintiff in a suit in which an attorney is actually employed upon a claim not exceeding $200, against "any person or corporation doing business in this state, for personal services rendered, or for labor done, or for material furnished, or for overcharges on freight or express, or for any claim for lost or damaged freight, or for stock killed or injured by such person or corporation, its agents or employees," where such claim is not paid within thirty days after demand, and the recovery is for the full amount claimed, since this statute makes no classification of debtors, and the kinds of claims included cover a wide range, and do not appear to have been grouped for the purpose of bearing against any class or classes of citizens or corporations.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — carrier's liability — allowing attorney's fee to successful plaintiff — congressional inaction.

3. The application to a claim against a carrier, based upon a loss of freight shipped in interstate commerce, of the provisions of Texas Laws 1909, p. 93, for the allowance of a reasonable attorney's fee of not over $20 to the successful plaintiff in a suit in which an attorney is actually employed upon a claim not exceeding $200, against "any person or corporation doing business in this state, for personal services rendered, or for labor done, or for material furnished, or for overcharges on freight or express, or for any claim for lost or damaged freight, or for stock killed or injured by such per-

---

NOTE.—On validity of statutory provision for attorneys' fees—see note to Builders' Supply Depot v. O'Connor, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 910.

On constitutional inequality or discrimination in statutes allowing attorneys' fees—see notes to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 586, and Farmers' & M. Ins. Co. v. Dobney, 47 L. ed. U. S. 821.

On constitutionality of statute imposing penalty or added liability for failure of carrier to pay claim—see note to Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Brandon, 42 L.R.A.(N.S.) 106.

Digitized by Google

son or corporation, its agents or employees," where such claim is not paid within thirty days after demand, and the recovery is for the full amount claimed, does not amount to a direct burden upon interstate commerce, and is therefore not repugnant to the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, or otherwise in conflict with Federal authority, in the absence of any Congressional legislation covering the subject.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c; III. h, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — conflicting state and Federal regulations.

4. A state law enacted under any of the reserved powers—especially if under the police power—is not to be set aside as inconsistent with an act of Congress regulating commerce, unless there is actual repugnancy, or unless Congress has at least manifested a purpose to exercise its paramount authority over the subject.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — conflicting state and Federal regulations — carrier's liability — allowing attorney's fee to successful plaintiff.

5. Congress has not so far exercised its paramount authority by enacting the Carmack amendment of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, 595, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, pp. 1288, 1307), to the act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), § 20, regulating the liability of a carrier for the loss or damage to an interstate shipment, as to prevent the application to a claim against a carrier, based upon a loss of an interstate shipment, of the provisions of Texas Laws 1909, p. 93, for the allowance of a reasonable attorney's fee of not over $20 to the successful plaintiff in a suit in which an attorney is actually employed upon a claim not exceeding $200, against "any person or corporation doing business in this state, for personal services rendered, or for labor done, or for material furnished, or for overcharges on freight or express, or for any claim for lost or damaged freight, or for stock killed or injured by such person or corporation, its agents or employees," where such claim is not paid within thirty days after demand, and the recovery is for the full amount claimed.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c; III. h, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 604.]

Submitted February 24, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Justice Court, Precinct No. 6, of Hopkins County, in the State of Texas, to review a judgment allowing an attorney's fee to the successful plaintiff in a suit against a carrier upon a claim for the loss of an interstate shipment, not paid after demand. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Joseph M. Bryson and Aldis B. Browne submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. Alexander S. Coke and A. H. McKnight were on the brief:

Corporations are persons within the provisions of the 14th Amendment.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 154, 41 L. ed. 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 522, 42 L. ed. 840, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 259, 43 L. ed. 439, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 76, 50 L. ed. 666, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370.

While state legislatures, in passing laws, may classify, purely arbitrary action cannot be sustained by calling it classification; there must be a reasonable basis for the classification, which means that the discrimination must be based upon matters which have some relation to the object sought to be accomplished.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 216 U. S. 400, 54 L. ed. 536, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep 287, 17 Ann. Cas. 1247.

There is no reasonable ground for the discrimination made by the statute in question.

Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co.; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co.; and Southern R. Co. v. Greene,—supra.

Its object being to compel the prompt payment of debts, to be valid, it should apply to all debtors. Such statutes do not come within the scope of police regulations.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255.

But if it were otherwise, the police power must be exercised with respect to the right of equal protection guaranteed by the Federal Constitution.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Murphey, 196 U. S. 194, 49 L. ed. 444, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218, 2 Ann. Cas. 514.

Nor can the act be sustained because of a special duty imposed, as was the case in Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110, and St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Mathews, 165 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 611, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243. It applies alike to persons upon whom special duties have been imposed and to others not similarly situated.

Digitized by Google

The classification is not based upon the nature of the business transacted. A number of the claims, it is true, could arise only in connection with the business of common carriers, but others have no connection whatever with that business or with any other special business. The statute, therefore, is clearly different from those sustained in Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Seegers, 207 U. S. 73, 52 L. ed. 108, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Jackson Vinegar Co. 226 U. S. 217, 57 L. ed. 193, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

Finally, the act cannot be sustained as imposing a burden in connection with special privileges conferred, upon the principle announced in Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 922, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662, and other cases of that class, for it applies to natural persons as well as to corporations; to persons who have received no special privileges, as well as to persons who are privileged.

The court in fact will look beyond the mere letter of a law to the conditions actually existing as affecting its application, for the purpose of prohibiting arbitrary action under the guise of regulation or classification.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

Every person, under our constitutional guaranties, has the right to be governed by general rules, and when particular individuals or classes of individuals are singled out and are subjected to one set of rules when other persons or classes of persons under similar circumstances are not, or when any class of persons is subjected to arbitrary action, those so burdened are deprived of their liberty and property without due process of law.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, supra; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 109, 46 L. ed. 108, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Wynne, 224 U. S. 354, 56 L. ed. 799, 42 L.R.A.(N.S.) 102, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 227 U. S. 88, 57 L. ed. 431, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Bradley v. Richmond, 227 U. S. 481, 57 L. ed. 605, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Polt, 232 U. S. 165, ante, 554, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301.

Congress has taken full control of rate making and charging.

Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 438, 56 L. ed. 260, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

The Federal law, within certain limits, gives the shipper whose freight or express is lost or damaged in transit a cause of action, but this does not include the right to recover an attorney's fee.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164.

One of the acts—the two being in conflict—must yield. It is not now an open question that the Federal law supersedes or prevails over state enactments. This question has been before the court so often and so recently as to make it unnecessary to do more than cite the cases.

Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 242, 16 L. ed. 247; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. ed. 910, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 222 U. S. 370, 56 L. ed. 237, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 438, 56 L. ed. 260, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 444, 56 L. ed. 263, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145; Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 56 L. ed. 327, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hardwick Farmers' Elevator Co. 226 U. S. 426, 57 L. ed. 284, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 203, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A. (N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 57 L. ed. 683, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Barrett v. New York, 232 U. S. 14, ante, 483, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203.

The act being void in part, the question remains, Can any portion of it stand? Is that which is valid, if any, separable from that which is invalid? This question should be answered in the negative.

Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 501, 52 L. ed. 310, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Illinois C. R. Co. v. McKendree, 203 U. S. 529, 51 L. ed. 304, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 153; El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 97, 54 L. ed. 111, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 221, 23 L. ed. 565.

The supremacy of Congress in the field of interstate commerce is well settled. Where its jurisdiction is exclusive, as is the case in matters that regulate, burden, or interfere with such commerce, the states cannot legislate at all. Their enactments are void, whether Congress acts or not.

Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 772, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Murphey,

Digitized by Google

196 U. S. 194, 49 L. ed. 444, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218, 2 Ann. Cas. 514; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Greenwood Grocery Co. 227 U. S. 1, 57 L. ed. 389, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213.

Where the jurisdiction of the two powers is concurrent, state enactments, although passed in the exercise of undoubted powers, must yield when Congress enters the field. The only question in such cases is whether Congress has occupied the ground. If it has not, the states may pass such regulations as aid interstate commerce, but, although incidentally affecting it, do not regulate, burden, or interfere with it. For regulations of this class, see Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flower Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 53 L. ed. 352, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214, involving what the court termed a common-law duty to afford equal switching service to shippers, notwithstanding the cars were eventually to be engaged in interstate commerce; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Mazursky, 216 U. S. 122, 54 L. ed. 411, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 378, involving a statute of South Carolina requiring carriers to settle within a specified time claims for loss of or damage to freight; and Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Commercial Mill. Co. 218 U. S. 406, 54 L. ed. 1088, 36 L.R.A. (N.S.) 220, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59, 21 Ann. Cas. 815, involving the violation of a duty to transmit or deliver telegrams imposed by state statute. But when Congress enters, the power of the states is at an end.

Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 56 L. ed. 257, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 56 L. ed. 327, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875; Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hardwick Farmers' Elevator Co. 226 U. S. 435, 57 L. ed. 287, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 203, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 57 L. ed. 683, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

It is too plain for argument that an intentional overcharge on an interstate shipment is a violation of the act to regulate commerce. Congress, therefore, has not only legislated with respect to this particular subject-matter, but the supreme court of Texas has held that the state courts are without jurisdiction to entertain claims covering such violations.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Moore, 98 Tex. 302, 83 S. W. 362, 4 Ann. Cas. 770.

If the overcharge be unintentional, or otherwise made in such manner as not to constitute a violation of the law, still the act to regulate commerce controls, for, as was said in Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 56 L. ed. 257, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140, the provisions of the act are directed at the abuses most to be feared, including unreasonableness in rates and discriminations, and it is evident that Congress has taken full control of the subject of interstate rate making and charging.

The completeness with which Congress has taken possession of this field was observed by this court in the very recent case of Barrett v. New York, 232 U. S. 14, ante, 483, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203, which involved the validity of an ordinance of the city of New York requiring expressmen, among others, to secure a license and give bond, as applied to interstate commerce.

No appearance for defendant in error.

[415] Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

In this case the plaintiff below (now defendant in error) recovered a judgment for $3.50 damages for loss of certain freight that was shipped from St. Louis, Missouri, consigned to plaintiff at Como, Texas, and delivered by the initial carrier to defendant for transportation to destination; the loss having occurred on defendant's line in Texas. The judgment includes an attorney's fee of $10, allowed by virtue of the local statute approved March 19, 1909, Laws, p. 93, Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. 1911, arts. 2178 and 2179, which was under consideration in Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Cade, decided May 11, 1914, 233 U. S. 642, ante, 1135, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678, and is set forth verbatim in a marginal note to the opinion in that case. The controversy turns upon the allowance of the attorney's fee, the same Federal questions having been raised in the state court and in this court that were raised in the Cade Case. So far as the 14th Amendment is concerned, our opinion in that case renders further discussion unnecessary. But since the claim of the present plaintiff was based upon freight lost in interstate commerce, we must now pass upon the question whether the allowance of an attorney's fee in such a case, pursuant to the Texas statute, is repugnant to the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, or the act to regulate commerce and amendments thereof.

By way of preface, we should repeat that the state court of last resort has construed the act as relating only to the collection of claims not exceeding $200 in amount; that by its terms it applies to claims "against any person or corporation doing business in this state, for personal services rendered or for labor done, or for material furnished, or for overcharges on freight or express, or for any claim for lost or damaged freight, or for stock killed or injured by such person or corporation, its agents or employees" [art. 2178]; and [416] that, in the Cade Case, we have held it to be a police regulation designed to promote the prompt payment of small but well-founded claims, and to discourage unnecessary litigation in respect to them; and have held it, in its general application, to be not repugnant to either the "equal protection" or the "due process" clauses of the 14th Amendment.

Digitized by Google

Such being the character of the statute, and it having a broad sweep which only incidentally includes claims arising out of interstate commerce, it follows that it cannot be held to constitute a direct burden upon such commerce, and hence repugnant to the commerce clause of the Contitution, or otherwise in conflict with the Federal authority, in the absence of legislation by Congress covering the subject. To this extent, the case is controlled by the decision in Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Mazursky, 216 U. S. 122, 54 L. ed. 411, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 378, where it was held that a South Carolina statute which required common carriers doing business in the state to settle claims for loss or damage to property while in the possession of the carrier within forty days, in case of shipments wholly within the state, and within ninety days, in case of shipments from without the state, and that failure to adjust and pay a claim within the prescribed period should subject the carrier to a penalty of $50 in case the full amount claimed was recovered, as the statute was applied to a claim for loss or damage to interstate freight while in the possession of the carrier within the state, was not an unwarrantable interference with interstate commerce, in the absence of legislation by Congress, but was rather a regulation in aid of the performance by the carrier of its legal duty. The decision was rested upon the authority and reasoning of Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 104, 23 L. ed. 819, 820; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 476, 31 L. ed. 508, 511, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 352, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 660, 40 L. ed. 1105, 1108, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 137, 42 L. ed. 688, 692, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Pennsylvania [417] R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 491, 48 L. ed. 268, 273, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 623, 53 L. ed. 352, 361, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214. And see Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Commercial Mill Co. 218 U. S. 406, 416, 54 L. ed. 1088, 1091, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 220, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59, 21 Ann. Cas. 815; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Crovo, 220 U. S. 364, 55 L. ed. 498, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 402, 408, 410, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1542, 1545, 1546, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

But the "act to regulate commerce" (act of February 4, 1887, 24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154) is now invoked, together with its amendments, and especially that part of the Hepburn act of June 29, 1906, known as the Carmack amendment (34 Stat. at L. 584, 595, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, pp. 1288, 1307); and it remains to be considered whether the Texas statute, as applied to claims for loss or damage to interstate freight while in the possession of the carrier in the state of Texas, is repugnant to this Federal legislation. It is, of course, settled that when Congress has exerted its paramount legislative authority over a particular subject of interstate commerce, state laws upon the same subject are superseded. Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 222 U. S. 370, 378, 56 L. ed. 237, 239, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Erie R. Co. v. New York, decided May 25, 1914, 233 U. S. 671, ante, 1149, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756. But it is equally well settled that the mere creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the grant to it of a measure of control over interstate commerce, does not of itself, and in the absence of specific action by the Commission or by Congress itself, interfere with the authority of the states to establish regulations conducive to the welfare and convenience of their citizens, even though interstate commerce be thereby incidentally affected, so long as it be not directly burdened or interfered with. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 623, 53 L. ed. 352, 361, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 437, 56 L. ed. 257, 260, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

In the Larabee Mills Case it was held that the railroad company, by engaging in the business of a common carrier, had become subject to certain duties imposed upon it by general law, including the obligation to treat all shippers alike; that the enforcement of this duty and the regulation of matters pertaining to it were within the authority [418] of the state, although interstate commerce was thereby indirectly affected; and that until specific action by Congress or the Commission, the control of the state over such incidental matters remained undisturbed. Hence, a decision by the supreme court of Kansas, awarding a mandamus to require the company to restore the service of transferring cars between the lines of another railroad and the Larabee mills and elevator, in aid of interstate and intrastate shipments alike, was affirmed. This case arose after the enactment of the Hepburn act.

Digitized by Google

On the other hand, it was held in the Reid Case that since Congress had taken control of the subject of the making of rates and charges, and by § 2 of the Hepburn act had forbidden the carrier to engage or participate in transportation unless the rates, fares, and charges had been filed and published in accordance with the provisions of the act, a state law requiring railroad companies to receive freight for transportation whenever tendered at a regular station, and to forward the same over the route selected by the person offering the shipment, under a penalty of $50 a day, besides all damages incurred, was in necessary conflict, since it required the carrier to do the very things forbidden by the Federal law.

So, in Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hardwick Farmers Elevator Co. 226 U. S. 426, 57 L. ed. 284, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 203, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174, it was held that since, by the Hepburn act, Congress had legislated concerning deliveries of cars in interstate commerce by carriers subject to the act, specifically requiring the carrier to provide and furnish "transportation" (cars being embraced within the definition of the term) upon reasonable request, the authority of the state of Minnesota to legislate upon the subject of the delivery of cars when called for to be used in interstate traffic was superseded. And see Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Greenwood Grocery Co. 227 U. S. 1, 57 L. ed. 389, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213.

These cases recognize the established rule that a state law enacted under any of the reserved powers—especially [419] if under the police power—is not to be set aside as inconsistent with an act of Congress, unless there is actual repugnancy, or unless Congress has, at least, manifested a purpose to exercise its paramount authority over the subject. The rule rests upon fundamental grounds that should not be disregarded. In Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 148, 47 L. ed. 108, 114, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 506, the court, speaking by Mr. Justice Harlan, said: "It should never be held that Congress intends to supersede or by its legislation suspend the exercise of the police powers of the states, even when it may do so, unless its purpose to effect that result is clearly manifested. This court has said—and the principle has been often reaffirmed—that 'in the application of this principle of supremacy of an act of Congress in a case where the state law is but the exercise of a reserved power, the repugnance or conflict should be direct and positive, so that the two acts could not be reconciled or consistently stand together.' Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 227, 243, 16 L. ed. 243, 247." In Savage v. Jones, 225 U. S. 501, 533, 56 L. ed. 1182, 1194, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715, the court said: "When the question is whether a Federal act overrides a state law, the entire scheme of the statute must, of course, be considered, and that which needs must be implied is of no less force than that which is expressed. If the purpose of the act cannot otherwise be accomplished,—if its operation within its chosen field else must be frustrated and its provisions be refused their natural effect, —the state law must yield to the regulation of Congress within the sphere of its delegated power [citing cases]. But the intent to supersede the exercise by the state of its police power as to matters not covered by the Federal legislation is not to be inferred from the mere fact that Congress has seen fit to circumscribe its regulation and to occupy a limited field. In other words, such intent is not to be implied unless the act of Congress, fairly interpreted, is in actual conflict with the law of the state." [Citing many cases.]

With respect to the specific effect of the Carmack [420] amendment (set forth in the margin†), it has been held, in a series of re-

†That any common carrier, railroad, or transportation company receiving property for transportation from a point in one state to a point in another state shall issue a receipt or bill of lading therefor, and shall be liable to the lawful holder thereof for any loss, damage, or injury to such property caused by it or by any common carrier, railroad, or transportation company to which such property may be delivered, or over whose line or lines such property may pass, and no contract, receipt, rule, or regulation shall exempt such common carrier, railroad, or transportation company from the liability hereby imposed; Provided, That nothing in this section shall deprive any holder of such receipt or bill of lading of any remedy or right of action which he has under existing law.

That the common carrier, railroad, or transportation company issuing such receipt or bill of lading shall be entitled to recover from the common carrier, railroad, or transportation company on whose line the loss, damage, or injury shall have been sustained the amount of such loss, damage, or injury as it may be required to pay to the owners of such property, as may be evidenced by any receipt, judgment, or transcript thereof.

Digitized by Google

cent cases (Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A. (N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Miller, 226 U. S. 513, 57 L. ed. 323, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Latta, 226 U. S. 519, 57 L. ed. 328, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Wells, F. & Co. v. Neiman-Marcus Co. 227 U. S. 469, 57 L. ed. 600, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 57 L. ed. 683, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Cramer, 232 U. S. 490, ante, 697, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Great Northern R. Co. v. O'Connor, 232 U. S. 508, ante, 703, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; Boston & M. R. Co. v. Hooker, 233 U. S. 97, ante, 868, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526), that the special regulations and policies of particular states upon the subject of the carrier's liability for loss or damage to interstate shipments, and the contracts of carriers with respect thereto, have been superseded.

But the Texas statute now under consideration does not in anywise either enlarge or limit the responsibility of the carrier for the loss of property intrusted to it in transportation, and only incidentally affects the remedy for enforcing that responsibility. As pointed out in the Cade [421] Case, 233 U. S. 642, ante, 1135, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678, it imposes not a penalty, but a compensatory allowance for the expense of employing an attorney, applicable in cases where the carrier unreasonably delays payment of a just demand and thereby renders a suit necessary. In fact and effect, it merely authorizes a moderate increment of the recoverable costs of suit in the large class of cases that are within its sweep, among which are incidentally included claims for freight lost or damaged in interstate commerce.

It is true that in Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 208, 55 L. ed. 167, 183, 31 L.R.A. (N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164 (a case arising since the Hepburn act), it was held that § 8 of the act of February 4, 1887, does not authorize the allowance of a counsel or attorney's fee in an action for loss of property intrusted to the carrier for purposes of transportation. But that is far from holding that it is not permissible for a state, as a part of its local procedure, to permit the allowance of a reasonable attorney's fee, under proper restrictions. In claims of this character, based upon the ordinary liability of the common carrier, although regulated by the commerce act, the state courts have full jurisdiction, and some differences respecting the allowance of costs and the amount of the costs are inevitable, as being peculiar to the forum. And we think that where a state, as in this instance, for reasons of internal policy, in order to offer a reasonable incentive to the prompt settlement of small but well-founded claims, and as a deterrent of groundless defenses, establishes by a general statute otherwise unexceptionable the policy of allowing recovery of a moderate attorney's fee as a part of the costs, in cases where, after specific claim made and a reasonable time given for investigation of it, payment is refused, and the claimant succeeds in establishing by suit his right to the full amount demanded, the application of such statute to actions for goods lost in interstate commerce is not inconsistent with the provisions of the commerce act and its amendments. The local [422] statute, as already pointed out, does not at all affect the ground of recovery, or the measure of recovery; it deals only with a question of costs, respecting which Congress has not spoken. Until Congress does speak, the state may enforce it in such a case as the present.

Judgment affirmed.

W. E. JOHNSON, T. E. Brents, and H. F. Coggeshall, Appts.,
v.
EDWIN GEARLDS, L. J. Krammer, Fred E. Brinkman, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 422-448.)

Appeal — from district court — Federal question.

1. A decree of a Federal district court enjoining Federal officers from closing saloons in certain territory ceded to the United States by Indian tribes, on the ground that the treaty of cession containing a stipulation against the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors within the ceded territory was necessarily repealed by the admission of the state on an equal footing with the original states, is reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court by direct appeal, even if this ground does not involve the construction or application of the Federal Constitution, where the complainants' entire case rests at bottom upon grounds that involve the construction of this and certain other Indian treaties with the United States.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938-989, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of judgments of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741, and B. Altman & Co. v. United States, 56 L. ed. U. S. 894.

On Federal control of Indians—see note to Worcester v. Georgia, 8 L. ed. U. S. 484.

Digitized by Google

Indians — Federal regulation — intoxicating liquors.

2. The entire ceded territory, including those portions lying within the exterior boundaries of the cession which were set apart as reservations, was subjected to the Federal laws prohibiting the introduction, manufacture, use of, or traffic in, intoxicating liquors in the Indian country by the Chippewa treaty of February 22, 1855 (10 Stat. at L. 1169), art. 7, which, after providing that the laws which have been or may be enacted by Congress regulating trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes shall continue and be in force within and upon the several reservations therein provided for, declares that those portions of such laws which prohibit the introduction, manufacture, use of, and traffic in, ardent spirits, wines, or other liquors in the Indian country, shall continue and be in force within the entire boundaries of the country therein ceded to the United States until otherwise provided by Congress.

[For other cases, see Indians, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — Federal regulation — intoxicating liquors — implied repeal — admission of state.

3. The equal footing clauses of the Minnesota enabling and admitting acts (act of February 26, 1857 [11 Stat. at L. 166, chap. 60]; act of May 11, 1858 [11 Stat. at L. 285, chap. 31]) do not operate as an implied repeal of the prohibition of the Chippewa treaty of February 22, 1855, art. 7, against the introduction, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating liquors within the ceded territory.

[For other cases, see Indians, II.; States, XI.; Statutes, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — Federal control — intoxicating liquors — implied repeal.

4. The recession to the United States by the Chippewa treaties of May 7, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 693), and March 19, 1867 (16 Stat. at L. 719), of portions of the original cession set apart as reservations by the treaty of February 22, 1855, did not operate to remove from the territory thus receded the prohibition of article 7 of the earliest treaty against the introduction, manufacture, or sale of intoxicating liquors within the ceded territory until otherwise provided for by Congress.

[For other cases, see Indians, II.; Statutes, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — legislative or judicial question — obsolescence of treaty — changed conditions.

5. Whether or not the prohibition in the Chippewa treaty of February 22, 1855, art. 7, against the introduction, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating liquors within the territory therein ceded to the United States until otherwise provided for by Congress shall now be enforced in view of the small number of Indians entitled to protection, as compared with the large population of whites who now form the great majority of the inhabitants, and in view of the high state of civilization and development of the territory in question, is a legislative rather than a judicial question.

[For other cases, see Courts, I. e, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 802.]

Argued May 1, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota to review a decree enjoining Federal officers from closing the saloons in certain territory ceded to the United States by Indian tribes. Reversed and remanded, with direction to dismiss the bill.[1]

See same case below on demurrer, 183 Fed. 611.

Statement by Mr. Justice Pitney:

This is a direct appeal from a final decree of the district court, rendered April 20, 1912, granting to appellees (who were complainants below, and will be so designated), a permanent injunction against appellants (defendants below), in accordance with the prayer of the amended bill of complaint. It appears that complainants are severally residents and citizens of the city of Bemidji, Beltrami county, Minnesota, and at the time of the filing of the [424] bill were, and for a considerable time had been, engaged in business there as saloon keepers, selling at retail spirituous, vinous, and malt liquors at their respective places of business in that city, each of them having paid to the Federal and state governments, respectively, the necessary tax and license fees, and having a receipt from the Federal Government and a liquor license issued under the authority of the state of Minnesota by the municipal council and officials of the city. The bill alleged that each of the complainants had refrained from selling or disposing of any liquor to Indians, or individuals of Indian blood, and had complied with the Federal and state laws in this and in other respects; that each of them had built up and established a profitable and lucrative trade; and that the jurisdictional amount was involved. It averred that defendants, being citizens of other states, and acting in conjunction as special officers under the Interior Department of the United States government, were threatening to enforce within the city of Bemidji the provisions of §§ 2139 and 2140 of the Revised Statutes of the United States and amendments thereto, and on December 9, 1910, had ordered complainants and other licensed saloon keepers in Bemidji to close their saloons and cease sales of liquor, and ship away their stock, threatening that otherwise they would destroy the stocks of liquor in the possession of complainants, on the ground that under article 7 of a treaty made on the 22d day of February, 1855, between the United States and certain bands of Chippewa Indians [10 Stat. at L. 1169], certain territory mentioned in the treaty, including what is now the city of Bemidji, was subject to the laws of the United States respecting the sale of liquors in the Indian country.

[1] Leave granted on June 22, 1914, to present petition for rehearing within sixty days.

Digitized by Google

To the bill as originally filed defendants interposed a demurrer, which was overruled, and a temporary injunction was granted. 183 Fed. 611. Thereafter, the cause was brought to final hearing upon an amended bill [425] and a reamended answer, and the court, adhering to its former conclusion, rendered a final decree, as already mentioned.

The pertinent historical facts, as deduced from the averments of the amended pleadings, are as follows: On and prior to February 22, 1855, certain bands of the Chippewa Tribe of Indians, known as the Mississippi bands and the Pillager and Lake Winnibigoshish bands, were in possession of the greater portion of the lands north of parallel 46, within the boundaries of the then territory of Minnesota. Their country constituted a wilderness, almost wholly uninhabited by civilized people. On the date mentioned, these bands entered into a treaty with the United States, which was approved by the Senate and proclaimed by the President shortly thereafter (10 Stat. at L. 1165). By its first article the Indians ceded and conveyed to the United States "all their right, title, and interest in and to the lands now owned and claimed by them, in the territory of Minnesota, and included within the following boundaries." [Here follows a particular description, by natural boundaries, of a tract of country said to contain about 21,000 square miles.] By the same article the Indians further relinquished and conveyed to the United States any and all right, title, and interest, of whatsoever nature, that they then had in and to any other lands in the territory of Minnesota or elsewhere. This article mentions no exception or reservation from the lands ceded or granted. By article II. there was "reserved and set apart a sufficient quantity of land for the permanent homes of the said Indians; the lands so reserved and set apart to be in separate tracts, as follows." The separate tracts were then briefly described or indicated. For the Mississippi bands six reservations were set apart, which came to be known as the Mille Lac, Rabbit Lake, Gull Lake, Pokagomon Lake, Sandy Lake, and Rice Lake Reservations; and besides these, a section of land was [426] reserved for one of the Indian chiefs. For the Pillager and Lake Winnibigoshish bands, three reservations were set apart, known from their respective locations as the Leech Lake, Lake Winnibigoshish, and Cass Lake Reservations.

The seventh article of the treaty is as follows:

"Article 7. The laws which have been or may be enacted by Congress, regulating trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes, to continue and be in force within and upon the several reservations provided for herein; and those portions of said laws which prohibit the introduction, manufacture, use of, and traffic in, ardent spirits, wines, or other liquors, in the Indian country, shall continue and be in force, within the entire boundaries of the country herein ceded to the United States, until otherwise provided by Congress."

By act of February 26, 1857 (11 Stat. at L. 166, chap. 60), the inhabitants of a portion of the territory, including the lands ceded by the Chippewas as above, were authorized to form a state government and come into the Union on an equal footing with the original states. The act contained no condition with reference to the treaty of 1855 or the rights of the Indians to any lands within the boundaries of the state. A state Constitution was formed, by which Indians were given the right to vote under certain circumstances, and persons residing on Indian lands were declared entitled to enjoy the rights and privileges of citizens as though they lived in any other portion of the state, and to be subject to taxation. This Constitution having been ratified and adopted by the people, Congress, by act of May 11, 1858 (11 Stat. at L. 285, chap. 31), admitted the state "on an equal footing with the original states in all respects whatever." And by § 3 it was enacted that all the laws of the United States, not locally inapplicable, should have the same force and effect within that state as in other states of the Union.

[427] Another treaty was made between the Mississippi, Pillager, and Lake Winnibigoshish bands of Chippewas and the United States under date May 7, 1864, which was ratified and proclaimed in the following year, and is known as the treaty of 1865 (13 Stat. at L. 693). It took the place of a treaty of March 11, 1863 (12 Stat. at L. 1249). By its 1st section the Gull Lake, Mille Lac, Sandy Lake, Rabbit Lake, Pokagomon Lake, and Rice Lake Reservations, as described in the treaty of 1855, were ceded to the United States, with an exception not now pertinent; and in consideration of this cession, the United States agreed to set apart for the future home of the Chippewas of the Mississippi a considerable tract of land (part of the great tract ceded in 1855), embraced within designated boundaries, expressly excepting, however, the reservations made in the treaty of 1855 for the Pillager and Lake Winnibigoshish bands, which were included within the boundaries mentioned. The lands thus set apart for the Chippewas of the Mississippi contained all the territory now within the limits of the city of Bemidji and the lands adjacent to it for a distance of several miles in all directions.

Digitized by Google

By a treaty made between the United States and the Chippewas of the Mississippi, dated March 19, 1867, ratified and proclaimed in the same year (16 Stat. at L. 719,) these bands ceded to the United States the greater portion (estimated at 2,000,000 acres) of the lands secured to them by the treaty of 1865, and in consideration of this cession, the United States set apart for the use of the same Indians a tract to be located in a square form as nearly as possible, with lines corresponding to the government surveys, the reservation to include White Earth Lake and Rice Lake, and to contain thirty-six townships. This reservation came to be known as the White Earth Reservation. It lies within the exterior boundaries of the cession of 1855.

The territory ceded to the United States by the treaty [428] of 1867 contains what is now the city of Bemidji and the country about it for miles in every direction.

By an act of January 14, 1889, known as the Nelson act (25 Stat. at. L. 642, chap. 24), the President was authorized to designate commissioners to negotiate with all the different bands of Chippewa Indians in Minnesota for the complete cession and relinquishment of their title and interest in all their reservations, except the White Earth and Red Lake Reservations, and in so much of these two reservations as, in the judgment of the Commission, was not required to make and fill the allotments required by this and existing acts. The act provided that a census should be taken, and that after the cession and relinquishment had been approved, all the Chippewa Indians in the state, except those on the Red Lake Reservation, should be removed to the White Earth Reservation, and lands should then be allotted to the Indians in severalty, in conformity with the act of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 119), and the surplus lands disposed of by sale, and the proceeds placed in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of all the Chippewa Indians in the state of Minnesota as a permanent fund, to bear interest payable annually for fifty years, and at the end of that period the fund to be divided and paid to all of said Chippewas, and their issue then living, in cash. By the 1st section of this act the acceptance and approval of the cession and relinquishment of the lands by the President of the United States was to be deemed full and ample proof of the assent of the Indians, and to operate as a complete extinguishment of the Indian title without further act or ceremony. Commissioners were appointed accordingly, and agreements were entered into between them and the several bands of Chippewas, by which the Indians accepted and ratified the provisions of the act, and ceded to the United States all their right, title, and interest in their reservations, excepting portions of [429] the White Earth and Red Lake Reservations, and these cessions were approved by the President on the 4th day of March, 1890.

Since the making of the treaty of 1855 the country then ceded to the United States, with the exception of the portions set apart as Indian reservations, has been largely developed, gradually at first, but with great rapidity during recent years, and all the land has become populated by white people, and opened up to settlement, and organized as political subdivisions of the state, and in the larger portion of the territory industries have been established and commercial interests have grown up, so as to materially change the situation that existed at the time of the making of the treaty. According to the census of 1910, the counties affected by that treaty show a total white population of 382,191. Bemidji is the county seat of Beltrami county, and is a municipal corporation, organized under the laws of the state as a city, containing within its corporate limits about 7,000 inhabitants, and, in connection with adjacent municipalities, constituting a population of about 9,000 people. The city is reached by five lines of railroads, three of which have transcontinental connections. The country surrounding it is highly developed, and there are no Indian habitations within 20 miles in any direction from the city.

The original Red Lake Indian Reservation lay immediately north of the great tract covered by the cession of 1855, and was not subject to the treaty of that year. Pursuant to the Nelson act of January 14, 1889, a considerable portion of this reservation was relinquished to the United States, and has been opened up to settlement, with the result that there is now a strip of territory about 15 miles in width, lying a few miles north of Bemidji, which is admittedly exempt from the provisions of any treaty or law relative to the introduction of intoxicating liquors in the Indian country; and in that strip the sale of intoxicating [430] liquors is actually conducted without interference on the part of the government of the United States.

Digitized by Google

Assistant Attorney General Wallace argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

Upon this record this court has jurisdiction to hear the direct appeal on three grounds:

(1) The construction or validity of article 7 of the treaty of 1855 is drawn in question.

United States v. Wright, 229 U. S. 226, 57 L. ed. 1160, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630.

If a decision to the effect that one statute impliedly repeals another involves the construction or invalidity of the earlier statute, the same must be true of a decision to the effect that a statute repeals an earlier treaty, since treaties and statutes are equally repealable.

Ex parte Webb, 225 U. S. 663, 56 L. ed. 1248, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; The Cherokee Tobacco (Boudinot v. United States) 11 Wall. 616, 20 L. ed. 227.

And where the construction or validity of a treaty is drawn in question, the fact that the construction of a statute is also involved does not affect this court's jurisdiction.

Pettit v. Walshe, 194 U. S. 216, 48 L. ed. 942, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; B. Altman & Co. v. United States, 224 U. S. 583, 56 L. ed. 894, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593.

"Validity" is a broader term than "constitutionality." Indeed, in the language of this court, "the validity of a statute of the United States . . . is drawn in question when the existence or constitutionality or legality of such law is denied."

United States ex rel. Champion Lumber Co. v. Fisher, 227 U. S. 445, 451, 57 L. ed. 591, 594, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 329.

Moreover, "validity" has a particularly comprehensive meaning as applied to treaties.

Jones v. Walker, 2 Paine, 288, Fed. Cas. No. 7,507.

(2) The construction or application of the Constitution is involved.

United States v. 43 Gallons of Whisky (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. ed. 846; Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Perrin v. United States, 232 U. S. 478, ante, 691, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387.

(3) The construction of the treaties of 1865 and 1867 is drawn in question.

As long as the question was properly presented by the pleadings, so that the lower court could have decided it if it had chosen to do so, an appeal will lie under § 238 of the Judicial Code.

Muse v. Arlington Hotel Co. 168 U. S. 435, 42 L. ed. 533, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Cornell v. Green, 163 U. S. 75, 41 L. ed. 76, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 969; Holder v. Aultman, M. & Co. 169 U. S. 81, 42 L. ed. 669, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 45 L. ed. 280, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174.

Article 7 of the treaty of 1855 was not repealed by the Minnesota enabling act, nor by the act admitting that state into the Union.

Ex parte Webb, 225 U. S. 663, 56 L. ed. 1248, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; United States v. Wright, 229 U. S. 226, 57 L. ed. 1160, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630; Donnelly v. United States, 228 U. S. 243, 57 L. ed. 820, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 710; United States v. Pelican, 232 U. S. 442, ante, 676, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; United States v. Sandoval, 231 U. S. 28, ante, 107, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

Congress may, by treaty or statute, forbid the introduction of liquor into ceded Indian lands which are within the jurisdiction of a previously created state.

Perrin v. United States, 232 U. S. 478, ante, 691, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; United States v. 43 Gallons of Whisky (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. ed. 846.

The rule that a reconveyance to the original grantor cancels existing covenants does not apply to treaties.

Wilson v. Shaw, 204 U. S. 24, 33, 51 L. ed. 351, 356, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233.

A treaty is something more than a mere covenant; it is a contract between sovereign nations, and by the Constitution is declared to be the supreme law of the land. Especially is this so of a provision like article 7, which is self-executing (United States v. 43 Gallons of Whisky [United States v. Lariviere] 93 U. S. 196, 23 L. ed. 847), and therefore equivalent to an act of Congress (Foster v. Neilson, 2 Pet. 314, 7 L. ed. 435).

The justification for the prohibition rests pre-eminently with Congress, and if that body has not seen fit to repeal it, it is not to be condemned by the courts unless purely arbitrary.

Perrin v. United States, 232 U. S. 478, 486, ante, 691, 695, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387.

There are three classes of Indians concerned:

(1) Full-blood White Earth and all Leech Lake allottees holding prior to the act of May 9, 1906. These may be citizens, but cannot alienate lands.

United States v. Pelican, 232 U. S. 442, ante, 676, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 437, 47 L. ed. 532, 536, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; McKay v. Kalyton, 204 U. S. 458, 466, 468, 51 L. ed.

Digitized by Google

566, 570, 571, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Couture v. United States, 207 U. S. 581, 52 L. ed. 350, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; United States v. Celestine, 215 U. S. 287, 290, 291, 54 L. ed. 198–200, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 55 L. ed. 738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 55 L. ed. 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587.

(2) All of above holding allotments only since the act of 1906. These are not citizens and cannot alienate.

United States v. Celestine, 215 U. S. 287, 290, 291, 54 L. ed. 198–200, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93.

(3) Mixed-blood White Earth allottees. Their status as emancipated Indians is not concluded by reason of their citizenship or their fee-simple allotments, but necessarily depends upon the further question whether they are recognized as a dependent people by the executive or legislative branches of the government.

United States v. Sandoval, 231 U. S. 28, ante, 107, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

This court has recognized the necessity of extending such a prohibition to territory adjacent to the actual danger zone, and the wisdom of such legislation, when considered in relation to its purpose, cannot be doubted.

United States v. 43 Gallons of Whisky (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 195, 23 L. ed. 847.

Mr. Charles P. Spooner argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Joseph P. Cotton, John C. Spooner, Fred W. Zollman, and Marshall A. Spooner, filed a brief for appellees:

Where a law is plain and unambiguous, no room is left for construction.

United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 358, 2 L. ed. 304; Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 414, 44 L. ed. 219, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

Whenever the power to enact a statute as it is by its terms, or is made to read by construction, is fairly open to denial and denied, the validity of such statute is drawn in question, but not otherwise.

Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 130 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 908, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503; Clough v. Curtis, 134 U. S. 361, 33 L. ed. 945, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Miller v. Cornwall R. Co. 168 U. S. 131, 42 L. ed. 409, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Sweringen v. St. Louis, 185 U. S. 38, 46 L. ed. 795, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569.

Land was Indian country whenever the Indian title had not been extinguished, and it continued to be Indian country so long as the Indians had title to it, and no longer. As soon as they parted with the title, it ceased to be Indian country, without any further act of Congress, unless by the treaty by which the Indians parted with their title, or by some act of Congress, a different rule was made applicable to the case.

Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 24 L. ed. 471.

We do not contend that an Indian treaty will necessarily repeal an act of Congress, but we do maintain that a treaty between certain bands of Indians and the United States can modify or repeal a prior treaty between the same parties.

Wiggan v. Conolly, 163 U. S. 56–60, 41 L. ed. 69–71, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914.

Mr. Justice Pitney, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

This direct appeal is taken under § 238, Judicial Code (act of March 3, 1911, 36 Stat. at L. 1157, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 228), which allows such an appeal (inter alia) "in any case that involves the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States; in any case in which the constitutionality of any law of the United States, or the validity or construction of any treaty made under its authority, is drawn in question." Our jurisdiction is invoked upon three grounds: (a) that the construction or validity of article 7 of the treaty of 1855 [10 Stat. at L. 1169] is drawn in question; (b) that the construction or application of the Constitution is [434] involved; (c) that the construction of the treaties of 1865 and 1867 [13 Stat. at L. 693, 16 Stat. at L. 719] is drawn in question. There is a motion to dismiss, based upon the ground that none of these contentions is well founded. We think the motion must be denied. The court below, in overruling the demurrer, based its decision upon the ground that the treaty of 1855 was necessarily repealed by the admission of the state of Minnesota into the Union upon an equal footing with the original states. This decision was based upon the bill as originally framed, but the amendments made no change affecting this ground of decision; and it is evident from the record that, in granting the final decree, the court adhered to the view expressed in overruling the demurrer. It is insisted by appellants, with some force, that this view was based upon grounds that involved the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States; and that for this reason the direct appeal lies. We find it unnecessary to consider the point, since it seems to us that the entire case for complainants rests at bottom upon grounds that involve the construction of the three treaties referred to, especially that of 1855.

Digitized by Google

The bill, either in its original or its amended form, did not expressly assert as a ground for relief that the treaty of 1855 had been repealed, in whole or in part, by the admission of the state. On the contrary, relief was prayed upon the ground that the second clause of article 7 (that which related to the liquor traffic, and was to remain in force until otherwise provided by Congress) applied only to the ceded territory, and not to the reservations set apart within that territory; that by the treaty of 1865 those reservations were ceded to the United States, and ceased to be Indian country in any sense; and that by the subsequent cession in the treaty of 1867 the reservation of 1865 in turn was vested in the United States, and therefore ceased to be Indian country; and finally, that article 7 of the treaty of 1855 had expired at the time of [435] the acts complained of in the bill (1910) by virtue of the provisions of the act of January 14, 1889, and the cessions made to the United States by the Chippewas of Minnesota pursuant to that act, and because of the changes wrought by time in the character of the territory included in the treaty of 1855, and the status of the Indians therein. These grounds of relief are reiterated in the amended bill, and the averments of the amended answer are calculated to meet them. And the principal force of the arguments on both sides is addressed to the construction of the several treaties referred to. For this reason, if for no other, the direct appeal is well taken.

Upon the merits, we may well begin with the disputed portion of the treaty of 1855:

"Article 7. The laws which have been or may be enacted by Congress, regulating trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes, to continue and be in force within and upon the several reservations provided for herein; and those portions of said laws which prohibit the introduction, manufacture, use of, and traffic in, ardent spirits, wines, or other liquors, in the Indian country shall continue and be in force, within the entire boundaries of the country herein ceded to the United States, until otherwise provided by Congress."

The reference to previous laws clearly points to the act of June 30, 1834, entitled, "An Act to Regulate Trade and Intercourse with the Indian Tribes, and to Preserve Peace on the Frontiers" (4 Stat. at L. 729, chap. 161), and kindred acts. The act of 1834 was a revision of previous enactments, and contains many provisions for the regulation of trade and intercourse. Its 20th and 21st sections (4 Stat. at L. 732, chap. 161) prohibit the introduction or manufacture of, or traffic in, spirituous liquor or wine within the Indian country. From them, §§ 2139, 2140, and 2141, Rev. Stat. were derived.

By the 1st section of the act of 1834, the term "Indian [436] country" was defined, for the purposes of that act, as meaning land to which the Indian title had not been extinguished. At the making of the treaty, therefore, the restriction respecting the liquor traffic was in force within the ceded area, because until then the Indian title had not been extinguished. It was the evident purpose of article 7 to continue the restriction in force in the ceded territory, notwithstanding the extinguishment of the Indian title. Such stipulations were not unusual. A contemporaneous treaty with the Winnebagoes contained a similar one. 10 Stat. at L. 1174, art. 8. And it has been uniformly recognized that such stipulations amount in effect to an amendment of the statute, so as to make the restriction effective throughout the ceded territory. United States v. 43 Gallons of Whisky (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 188, 196, 23 L. ed. 846, 847; Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 208, 24 L. ed. 471, 472.

The fundamental contention that underlies the entire argument for complainants is that the first part of article 7 had for its object that the laws of Congress, present and future, regulating trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes, were to continue and be in force within the reservations created by the treaty; while the latter portion of the article had for its object to keep in force in the ceded country—which, it is said, excludes the reservations—those portions of the laws that prohibit the introduction, manufacture, use of, and traffic in ardent spirits, etc., in the Indian country until otherwise provided by Congress; the particular insistence being that the latter clause applies merely to the so-called ceded territory, and not to the lands included within the reservations.

With this construction of the treaty we cannot agree. We think it rests upon a misconception of the fair import of the terms employed in article 7, whether considered alone or together with the context, and fails to give due effect to the reason and spirit of the stipulation.

It seems to us that in the qualifying clause—"within [437] the entire boundaries of the country herein ceded to the United States"—the words "entire boundaries" are equivalent to "outer boundaries," and therefore include the reservations that lie within. And this agrees with the context; for, if we turn back to see what is "herein ceded," we find that by the terms of article 1 the cession is of all the right, title, and interest of the Indians in the lands owned and claimed by them, included within designated boundaries (this being the great tract in question), and then, in a separate clause, a relinquishment and conveyance of all right, title, and interest of the Indians in any other lands in the territory of Minnesota or elsewhere. There is here no suggestion that the reservations are excepted out of the cession. On the contrary, article 1 in terms vests the Indian title in the United States as to all the described lands, including the reservations mentioned in article 2. The latter article reserves a number of comparatively small and isolated tracts "for the permanent homes of the said Indians." Of these, all are within the outer boundaries of the cession excepting the Mille Lac Reservation, which lies outside. Reading the two articles together, it is evident that the framers of the treaty intended that the reservations themselves should become the property of the United States, subject only to a trust for the occupancy of the Indians. This is placed beyond controversy when we observe that by the latter part of article 2 it was provided that the President of the United States might cause the reservations or portions thereof to be surveyed; assign a reasonable quantity, not exceeding 80 acres in any case, to each head of a family or single person over twenty-one years of age for his or their separate use; issue patents for the tracts so assigned, which tracts were to be exempt from taxation, levy, sale, or forfeiture, and not to be aliened or leased for a longer period than two years at one time, unless otherwise provided by the legislature of the state with the [438] assent of Congress; not to be sold or aliened in fee for a period of five years after the date of patent, and not then without the assent of the President; and that, prior to the issue of the patents, the President might make rules and regulations respecting the disposition of the lands in case of the death of the allottee, etc.

Digitized by Google

The subdivision of the reservations, allotments to individual Indians, and the ultimate alienation of allotments, being thus in view at the making of the treaty, it is unreasonable to give such a construction to the stipulation contained in the second portion of article 7 as would defeat its object, by removing the restriction from scattered parcels of land whenever it should come to pass that the Indian title therein was extinguished. The restriction would be of little force unless it covered the entire ceded area en bloc, so that no change in the situation of the reservations by way of extinguishing the residue of Indian title or otherwise should operate to limit its effect. And so, upon the whole, we deem it manifest that the second clause of article 7 dealt with the entire ceded country, including the reservations, as country proper to be subjected to the laws relating to the introduction, etc., of liquor into the Indian country until otherwise provided by Congress. It was evidently contemplated that the bands of Indians, while making their permanent homes within the reservations, would be at liberty to roam and to hunt throughout the entire country, as before. The purpose was to guard them from all temptation to use intoxicating liquors.

That it is within the constitutional power of Congress to prohibit the manufacture, introduction, or sale of intoxicants upon Indian lands, including not only lands reserved for their special occupancy, but also lands outside of the reservations, to which they may naturally resort, and that this may be done even with respect to lands lying within the bounds of a state, are propositions so [439] thoroughly established, and upon grounds so recently discussed, that we need merely cite the cases. Perrin v. United States, 232 U. S. 478, 483, ante, 691, 694, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; United States v. 43 Gallons of Whisky (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 188, 195, 197, 23 L. ed. 846, 848; Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

And we cannot agree with the District Court that article 7 of the treaty of 1855 was repealed by the Minnesota enabling act, or by the admission of that state into the Union upon equal terms with the other states. Neither the enabling act nor the act of admission contains any reference to the treaty, although the latter was so recent that it can hardly have been overlooked. The court seems to have considered that the continued existence of article 7, so far as it prohibited the introduction, manufacture, and sale of liquors within the ceded country outside of the reservations, was inconsistent with the "equal footing" clause of the enabling and admitting acts. That there is no such inconsistency results very plainly, as we think, from the reasoning and authority of the cases above cited. The court deemed that United States v. 43 Gallons of Whisky (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 188, 196, 23 L. ed. 846, 847, and Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399, were distinguishable upon the ground that in each of those cases the treaty under consideration was made after the state had been admitted into the Union. But if the making of such a treaty after the admission of the state is not inconsistent with the "equal footing" of that state with the others,—as, of course, it is not,—it seems to us to result that there is nothing in the effect of "equal footing" clauses to operate as an implied repeal of such a treaty when previously established.

Digitized by Google

In Ex parte Webb, 225 U. S. 663, 56 L. ed. 1248, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, we had to deal with the effect of the Oklahoma enabling act upon a previous statute (act of March 1, 1895, chap. 145, § 8, 28 Stat. at L. 693), which prohibited (inter alia) the "carrying into said [Indian] territory [440] any of such liquors or drinks," in view of the fact that the enabling act itself required that the Constitution of the new state should prohibit the manufacture, sale, or otherwise furnishing of intoxicating liquors within that part of the state formerly known as the Indian territory; and we held that in view of the existing treaties between the United States and the Five Civilized Tribes, and because the enabling act and the Constitution established thereunder dealt only with the prohibition of the liquor traffic within the bounds of the new state, the act of 1895 remained in force so far as pertained to the carrying of liquor from without the new state into that part of it which was the Indian territory.

In United States v. Wright, 229 U. S. 226, 57 L. ed. 1160, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630, we held that the prohibition against the introduction of intoxicating liquors into the Indian country, found in § 2139, Rev. Stat., as amended by the acts of July 23, 1892, chap. 234, 27 Stat. at L. 260, and January 30, 1897, chap. 109, 29 Stat. at L. 506, was not repealed, with respect to intrastate transactions, by the Oklahoma enabling act, in spite of the provision respecting internal prohibition contained therein, as already mentioned.

Upon the whole, we have no difficulty in concluding that article 7 of the treaty of February 22, 1855, was not repealed by the admission of Minnesota into the Union.

We come, therefore, to the principal contention of complainants and appellees, which is that the article was repealed by the effect of the treaties of 1865 and 1867. The argument in support of this contention may be outlined as follows: that by the earliest of the three treaties the several bands of Indians ceded to the United States the great tract of approximately 21,000 square miles, but excepted from that cession the several reservations created for the Mississippi bands and for the Pillager and Lake Winnibigoshish bands; that when the treaty of 1865 was [441] made, the Mississippi bands were the owners of their reservations within the exterior limits of the cession of 1855, which reservations were not covered by the second portion of article 7, but were subject to all of the laws of the United States regulating commerce and intercourse with the Indian tribes, simply because of being Indian country in fact; that by the treaty of 1865 the Mississippi bands ceded outright to the United States these reservations, and in return the United States ceded to them the tract of territory already mentioned (including Bemidji and the country surrounding it), excepting those portions included within the reservations of the Pillager and Lake Winnibigoshish bands; and that when, in 1867, in return for the White Earth Reservation, the Mississippi Chippewas receded to the United States the greater portion of the tract set apart for them in 1865, they ceded the same title and the same right and power over the lands that the three original tribes would have had; that is to say, they ceded them free and clear of article 7 of the treaty of 1855.

It will at once be observed that the argument rests at bottom upon the erroneous construction to which we have already called attention; viz., that the second portion of article 7 did not apply to the reservations that were within the exterior limits of the ceded territory. We repeat that, in our opinion, the restriction applied to all the territory that was included within the terms of the cession; as much to those portions set apart for reservations as to the surrounding territory. There was nothing in the treaty of 1865, therefore, to make the receded reservations unrestricted territory; nor was there anything in the treaty of 1867 to remove the restriction from the territory then receded. Reading the series of treaties together, it is plain enough, we think, that the contracting parties, in all that was done, were resting upon the plain language of the second part of article 7, which declared that the laws relating [442] to the introduction, etc., of liquor in the Indian country, should continue in force within the entire boundaries of the country in question until otherwise provided by Congress.

Finally, it is contended that article 7 of the treaty of 1855 had been superseded at the time of the acts complained of in the bill (1910) by virtue of the provisions of the Nelson act of January 14, 1889 (25 Stat. at L. 642, chap. 24), and the cessions made to the United States by the Indians pursuant to that act, and by reason of the change in the character of the territory included in the treaty of 1855 and the status of the Indians therein.

As already pointed out, this act provided that commissioners to be appointed by the President should negotiate with the different bands of Chippewas in the state of Minnesota for the complete cession and relinquishment of their title and interest in all their reservations in the state, except so much of the White Earth and Red Lake Reservations as was not required for allotments, and that acceptance and approval of such cession and relinquishment by the President should be deemed full and ample proof of the cession, and should operate as a complete extinguishment of the Indian title without other or further act or ceremony.

Digitized by Google

From the averments of the amended bill and answer it is not easy to gather a precise statement of the present situation of the Indian lands and of the Indians themselves, so far as it affects the question before us. Some reference is made to the situation at the Red Lake Reservation; but since it is not clear that the restriction contained in the treaty of 1855 was intended for the protection of the Indians within that reservation, we prefer to confine our attention to the situation as it existed in 1910 within the boundaries of the great tract that was the subject of the cession of 1855. Within those bounds there would seem to be remaining only fragments of the White Earth [443] and Leech Lake Reservations; both reservations being in process of allotment under the acts of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 119), and of January 14, 1889 (25 Stat. at L. 642, chap. 24), and amendatory acts. Of the lands that have been allotted, a considerable portion are still held in fee by the United States, and are nonalienable by the allottees until the expiration of the trust period. Upon the White Earth Reservation, and also at Leech Lake, the government maintains an Indian agency and superintendent, as well as Indian schools. At the White Earth agency, 5,600 Indians are carried upon the annuity rolls; at Leech Lake, 1,750 Indians. The majority of these reside upon lands embraced within the original reservation, and they are the same Indians, or descendants of the same, that were parties to the treaties of 1855, 1865, and 1867. In consequence of their elevation to the plane of citizenship by the operation of the allotment acts, tribal relations have, for most purposes, ceased to exist, but are recognized for the purpose of the distribution of annuities under the Nelson act. And it is admitted that for purposes of business, pleasure, hunting, travel, and other diversions, these Indians traverse parts of the region comprised in the cession of 1855, outside of the reservations, and thus visit the towns, villages, and cities in the territory, including Bemidji. On the other hand it is admitted that their visits to Bemidji are infrequent, and that there are no Indian habitations within a range of 20 miles in any direction from that city. And, as pointed out in the prefatory statement, the diminished Red Lake Reservation is admittedly surrounded by a strip of land, approximately 15 miles in width, which never was subject to the treaty of 1855, and upon which saloons are maintained in close proximity to that reservation. This strip extends along the northerly boundary of the cession of 1855, which is perhaps 10 or 12 miles north of Bemidji.

The argument for treating the restriction of 1855 as no [444] longer in force rests not upon any denial of the fact that there are some thousands of Indians at the White Earth and Leech Lake Agencies, who are still more or less under the guardianship of the government, and for whose protection the liquor restriction ought to be maintained, but rather upon the fact that these Indians are surrounded by territory in which liquor is lawfully obtainable. In support of this, it is said that the former Mississippi reservations ceded to the United States in 1865 are unrestricted territory; that so much of the Leech Lake and Lake Winnibigoshish Reservations as were conveyed to the United States in 1890 are such territory; that every allotment from either of these reservations as to which the trust period has expired is such territory, and that land sold to white men in the reservations is such territory. It will be observed, again, that each of these contentions rests upon the fundamental error that the reservations mentioned in the treaty of 1855 are not within the liquor restriction of article 7.

In view of the interpretation we have placed upon that article, it seems to us that the contention as to changed conditions must be based not upon the supposed fact that the tract covered by the cession of 1855 "is already dotted with wet territory," but rather upon the question whether the restriction—entered into more than half a century ago, when the country was a wilderness—ought to be treated as still in force, in view of the small number of Indians entitled to protection, as compared with the large population of whites who now form the great majority of the inhabitants, and in view of the high state of civilization and development of the territory in question.

In Perrin v. United States, 232 U. S. 478, 486, ante, 691, 695, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387, we had to deal with a somewhat similar question. That was a review of a conviction for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors upon ceded lands formerly included in the Yankton [445] Sioux Indian Reservation in the state of South Dakota. The reservation was created in 1858, and originally embraced 400,000 acres. A considerable part of it was allotted in severalty to members of the tribe under the act of 1887, the allotments being in small tracts scattered through the reservation. By an agreement ratified and confirmed by Congress August 15, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 286, 314, chap. 290), the tribe ceded and relinquished to the United States all the unallotted lands, and by article 17 of the agreement it was stipulated: "No intoxicating liquors nor other intoxicants shall ever be sold or given away upon any of the lands by this agreement ceded and sold to the United States, nor upon any other lands within or comprising the reservations of the Yankton Sioux or Dakota Indians as described in the treaty between the said Indians and the United States, dated April 19th, 1858 [11 Stat. at L. 743], and as afterwards surveyed and set off to the said Indians. The penalty for the violation of this provision shall be such as Congress may prescribe in the act ratifying this agreement." In the ratifying act a penalty was prescribed. The ceded lands were opened to disposition under the homestead and town-site laws, and passed largely into private ownership, and the place at which the intoxicating liquors were sold was within the defendant's own premises in a town located upon a part of the ceded lands held in private ownership by the inhabitants, none of whom was an Indian. After overruling the contention that the restriction was invalid because the power to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors upon all ceded lands rested exclusively in the state (citing United States v. 43 Gallons of Whisky [United States v. Lariviere], 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. ed. 846, and Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399), the opinion dealt with the further contention that the power of Congress was necessarily limited to what was reasonably essential to the protection of Indians occupying the unceded lands, and that this limitation was transcended by the provision in [446] question because it embraced territory greatly in excess of what the situation required, and because its operation was not confined to a designated period reasonable in duration, but apparently was intended to be perpetual. As to this the court said (p. 486):

Digitized by Google

"As the power is incident only to the presence of the Indians and their status as wards of the government, it must be conceded that it does not go beyond what is reasonably essential to their protection, and that, to be effective, its exercise must not be purely arbitrary, but founded upon some reasonable basis. Thus, a prohibition like that now before us, if covering an entire state when there were only a few Indian wards in a single county, undoubtedly would be condemned as arbitrary. And a prohibition valid in the beginning doubtless would become inoperative when, in regular course, the Indians affected were completely emancipated from Federal guardianship and control. A different view in either case would involve an unjustifiable encroachment upon a power obviously residing in the state. On the other hand, it must also be conceded that, in determining what is reasonably essential to the protection of the Indians, Congress is invested with a wide discretion, and its action, unless purely arbitrary, must be accepted and given full effect by the courts."

Although the circumstances of the present case are different, and we are here dealing with a question of obsolescence rather than of original invalidity, the language just quoted indicates the point of view from which the question should be approached. But we must not forget that the question is one, primarily, for the consideration of the law-making body; nor are we in danger of doing so, since, by the very terms of the stipulation now under consideration, the prohibition of the liquor traffic was to continue "until otherwise provided by Congress." We do not mean to say that if it appeared that no considerable [447] number of Indians remained wards of the government within the territory in question, the courts would not be justified in declaring that, since the constitutional warrant for the restriction no longer existed, the restriction must expire with it. But where the question confessedly turns not upon a total, nor even upon an approximately complete, emancipation of the Indians from the Federal guardianship, but upon their unimportance as compared with the interests of the population at large, we think the question is legislative rather than judicial.

Indeed, it has only recently been under consideration by Congress. On February 17, 1911 (Senate Doc. No. 824, 61st Cong., 3d Sess., vol. 85), the President, in a special message, called attention to the situation in Minnesota, resulting from the operation of the old Indian treaties under present conditions; and with respect to the area ceded by the Chippewas in 1855, he stated: "The records of the Indian Bureau show that there are within said area, under the jurisdiction of the superintendents of the White Earth and Leech Lake Reservations, 7,196 Indians who can be amply protected by limiting the territory as to which said treaty provisions shall remain in force and effect to the area within and contiguous to said reservations, particularly described as follows: . . . I therefore recommend that Congress modify the article of said treaty quoted above so as to exclude from the operations of its provisions all of the territory ceded by said treaty to the United States, except that immediately above described."

Digitized by Google

That Congress has not yet acted upon this recommendation is evidence that the problem is not so entirely obvious of solution that it can be judicially declared to be beyond the range of legislative discretion.

Since it must be admitted that complainants have no ground of relief against defendants if the restriction remains in force at Bemidji, as we hold that it does, it follows [448] that the decree of the District Court should be reversed, and the cause remanded with directions to dismiss the bill.

Decree reversed.

Mr. Justice McKenna and Mr. Justice Lurton dissent upon grounds expressed in the opinion of the District Court, reported in 183 Fed. 611.

EQUITABLE SURETY COMPANY v. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, TO THE USE OF W. McMILLAN & SON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 448–458.)

Principal and surety — bond of public contractor — release of surety — change in contract.

Changes in a contract for the erection of a public school building, involving the relocation of the building, and necessitating a change in the grade, though not contemplated in such contract, and made without the knowledge and consent of the surety on the contractor's bond given conformably to the act of 1899, February 28 (30 Stat. at L. 906, chap. 218), do not release the surety from his obligation under such bond to pay promptly all persons supplying the contractor with labor and materials for the prosecution of the work,—at least, so far as their labor and materials are supplied in accordance with the original contract.

[For other cases, see Principal and Surety, III. f. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 861.]

Argued April 15, 1914. Decided June 8, 1914.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia presenting the question whether the surety on the bond of a public contractor is discharged, so far as laborers and materialmen are concerned, by changes in the contract, made without the surety's knowledge or consent. Answered in the negative.

Statement by Mr. Justice Pitney:

The court of appeals of the District of Columbia certifies that the record in the above-entitled cause, now pending in said court upon appeal from the supreme court of the District of Columbia, discloses the following:

The declaration of the United States to the use of W. McMillan & Son, filed February 11, 1913, against the Equitable Surety Company, alleges:

That Allen T. Howison, as principal, and the Equitable Surety Company, as surety, on July 24, 1911, executed a bond to the United States in the penal sum of $110,350, conditioned for the faithful performance by Howison of a certain contract made by him with the commissioners of the District of Columbia on that date. A copy of the bond, made an exhibit, shows that the contract was for the erection of a school building fronting on Eleventh street, N. W., between Harvard and Girard streets, in the city of Washington. The conditions of the bond are that if Howison shall perform to the satisfaction of the commissioners the work to be done by him in accordance with the stipulations of the contract, and shall save harmless and indemnify the District of Columbia from any and all claims, delays, suits, charges, damages, judgments, etc., on account of any accidents to persons or property after the commencement of the work and prior to completion and acceptance, and pay the same; and "will promptly make payments to all persons supplying him [450] with labor and material in the prosecution of the work provided for in said contract," etc., the obligation shall be void; otherwise to remain in force.

That thereafter W. McMillan & Son, at the request of the Butt-Chapple Stone Company, agreed to furnish to said contractor certain stone materials to be used in the prosecution of the work provided for in the contract by the contractor, and did furnish to said contractor materials of the kind and quality specified in his contract to the value of $4,452.84, of which material the contractor used on the building a quantity of the value of $3,952.84, for which he has failed to make payment. And that defendant, though requested so to do, has refused to pay the same. The affidavit of the plaintiff in support of the declaration follows the requirements of rule 73.

After the general issue, defendant filed a special plea denying liability on said bond because, after the execution and delivery of the same, and without the knowledge or consent of defendant, the commissioners of the District of Columbia and the said Howison, its principal, altered the contract the performance of which was guaranteed by said bond. That said alteration consisted in the entire changing of the building from one fronting on Eleventh street to one fronting on Harvard street, which alteration involved the contractor in considerable expense not contemplated in the original contract, and prejudicial to defendant. That said relocation of the building necessitated a material change in grading the ground. That prior to the change of location the contractor had graded the ground as required in the contract, and expended therein the sum of $2,393.90. And that by reason of the change said sum was a total loss to the contractor, and the further excavation made necessary by the change of location was done at a cost of $1,300.90.

Digitized by Google

The affidavit of defense alleged the said change in the contract without its knowledge or consent; and that the [451] same necessitated a material change in the grading of the land, which had been previously performed by the contractor, at a considerable expenditure not contemplated in the original contract, and prejudicial to the defendant.

On motion under the 73d rule of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, the court entered judgment for the plaintiff for the amount of the demand; and defendant has appealed therefrom.

By stipulation two other cases involving the same question here presented are to abide the result of this case.

The act of Congress, in compliance with the requirements of which the aforesaid bond was executed (30 Stat. at L. 906, chap. 218), reads as follows:

An Act Relative to the Payment of Claims for Material and Labor Furnished for District of Columbia Buildings.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That hereafter any person or persons entering into a formal contract with the District of Columbia for the construction of any public building, or the prosecution and completion of any public work, or for repairs upon any public building or public work, shall be required, before commencing such work, to execute the usual penal bond, with good and sufficient sureties, with the additional obligations that such contractor or contractors shall promptly make payments to all persons supplying him or them labor and materials in the prosecution of the work provided for in such contract; and any person or persons making application therefor and furnishing affidavit to the department under the direction of which said work is being or has been prosecuted that labor or materials for the prosecution of such work has been supplied by him or them, and payment for which has not been made, shall be furnished with a certified copy of said contract and bond, upon which said person or persons supplying such labor and materials shall have a right of action, and shall be authorized to [452] bring suit in the name of the District of Columbia or the United States, for his or their use and benefit, against said contractor and sureties, and to prosecute the same to final judgment and execution: Provided, That such action and its prosecution shall not involve the District of Columbia or the United States in any expense: Provided, That in such case the court in which such action is brought is authorized to require proper security for costs in case judgment is for the defendant.

Approved, February 28, 1899.

The court of appeals further certifies that the following question of law arises upon the record; that its decision is necessary to the proper disposition of the cause; and, to the end that a correct result may be reached, desires the instruction of the Supreme Court of the United States upon that question, to wit:

Did the alteration of the terms of the contract by the District of Columbia and the contractor, without the knowledge or consent of the surety, have the effect to release the surety from the obligation of the bond?

Mr. J. J. Darlington argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Joseph A. Burkart and William E. Ambrose, filed a brief for the Equitable Surety Company:

A change in the contract like the one here presented, namely, a change which substituted a different site for the building to be erected, which materially increased its cost, and which was made without his consent or knowledge, necessarily releases the surety.

Miller v. Stewart, 9 Wheat. 680, 6 L. ed. 189; United States v. Boecker, 21 Wall. 652, 22 L. ed. 472; Zimmerman v. Judah, 13 Ind. 286; United States v. Freel, 186 U. S. 309, 318, 46 L. ed. 1177, 1181, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 875; O'Neal v. Kelley, 65 Ark. 550, 47 S. W. 409; Chester v. Leonard, 68 Conn. 495, 37 Atl. 397; Thompson v. Chaffee, 39 Tex. Civ. App. 569, 89 S. W. 285; School Dist. v. Green, 134 Mo. App. 426, 114 S. W. 578; McConnell v. Poor, 113 Iowa, 139, 52 L.R.A. 312, 84 N. W. 968; Southern Bridge Co. v. Bogenshot, — Tenn. —, 48 S. W. 97.

A corporate surety, equally with any other contracting party, whether a surety or a principal, has a right to stand upon its contract, as made by it, and any alteration in the contract which increases its risk or otherwise affects its liability, especially where the change is to its detriment or loss, thereby releases it.

Digitized by Google

United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Golden Pressed & Fire Brick Co. (United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. United States) 191 U. S. 416, 48 L. ed. 242, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Bauschard Co. v. Fidelity & C. Co. 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 375; United States v. American Bonding & T. Co. 32 C. C. A. 420, 61 U. S. App. 584, 89 Fed. 929; United States use of District of Columbia v. Bayly, 39 App. D. C. 105, 41 L.R.A.(N.S.) 422; Baglin v. Southern Surety Co. 42 Wash. L. Rep. 164.

Mr. Wharton E. Lester argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Lucas P. Loving, Daniel W. Baker, Wilton J. Lambert, and William E. Leahy, filed a brief for the United States to the use of W. McMillan & Son:

The alteration of the terms of the contract set forth in the certificate herein by the District of Columbia and the contractor without the knowledge or consent of the surety did not have the effect to release the surety from the obligation of the bond.

United States use of Anniston Pipe & Foundry Co. v. National Surety Co. 34 C. C. A. 526, 92 Fed. 549; United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Golden Pressed & Fire Brick Co. (United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. United States) 191 U. S. 416, 48 L. ed. 242, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; United States use of Phœnix Iron Co. v. California Bridge & Constr. Co. 152 Fed. 559; United States use of Delaware Hardware Co. v. Lynch, 192 Fed. 364.

The bond is a dual bond, being for the benefit of certain statutory beneficiaries, including the District of Columbia and the materialmen and laborers furnishing material and work on the building.

United States use of Standard Oil Co. v. City Trust, S. D. & Secur. Co. 21 App. D. C. 369; United States use of Vermont Marble Co. v. Burgdorf, 13 App. D. C. 506.

The surety is fully protected even though the claims of the several statutory beneficiaries exceed the penalty of the bond.

American Surety Co. v. Lawrenceville Cement Co. 96 Fed. 25; United States v. Heaton, 63 C. C. A. 156, 128 Fed. 416; Griffith v. Rundle, 23 Wash. 458, 55 L.R.A. 381, 63 Pac. 199; United States use of Fidelity Nat. Bank v. Rundle, 40 C. C. A. 450, 100 Fed. 402; American Surety Co. v. Lawrenceville Cement Co. 110 Fed. 717.

No change made by the principal on the bond and the District of Columbia, one of the statutory beneficiaries, can affect the rights of laborers and materialmen.

United States use of Anniston Pipe & Foundry Co. v. National Surety Co. 34 C. C. A. 526, 92 Fed. 550; Griffith v. Rundle, 23 Wash. 455, 55 L.R.A. 381, 63 Pac. 199; Conn v. State, 125 Ind. 514, 25 N. E. 443; Doll v. Crume, 41 Neb. 660, 59 N. W. 806; Steffes v. Lemke, 40 Minn. 27, 41 N. W. 302; Henricus v. Englert, 137 N. Y. 494, 33 N. E. 550; School Dist. ex rel. Koken Iron Works v. Livers, 147 Mo. 585, 49 S. W. 507; Abbott v. Morrissette, 46 Minn. 11, 48 N. W. 416; Kaufmann v. Cooper, 46 Neb. 644, 65 N. W. 796; United States use of Phœnix Iron Co. v. California Bridge & Constr. Co. 152 Fed. 559.

Mr. Justice Pitney, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The act of February 28, 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 906, chap. 218), under which the bond in question was given, was modeled after an act of August 13, 1894, entitled, "An Act for the Protection of Persons Furnishing Materials and Labor for the Construction of Public Works" (28 Stat. at L. 278, chap. 280, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2523). In an action founded upon a bond given under the latter act, it was held by the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit, in United States use of Anniston Pipe & Foundry Co. v. National Surety Co. 34 C. C. A. 526, 92 Fed. 549, 551, that the obligation has a dual aspect, it being given, in the first place, to secure to the government the faithful performance of all obligations which a contractor may assume towards it; and, in the second place, to protect third persons from whom the contractor may obtain materials or labor; and that these two agreements are as distinct as if contained in separate instruments. It was consequently held that the sureties in such a bond could not claim exemption from liability to persons who had supplied labor or materials to their principal, to enable him to execute his contract with the United States, simply because the government and the [455] contractor, without the surety's knowledge, had made changes in the contract subsequent to the execution of the bond, the changes being such as did not alter the general character of the work contemplated by the contract, or the general character of the materials necessary for its execution.

In support of this decision several cases from the state courts were cited, among them Dewey v. State, 91 Ind. 173, 185; Conn v. State, 125 Ind. 514, 518, 25 N. E. 443; Steffes v. Lemke, 40 Minn. 27, 29, 41 N. W. 302; and Doll v. Crume, 41 Neb. 655, 660, 59 N. W. 806. They fairly sustain the conclusion reached. The cases cited from the Indiana and Minnesota reports antedated the passage of the act of 1894, and may have furnished the suggestion for that enactment.

Digitized by Google

The decision of the circuit court of appeals in United States ex rel. Anniston Pipe & Foundry Co. v. National Surety Co. supra, although never until now brought under the review of this court, has been many times cited and followed in the other Federal courts. Brown & H. Co. v. Ligon, 92 Fed. 851, 857; United States use of Fidelity Nat. Bank v. Rundle, 40 C. C. A. 450, 100 Fed. 400, 402; United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Omaha Bldg. & Constr. Co. 53 C. C. A. 465, 116 Fed. 145, 147; Chaffee v. United States Fidelity & G. Co. 63 C. C. A. 644, 128 Fed. 918; United States ex rel. Maxwell v. Barrett, 135 Fed. 189, 190; Henningsen v. United States Fidelity & G. Co. 74 C. C. A. 484, 143 Fed. 810, 813; City Trust, S. D. & Surety Co. v. United States, 77 C. C. A. 397, 147 Fed. 155, 156; United States use of Phœnix Iron Co. v. California Bridge & Constr. Co. 152 Fed. 559, 562; Title Guaranty & Trust Co v. Puget Sound Engine Works, 89 C. C. A. 618, 163 Fed. 168, 174.

In United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Golden Pressed & Fire Brick Co: (United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. United States) 191 U. S. 416, 48 L. ed. 242, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; and United States use of Hill v. American Surety Co. 200 U. S. 197, 203, 50 L. ed. 437, 440, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168, this court adopted a reasonably liberal construction of the act of 1894, in view of the fact that it was evidently designed to furnish the obligation of a bond as a substitute for the security which might otherwise be obtained by attaching a lien to the property; such lien not being permissible in the case of a government work.

[456] It seems to us that the construction given to that act in the case in 92 Fed. is correct, and that it applies equally to the act of 1899, now under consideration; and that this act, like the other, should receive a reasonably liberal interpretation in aid of the public object whose accomplishment is so evidently intended. Its title is, "An Act Relative to the Payment of Claims for Material and Labor Furnished for District of Columbia Buildings." The enacting clause, as well as the title, shows that Congress recognized that no legislation was necessary in order to enable the commissioners of the District to require "the usual penal bond, with good and sufficient sureties," from a contractor engaged for the construction of a public building. The object of the legislation was to give legal sanction to the "additional obligation that such contractor or contractors shall promptly make payments to all persons supplying him or them labor and materials in the prosecution of the work provided for in such contract," and to give to such a laborer or materialman the right to bring an action, if necessary, upon the bond, either in the name of the District of Columbia or of the United States, for his own benefit, against the contractor and sureties. The nominal obligee is, with respect to these third parties, a mere trustee, and the obligors, including the surety as well as the principal contractor, enter into the obligation in full view of this. The public is concerned not merely because laborers and materialmen (being without the benefit of a mechanics' lien in the case of public buildings) would otherwise be subject to great losses at the hands of insolvent or dishonest contractors, but also because the security afforded by the bond has a substantial tendency to lower the prices at which labor and material will be furnished, because of the assurance that the claims will be paid.

Stress is placed by counsel for the surety company upon the fact that the building was materially altered, and in a [457] manner that involved the contractor in considerable expense not contemplated in the original contract. If these alterations were made pursuant to a stipulation for that purpose contained in the contract, they were binding upon the surety, unless they were so extensive and material as to amount to a departure from the original contract rather than a permissible modification of its details. United States v. Freel, 92 Fed. 299, 39 C. C. A. 491, 99 Fed. 237, 186 U. S. 309, 46 L. ed. 1177, 22 Sup. Ct. Sup. 875.

So far as the certificate shows, however, the contract here in question contained no clause permitting changes. In such case it is beside the question to inquire whether the changes were important, or, indeed, whether they prejudiced or benefited the contractor. The rule that obtains in ordinary cases is that any change in the contract made between the principals without the consent of the surety discharges the obligation of the latter, even though the change be beneficial to the principal obligor.

But it lies at the foundation of this rule of strictissimi juris that the agreement altering the undertaking of the principal must be participated in by the obligee or creditor, in order that it may have the effect of discharging the surety. This is expressed or implied in all the cases. Miller v. Stewart, 9 Wheat. 680, 703, 708, 709, 6 L. ed. 189, 195–197; Sprigg v. Bank of Mt. Pleasant, 14 Pet. 201, 208, 10 L. ed. 419, 422: Magee v. Manhattan L. Ins. Co. 92 U. S. 93, 98, 23 L. ed. 699, 700; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Hanford, 143 U. S. 187.

Digitized by Google

191, 36 L. ed. 118, 120, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Prairie State Nat. Bank v. United States, 164 U. S. 227, 233, 41 L. ed. 412, 416, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; United States v. Freel, 186 U. S. 309, 310, 317, 46 L. ed. 1177, 1178, 1181, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 875.

In the case of a bond given under a statute such as the act of February 28, 1899, there is no single obligee or creditor. The surety is charged with notice that he is entering into what is, in a very proper sense, a public obligation, and one that will be relied upon by persons who can in no manner control the conduct of the nominal obligee, and with respect to whom the latter is a mere [458] trustee, and therefore incapable, upon general principles of equity, of bartering away, for its own benefit or convenience, the rights of the beneficiaries. In the light of the statute, the surety becomes bound for the performance of the work by the principal in accordance with the stipulations of the contract, and for the prompt payment of the sums due to all persons supplying labor and material in the prosecution of the work provided for in the contract.

What would be the result of a change not contemplated in the original contract, as between the District of Columbia, consenting to the change, and the surety company, not consenting thereto, is a question not now before us, and respecting which we express no opinion. But, with respect to obligations incurred by the contractor to laborers and materialmen, at least, so far as their labor and materials are supplied in accordance with the original contract, it is obvious, we think, that a construction which would discharge the surety because of any change to which the laborers and materialmen were not parties would defeat the principal object that Congress had in view in enacting the statute. If the change were so great as to amount to an abandonment of the contract and the substitution of a substantially different one, so that persons supplying labor and materials would necessarily be charged with notice of such abandonment, a different question would be presented. But, in the case of such a change as was here made,—a mere change of position and location of the building, without affecting its general character; involving changes in grading, but having nothing to do with the furnishing of the materials upon which the action is based,—it seems to us that the responsibility of the surety to the materialman remains unaffected.

The question certified will be answered in the negative.

[459] MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

F. D. LARABEE and F. S. Larabee. Partners in Business under the Style and Firm Name of the Larabee Flour Mills Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 459–475.)

Error to state court — Federal question — correct decision below.

1. A writ of error to a state court from the Federal Supreme Court will not be dismissed for want of jurisdiction because the Federal rights which were passed upon by the state court were correctly decided, where the correctness of such decision is not so obvious as to render frivolous the contentions respecting such Federal rights.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1095-1137, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — state regulation — awarding fees for attorneys' services in Federal Supreme Court.

2. No state statute can empower a state court, when assessing the damages recoverable by the successful plaintiff in mandamus proceedings, to allow a sum for attorneys' fees for services rendered in the Federal Supreme Court upon a writ of error unsuccessfully prosecuted by the defendant, where such an award was not only not authorized by the Federal laws, but was in conflict with the settled rule in the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Courts, V. c, 8, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Note.—On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

On validity of statutory provision for attorneys' fees—see note to Builders' Supply Depot v. O'Connor, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 910.

On unconstitutional inequality or discrimination in statutes allowing attorneys' fees—see notes to Farmers' & M. Ins. Co. v. Dobney, 47 L. ed. U. S. 824, and Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 586.

Digitized by Google

Error to state court — further proceedings below — supersedeas — effect of affirmance.

3. The allowance of a writ of error with supersedeas from the Federal Supreme Court to review a judgment of a state court awarding a writ of mandamus does not preclude the state court, after its judgment has been affirmed by the Federal Supreme Court, from assessing, under the authority of Kan. Gen. Stat. 1909, § 6319, as part of the damages recoverable by the plaintiff, the latter's business losses suffered during the pendency of the proceedings in the Federal Supreme Court by reason of defendant's refusal to obey the command of the mandamus.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IV. g, IX. l, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Election of remedies — choice — action on supersedeas bond or under general law.

4. The right, if any, to sue on the supersedeas bond given on a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to review a judgment of a state court awarding a writ of mandamus, to recover for business losses sustained during the pendency of the proceedings in the Federal Supreme Court by defendant's refusal to obey the command of the mandamus, does not imply an exclusion of the right to sue under the general law to recover such damages, if such an election should be made.

[For other cases, see Election of Remedies, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — attorneys' fees to successful plaintiff in mandamus.

5. Damages for attorneys' fees for services rendered to the successful plaintiff in a state court in mandamus proceedings may be awarded under the authority of Kan. Gen. Stat. 1909, § 6319, without denying to the defendant the equal protection of the laws, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., although no reciprocal right in case of success is given to defendant, and no such right is given to litigants generally.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 135.]

Argued December 15 and 16, 1913. Decided June 22, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a judgment awarding damages to the successful plaintiff in mandamus proceedings. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 85 Kan. 214, 116 Pac. 901.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice White:

A dispute as to a small charge for demurrage having arisen between the Missouri Pacific Railway Company and [460] the Larabee Flour Mills Company, the railway company, to enforce payment, suspended the rendering of a certain class of switching service which it had previously regularly performed for the mills company. The latter, on September 15th, 1906, commenced in the supreme court of Kansas mandamus proceedings to compel the continuance of the service. After a response to an alternative rule and a hearing on the 8th of December, 1906, the court granted a peremptory mandamus. 74 Kan. 808, 88 Pac. 72. At the close of the opinion there was the following memorandum:

"The court has authority to render judgment in favor of the plaintiff for any damage it has sustained. Gen. Stat. 1901, § 5193. The plaintiff is given ten days in which to file a claim for damages, stating separately the character and amount of each item. The defendant is given ten days after notice of the filing of the claim in which to except to any items which it may deem not recoverable. The court will then pass upon the exceptions if any be taken, and make orders respecting a hearing."

Some days thereafter a claim of damages was filed enumerating fifteen items. The first eight concerned various business losses alleged to have been occasioned by the suspension of the service, such as decrease in the output of the mill, increased cost of hauling, etc., etc. Four of the claims on these subjects aggregated $4,907.39, and four stated no amount, but reserved the right to make a future claim for losses in case the litigation should be prolonged and the resumption of the service postponed. The remaining six items, with one exception, related to small expenses alleged to have been incurred in the mandamus suit. One of them, however, the fourteenth, made a charge of $2,500 "to cash paid and plaintiff's agreement to pay Waters & Waters attorneys' fees in this case." The fifteenth item reserved the right to make a charge for future [461] legal services "if this case is taken to the Supreme Court of the United States whatever such services may be worth." A few days after this claim was filed, on December 24th, 1906, a writ of error was issued from this court to the judgment in mandamus, and a bond to operate as a supersedeas was approved. About two years thereafter, on January 11th, 1909, the case was decided in this court and the judgment below was affirmed. 211 U. S. 612, 53 L. ed. 352, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214.

After the mandate went down, leave was given to file an amended claim for damages, and on the same day a commissioner was appointed to hear the testimony concerning it and report. The amended claim was filed. It was divided into three general classes: first, damages asserted to have arisen from loss of business, etc.; second, damages claimed as the result of the expenses and outlay for the suit; third, cost incurred or anticipated, occasioned by the hearing of the claim. The first, that is, the business losses, was embraced in separate items substantially following the order of the original claim; that is, it was based on alleged loss of output, increased cost of operation, etc., etc. The amounts of many of these items were larger, as they covered the time from the discontinuance of the service up to the filing of the amended claim. The aggregate of the claim was $18,921.90, as compared with $4,907.39, made at the time of the first claim. The second, the expenses of the suit, was greatly changed. Leaving out two insignificant items, as amended the claim was in substance as follows:

Digitized by Google

The claim for $2,500 paid or to be paid to Waters & Waters for personal services was changed to read, "For the reasonable value of the services of Waters & Waters to bring this action and to attend to the same in the supreme court of the state of Kansas, the sum of $ 2,500.00

[462] "Tenth. For the reasonable value of the services of Waters & Waters in this case in the Supreme Court of the United States, the sum of 40,000.00

"Eleventh. For cash paid out for printed briefs in the state and United States Supreme Court, the sum of 193.50

"Twelfth. For the reasonable value of the professional services of John F. Switzer, attorney at law, employed to assist Waters & Waters in the Supreme Court of the United States, the plaintiff, in the best judgment of the partners composing said firm, deeming it necessary, after considering the momentous and far-reaching controversy made, urged, and argued in the Supreme Court of the United States, and which controversy it could not avoid, the sum of 3,000.00

"Thirteenth. For the reasonable value of the professional services of the firm of Rossington & Smith, attorneys at law, also employed to present the case of the plaintiff in the Supreme Court of the United States, the plaintiff, in the best judgment of the partners composing said firm, deeming it necessary, after considering the momentous and far-reaching controversy made, urged, and contended for in the Supreme Court of the United States, and which controversy it could not avoid, the sum of 30,000.00

"Fourteenth. For the railroad fare, hotel bills, and reasonable expenses of W. H. Rossington and J. G. Waters in attending on the United States Supreme Court in April, 1908, the sum of $250 each, and making a total of 500.00

[463] "Fifteenth. For the railroad fare, hotel bills, and reasonable expenses of Charles Blood Smith and J. G. Waters in attending on the Supreme Court in October, 1908, the sum of 480.60

"Sixteenth. For the costs due the plaintiff in the Supreme Court of the United States, the sum of ..... 148.25"

The 17th, 18th, and 19th items embraced small items of traveling and other expenses of the parties and some of their attorneys. In the items of court expenses the difference between the original claim was substantially this: that the claim had grown from about $2,800 for attorneys' fees in the state court when the original claim in damages was filed to a sum in excess of $75,000, all of which increase resulted from charges made for professional services rendered in this court in connection with the trial of the case. The remaining items of the third class related to expenses incurred under the reference to the commissioner before whom the case was pending, with a reservation of the right to make future charges for such purpose when the reference was completed.

The railway company objected to the various items in the amended claim as follows: To those covering the business losses, decrease of output, increased expenses, etc., etc., besides denying that the suit was the proximate cause of the losses represented by the alleged claims, and asserting their speculative nature, it was specially charged that in so far as they included items arising after the allowance of the writ of error from this court and the giving of the supersedeas bond, they were not within the cognizance of the court, but were matters alone of Federal competency within the jurisdiction of this court. So far as the claims for alleged outlay and expenses including attorneys' fees in the state court were concerned, it was alleged that there was no right to recover them because [464] the only authority under which they could be allowed was a statute of the state of Kansas relating to mandamus proceedings, and that such statute, as construed by the court of last resort of the state, was repugnant to the due process and equal protection clauses of the 14th Amendment because, under such construction, a right was given by the statute to a plaintiff in mandamus to recover attorneys' fees as damages, while no reciprocal right in case of success was given to a defendant, and no such right was given to litigants generally. Coming to the alleged right to recover attorneys' fees for services rendered on the writ of error in this court and the other items, such as briefs, traveling expenses, hotel bills, etc., etc., it was expressly charged that under the statutes of the United States the effect of the writ of error from this court and the supersedeas was to deprive the state court of all authority over such expenses, and that, moreover, "under such statutes and laws of the United States, this court has no power, authority, or jurisdiction to consider the claim and demand for damages on account of attorneys' fees for services rendered in such proceedings in error from the Supreme Court of the United States to the supreme court of Kansas; and for the further reason that, if the said plaintiffs were entitled to any damages, their application therefor should be made to the Supreme Court of the United States, or in an independent proceeding brought on the supersedeas bond so approved and allowed as a supersedeas by the chief justice of this state . . . and because, further, to allow such claim would be violative of the Constitution of the United States, and especially the 14th Amendment thereof, which prohibits any state from denying to any person, company, or corporation the equal protection of the laws, and prevents any state from depriving any person, company, or corporation of its property without due process of law; . . . and because of such judiciary act (of the United States) . . . , this court [465] is deprived of all jurisdiction to consider or determine any such question or element of damage in a proceeding of this kind; and because, further, the Supreme Court of the United States, in affirming the judgment of this court . . . allowed to said plaintiffs, on account of attorneys' fees, the sum of $20, and assessed the same against the said defendant. . . ."

Digitized by Google

After proof and hearing the commissioner made an elaborate report stating fully what he conceived to be the facts and the law of the case. On the subject of the various claims made for the allowance of damages for a charge of fees for professional services rendered in the Supreme Court of the United States, the commissioner made the following statement:

"I find that no agreement has ever been had between the mill company and any of the attorneys as to the amount of their compensation; that neither of the attorneys has at any time entered on his books a charge against the mill company for services rendered; nor have they informed the mill company of the amount intended to be charged; nor have they determined in their own minds any definite amount intended to be charged.

"I find that the attorneys will claim the full amount, and will accept whatever amount that shall be determined by this court in this proceeding to be a reasonable compensation for their services in the case and allowed as part of the damages.

"I further find that it is mutually understood between the mill company and the attorneys named, that whatever amount is recovered in this proceeding on account of fees and expenses of counsel will be paid by the mill company to and accepted by the attorneys as a full discharge of the liability to them."

The conclusions of the commissioner as to the amounts to be allowed as damages under the three classes of claims were as follows:

[466] As to the first class, he reduced the claim for business losses, increased expenses, etc., etc., from $18,921.90 to	$ 5,658.10
As to the amount claimed as due because of the professional services of Waters & Waters in the state court, the sum claimed was allowed in full	2,500.00
As to the items for professional services rendered in the Supreme Court of the United States, including hotel bill, etc., the amount was reduced from about $75,000 to	11,480.00
Under the third class three small items were allowed relating to the expenses of the parties in Kansas, and concerning the reference to the commissioner ..	376.00
Total	$20,014.10

Both parties excepted to the report of the commissioner on various grounds, and after a hearing the supreme court sustained his action and affirmed his report. 85 Kan. 214, 116 Pac. 901.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Ballie P. Waggener argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The court, in this case, is not obliged to reason from the probable to the actual, and pass upon the validity of this statute, "as tried merely by the opportunities which its terms afford of unequal and unjust discrimination" in its administration. This case presents the statute in actual operation, and the facts disclosed by the record establish an administration not only directed exclusively against a particular class, but against a particular party litigant, such "as to warrant and require the conclusion" that, whatever may have been the intent of the legislature in enacting this statute, its application in this case was so unequal and oppressive as to amount to a practical denial by the state of the equal protection of the laws.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 373, 30 L. ed. 227, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Atkinson v. Woodmansee, 68 Kan. 71, 64 L.R.A. 325, 74 Pac. 640; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 153, 41 L. ed. 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 199; Wilder v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 70 Mich. 384, 38 N. W. 289; Oelrichs v. Spain (Oelrichs v. Williams) 15 Wall. 230, 231, 21 L. ed. 45; Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 510, 512, 46 L. ed. 665, 666, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372; Arcambel v. Wiseman, 3 Dall. 306, 1 L. ed. 613; Day v. Woodworth, 13 How. 370, 372, 14 L. ed. 184, 185; Teese v. Huntingdon, 23 How. 2, 16 L. ed. 479; The Baltimore, 8 Wall. 377, 19 L. ed. 463.

The action of the mill company was for the purpose of enforcing a private right,—a "self-imposed duty by the voluntary undertaking of the Pacific Company itself." The action was in no sense one to enforce the police power of the state, or a police regulation of any kind, as in cases like—

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 58 Kan. 447, 49 Pac. 602, 3 Am. Neg. Rep. 27, affirmed in 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; British America Assur. Co. v. Bradford, 60 Kan. 82, 55 Pac. 335; Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 922, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662.

Whenever attorneys' fees have been sustained by the supreme court of Kansas, the same have been allowed as a penalty.

Kansas P. R. Co. v. Mower, 16 Kan. 573; Winstead v. Hulme, 32 Kan. 574, 4 Pac. 994; Doom v. Curran, 52 Kan. 360, 34 Pac. 1118.

The case at bar most forcibly illustrates the injustice of the law. Not only is the railway company adjudged to pay $2,500 to the mill company's attorneys, for alleged services in the state court, but over $11,000 to the mill company's attorneys for alleged services in this court, as a penalty and punishment for exercising a right given and guaranteed to it by the Constitution of the United States, and the judiciary act of Congress under which it sought, by writ of error, to review in this court what it believed to be an erroneous judgment of the state court.

Lafferty v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 71 Mich. 35, 38 N. W. 660; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Williams, 49 Ark. 492, 5 S. W. 883; Jolliffe v. Brown, 14 Wash. 155, 53 Am. St. Rep. 868, 44 Pac. 149; Grand Rapids Chair Co. v. Runnels, 77 Mich. 104, 43 N. W. 1006; Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Baty, 6 Neb. 37, 29 Am. Rep. 356; Millett v. People, 117 Ill. 294, 57 Am. Rep. 869, 7 N. E. 631; Frorer v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L.R.A. 492, 31 N. E. 395; Durkee v. Janesville, 28 Wis. 464, 9 Am. Rep. 500; Janesville v. Carpenter, 77 Wis. 288, 8 L.R.A. 808, 20 Am. St. Rep. 123, 46 N. W. 128.

Can it be that, under the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, justice is "to be sold or denied by the exaction of a pecuniary consideration for its enjoyment from one, when it is given freely and openhanded to another, without money and without price?" Such discrimination is repudiated by many, if not all, the states of the Union.

Howell v. Scoggins, 48 Cal. 355; Falk v. Waterman, 49 Cal. 224; Jacobson v. Poindexter, 42 Ark. 97; Goodbar v. Lindsley, 51 Ark. 382, 14 Am. St. Rep. 54, 11 S. W. 577; Clarke Bros. v. Wolfe, 115 Ga. 320, 41 S. E. 581; Bull v. Keenan, 100 Iowa, 144, 69 N. W. 433; Dorris v. Miller, 105 Iowa, 568, 75 N. W. 482; Boardman v. Marshalltown Grocery Co. 105 Iowa, 451, 75 N. W. 343; Eatman v. New Orleans P. R. Co. 35 La. Ann. 1018; Barnard v. Poor, 21 Pick. 378; Henry v. Davis, 123 Mass. 346; Gates v. Toledo, 57 Ohio St. 105, 48 N. E. 500; Haverstick v. Erie Gas Co. 29 Pa. 254; Earl v. Tupper, 45 Vt. 287: Burruss v. Hines, 94 Va. 414, 26 S. E. 875; Fairbanks v. Witter, 18 Wis. 288, 86 Am. Dec. 765; Washburne v. Burke, 84 Ill. App. 589; Knefel v. Ahern, 57 Ill. App. 569; Meisenbacker v. Society Concordia, 71 Conn. 378, 71 Am. St. Rep. 213, 42 Atl. 67; Mason v. Hawes, 52 Conn. 12, 52 Am. Rep. 552; Kelly v. Rogers, 21 Minn. 147; Spencer v. Murphy, 6 Colo. App. 453, 41 Pac. 841; McKenzie v. Mitchell, 123 Ga. 72, 51 S. E. 34; White River, L. & W. R. Co. v. Star Ranch & Land Co. 77 Ark. 137, 91 S. W. 14; Winkler v. Roeder, 23 Neb. 706, 8 Am. St. Rep. 155, 37 N. W. 607; Doom v. Curran, 52 Kan. 361, 34 Pac. 1118; Mattlage v. New York Elev. R. Co. 44 N. Y. S. R. 289,

Digitized by Google

17 N. Y. Supp. 537; Bishop v. Hendrick, 82 Hun, 323, 31 N. Y. Supp. 502, 146 N. Y. 398, 42 N. E. 542; Clason v. Nassau Ferry Co. 20 Misc. 315, 45 N. Y. Supp. 675.

The state court, in order to enlarge the advantages of the mill company (the plaintiff) and make the discrimination against the defendant more pronounced, and the penalty more burdensome, placed a construction upon the word "damage," contained in the act (Kan. Gen. Stat. 1901, § 5193), unsupported by either reason or authority.

Golder v. Lund, 50 Neb. 869, 70 N. W. 379; Morris v. Grand Ave. R. Co. 144 Mo. 500, 46 S. W. 170; Underhill v. Spencer, 25 Kan. 71; Chicago v. Honey, 10 Ill. App. 535.

In allowing a writ of error from this court to the highest court of a state, and in issuing a citation, the chief justice of that court does but exercise an authority vested by Congress in him concurrently with each of the justices of this court.

Felix v. Scharnweber, 125 U. S. 59, 31 L. ed. 688, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759.

It is solely for the Supreme Court of the United States to say whether any damages or interest (as a part thereof) are to be allowed or not in cases of affirmance.

Arcambel v. Wiseman, 3 Dall. 306, 1 L. ed. 613; Oelrichs v. Spain (Oelrichs v. Williams) 15 Wall. 230, 231, 21 L. ed. 45; Boyce v. Grundy, 9 Pet. 275, 9 L. ed. 127; Re Washington & G. R. Co. 140 U. S. 96, 97, 35 L. ed. 341, 342, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673.

The bond and security given on the writ of error cannot be regarded as an idle ceremony. It was designed as an indemnity to the defendant in error should the plaintiff fail to prosecute with effect his writ of error.

United States ex rel. Crawford v. Addison, 22 How. 185, 16 L. ed. 306.

The railway company cannot get into this court in a mandamus case on equal terms with the mill company.

Oelrichs v. Spain (Oelrichs v. Williams) 15 Wall. 230, 231, 21 L. ed. 45.

Property cannot be taken from one and given to another, not because of a breach by the former of a duty to the latter, or to the public, but because of the lawful exercise of an undoubted right.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Wynne, 224 U. S. 354, 56 L. ed. 799, 42 L.R.A.(N.S.) 102, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

After the acceptance of the bond for the appeal, and the docketing of the cause in this court, the jurisdiction of the court below was gone.

Draper v. Davis, 102 U. S. 370, 26 L. ed. 121; Keyser v. Farr, 105 U. S. 265, 266, 26 L. ed. 1025, 1026.

A writ of error has the effect to remove the record into the court granting the writ, and when the conditions prescribed in § 23 of the judiciary act are complied with, the jurisdiction of the subordinate court is suspended until the cause is remanded from the appellate court.

Slaughter-house Cases, 10 Wall. 273, 19 L. ed. 915.

The proceeding in error instituted in this court by the Missouri Pacific against the mill company was an independent proceeding, permitted and authorized only by the judiciary act of Congress.

Felix v. Scharnweber, 125 U. S. 59, 31 L. ed. 688, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759; Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 512, 46 L. ed. 666, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372; Knox v. Knox, 12 N. H. 358; Schroeder v. Merchants' & M. Ins. Co. 104 Ill. 71; International Bank v. Jenkins, 107 Ill. 291; State v. Thomas, 76 Kan. 450, 92 Pac. 557.

This court has power to adjudge damages for delay on appeals as well as writs of error, and this power is not confined to money judgments.

Gibbs v. Diekma, 131 U. S. clxxxvi, Appx. and 26 L. ed. 177; Whitney v. Cook, 131 U. S. cxcvii, Appx. and 26 L. ed. 560.

And if, upon affirmance, no allowance of interest or damages is made, it is equivalent to a denial of any interest or damage; and the circuit court, in carrying into effect the decree of affirmance, cannot enlarge the amount thereby decreed, but is limited to the mere execution of the decree in the terms in which it is expressed.

Re Washington & G. R. Co. 140 U. S. 96, 97, 35 L. ed. 341, 342, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; People's Bank v. Ætna Ins. Co. 76 Fed. 550; Tyler v. Magwire, 17 Wall. 253, 21 L. ed. 576; Gaines v. Rugg, 148 U. S. 228, 37 L. ed. 432, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611: Re Sanford Fork & Tool Co. 160 U. S. 247, 40 L. ed. 414, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Re Potts, 166 U. S. 263, 41 L. ed. 994, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; Re Blake, 175 U. S. 114, 115, 44 L. ed. 94, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42.

The action of the court below was without authority, and should be set aside as absolutely void. It was nothing short of usurpation.

Brenner v. Bigelow, 8 Kan. 497; Brookover v. Esterly, 12 Kan. 152; Newby v. Myers, 44 Kan. 479, 24 Pac. 971; Gille v. Emmons, 58 Kan. 118, 62 Am. St. Rep. 609, 48 Pac. 569; Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 464, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773.

Messrs. Charles Blood Smith and Joseph G. Waters argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John C. Waters and John F. Switzer, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The statute will not be said to offend against the equal protection clause of the state Constitution or the inhibition of article 14 of the Federal Constitution merely because it permits a recovery of interest and attorneys' fees by the shipper if he succeeds, and secures no such right to the carrier in the event it prevails in the suit.

Digitized by Google

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Coachman, 59 Fla. 137, 52 So. 377, 20 Ann. Cas. 1047; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Barbier v. Connelly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Merchants' Life Asso. v. Yoakum, 39 C. C. A. 56, 98 Fed. 257; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 168, 41 L. ed. 666, 672, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Kingsbury v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 156 Mo. 379, 57 S. W. 547; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Mathews, 165 U. S. 1, 24, 41 L. ed. 611, 620, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Olcott v. Fond du Lac County, 16 Wall. 689, 21 L. ed. 386; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Seegers, 207 U. S. 73, 78, 52 L. ed. 108, 110, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

The railway company has had its day in court, and it cannot prevail on the assertion that its property has been taken without due process of law.

Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90, 23 L. ed. 678; Head v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co. 113 U. S. 9, 28 L. ed. 889, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Corry v. Campbell, 154 U. S. 629, and 24 L. ed. 926, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1183; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616.

The law bore on all alike; there was no exception or class. All who were wronged had the same recourse to it and all who violated it were dealt with alike; under like circumstances and under similar situations, there was no class, nor divisions into classes; there were no special persons or corporations on whom it operated, and none were exempted from its provisions, its remedies, and its penalties.

Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 582, 32 L. ed. 544, 546, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 709, 28 L. ed. 1147, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 71, 72, 30 L. ed. 578, 580, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 308, 327, 46 L. ed. 922, 933, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662; John Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Warren, 181 U. S. 73, 45 L. ed. 755, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 657, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518.

If a state law is above criticism and does not infract the Constitution and laws of the United States, there is no Federal question as to how it was considered, construed, or applied. Of course, it must be so considered, construed, and applied in good faith, and must not, under the color of its authority, be made an instrument of oppression, or inflict unreasonable exactions.

Giles v. Little, 134 U. S. 645, 33 L. ed. 1062, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Stryker v. Goodnow (Stryker v. Crane) 123 U. S. 527, 31 L. ed. 194, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203.

The act is a valid exercise of the police power vested in the legislature of the state of Kansas.

Cooley, Const. Law, 572; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 658, 659, 31 L. ed. 205, 209, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 46 L. ed. 623, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Welch v. Swasey, 214 U. S. 91, 53 L. ed. 923, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Hunter v. Pittsburgh, 207 U. S. 161, 52 L. ed. 151, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Forsyth v. Hammond, 166 U. S. 506, 41 L. ed. 1095, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665; Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586, 42 L. ed. 865, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 68, 50 L. ed. 935, 938, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 185, 31 L. ed. 652, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737.

When a railway says to one of its patrons, we will not give you a service over a switch, which is given indiscriminately to all the world besides, the infliction of costs and damages, as a remedy for such disobedience, is, within safe grounds, a splendid exercise of the police power by the state.

Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 31 L. ed. 795, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; Bacon v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 131 U. S. 258, 33 L. ed. 128, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787.

A fixed and received construction of the statute laws of the several states in their own courts makes, in fact, a part of the statute law of the country, however we may doubt the propriety of that construction.

Shelby v. Guy, 11 Wheat. 361, 367, 6 L.

Digitized by Google

ed. 495, 497; Randolph v. Quidnick Co. (Jencks v. Quidnick Co.) 135 U. S. 457, 34 L. ed. 200, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655.

The police power of a state embraces its system of internal regulation by which it is sought not only to preserve the public order and to prevent offenses against the state, but also to establish for the intercourse of citizens with citizens those rules of good manners and good neighborhood which are calculated to prevent a conflict of rights, and to insure to each the uninterrupted enjoyment of his own, so far as is reasonably consistent with a like enjoyment of rights by others.

Cooley, Const. Law, 572.

Mr. Chief Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Both before the commissioner and to the court where the report of the commissioner was acted on the propositions under the Constitution and laws of the United States upon which the railway company relied were pressed and overruled and the rightfulness of having so done is the [467] question here for decision. But first we notice a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction. It is difficult to grasp the ground upon which it rests. In one aspect it would seem to assert that there is no jurisdiction because the Federal rights which were passed upon below were correctly decided. But this obviously goes to the merits. In the only other possible aspect it would seem that the motion proceeds upon the theory that the Federal rights which were decided below were so obviously rightly decided that the contention of error concerning them is too frivolous to sustain jurisdiction,—a view which is supported by a statement in the argument for the motion that of course there would be jurisdiction if it appeared that the judgment below "under the color and sanctity of the law inflicted exceptional and unjust exactions." But taking the most favorable view for the motion, and assuming that it proceeds upon the only ground upon which it can possibly be said to rest, that is, the frivolousness of the errors relied upon, we pass from its consideration, since upon such hypothesis we think, on the face of the record, the contention is so clearly unsound as to require no further notice.

The Federal errors relied upon concern three subjects: The allowance of business losses, etc.; the award of a sum for attorneys' fees in the state court up to and including the writ of error from this court and the supersedeas; and the grant of an amount for attorneys' fees agreed or supposedly agreed to be paid for professional services rendered in this court on the writ of error, and traveling expenses and hotel bills allowed for the same purpose. The three involve different considerations, and hence we consider them separately. We come first to test the question as to attorneys' fees in this court, as it is the most important and far-reaching, since it involves considerations of the gravest importance going to the entire structure of our system of government, based as it is upon an absolute [468] denial of any power whatever in the court below to deal with the subject, while the other two contentions at best challenge power but relatively or partially.

First. The question of the power of the court to make the allowance for professional services rendered in this court on the former writ of error.

There can be no doubt that, tested by the general principles of law controlling in this court, by the statutes of the United States relating to the subject, or the rules of this court concerning the same, the award for the attorneys' fees in question was absolutely unwarranted. We do not stop to review and expound the settled line of authority demonstrating this result because it would be wholly superfluous to do so, as the principles have been so long the settled rule of conduct in this court, and are so elementary as to require not even a reference to the cases. Some of the cases, nevertheless, we cite: Arcambel v. Wiseman, 3 Dall. 306, 1 L. ed. 613; Day v. Woodworth, 13 How. 363, 372, 14 L. ed. 181, 185; Oelrichs v. Spain (Oelrichs v. Williams) 15 Wall. 211, 230, 231, 21 L. ed. 43, 45; Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 497, 511, et seq., 46 L. ed. 657, 665, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372. Indeed, this view is not disputed in the argument at bar, and was not questioned in the court below, since the court placed its action in making the allowances in question, not upon the supposed authority of any act of Congress, nor of any practice of this court or rule thereof sustaining the same, nor upon any principle of general law, but solely upon the theory that a state statute gave the power to make the allowances. Nothing could make this view clearer than does the following statement, taken from the opinion of the court below: "The damages in mandamus proceedings comprehended by § 723 of the Code [Gen. Stat. 1909, § 6319] are the injuries sustained as the natural and probable consequences of the wrongful refusal to comply and the expense reasonably and necessarily incurred in compelling compliance with the alternative writ, including reasonable attorneys' fees in this court and in the Supreme [469] Court of the United States." And in addition the view of the court below is aptly illustrated by the following passage from the report of the commissioner answering the claim of the railway company as to the effect of the writ of error from this court and the giving of the supersedeas and the resulting authority of this court over the cause under the statutes of the United States,—a passage which the court below expressly adopted and made a part of its opinion:

Digitized by Google

"Upon this objection I conclude:

"1. That the jurisdiction of this court in mandamus is the creation of the Constitution and the statutes of the state of Kansas.

"2. That this court is the sole judge of what that Constitution and those statutes provide.

"3. That the jurisdiction of this court in mandamus over persons within its jurisdiction cannot be affected by act of Congress.

"4. That the judiciary act does not and was not intended to affect the jurisdiction of this court.

"5. That the jurisdiction of this court in mandamus attaches upon the issuance of the alternative writ, and the subject-matter of the proceeding being the awarding a peremptory mandamus, that jurisdiction continues unabated, not only until the writ is awarded, but also until the writ is issued and obedience to it enforced.

"6. That the alternative writ is a command of the performance of specified and prescribed duties; and return to the writ is a refusal to perform the duties prescribed; the judgment awarding a peremptory mandamus is a conclusive adjudication that such refusal was wrongful, and the act of the court compelling compliance with the command of the alternative writ.

"7. That the damages comprehended by the Kansas statute are the injuries sustained as the natural and probable consequences of the wrongful refusal to comply, [470] and the expenses reasonably and necessarily incurred in compelling compliance with the command of the alternative writ.

"8. That the allowance of the writ of error did not operate to remove the suit from the supreme court of the state into the Supreme Court of the United States; its only effect was to bring up the record for purposes of review.

"9. The allowance of the writ of error did not operate as a supersedeas; the taking the supersedeas bond brought about the supersedeas. The taking the bond, and the supersedeas itself, in so far as it can be conceived of as a substantial act, was the action of the supreme court of Kansas."

We observe in passing, that the views concerning the judiciary act and the effect of the writ of error from this court and the relevant statutes of the United States which were expounded in this passage are not required to be reviewed because they are not necessarily involved in the decision below, since that decision did not rest upon them, but was based upon the operative effect of the state statute, and hence the views expressed as to the United States statutes in the passage quoted must have been adopted simply because they were considered to be illustrative of the principle by which the state statute was made to control. We, therefore, without in the slightest degree admitting their correctness even for argument's sake, pass the conclusions as to the statutes of the United States, expressed in the passages of the report, and shall not recur to them except in so far as, under the principle of noscitur a sociis, we may find it convenient to do so as illustrating the fundamental and destructive error embodied in the conclusion of the court as to the operative power of the state statute.

The question is, then, Was the court below right in holding that it had the power, because the Kansas statute so authorized, to assess as against one party to a suit in the [471] Supreme Court of the United States a sum for attorneys' fees for services rendered in that court as against another party to the suit, although such assessment, as we have seen, was not authorized by the law of the United States, but was in conflict with the settled rule in the Supreme Court of the United States? It seems superfluous to put the question, since its very statement conveys of necessity a negative answer. For how, on the face of the question, consistently with the most elementary principles of our constitutional system of government can it be possibly assumed that a state statute could be made operative in the Supreme Court of the United States to the disregard of its settled rule of procedure and of the principles which had guided its conduct from the beginning, directly sustained by express rule adopted under the sanction of Congress?

We might well go no further, but in view of the importance of the subject we briefly advert to one or more of the obvious consequences which would arise from maintaining the principle. It would follow, of course, that the right to freely seek access to the Supreme Court of the United States would cease to exist, since it would be in the power of the states to burden that right to such a degree as to render its exercise impossible. How better could this be illustrated than by the case before us; that is, by the necessary implication that there would have been power in the court below if it had deemed it just to do so, to award the claim which was made for $75,000 attorneys' fees for services rendered in this court! Indeed, in the argument at bar it was freely conceded that it may well have been that the mainspring which caused the adoption of the statute relied upon was the deterrent influence which it would produce in the prosecution of writs of error to this court. Thus the argument proceeds: "The railway company refuses to obey; judgment is had against it; it still refuses, it seeks delay; it initiates [472] a writ of error in this court. By this method it makes the suit expensive. . . . It was just this situation that the legislature of Kansas intended to correct. . . ."

Digitized by Google

And the far-reaching operation of the principle by which the state statute could alone have been made to produce the result attributed to it by the court below is illustrated by the legal conclusions of the operation and effect of the statutes of the United States stated in the report of the commissioner, which was adopted by the court as expressed in the passage which we have previously quoted. This is the case, since the views thus sanctioned are necessarily illustrative of the mental atmosphere by which alone it could have been possible to conceive that the state power extended to regulate the proceedings in the Supreme Court of the United States to the disregard of the express provisions of the act of Congress. A view which is not an overstatement when it is observed that, among other things, the conclusion which was below sustained was that the writ of error from this court and the supersedeas authorized by the act of Congress were not Federal but purely state acts. And, moreover, it was concluded that the exertion by the Supreme Court of the United States under the Constitution and laws of the United States of the power to bring up a case from the state court in order to review it and to grant a supersedeas in order to make that right effective, operated to leave the state court in possession of the case and only to move the record, hence creating a residuum of state power which, as to such case, gave authority to the state court to regulate, certainly as to attorneys' fees, the proceedings in the Supreme Court of the United States.

We shall reason no further, and shall content ourselves with pointing out that in substance and effect the absolute want of foundation for the contention here made has been in express terms foreclosed. For instance, at this term in Harrison v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 232 [473] U. S. 318, ante, 621, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333, a statute of the state of Oklahoma which burdened or impeded the right of free access to the courts of the United States was held to be repugnant to the Constitution, and the destructive effect of such legislation upon our institutions was pointed out. And light on the subject is afforded by a consideration of the ruling in Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 497, 46 L. ed. 657, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372. See also Home Ins. Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. 445, 453, 22 L. ed. 365, 368; Clark v. Bever, 139 U. S. 96, 102, 103, 35 L. ed. 88, 91, 92, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468.

Second. The power of the court below to award damages for the business losses which were suffered after the allowance of the writ of error and the supersedeas.

The contention is that the power did not exist since the effect of the writ of error and the supersedeas was to remove the case to this court, and therefore deprive the court below of the right to consider any act causing damage done after the prosecution of the writ of error and the supersedeas. But, conceding in the fullest degree the asserted effect of the supersedeas, that effect ceased with the affirmance of the judgment by this court, and therefore necessarily opened the way for the court below to consider and determine how far the alleged illegal conduct of the railway company had entailed damages and consequent responsibility. Conceding further that the bond for supersedeas embraced such acts and the resulting damages therefrom, and therefore there was a right to sue on the bond, again the deduction is a non sequitur because the right to resort to the bond did not imply an exclusion of the right to sue under the general law to recover damages if the election was made to follow that course. Of course, as there is nothing in this case even suggesting that the award of damages for acts done pending the writ of error in this court was so excessive as to justify the extreme inference that punishment for invoking the right to resort to this court was inflicted, we need not consider the rule which would be applicable in such a contingency.

[474] Third. The power of the court below to award damages for attorneys' fees for services rendered in the state court.

The attorneys' fees were allowed by the court below in virtue of a statute which gave such power in case of mandamus proceedings. The construction of this statute which was adopted was not original in this case, but was an application of an interpretation of the statute previously affixed to it, and, indeed, which was made prior to the commencement of the mandamus proceedings in question. Carney v. Neeley, 60 Kan. 672, 57 Pac. 527; McClure v. Scates, 64 Kan. 284, 67 Pac. 856. The contention is that as the statute exceptionally allows attorneys' fees in mandamus proceedings against one refusing to obey the peremptory writ of mandamus, and does not allow them in other cases, it contravenes the equal protection of the laws clause of the 14th Amendment and is void. But it is not open to controversy that the 14th Amendment was not intended to deprive the states of their power to establish and regulate judicial proceedings, and that its provisions therefore only restrain acts which so transcend the limits of classification as to cause them to conflict with the fundamental conceptions of just and equal legislation. The proposition here relied upon therefore comes to this: that there is not such a distinction between the extraordinary proceeding by mandamus and the ordinary judicial proceedings as affords a ground for legislating differently concerning the two. But when thus reduced to its ultimate basis, the proposition answers itself, since it cannot be formulated without demonstrating its own unsoundness. If more were needed to be said, it would suffice to direct attention to the distinction which must obtain between that which is ordinary and usual and that which is extraordinary and unusual. Or, to state it otherwise, to call attention to the difference between the duty to perform a ministerial act concerning which there is room neither for the exercise of judgment nor discretion, [475] and the right, on the other hand, to bring into play judgment and discretion as prerequisites to the performance of an act of a different character, and the distinction which justifies the classification made by the statute also answers the argument that the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment is violated because the allowance of attorneys' fees was not reciprocal. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Cade, 233 U. S. 642, ante, 1135, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678. The ruling in the case last cited also serves to demonstrate the want of merit in the contention that the question here presented is governed by Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255.

Digitized by Google

Again, we deem it necessary to observe that the opinion here expressed is confined to the case before us. We do not therefore imply that the reasoning here applied would be controlling in a case where, although the name "mandamus" was preserved, in substance and effect the distinction between that writ in an accurate sense and ordinary procedure would have disappeared.

It follows from what we have said that error was committed in the court below in allowing the items of damages for attorneys' fees, traveling expenses, etc., in the Supreme Court of the United States, and that from a Federal point of view there was no error in the judgment below to the extent that it awarded the damages complained and allowed a claim for attorneys' fees for services rendered in the state court. And to give effect to these conclusions the judgment must be reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

And it is so ordered.

---

[476] UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Interstate Commerce Commission, et al., Appts.,

v.

ATCHISON, TOPEKA, & SANTA FE RAILWAY COMPANY et al. (No. 136.)

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Interstate Commerce Commission, et al., Appts.,

v.

ATCHISON, TOPEKA, & SANTA FE RAILWAY COMPANY et al. (No. 162.)[1]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 476-495.)

Interstate Commerce Commission — powers — rate regulation — long and short hauls.

1. The omission of the substantially similar circumstances and conditions clause from the long and short haul provisions of § 4 of the act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 380, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3155), made by the amendatory act of June 18, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 547, chap. 309, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288), § 8, takes from the carriers their power under the original section primarily to determine whether conditions or circumstances, including competitve conditions, are substantially dissimilar so as to justify the charge of a lesser rate for a longer than for a shorter haul, and vests in the Interstate Commerce Commission as a primary instead of a reviewing function the power to determine upon the facts established, in the exercise of a sound legal discretion, whether, compatibly with a due consideration of the private and public interests concerned, and in view of the preference and discrimination clauses of §§ 2 and 3, a petitioning carrier shall, because of competition, or for other adequate reason, be relieved from the operation of the long and short haul clause.

[1] Reported by the Official Reporter under the title of the "Intermountain Rate Cases."

Note.—On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P.

Digitized by Google

[Matters as to Interstate Commerce Commission, see Interstate Commerce Commission, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — delegation of power — to Interstate Commerce Commission.

2. Legislative power is not unlawfully delegated to the Interstate Commerce Commission by the act of June 18, 1910, § 8, amending the act of February 4, 1887, § 4, so as to take from the carriers their power under the original section primarily to determine whether conditions or circumstances, including competitive conditions, are substantially dissimilar so as to justify the charge of a lesser rate for a longer than for a shorter haul, and to vest in the Interstate Commerce Commission as a primary instead of a reviewing function the power to determine upon the facts established, in the exercise of a sound legal discretion, whether, compatibly with a due consideration of the private and public interests concerned, and in view of the preference and discrimination clauses of §§ 2 and 3, a petitioning carrier shall, because of competition, or for other adequate reason, be relieved from the operation of the long and short haul clause.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, III. b, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — regulating rates — long and short hauls.

3. The absence of any definite rules governing the exercise by the Interstate Commerce Commission of its authority under the act of June 18, 1910, § 8, amending the long and short haul clause of the act to regulate commerce of February 4, 1887, § 4, to determine upon the facts established, in the exercise of a sound legal discretion, whether, compatibly with a due consideration of the private and public interests concerned, and in view of the preference and discrimination clauses of §§ 2 and 3, a petitioning carrier shall, because of dissimilar conditions, or for other adequate cause, be relieved from the operation of the short and long haul clause, does not render the statute invalid as authorizing the arbitrary destruction of the rights of persons or communities.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 608-628, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.[

Constitutional law — due process of law — regulating rates.

4. The imperative enforcement of the provisions of the act of February 4, 1887, § 4, as amended by the act of June 18, 1910, § 8, forbidding common carriers to charge a lesser rate for a longer than for a shorter haul, which follows when the Interstate Commerce Commission has discharged the duty imposed upon it by that section to refuse in a proper case an application by a carrier for relief from such long and short haul clause, does not render the statute repugnant to U. S. Const., 5th Amend., as denying due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 608-628, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce court — jurisdiction — over Interstate Commerce Commission.

5. The limitation of the jurisdiction of the commerce court by the act of June 18, 1910, § 1, to that "now possessed" by the circuit courts, did not prevent that court from reviewing an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission made upon an application by carriers under § 8 of that act, amending the act of February 4, 1887, § 4, for relief from the short and long haul clause of that section, since the effect of the amended 4th section was not to create new powers theretofore nonexisting, but simply to redistribute powers already existing, which were then subject to review.

[Matters as to Commerce Court, see Commerce Court, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1913 Supp.]

Commerce court — jurisdiction — over Interstate Commerce Commission.

6. An order of the Interstate Commerce Commission refusing an application made by carriers under the act of June 18, 1910, § 8, amending the act of February 4, 1887, § 4, for relief against the long and short haul clause of that section, is not purely negative, so as to be excluded from the revisory power of the commerce court.

[Matters as to Commerce Court, see Commerce Court, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1913 Supp.]

Injunction — against criminal prosecutions — jurisdiction of commerce court.

7. The jurisdiction given by the act of June 18, 1910, § 1, to the commerce court, of suits to enjoin orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission, may not be defeated, so far as an order made on an application by carriers under § 8 of that act, amending the act of February 4, 1887, § 4, for relief

---

R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

On delegation by legislature of power to regulate commerce—see note to State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 639.

On power of legislature to delegate to commission the right to fix rates to be charged by a public service corporation—see note to Saratoga Springs v. Saratoga Gas. E. L. & P. Co. 18 L.R.A.(N.S.) 713.

On legislative regulation of tolls, rates, and prices, generally—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 177.

On injunction to restrain prosecution of criminal or quasi-criminal nature—see notes to Crighto v. Dahmer, 21 L.R.A. 84; Littleton v. Burgess, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 631; Hall v. Dunn, 25 L.R.A.(N.S.) 193; and Denton v. McDonald, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 454.

Digitized by Google

against the long and short haul clause of that section, is concerned, on the theory that because violations of that section are made criminal, the consequence would be to enjoin a criminal prosecution.

[For other cases, see Injunction, I. 1, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — powers — fixing rates — long and short hauls.

8. The authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission upon an application by carriers under the act of February 4, 1887, § 4, as amended by the act of June 18, 1910, § 8, for relief, because of competitive conditions, from the long and short haul clause of that section, extends to establishing by percentages the relation to be maintained between the lower rate for longer hauls and the higher rates to intermediate points, and to adopting zones of influence for the purpose of the established percentages which, as to such zones, vary or fluctuate upon the basis of the influence of the competition in the designated areas.

[Matters as to Interstate Commerce Commission, see Interstate Commerce Commission, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 136 and 162.]

Argued February 23, 26, and 27, 1912. Ordered on April 8, 1912, for reargument before full bench. Reargued October 18, 21, and 22, 1912. Decided June 22, 1914.

TWO APPEALS from the United States Commerce Court to review an interlocutory order and final decree enjoining the enforcement of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission based upon the long and short haul clause of the act to regulate commerce. Reversed and case remanded with directions to dismiss the bill.

See same case below, on motion to dismiss, 191 Fed. 856.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Former Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Fowler argued the cause, and, with Mr. Blackburn Esterline, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, filed a brief for the United States on original argument:

The Commission should be bound by no technical rules.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 88, 103, 54 L. ed. 946, 955, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

In its statement of principles which should guide the Commission in the consideration of applications under the 4th section of the interstate commerce act, the court below erroneously held that when the rate for the longer hauls is forced unreasonably low by competition, the only elements that can enter into the consideration of the rate for the shorter haul are its reasonableness and the extent to which it ought fairly to be influenced by the same competition which forced the rate for the longer haul.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209.

The blanket rate system has for many years been in use by the railroad carriers, and its validity was recognized by the Interstate Commerce Commission in Business Men's League v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 9 Inters. Com. Rep. 318.

The allegations of the petitions wholly fail to show that the carriers have been deprived of their property without due process of law within the meaning of the Constitution.

Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.

The court of commerce had no power in its final decree to enjoin the government officials from prosecuting the carriers for a violation of the 4th section of the statute, or to in any way exempt the carriers from criminal liability under that section.

Re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 210, 211, 31 L. ed. 402, 405, 406, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 482; Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 218, 47 L. ed. 778, 780, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 241, 47 L. ed. 169, 176, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Crighton v. Dahmer, 70 Miss. 602, 21 L.R.A. 84, 35 Am. St. Rep. 666, 13 So. 237.

Section 4 of the interstate commerce act is not unconstitutional on the ground that it undertakes to vest in the Interstate Commerce Commission legislative power.

Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 41, 42, 6 L. ed. 262; Ex parte Reed, 100 U. S. 13–23, 25 L. ed. 538, 539; Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 190 U. S. 301, 47 L. ed. 1064, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Butte City Water Co. v. Baker, 196 U. S. 119, 49 L. ed. 409, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480.

In cases wherein this court construed § 4 before amended by the act of 1910, it was recognized that §§ 1, 3, and 4 should all be construed together, and that the principles declared in the 1st and 3d sections should be kept in view by the Commission in determining questions arising under § 4.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 674,

Digitized by Google

44 L. ed. 309, 319, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

Mr. Patrick J. Farrell argued the cause and filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. Stephen A. Foster argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Rush C. Butler, William E. Lamb, and Cornelius Lynde, filed a brief for appellant the Chicago Association of Commerce:

The only legislative power exercized under the 4th section was by Congress when it enacted the general rule of prohibition against charging more for the shorter than for the longer haul. The Commission, when it refuses to grant an application, clearly does not prescribe anything for the future, and does not exercise legislative power. Neither does it exercise such power when it grants the application absolutely or upon conditions. The Commission, like all administrative bodies, cannot act arbitrarily in passing on these applications, but must, pursuant to the statute, make an investigation, and its decision must be in the honest exercise of a reasonable discretion.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Union P. R. Co. 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. ed. 308, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 20, 51 L. ed. 933, 942, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398; Grainger v. Douglas Park Jockey Club, 78 C. C. A. 199, 148 Fed. 513, 8 Ann. Cas. 997; State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 56 Fla. 617, 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 639, 47 So. 969; State Racing Commission v. Latonia Agri. Asso. 136 Ky. 173, 25 L.R.A. (N.S.) 905, 123 S. E. 681; Atty. Gen. v. Old Colony R. Co. 160 Mass. 62, 22 L.R.A. 112, 35 N. E. 252; Railroad Commission v. Central of Georgia R. Co. 95 C. C. A. 117, 170 Fed. 225; Davis v. Massachusetts, 167 U. S. 43, 42 L. ed. 71, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; State ex rel. Port Royal Min. Co. v. Hagood, 30 S. C. 519, 3 L.R.A. 841, 9 S. E. 686.

The 4th section is constitutional, even if it be assumed that the power exercised by the Commission is legislative in its nature. In order to sustain the constitutionality of the 4th section it is not necessary to find in the other sections of the act definite standards for the guidance of the Commission in acting under the proviso. We submit that a reasonable discretion is and constitutionally can be vested in the Commission under that section.

Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Monongahela Bridge Co. v. United States, 216 U. S. 177, 54 L. ed. 435, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; Hannibal Bridge Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 194, 55 L. ed. 699, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 184 Fed. 118; Saratoga Springs v. Saratoga Gas, E. L. & P. Co. 191 N. Y. 123, 18 L.R.A. (N.S.) 713, 83 N. E. 693, 14 Ann. Cas. 606; Red C. Oil Mfg. Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 172 Fed. 695; United States v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 176 Fed. 942; State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 56 Fla. 617, 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 639, 47 So. 969; People v. Apfelbaum, 251 Ill. 18, 95 N. E. 995; Grainger v. Douglas Park Jockey Club, 78 C. C. A. 199, 148 Fed. 513, 8 Ann. Cas. 997; Railroad Commission v. Clyde S. S. Co. 5 I. C. C. Rep. 324, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 120; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1, 42, 6 L. ed. 253, 261.

The same considerations of governmental policy which have always been held sufficient to sustain the delegation, without express limitations, of power legislative in its nature, to municipal corporations, apply with equal force to the delegation of such power to a commission.

United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480; Cooley, Const. Lim. pp. 163, 264; State v. Noyes, 30 N. H. 292; Saratoga Springs v. Saratoga Gas, E. L. & P. Co. 191 N. Y. 123, 18 L.R.A. (N.S.) 713, 83 N. E. 693, 14 Ann. Cas. 606; Brodbine v. Revere, 182 Mass. 598, 66 N. E. 607; 1 Lowell, Government of England, 363; Locke, Civil Government, § 142; Chicago & N. W. Co. v. Dey, 1 L.R.A. 744, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 866; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Campbell, 173 Fed. 957; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 184 Fed. 118; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1, 42, 6 L. ed. 253, 262.

The carriers, having applied to the Commission for relief, cannot attack, by way of a petition for injunction, the relief granted by the Commission, merely because it does not go to the "extent" that they asked, and cannot continue to disregard the absolute prohibition of the 4th section when the only authority they have to violate it has been set aside by the commerce court. The commerce court had no jurisdiction of the petitions here filed, and no authority to enter its final decree.

Digitized by Google

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 104 Ky. 226, 43 L.R.A. 541, 46 S. W. 707, 47 S. W. 210, 598.

The jurisdiction of the commerce court is limited to such orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission as were within the jurisdiction of the circuit courts of the United States prior to June 18, 1910. The orders here in question could not have been within the jurisdiction of such circuit courts prior to that date, because they were entered by the Commission solely under and by reason of the increased powers vested in the Commission by the amendment adopted by Congress on that date.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 649, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Re Louisville & N. R. Co. 1 I. C. C. Rep. 59, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 278.

The commerce court erred in holding that the Commission, in granting the application of a carrier for authority in a special case to charge more for the shorter than for the longer haul, must confine its order to absolute rates, and must fix a reasonable rate for the shorter haul. We submit that the Commission has authority to impose, as a condition to the relief granted, the requirement that the rates to be established by the carrier for the longer and the shorter haul shall merely bear a certain relationship to each other, and can reserve the right to disapprove of any particular rates which might be established by the carriers under the permission granted, if, upon complaint or further investigation, they should be found to be unreasonable or discriminatory under the other sections of the act.

Railroad Commission v. Clyde S. S. Co. 5 I. C. C. Rep. 324, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 120; Re Louisville & N. R. Co. 1 I. C. C. Rep. 31, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 278; 45 Cong. Rec. pt. 6, p. 6013; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

If the Commission, when acting upon applications filed by the carriers under § 4, had fixed for the future reasonable rates for the intermediate points,—as the commerce court holds was the duty of the Commission,—it would have exceeded its power, for it can only initiate rates for the future under the provisions of § 15 upon complaint filed or investigation instituted upon its own motion.

Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. ed. 935, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. ed. 243, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 171 Fed. 680.

The proper method of measuring the extent to which the carrier should be relieved from the operation of the 4th section, and the extent of the relief to be granted in each particular case, are matters to be determined by the Commission. The Commission's finding as to the extent to which the more distant points can legitimately be favored by the carriers is one of fact, and is not subject to review in the courts.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Union P. R. Co. 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. ed. 308, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. ed. 280, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. United States, 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. ed. 292, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. ed. 946, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. ed. 448, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392; 45 Cong. Rec. pt. 6, p. 6124.

The orders of the Commission are not invalid because of their wide scope, or because they establish zones in accordance with the usual practice of the carriers.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. ed. 243, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. ed. 946, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651, 171 Fed. 680.

Mr. William A. Glasgow, Jr., filed a brief for intervener, the Giroux Consolidated Mines Company.

Mr. F. C. Dillard argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Robert Dunlap, E. C. Lindley, and Maxwell Evarts, filed a brief for appellees:

It is true, doubtless, that some discretion may be constitutionally reposed in executive or administrative officials in some instances, provided the act conferring it affords a rule or standard by which it is to be exercised, and an exercise in violation of such standard may be corrected or restrained; but the well known cases establishing this doctrine (Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649 693, 36 L. ed. 294, 310, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367) all make it plain that the presence of this rule or standard is what saves the act.

Digitized by Google

In determining the validity of a statute the question is not what is the sense of right or wrong which may influence the body charged with its execution,—is not whether the powers confided to that body would be wisely exercised,—but is whether the statute confers on that body the right to exercise powers which, under the Constitution, cannot be conferred.

Curtin v. Benson, 222 U. S. 78, 87, 56 L. ed. 102, 106, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31.

If a standard by which the Commission must be governed is not found in the law, if arbitrary discretion is granted it, the law is unconstitutional.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 172, 44 L. ed. 417, 420, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; United States v. Dickson, 15 Pet. 141, 162, 10 L. ed. 689, 697; Baltimore v. Radecke, 49 Md. 217, 33 Am. Rep. 239; Richmond v. Model Steam Laundry, 111 Va. 758, 69 S. E. 932; Hagerstown v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 107 Md. 178, 126 Am. St. Rep. 382, 68 Atl. 493; Schaezlein v. Cabaniss, 135 Cal. 466, 56 L.R.A. 733, 87 Am. St. Rep. 122, 67 Pac. 755; Matthews v. Murphy, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 750, 54 L.R.A. 415, 63 S. W. 785; Tillman v. Cooke, 9 Baxt. 429; State v. Great Northern R. Co. 100 Minn. 445, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 250, 111 N. W. 289; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 99 Ky. 132, 33 L.R.A. 209, 59 Am. St. Rep. 457, 35 S. W. 129; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Cincinnati Gaslight & Coke Co. 18 Ohio St. 262; Anderson v. Manchester F. Assur. Co. 59 Minn. 182, 28 L.R.A. 609, 50 Am. St. Rep. 400, 60 N. W. 1095, 63 N. W. 241; O'Neil v. American F. Ins. Co. 166 Pa. 72, 30 Atl. 945; Dowling v. Lancashire Ins. Co. 92 Wis. 63, 31 L.R.A. 112, 65 N. W. 738; Wyeth v. Board of Health (Wyeth v. Thomas) 200 Mass. 474, 23 L.R.A.(N.S.) 147, 128 Am. St. Rep. 439, 86 N. E. 926; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1, 43, 6 L. ed. 253, 262; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 692, 36 L. ed. 294, 310, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 527.

Where there are competitive conditions making the circumstances of carriage different,—as, for instance, meeting by a longer line at the junction point the competition of a carrier having the shorter line; meeting the competition of a water carrier at the more distant point,—there is no undue discrimination in charging the higher rate for the shorter haul contained within the longer.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 18, 45 L. ed. 719, 725, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

If the part of the section authorizing the Commission to relieve the carrier from the prohibition of charging more for the short than for the long haul is unconstitutional, then the entire section is unconstitutional.

Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 82, 98, 25 L. ed. 550, 553; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 565, 46 L. ed. 679, 693, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

No rule of construction is better settled than that, in construing a statute, we must look to the old law, to the mischief, and to the remedy. So looking in this instance, we find that the mischief of the old law was in leaving to the carriers the determination, of their own motion, of what are dissimilar circumstances and conditions, and the power to initiate lower rates upon such determination; and in the abuse, or supposed abuse, with which they exercised the discretion granted them; that that discretion, that abuse, grew out of the words, "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions," and the construction placed on these words. It hence follows that the elimination of those words should have no greater effect than is necessary to correct the evil intended to be corrected.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Re Louisville & N. R. Co. 1 I. C. C. Rep. 76, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 278.

One ground relied upon by the Commission for its order was that the carriers did not prove to its satisfaction that the existing rates to intermediate points were reasonable in and of themselves,— this notwithstanding a presumption which would exist in favor of the legality of the act of the carriers in making and establishing such rates.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 119. 120, 52 L. ed. 712, 713, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Platt v. Lecocq, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 558, 85 C. C. A. 621, 158 Fed. 730.

If, to sustain the validity of the amended 4th section, recourse must be had to other provisions of the statute to find the principle or standard which is to guide the Commission in the determination of applications, then the principle of the 3d section alone is pertinent or furnishes any such guide or standard.

Digitized by Google

Noyes, Am. R. Rates, p. 111.

Under either section competition has always been regarded as a potent factor, where it existed, in justifying the carrier in making a lower rate for a longer haul to a competitive point than for a shorter haul to a noncompetitive point, or in apparently favoring the competitive point in its adjustment of rates, while such favor was not extended to the noncompetitive point.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. ed. 1047, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

In fixing their own rates they (the carriers) may take into account competition with other carriers, provided only that the competition is genuine, and not a pretense.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 119, 52 L. ed. 712, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

Of course, under the 4th section, prior to its amendment, upon complaint of a shipper or locality of an alleged violation of the provisions of that section, the burden was upon the complainant to show a lack of justifying circumstances and conditions. It may be admitted that the purpose of the amendment of that section was to throw the burden and necessity upon the carrier to make an application which, under the old law, was permissible, but not necessary, and that by striking out words which vested the initiative in the carrier, the burden is now placed upon the carrier to justify the making of a lower rate for a longer than for a shorter distance over the same line, in the same direction. That justification, however, is shown when it appears that a lower rate is made as a matter of competition,—that the rate to the more distant point would be controlled by conditions not operating at the intermediate point or points. The degree of competition between carriers existing at the coast point, and which does not exist at the nearer point, is a justification by which lower rates are charged at coast points, and demonstrates that the action of the carriers does not give to the more distant point an undue preference, or subject the intermediate points to an undue prejudice, because the preference and the prejudice are due to the most potent factor operating in the adjustment of rates,—namely, competition.

F. H. Peavey & Co. v. Union P. R. Co 176 Fed. 425, affirmed in 222 U. S. 48, 56 L. ed. 88, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

The construction which this court has always placed upon the 3d section, and which must obtain also in construing the 4th section, if that section is to be sustained, is not affected by any subsequent legislation of Congress.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 48, 56 L. ed. 88, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22.

A discrimination between localities is just when the advantages of the one place over the other produce conditions which render discrimination by the carrier necessary in order to obtain traffic. In such cases there is no unlawful discrimination within the meaning of the act, and there is nothing then condemned by the act. In fact, such action of the carrier does not fall at all within the invidious designation of discrimination.

Noyes, Am. R. Rates, pp. 90, 91, 93, 94, 112.

Where the point of destination may be reached by water carriers, all freight moving there has to meet the competition of water, whether it originates at a place from which it might be borne by water, or at a point remote therefrom; and the law intends that the rate from the inland point may meet this competition without any prejudice to intermediate rates.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209.

Under the 4th section the Commission is without power to fix differentials between the intermediate and the terminal rates.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 57 C. C. A. 224, 120 Fed. 934; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Southern R. Co. 122 Fed. 800; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is a subordinate governmental body. It is a rule of construction that the statute creating a subordinate governmental body, and clothing it with powers, is strictly construed against the body thus created, and it is incumbent upon whosoever contends for such power in such a body to justify the contention by pointing out the clear and unequivocal language granting the power.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. ed. 243, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Harriman, 211 U. S. 407, 53 L. ed. 253, 29 Sup.

Digitized by Google

Ct. Rep. 115; Burnham, H. M. Dry Goods Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. ed. 946, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

Very applicable to the Commission's attempt to adjust all terminal and all intermediate rates by the establishment of a set of arbitrary percentages is the language of the court in Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

The commerce court had power, as incidental to its decree setting aside and enjoining the orders of the Commission, to also, in the meantime, restrain the government officials from prosecuting carriers for a violation of the 4th section of the statute.

Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts, Gardiner Lathrop, Charles W. Bunn, Charles Donnelly, Robert Dunlap, E. C. Lindley, and F. C. Dillard, also filed a brief for appellees:

No one can examine the debates attending the passage of the amendment in the light of the decisions of this court in the Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; and East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516, without reaching the conviction that Congress intended to take from the carriers their unrestrained freedom to make lower rates to a more remote point when circumstances and conditions were different there from those existing at a nearer point, and to require them in the first instance to show cause for doing so.

Mr. F. W. M. Cutcheon argued the cause, and, with Messrs. James C. Jeffery and Kerner Easton, filed a brief for appellees the Denver & Rio Grande and Western Pacific Railway Companies:

In order lawfully to confer upon an executive officer or an administrative body the power to prescribe rules for future conduct for individuals that shall have the force of law, the purpose of the legislature as to the course to be pursued by the officer or body vested with the delegated power must be sufficiently indicated to enable the delegate, in exercising the power, and the courts, in determining whether the delegated authority has been exceeded, to determine for themselves, with reasonable assurance, whether any given action accords with such specifically indicated purpose; in other words, so that when the action of the delegate shall have been taken, it will be possible to demonstrate that it is or is not an expression of the legislative intent as specifically indicated. Sometimes this intent is broadly stated in the form of a purpose to promote the public health or public safety or public order in particular respects or ways, but always some comprehensive test is and must be afforded. A lawful delegation never is and never can be so broad as to confer the function of protecting the whole public interest in a given subject as the judgment of the officer or administrative body may deem wisest; for the discharge of that function is the very essence of legislative power and discretion.

Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 253; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Schaezlein v. Cabaniss, 135 Cal. 466, 56 L.R.A. 733, 87 Am. St. Rep. 122, 67 Pac. 755; Noel v. People, 187 Ill. 587, 52 L.R.A. 287, 79 Am. St. Rep. 238, 58 N. E. 616; Baltimore v. Radecke, 49 Md. 217, 33 Am. Rep. 239; Dowling v. Lancashire Ins. Co. 92 Wis. 63, 31 L.R.A. 112, 65 N. W. 738.

The carrier is entitled to secure and carry traffic, wherever and however possible, if it but observe the restrictions of the act.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

The carriers were entitled to the presumptions (1) that the existing published rates to the intermediate points are no higher than reasonable, (2) that the existing published rates to the terminal points are not so low as to be unremunerative, and (3) that the rates to the terminal points are as low as they are as the result of the operation of forces which the carriers cannot control if they are to carry the traffic to which the rates apply.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. ed. 705, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

Irrespective of the question whether § 4, as amended, involves an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power, the grant of the uncontrolled power supposed would be unlawful as an attempt to vest a branch of the executive with an arbitrary power not contemplated by our Constitution, or admissible as a part of our governmental system, the exercise of such power being, in a case such as that at bar, a taking of property without due process of law.

Digitized by Google

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 253; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Dowling v. Lancashire Ins. Co. 92 Wis. 63, 31 L.R.A. 112, 65 N. W. 738; Noel v. People, 187 Ill. 587, 52 L.R.A. 287, 79 Am. St. Rep. 238, 58 N. E. 616.

The option to disobey the command of the section and to insist upon its unconstitutionality, in the face of subsequent prosecution, was purely illusory.

Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764; Ex parte Wood, 155 Fed. 190; Hunte v. Wood, 209 U. S. 205, 52 L. ed. 747, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472.

The order made by the Interstate Commerce Commission, in so far as it provides that rates from points of origin in zone 1 to so-called intermediate points shall not be higher than rates from the same points of origin to Pacific Coast terminal points, is invalid,—being grounded upon a deliberate disregard of competitive conditions which the carriers are entitled under the law to have considered in the determination of their applications.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. ed. 1047, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. ed. 83, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22.

When the Commission, in arriving at a determination concerning an alleged discrimination, refuses or fails to take into consideration any matter which, under a proper view of the law, should have entered into the determination of the question, it is an error of law which results in rendering its action in excess of its powers, and amounts to an abuse of power necessitating an annulment of its order and a reconsideration of the subject.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. ed. 1128, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700.

The carriers had, and have, an absolute right to a determination of the applications in accordance with law; to demand that the Commission's discretion shall be exercised within the limitations prescribed by the act to regulate commerce, and upon a consideration of all the facts that, in a proper view of the law, bear upon the question whether the existing rates involve any undue or unreasonable discrimination.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 676, 44 L. ed. 319, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209.

Former Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Fowler argued the cause, and, with Mr. Blackburn Esterline, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, filed a brief for the United States on reargument:

Under the facts found by the Commission, the adjustment of rates between the terminal and intermediate points which the carriers seek to maintain, but which were condemned by the Commission, is unjustly discriminatory under § 4, as originally enacted.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

The burden of proof vested with the carriers before the amendment.

1 I. C. C. Rep. 291, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 663; Judson, Interstate Commerce, § 293.

In declaring that the carrier should not make a greater short-haul charge when the circumstances and conditions were substantially similar, the statute, before amendment, also implied that the carrier might make, and that the Commission should allow it to make, the greater charge for the shorter haul when the circumstances and conditions of the two hauls were substantially dissimilar.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

It cannot be gainsaid that whatever limitation was placed on the Commission by the omitted phrase was removed by its omission, and further, that the Commission's field of vision was materially narrowed by that phrase.

Digitized by Google

In considering whether any particular locality is subject to an undue preference or disadvantage, the welfare of the communities occupying the localities where the goods are delivered is to be considered as well as that of the communities which are in the locality of the place of shipment.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209.

Mr. Patrick J. Farrell argued the cause for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Messrs. Rush C. Butler, William E. Lamb, Stephen A. Foster, and Cornelius Lynde filed a brief for appellant the Chicago Association of Commerce:

Counsel for the Denver & Rio Grande so limit the power vested in the Commission as to deprive it of all discretion in its exercise.

The Styria v. Morgan, 186 U. S. 1, 46 L. ed. 1027, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731.

The tests laid down by counsel for the Denver & Rio Grande for determining whether the amended 4th section contains an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power are not the correct ones.

United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495.

The commerce court had no jurisdiction to entertain the petition because the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the 4th section case was negative in character.

Proctor & G. Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 56 L. ed. 1091, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 761.

Mr. F. C. Dillard argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees.

Messrs. F. W. M. Cutcheon and Charles Donnelly also argued the cause for appellees.

Mr. Alfred P. Thom filed a brief as amicus curiæ:

Under the law as it was before the amendment, the carrier was entitled to the initiative in determining this question, but its determination might, upon application to the Commission, be overruled.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 168, 42 L. ed. 423, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

Under the law as changed, the carrier cannot take the initiative in respect to it, but the question must in the first instance be determined by the Commission. The question, however, to be determined in both cases, is the same; only the method of determination is altered by the amendment.

A requirement that a rate to be authorized by the Commission shall be just and reasonable is a sufficient primary standard; and an exercise of power by the Commission, under such authority, will not amount to the exercise of legislative power.

Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; United States v. Heinszen, 206 U. S. 370, 51 L. ed. 1098, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742, 11 Ann. Cas. 688; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464; Monongahela Bridge Co. v. United States, 216 U. S. 177, 54 L. ed. 435, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356.

That the foregoing interpretation of this amendment is proper is strengthened by the consideration that any other construction would render the act unconstitutional.

United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 407, 408, 53 L. ed. 836, 848, 849, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

The decisions which hold that all the material facts surrounding the service, including the existence of substantial competition, whether from water carriers or other sources, must be considered, are, in effect, decisions establishing the principle that a rate made lower for a longer than for a shorter haul by substantial competition is, to the extent that it is influenced by such competition, just and reasonable.

Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. ed. 935, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. ed. 1047, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. ed. 705, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

Digitized by Google

In addition to the interpretation above given of the amendment of June 18, 1910, one other construction may be suggested. This construction is that the proviso by which authority is conferred upon the Commission to permit the making of a smaller charge for a longer than a shorter haul amounts to an absolute discretion in the Commission, unlimited by any rule laid down by Congress, and subject to no supervision. It is believed that any such construction of the amendment would make it unconstitutional. It would be either a delegation by Congress to the Commission of power to make rates without providing any rule to be administered by it, or it would be a delegation by Congress to the Commission of authority, in its unlimited, unqualified, and unregulated discretion, to suspend a legislative act of Congress. To do one or the other would involve the exercise of a legislative power by the Commission. The making of rates is essentially a legislative act.

Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 226, 53 L. ed. 158, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 693, 36 L. ed. 310, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 382, 51 L. ed. 532, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

Moreover, if the power expressed in this proviso to § 4 is purely arbitrary, and is controlled by no regulation or restraint, it is unconstitutional for that reason alone. The very idea that one man may be compelled to hold his property, or any material right essential to its enjoyment, at the mere will or caprice of another, is intolerable in any country where freedom prevails, and is contrary to the Constitution.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Baltimore v. Redecke, 49 Md. 217, 33 Am. Rep. 239; Ex parte Sing Lee, 96 Cal. 354, 24 L.R.A. 195, 31 Am. St. Rep. 218, 31 Pac. 245; Sioux Falls v. Kirby, 6 S. D. 62, 25 L.R.A. 621, 60 N. W. 156; Richmond v. Dudley, 129 Ind. 112, 13 L.R.A. 587, 28 Am. St. Rep. 180, 28 N. E. 312; State v. Mahner, 43 La. Ann. 496, 9 So. 480.

The economic law which controls the movement of traffic under the dissimilar circumstances and conditions produced by controlling forces in respect to the longer as compared to the shorter haul is so well recognized and is so potential that it is not believed that the Supreme Court will hold that the proviso in § 4 is separable from the remainder of the statute.

Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. ed. 935, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. ed. 1047, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. ed. 705, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

The use of property is property, and to deprive a carrier of the use of its property is to deprive it of the property itself.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 458, 33 L. ed. 981, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 445, 38 L. ed. 1046, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 677, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1122; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 328, 47 L. ed. 468, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Re Marshall, 102 Fed. 323.

It is a sound principle of economics, and is admitted by both the Interstate Commerce Commission and by the Supreme Court of the United States, that in no case where substantial competition exists can a railroad property be used except in recognition of, and in obedience to, the law of competition.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 236, 40 L. ed. 953, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 653, 44 L. ed. 311, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

It is likewise true that this use of a carrier's property, in accordance with and in obedience to an irresistible law of economics, is right in itself, and is in the interest of the public.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 218, 40 L. ed. 947, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

The main fact which makes the participation of the rail carrier in this competitive traffic to the interest of the public is that, if a carrier is excluded from any material portion of traffic which pays a margin of profit, then the loss which such exclusion involves must be put on the remaining portion of its traffic, and increase the cost to the public interested in such remainder.

Digitized by Google

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 20, 45 L. ed. 726, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

We shall seek to confine our statement to matters which are essential to the decision of the case. The provisions of § 4 of the act to regulate commerce [24 Stat. at L. 380, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3155], dealing with what is known as the long and short haul clause, the power of [478] carriers because of dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions to deviate from the exactions of such clause, and the authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission in relation to such subjects, were materially amended by the act of June 18, 1910, chap. 309, 36 Stat. at L. 547, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288. Following the form prescribed by the Commission after the amendment in question, the seventeen carriers who are appellees on this record made to the Interstate Commerce Commission their "application for relief from provisions of 4th section of amended commerce act in connection with the following tariffs." The tariffs annexed to the applications covered the whole territory from the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific coast and the Gulf of Mexico, including all interior points, and embracing practically the entire country, and the petition asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to continue all rates shown on the tariffs from the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific coast, and from the Pacific coast to the Atlantic seaboard, and to and from interior points lower than rates concurrently in effect from and to intermediate points. It was stated in the petition: "This application is based upon the desire of the interested carriers to continue the present method of making rates lower at the more distant points than at the intermediate points; such lower rates being necessary by reason of competition of various water carriers and of carriers partly by water and partly by rail operating from Pacific coast ports to Atlantic seaboard ports; competition of various water carriers operating to foreign countries from Pacific coast ports; and competition of the products of foreign countries with the products of the Pacific coast; competition of the products of Pacific coast territory with the products of other sections of the country; competition of Canadian rail carriers not subject to the interstate commerce act; competition of the products of Canada moving by Canadian carriers with the products of the United States; rates established via [479] the shorter or more direct routes, but applied also via the longer or more circuitous routes." After full hearing the Commission refused to grant unqualifiedly the prayer of the petition, but entered an order permitting in some respects a charge of a lower rate for the longer haul to the Pacific coast than was asked for intermediate points provided a proportionate relation was maintained between the lower rate for the longer haul to the Pacific coast and the higher rate to the intermediate points, the proportion to be upon the basis of percentages which were fixed. For the purposes of the order in question the Commission in substance adopted a division of the entire territory into separate zones, which division had been resorted to by the carriers for the purposes of the establishment of the rates in relation to which the petition was filed. Refusing to comply with this order the carriers commenced proceedings in the commerce court praying a decree enjoining the enforcement of the 4th section as amended on the ground of its repugnancy to the Constitution of the United States, and of the order as being in any event violative of the amended section as properly construed. An interlocutory injunction was ordered. The defendants moved to dismiss, and, on the overruling of the motions, appealed from the interlocutory order, the case being No. 136. Subsequently, upon the election of the defendants to plead no further, a final decree was entered and appealed from, that appeal being No. 162.

It suffices at this moment to say that all the contentions which the assignments of error involve and every argument advanced to refute such contentions, including every argument urged to uphold, on the one hand, or to overthrow, on the other, the action of the Commission, as well as every reason relied upon to challenge the action of the court or to sustain its judgment, are all reducible to the following propositions:

(a) The absolute want of power of the court below to [480] deal with the subject involved in the complaint because controversies concerning the 4th section of the act to regulate commerce of the nature here presented were, by an express statutory provision, excluded from the cognizance of the court below. (b) That even if this be not the case, the action of the Commission which was complained of was purely negative, and therefore not within the cognizance of the court, because not inherently justiciable. (c) That, correctly interpreting the 4th section, the order made by the Commission was absolutely void because wholly beyond the scope of any power conferred by the 4th section as amended. (d) That even if, in some respects, the order of the Commission was within the reach of its statutory power, there was intermingled in the order such an exertion of authority not delegated as to cause the whole order to be void. (e) That the order of the Commission was void even if the 4th section be interpreted as conferring the authority which the Commission exerted, since, under that assumption, the 4th section as amended was repugnant to the Constitution.

Digitized by Google

All the propositions, even including the jurisdictional ones, are concerned with and depend upon the construction of the 4th section as amended, and we proceed to consider and pass upon that subject and every other question in the case under four separate headings: 1, the meaning of the statute; 2, its constitutionality; 3, the jurisdiction of the court; 4, the validity of the order in the light of the statute as interpreted.

1. The meaning of the statute.

We reproduce the section as originally adopted and as amended, passing a line through the words omitted by the amendment, and printing in italics those which were added by the amendment, thus at a glance enabling the section to be read as it was before and as it now stands after amendment.

"Sec. 4. That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier [481] subject to the provisions of this Act to charge or receive any greater compensation in the aggregate for the transportation of passengers, or of like kind of property, ~~under substantially similar circumstances and conditions~~, for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line or route in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance, or to charge any greater compensation as a through route than the aggregate of the intermediate rates subject to the provisions of this Act; but this shall not be construed as authorizing any common carrier within the terms of this Act to charge ~~and~~ or receive as great compensation for a shorter as for a longer distance: Provided, however, That upon application to the Interstate Commerce Commission ~~appointed under the provisions of this Act~~, such common carrier may in special cases, after investigation ~~by the Commission~~, be authorized by the Commission to charge less for longer than for shorter distances for the transportation of passengers or property; and the Commission may from time to time prescribe the extent to which such designated common carrier may be relieved from the operation of this section of ~~this Act.~~ Provided, further, That no rates or charges lawfully existing at the time of the passage of this amendatory Act shall be required to be changed by reason of the provisions of this section prior to the expiration of six months after the passage of this Act, nor in any case where application shall have been filed before the Commission, in accordance with the provisions of this section, until a determination of such application by the Commission.

"Whenever a carrier by railroad shall in competition with a water route or routes reduce the rates on the carriage of any species of freight to or from competitive points, it shall not be permitted to increase such rates unless after hearing by the Interstate Commerce Commission it shall be found that such proposed increase rests upon changed conditions other than the elimination of water competition."

[482] Before considering the amended text we state briefly some of the more important requirements of the section before amendment and the underlying conceptions of private right, of public duty and policy which it embodies, because to do so will go a long way to remove any doubt as to the amended text, and will moreover serve to demonstrate the intent of the legislative mind in enacting the amendment.

Almost immediately after the adoption of the act to regulate commerce in 1887 the Interstate Commerce Commission, in considering the meaning of the law and the scope of the duties imposed on the Commission in enforcing it, reached the conclusion that the words "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions" of the 4th section dominated the long and short haul clause and empowered carriers to primarily determine the existence of the required dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions, and consequently to exact in the event of such difference a lesser charge for the longer than was exacted for the shorter haul, and that competition which materially affected the rate of carriage to a particular point was a dissimilar circumstance and condition within the meaning of the act. We say primarily, because of course it was further recognized that the authority existing in carriers to the end just stated was subject to the supervision and control of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the exertion of the powers conferred upon it by the statute, and especially in view of the authority stated in the 4th section. In considering the act comprehensively it was pointed out that the generic provisions against preference and discrimination expressed in the 2d and 3d sections of the act were all-embracing, and were therefore operative upon the 4th section as well as upon all other provisions of the act. But it was pointed out that where, within the purview of the 4th section, it had lawfully resulted that [483] the lesser rate was charged for a longer than was exacted for a shorter haul, such exaction, being authorized, could not be a preference or discrimination and therefore illegal. Re Louisville & N. R. Co. 1 I. C. C. Rep. 31, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 278. These comprehensive views announced at the inception as a matter of administrative construction were subsequently sustained by many decisions of this court, and to the leading of such cases we refer in the margin.[1] We observe, moreover, that in addition it came to be settled that where competitive conditions authorized carriers to lower their rates to a particular place, the right to meet the competition by lowering rates to such place was not confined to shipments made from the point of origin of the competition, but empowered all carriers, in the interest of freedom of commerce and to afford enlarged opportunity to shippers, to accept, if they chose to do so, shipments to such competitive points at lower rates than their general tariff rates: a right which came aptly to be described as "market competition" because the practice served to enlarge markets and develop the freedom of traffic and intercourse. It is to be observed, however, that the right thus conceded was not absolute, because its exercise was only permitted provided the rates were not so lowered as to be nonremunerative, and thereby cast an unnecessary burden upon other shippers. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516. As the statute as thus construed imposed no obligation to carry to the competitive point at a rate which was less than a reasonable one, it is obvious that the statute regarded the rights of private ownership, and sought to impose no duty conflicting therewith. It is also equally clear that in permitting the carrier [484] to judge primarily of the competitive conditions, and to meet them at election, the statute lodged in the carrier the right to exercise a primary judgment concerning a matter of public concern broader than the mere question of the duty of a carrier to carry for a reasonable rate on the one hand, and of the right of the shipper, on the other, to compel carriage at such rate, since the power of primary judgment which the statute conferred concerned in a broad sense the general public interest with reference to both persons and places,—considerations all of which, therefore, in their ultimate aspects, came within the competency of legislative regulation. It was apparent that the power thus conferred was primary, not absolute, since its exertion by the carrier was made by the statute the subject both of administrative control and ultimate judicial review. And the establishment of such control in and of itself serves to make manifest the public nature of the attributes conferred upon the carrier by the original 4th section. Indeed, that in so far as the statute empowered the carrier to judge as to the dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions for the purpose of relief from the long and short haul clause, it but gave the carrier the power to exert a judgment as to things public, was long since pointed out by this court. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 218, 40 L. ed. 940, 947, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

Digitized by Google

With the light afforded by the statements just made we come to consider the amendment. It is certain that the fundamental change which it makes is the omission of the substantially similar circumstances and conditions clause, thereby leaving the long and short haul clause in a sense unqualified except in so far as the section gives the right to the carrier to apply to the Commission for authority "to charge less for longer than for shorter distances for the transportation of persons or property," and gives the Commission authority from time to time "to prescribe the extent to which such designated common carrier may [485] be relieved from the operation of this section." From the failure to insert any word in the amendment tending to exclude the operation of competition as adequate under proper circumstances to justify the awarding of relief from the long and short haul clause, and there being nothing which minimizes or changes the application of the preference and discrimination clauses of the 2d and 3d sections, it follows that in substance the amendment intrinsically states no new rule or principle, but simply shifts the powers conferred by the section as it originally stood; that is, it takes from the carriers the deposit of public power previously lodged in them and vests

[1] Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 699, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. ed. 935, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648, 44 L. ed. 309, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

Digitized by Google

it in the Commission as a primary instead of a reviewing function. In other words, the elements of judgment, or, so to speak, the system of law by which judgment is to be controlled, remains unchanged, but a different tribunal is created for the enforcement of the existing law. This being true, as we think it plainly is, the situation under the amendment is this: Power in the carrier primarily to meet competitive conditions in any point of view by charging a lesser rate for a longer than for a shorter haul has ceased to exist, because to do so, in the absence of some authority, would not only be inimical to the provision of the 4th section, but would be in conflict with the preference and discrimination clauses of the 2d and 3d sections. But while the public power, so to speak, previously lodged in the carrier, is thus withdrawn and reposed in the Commission, the right of carriers to seek and obtain under authorized circumstances the sanction of the Commission to charge a lower rate for a longer than for a shorter haul because of competition or for other adequate reasons is expressly preserved, and, if not, is, in any event, by necessary implication, granted. And as a correlative the authority of the Commission to grant on request the right sought is made by the statute to depend upon the facts established and the judgment of that body, in the exercise of a sound [486] legal discretion, as to whether the request should be granted compatibly with a due consideration of the private and public interests concerned, and in view of the preference and discrimination clauses of the 2d and 3d sections.

2. The alleged repugnancy of the section as amended to the Constitution.

But if the amendment has this meaning, it is insisted that it is repugnant to the Constitution for various reasons which, superficially considered, seem to be distinct, but which really are all so interwoven that we consider and dispose of them as one. The argument is that the statute, as correctly construed, is but a delegation to the Commission of legislative power which Congress was incompetent to make. But the contention is without merit. Marshall Field Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; United States v. Heinszen, 206 U. S. 370, 51 L. ed. 1098, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742, 11 Ann. Cas. 688; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464; Monongahela Bridge Co. v. United States, 216 U. S. 177, 54 L. ed. 435, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356. We do not stop to review these cases because the mere statement of the contention, in the light of its environment, suffices to destroy it. How can it otherwise be since the argument as applied to the case before us is this: that the authority in question was validly delegated so long as it was lodged in carriers, but ceased to be susceptible of delegation the instant it was taken from the carriers for the purpose of being lodged in a public administrative body? Indeed, when it is considered that, in last analysis, the argument is advanced to sustain the right of carriers to exert the public power which it is insisted is not susceptible of delegation, it is apparent that the contention is self-contradictory, since it reduces itself to an effort to sustain the right to delegate a power by contending that the power is not capable of being delegated. In addition, however, before passing from the proposition, we observe that, when rightly appreciated, the contention but challenges every decided case since the [487] passage of the act to regulate commerce in 1887, involving the rightfulness of the exertion by a carrier of the power to meet competition as a means of being relieved from the long and short haul clause of the 4th section before its amendment. While what we have already said answers it, because of its importance we notice another contention. As the power of carriers to meet competition, and the relation of that right to noncompetitive places, may concern the fortunes of numberless individuals and the progress and development of many communities, it is said, to permit authority to be exerted concerning the subject without definite rules for its exercise will be to destroy the rights of persons and communities. This danger, the argument proceeds, is not obviated by declaring that the provisions of the 2d and 3d sections as to undue preference and discrimination apply to the 4th section, since, without a definition of what constitutes undue preference and discrimination, no definite rule of law is established, but whim, caprice, or favor will, in the nature of things, control the power exerted. And it is argued that this view is not here urged as the mere result of conjecture, since, in the report of the Commission in this case, it was declared in unequivocal terms as the basis of the order entered that the statute vested in the Commission a wide and undefined discretion by virtue of which it became its duty to see to it that communities and individuals obtained fair opportunities, that discord was allayed, and commercial justice everywhere given full play. Let it be conceded that the language relied upon would have the far-reaching signif-cance attributed to it if separated from its context, we think when it is read in connection with the report of which it but forms a part, and moreover, when it is elucidated by the action taken by the Commission, there is no substantial ground for holding that, by the language referred to, it was entitled to declare that the 4th section as amended conferred the uncontrolled [488] exuberance of vague and destructive powers which it is now insisted was intended to be claimed. In any event, however, we must be governed by the statute and its plain meaning. After all has been said, the provisions as to undue preference and discrimination, while involving, of course, a certain latitude of judgment and discretion, are no more undefined or uncertain in the section as amended than they have been from the beginning; and therefore the argument comes once more to the complaint that because public powers have been transferred from the carriers to the Commission, the wrongs suggested will arise. Accurately testing this final result of the argument it is clear that it exclusively rests upon convictions concerning the impolicy of having taken from carriers, intimately and practically acquainted as they are with the complex factors entering into rate making, and moreover impelled to equality of treatment as they must be by the law of self-interest operating upon them as a necessary result of the economic forces to which they are subjected, and having lodged the power in an official administrative body which, in the nature of things, must act, however conscientiously, from conceptions based upon a more theoretical and less practical point of view. But this does not involve a grievance based upon the construction or application of the 4th section as amended, but upon the wisdom of the legislative judgment which was brought into play in adopting the amendment,—a subject with which we have nothing in the world to do. It is said in the argument on behalf of one of the carriers that as in substance and effect the duty is imposed upon the Commission in a proper case to refuse an application, therefore the law is void because in such a contingency the statute would amount to an imperative enforcement of the long and short haul clause and would be repugnant to the Constitution. It is conceded in the argument that it has been directly decided by this court that a general enforcement [489] of the long and short haul clause would not be repugnant to the Constitution (Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95), but we are asked to reconsider and overrule the case, and thus correct the error which was manifested in deciding it. But we are not in the remotest degree inclined to enter into this inquiry, not only because of the reasons which were stated in the case itself, but also because of those already expounded in this opinion, and for an additional reason, which is, that the contention by necessary implication assails the numerous cases which, from the enactment of the act to regulate commerce down to the present time, have involved the adequacy of the conditions advanced by carriers for justifying their departure from the long and short haul clause. We say this because the controversies which the many cases referred to considered and decided by a necessary postulate involved an assertion of the validity of the legislative power to apply and enforce the long and short haul clause. How can it be otherwise since, if this were not the case, all the issues presented in the numerous cases would have been merely but moot, affording, therefore, no basis for judicial action, since they would have had back of them no sanction of lawful power whatever.

Digitized by Google

3. The jurisdiction of the court.

The argument on this subject is twofold: (a) that as by the act creating the commerce court, that court was endowed only with the jurisdiction "now possessed by circuit courts of the United States and the judges thereof," and provided that "nothing contained in this act shall be construed as enlarging the jurisdiction now possessed by the circuit courts of the United States or the judges thereof, that is hereby transferred to and vested in the commerce court;" and as new powers were created by the subsequent amendment of the 4th section, therefore the commerce court had no jurisdiction. But we pass any extended discussion of [490] the proposition because it is completely disposed of by the construction which we have given to the amended section, since that construction makes it clear that the effect of the amended 4th section was not to create new powers theretofore nonexisting, but simply to redistribute the powers already existing and which were then subject to review. The argument affords another manifestation of the tendency to which we have already directed attention in this case to seek to maintain and aggrandize a power by insisting upon propositions which, if they were accepted, would raise the gravest question as to the constitutional validity of the asserted power,—a question which we need not at all consider in view of the want of foundation for the exercise of the power claimed in the light of the plain meaning of the act to the contrary which we have already pointed out.

Digitized by Google

(b) The second contention as to jurisdiction yet further affords an illustration of the same mental attitude, since it rests upon the assumption that the order of the Commission refusing to grant the request of the carrier made under the 4th section was purely negative, and hence was not subject to judicial inquiry. The contention therefore presupposes that the power which, from the beginning, has been the subject of judicial review, by the mere fact of its transfer to the Commission was made arbitrary. Besides, the proposition disregards the fact that the right to petition the Commission conferred by the statute is positive, and while the refusal to grant it may be in one sense negative, in another and broader view it is affirmative, since it refuses that which the statute in affirmative terms declares shall be granted if only the conditions which the statute provides are found to exist. It is, of course, true, as pointed out in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 470, 54 L. ed. 280, 287, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155, and since repeatedly applied; that findings of fact made by the Commission within the scope of its administrative [491] duties must be accepted in case of judicial review, but that doctrine, as was also pointed out, does not relieve the courts in a proper case from determining whether the Constitution has been violated or whether statutory powers conferred have been transcended, or have been exercised in such an arbitrary way as to amount to the exertion of authority not given,—doctrines which but express the elementary principle that an investiture of a public body with discretion does not imply the right to abuse, but, on the contrary, carries which it as a necessary incident the command that the limits of a sound discretion be not transcended; which, by necessary implication, carries with it the existence of judicial power to correct wrongs done by such excess. And without pausing to particularly notice it, we observe in passing that what has just been said is adequate to meet the contention that, as violations of the 4th section were made criminal, no power existed to enjoin an order of the Commission made under that section because the consequence would be to enjoin criminal prosecution. The right which, as we have seen, the act gives to test the validity of orders rendered under the 4th section, is not to be destroyed by a reference to a provision of that section. The two must be harmoniously enforced.

4. The validity of the order in the light of the statute as interpreted.

The order is in the margin.[1] The main insistence is [492] that there was no power after recognizing the existence of competition and the right to charge a lesser rate to the competitive point than to intermediate points to do more than fix a reasonable rate to the intermediate points; that is to say, that under the power transferred to it by the section as amended, the Commission was limited to [493] ascertaining the existence of competition, and to authorizing the carrier to meet it, without any authority to do more than exercise its general powers concerning the reasonableness of rates at all points. But this proposition is directly in conflict with the statute as we have construed it, and with the plain purpose and intent manifested by its enactment. To uphold the proposition it would be necessary to say that the powers which were essential to the vivification and beneficial realization of the authority transferred had evaporated in the process of transfer, and hence that the power perished as the result of the act by which it was conferred. As the prime [494] object of the transfer was to vest the Commission, within the scope of the discretion imposed, and subject, in the nature of things, to the limitations arising from the character of the duty exacted and flowing from the other provisions of the act, with authority to consider competitive conditions and their relation to persons and places, necessarily there went with the power the right to do

[1] Fourth Section Order No. 124.

In the matter of the applications Nos. 205, 342, 343, 344, 349, 350, and 352, on behalf of the Transcontinental Freight Bureau, by R. H. Countiss, agent, for relief from the provisions of the 4th section of the act to regulate commerce as amended June 18, 1910, with respect to rates made from eastern points of shipment which are higher to intermediate points than to Pacific coast terminals.

Commodity Rates.

These applications, as above numbered, on behalf of the Transcontinental Freight Bureau, ask for authority to continue rates from eastern points of shipment which are higher to intermediate points in Canada and in the states of Arizona, New Mexico, Idaho, California, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, and Washington, and other states east thereof, than to Pacific coast terminals.

Full investigation of the matters and things involved in these petitions, in so far as they concern westbound commodity rates, having been had,

It is ordered, That for the purposes of that by which alone it could be exerted, and therefore a consideration of the one and the other, and the establishment of the basis by percentages, was within the power granted. As will be seen by the order, and as we have already said, for the purpose of the percentages established zones of influence were adopted, and the percentages fixed as to such zones varied or fluctuated upon the basis of the influence of the competition in the designated areas. As we have pointed out, though somewhat modified, the zones as thus selected by the Commission were in substance the same as those previously fixed by the carriers as the basis of the rate making which was included in the tariffs which were under investigation, and therefore we may put that subject out of view. Indeed, except as to questions of power, there is no contention in the argument as to the inequality of the zones or percentages, or as to any undue preference or discrimination resulting from the action taken. But be this as it may, in view of the findings of the Commission as to the system of rates prevailing in the tariffs which were before it, of the inequalities and burdens engendered by such system, of the possible aggrandizement unnaturally beyond the limits produced by competition in favor of the competitive points and against other points by the tariff in question,—facts which we accept, and which indeed are unchallenged,—we see no ground for saying that the order was not sustained by the facts upon which it was based, or that it exceeded the powers which the statute conferred, or transcended the limits of the sound legal discretion which it lodged in [495] the Commission when acting upon the subject before it.

Digitized by Google

It results that the Commerce Court, in enjoining the order of the Commission, was wrong, and its decree to that end must therefore be reversed, and the case be remanded to the proper District Court, with directions to dismiss the bill for want of equity.

Reversed.

---

the disposition of these applications, the United States shall be divided into five zones, as described in the following manner:

(The transcontinental group hereinafter described are as specified in R. H. Countiss, agent's transcontinental Tariff I. C. C. No. 929.)

Zone No. 1 comprises all that portion of the United States lying west of a line called Line No. 1, which extends in a general southerly direction from a point immediately east of Grand Portage, Minnesota; thence southwesterly, along the northwestern shore of Lake Superior, to a point immediately east of Superior, Wisconsin; thence southerly, along the eastern boundary of Transcontinental Group F, to the intersection of the Arkansas and Oklahoma state line; thence along the west side of the Kansas City Southern Railway to the Gulf of Mexico.

Zone No. 2 embraces all territory in the United States lying east of Line No. 1 and west of a line called Line No. 2, which begins at the international boundary between the United States and Canada, immediately west of Cockburn island, in Lake Huron; passes westerly through the Straits of Mackinaw; southerly, through Lake Michigan to its southern boundary; follows the west boundary of Transcontinental Group C to Paducah, Kentucky; thence follows the east side of the Illinois Central Railroad to the southern boundary of Transcontinental Group C; thence follows the east boundary of Group C to the Gulf of Mexico.

Zone No. 3 embraces all territory in the United States lying east of Line No. 2 and north of the south boundary of Transcontinental Group C, and on and west of Line No. 3, which is the Buffalo-Pittsburg line from Buffalo, New York, to Wheeling, West Virginia, marking the western boundary of Trunk Line Freight Association territory; thence follows the Ohio river to Huntington, West Virginia.

Zone No. 4 embraces all territory in the United States east of Line No. 3 and north of the south boundary of Transcontinental Group C.

Zone No. 5 embraces all territory south and east of Transcontinental Group C.

It is further ordered, (1) That those portions of the above-numbered applications that request authority to maintain higher commodity rates from points in Zone No. 1 to intermediate points than to Pacific coast terminals be, and the same are hereby, denied, effective November 15, 1911; (2) that petitioners herein be, and they are hereby, authorized to establish and maintain, effective November 15, 1911, commodity rates from all points in zones numbered 2, 3, and 4, as above defined, to points intermediate to Pacific coast terminals, that are higher to intermediate points than to Pacific coast terminals; provided, that the rates to intermediate points from points in zones numbered 2, 3, and 4 shall not exceed the rates on the same commodities from the same points of origin to the Pacific coast terminals by more than 7 per cent from points in Zone No. 2, 15 per cent from points in Zone No. 3, and 25 per cent from points in Zone No. 4.

The commission does not hereby approve any rates that may be established under this authority, all such rates being subject to complaint, investigation, and correction if they conflict with any other provisions of the act.

By the Commission:

[Seal.] Judson C. Clements, Chairman.

Digitized by Google

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Interstate Commerce Commission, et al., Appts.,
v.
UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY et al. (No. 137.)

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Interstate Commerce Commission, et al., Appts.,
v.
UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY et al. (No. 163.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 495–497.)

This case is governed by the decision in United States of America v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., ante, 1408.

[Nos. 137 and 163.]

Argued February 23, 26, and 27, 1912. Ordered on April 8, 1912, for reargument before full bench. Reargued October 18, 21, and 22, 1912. Decided June 22, 1914.

TWO APPEALS from the United States Commerce Court to review an interlocutory order and final decree enjoining the enforcement of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission based upon the long and short haul clause of the act to regulate commerce. Reversed and case remanded with directions to dismiss the bill.

See same case below, on motion to dismiss, 191 Fed. 856.

Former Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Fowler argued the cause, and, with Mr. Blackburn Esterline, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, filed a brief for the United States on original argument.

Mr. Patrick J. Farrell argued the cause and filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. Stephen A. Foster argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Rush C. Butler, William E. Lamb, and Cornelius Lynde, filed a brief for appellant the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Mr. H. M. Stephens argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. B. Campbell, A. M. Craven, and John Wiley, filed a brief for appellants the City of Spokane et al:

The theory of the common law was that the strong could not be preferred over the weak; that no favoritism should be shown; that all persons should be upon an equality, and none treated unjustly or placed at a disadvantage.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 53 L. ed. 352, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Call Pub. Co. 181 U. S. 99, 45 L. ed. 769, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co. 110 U. S. 667, 28 L. ed. 291, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

The provisions of the 1st section of the interstate commerce act, that all rates must be reasonable, was and is simply declaratory of the common law.

23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 656; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Ruggles v. Illinois, 108 U. S. 538, 27 L. ed. 817, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 832; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co. 110 U. S. 667, 28 L. ed. 291, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 331, 29 L. ed. 644, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 31 L. ed. 841, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028.

Common carriers assume the duties of a public trust. By engaging in the business they grant to the public an interest in their business. They agree that all persons interested in their business through such grant shall be treated and dealt with fairly, equitably, justly, and without favor, disadvantage, or discrimination.

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 517, 36 L. ed. 247, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Brass v. North Dakota, 153 U. S. 391, 38 L. ed. 757, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 670, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 53 L. ed. 352, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214.

In the California water cases and the New York gas case this court has affirmed decisions of the appropriate tribunals, which permit public service corporations to earn only 6 per cent.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 756, 43 L. ed. 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241; New York v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1134, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

There is no reason why Congress should not fix a lower per cent than 6.

Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154,

Digitized by Google

19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Chesapeake & P. Teleph. Co. v. Manning, 186 U. S. 238, 46 L. ed. 1144, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881.

Provisos are generally for the purpose of making an exception, to restrain generalities, to qualify operation, and prevent misinterpretation. They may be for the purpose of enlargement or extension. They may mean the same as "but" or "and," and serve to separate or diminish.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 36, 37, 48 L. ed. 860, 865, 866, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Chesapeake & P. Teleph. Co. v. Manning, 186 U. S. 238, 242, 46 L. ed. 1144, 1146, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881.

The proviso in the statute proves that the thing attempted to be excepted would be within the general class had the proviso or exception not been made.

Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 438, 6 L. ed. 678, 685.

A proviso is construed strictly, and takes no case out of the enacting clause which does not fall fairly within its terms, where the enacting clause is general in its language and objects, and the proviso follows.

United States v. Dickson, 15 Pet. 141, 10 L. ed. 689.

Rates may be fixed so as to require the carrier to furnish rates to all on basis carrier establishes as to some.

Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Mississippi R. Commission, 203 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 289, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

Statutes that are constitutional in part only will be upheld so far as they are not in conflict with the Constitution, provided the allowed and prohibited parts are severable.

Keokuk Northern Line Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U. S. 89, 24 L. ed. 381; Presser v. Illinois, 116 U. S. 263, 29 L. ed. 618, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580; Gatewood v. North Carolina, 203 U. S. 531, 542, 51 L. ed. 305, 310, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 167; Hamilton v. Brown, 161 U. S. 256, 274, 40 L. ed. 691, 699, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

The carriers have been expending annually from earnings much more in permanent improvements than they are entitled to under the holding and rule announced by this court.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. ed. 1128, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700.

The power of Congress is supreme and absolute—barring the constitutional question of confiscation.

Delk v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 220 U. S. 580, 55 L. ed. 590, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 215 U. S. 479, 54 L. ed. 291, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. ed. 280, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Leathe v. Thomas, 207 U. S. 93, 52 L. ed. 118, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 220 U. S. 257, 55 L. ed. 458, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 55 L. ed. 328, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. United States, 219 U. S. 486, 55 L. ed. 305, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Mazursky, 216 U. S. 122, 54 L. ed. 411, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 378; Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Mississippi R. Commission, 203 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 289, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. ed. 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

The people, through their representatives in Congress, so long as they are within the provisions of the Federal Constitution, are superior and paramount to the Commission and this court, and have a right, through their representatives in Congress, to adopt a new policy or change a policy, and to amend the law so as to eliminate and get away from the decisions of the Commission and this court.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. ed. 297, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265.

The policy of a statute is wholly for and with Congress.

Ibid.; Calder v. Michigan, 218 U. S. 591, 54 L. ed. 1163, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. ed. 280, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

Courts may consider reports of committees and debates in Congress. This court, however, has determined that they are not determinative or decisive of the construction placed upon any act by Congress, or to be placed thereon by the courts.

Aldridge v. Williams, 3 How. 1, 11 L. ed. 469; District of Columbia v. Washington Market Co. 108 U. S. 243, 27 L. ed. 714, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Dunlap v. United States, 173 U. S. 65, 43 L. ed. 616, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U. S. 320, 53 L. ed. 1013, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671.

Necessarily, in considering a statute, the history of that statute, matters to be remedied, and the intention of Congress, must be considered. If there is nothing to remedy, then there is no excuse for the amendment.

Digitized by Google

Preston v. Browder, 1 Wheat. 115, 4 L. ed. 50; Stewart v. Kahn (Stewart v. Bloom) 11 Wall. 493, 20 L. ed. 176; Blake v. National City Bank, 23 Wall. 307, 23 L. ed. 119; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 72, 23 L. ed. 224; Platt v. Union P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 48, 25 L. ed. 424; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 42 L. ed. 394, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3.

A guide to the meaning of the statute is found in the evil which it is designed to remedy, as gathered from contemporaneous events, the situation as it existed, and as it was pressed upon the attention of the legislative body.

Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511.

Congress intended to and did adopt the policy of preventing carriers from charging more for the shorter haul. Where a provision is left out of a statute, either by design or mistake of the legislature, the courts have no power to supply it. To do so would be to legislate, and not to construe.

Hobbs v. McLean, 117 U. S. 567, 29 L. ed. 940, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870.

Where the legislature makes a plain provision without making any exception, the courts can make none.

Maxwell v. Moore, 22 How. 185, 191, 16 L. ed. 251, 253.

The omission or failure to provide for contingencies which it may seem wise to have specifically provided for does not justify judicial addition to the language of the statute.

Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 438, 45 L. ed. 1171, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906.

The delegation of power and authority to the Commission is not a delegation of legislative power.

United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480; Light v. United States, 220 U. S. 523, 55 L. ed. 570, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Montezuma Canal Co. v. Smithville Canal Co. 218 U. S. 371, 54 L. ed. 1074, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

In order to wipe out discrimination it is necessary that relative rates be fixed and enforced. Congress has ample power to fix relative rates, and this it may do either directly or indirectly through the Commission.

Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Mississippi R. Commission, 203 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 289, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

As to whether or not a discrimination exists is a question of fact for determination by the Commission; and the determination of that question of fact is such that it cannot be reviewed by the courts.

Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 23 L. ed. 424; United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61, 25 L. ed. 93; Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514, 25 L. ed. 929; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 25 L. ed. 800; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Sanford v. Sanford, 139 U. S. 642, 35 L. ed. 290, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Gonzales v. French, 164 U. S. 338, 41 L. ed. 458, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102; Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 473, 43 L. ed. 772, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Gardner v. Bonestell, 180 U. S. 362, 45 L. ed. 574, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Brown v. Gurney, 201 U. S. 184, 50 L. ed. 717, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509; Hill v. McCord, 196 U. S. 395, 49 L. ed. 251, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; United States v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233, 29 L. ed. 110, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Small v. Rakestraw, 196 U. S. 403, 49 L. ed. 527, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 285.

Mr. F. C. Dillard argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Robert Dunlap, E. C. Lindley, and Maxwell Evarts, filed a brief for appellees.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts, Gardiner Lathrop, Charles W. Bunn, Charles Donnelly, Robert Dunlap, E. C. Lindley, and F. C. Dillard also filed a brief for appellees.

Mr. Joseph N. Teal argued the cause, and, with Mr. Wirt Minor, filed a brief for interveners, the Portland Chamber of Commerce et al.:

There being no question of the existence of water competition, unjust discrimination cannot be predicated on rates compelled by it.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 220, 40 L. ed. 940, 947, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Noyes, Am. R. Rates, p. 93.

The efforts of carriers in their supposed interests or in the interests of some locality to equalize natural disadvantages through the rate-making power has time and again been condemned by the Commission.

Elk Cement & Lime Co. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 22 Inters. Com. Rep. 84; Carstens Packing Co. v. Oregon & W. R. Co. 22 Inters. Com. Rep. 77; Beale & W. Railroad Rate Regulation, § 843; Enterprise Mfg. Co. v. Georgia R. Co. 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 451; East St. Louis Cotton Oil Co. v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 20 Inters. Com. Rep. 37; Corporation Commission v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 19 Inters. Com. Rep. 303.

Digitized by Google

The terminal rate plus the local back controls the rate which can be charged to an intermediate point within the influence of water competition.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 190 U. S. 273, 280, 47 L. ed. 1047, 1054, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687.

Former Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Fowler argued the cause, and, with Mr. Blackburn Esterline, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, filed a brief for the United States on reargument.

Mr. Patrick J. Farrell argued the cause for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Messrs. Rush C. Butler, William E. Lamb, Stephen A. Foster, and Cornelius Lynde filed a brief for appellant the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Mr. J. B. Campbell argued the cause for appellants the city of Spokane et al.

Mr. Joseph N. Teal argued the cause for interveners, the Portland Chamber of Commerce et al.

Mr. F. C. Dillard argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees.

Mr. Alfred P. Thom filed a brief as amicus curiæ.

For contentions of counsel not here set forth, see their respective briefs as reported in United States v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. ante, 1408.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The eleven carriers who are appellees on this record filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission applications to be relieved from the long and short haul clause of § 4 of the act to regulate commerce [24 Stat. at L. 380, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3155], as amended by the act of June 18, 1910, chap. 309, 36 Stat. at L. 547, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288. After full hearing the Commission entered an order granting in certain respects the relief prayed, but establishing a proportionate relation to be maintained between the lower rate for the longer haul and the higher rate for the shorter haul upon the basis of percentages which were fixed with reference to defined zones. The carriers refused to obey the order, and filed their bill in the commerce court to enjoin its enforcement. An interlocutory injunction was ordered. The defendants moved to dismiss, and, on the overruling of the motions, appealed from the interlocutory order, that case being No. 137. Subsequently, upon the election of the defendants not to plead further, a final decree was entered and appealed from, that appeal being No. 163.

These cases are governed by the opinion in Nos. 136 [497] and 162, just decided [234 U. S. 476, ante, 1408, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986]. They were tried in the court below with the other cases, were decided by the same opinion, and, although different localities are involved, the questions presented are identical, and for the reasons given in the other cases, Nos. 136 and 162, the decree must be reversed and remanded to the proper district court with directions to dismiss the bill for want of equity.

Reversed.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS, ON THE RELATION OF EDWARD F. DUNNE,[1] GOVERNOR, AND PATRICK J. LUCEY, ATTORNEY GENERAL, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

ECONOMY LIGHT & POWER COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 497–524.)

Error to state court — decision of Federal question.

1. A judgment of the Illinois supreme court, affirming the dismissal of the state's suit to restrain a corporation from constructing a dam across a river, is not reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court on the theory that it involves a decision of the Federal question, if any, presented by the assertion on behalf of the state of a public right arising from the condition of navigability alleged to have been created by concurrent state and Federal action, where the state court, in addition to deciding the

[1] Expiration of term of office of Charles S. Deneen as Governor, and William H. Stead as Attorney General, parties plaintiffs in error herein, suggested, and substitution of Edward F. Dunne, Governor, and Patrick J. Lucey, Attorney General, as parties plaintiffs in error herein, granted December 22, 1914.

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Courts of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

Digitized by Google

manifestly local questions as to state or private ownership of the bed of the river, and the validity of deeds, leases, and contracts made by canal commissioners on which the corporation relies, merely held that there had been no concurrence by the state in any project to make the river navigable, that it was not navigable in fact in its natural state, and did not become navigable by the addition of the water of the Chicago Sanitary District, and that the state could not make it navigable by legislative declaration, and thus destroy vested rights of riparian owners.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1393–1430, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — Federal question — navigability.

2. No question under the provisions of the ordinance of July 13, 1787 (1 Stat. at L. 52, note), for the government of the Northwest territory, or of subsequent congressional legislation, which merely define rights depending for their existence upon navigability, remains to support the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over a state court, where the latter court has decided against the fact of navigability.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1595–1600, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — Federal question — right under Federal law.

3. Congress has not so taken jurisdiction of the Des Plaines river by making appropriations for a survey and estimates of the cost of its improvement that the state of Illinois may assert a right thereunder to restrain the private construction of a dam across the river, which, if denied, will support the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over a state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1751–2049, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 179.]

Argued April 29 and 30, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court, in that state, dismissing an information by which the state sought to restrain a private corporation from erecting a dam across the Des Plaines river. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 241 Ill. 290, 89 N. E. 760.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Merritt Starr and Horace Kent Tenney argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Elijah N. Zoline, John S. Miller, George Packard, and Henry A. Parkin, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The legislation and acts of the two sovereignties in furtherance of the common object of connecting the navigable waters of the Great Lakes with the Mississippi river are so interwoven and related that the rights and questions arising from them, and the construction of their effect, necessarily create Federal questions. The Federal permit operating to increase the volume of the Des Plaines, and the Federal control continually exercised over that volume, constitute it a navigable water of the United States, and involve Federal questions. The construction of the state statutes and their application to the situation here presented involve Federal questions.

United States v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co. 176 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 437, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343.

Where the question is of the competency and legal effect of the evidence as bearing upon a question of Federal law, the decision may be reviewed.

Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 667, 38 L. ed. 305, 308, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704; Mackay v. Dillon, 4 How. 421, 447, 11 L. ed. 1038, 1050.

The entire record, including the evidence, may be examined to determine whether what purports to be a finding of fact is so involved with or dependent upon questions of law bearing upon the Federal right as to be in substance and effect a decision of the latter. Questions of the legal effect of evidence bearing upon the Federal right will be examined.

Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. 223 U. S. 573, 591, 56 L. ed. 556, 565, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316.

A finding of fact by a state court that a bankruptcy proceeding had been abandoned is not conclusive on this court. The determination of a question of that kind is not within the class of cases in which a finding is conclusive.

Acme Harvester Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co. 222 U. S. 300, 56 L. ed. 208, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96.

The evidence to sustain a charge that the United States district attorney had notice of a deed was examined and held wholly insufficient in fact and in law.

Stanley v. Schwalby, 162 U. S. 255, 274, 277, 279, 40 L. ed. 960, 966–968, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754.

The question whether the facts proved show the existence of a public necessity authorizing the taking of property will be examined by a consideration of the evidence.

Washington ex rel. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Fairchild, 224 U. S. 510, 56 L. ed. 863, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535.

Where a Federal question is involved, and all the facts in the record do not, as a matter of law, warrant the state court's conclusion, this court will reverse the judgment.

Dushane v. Beall, 161 U. S. 513, 40 L. ed. 791, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 637.

Digitized by Google

The appellate jurisdiction of the United States Supreme Court over questions national in their nature cannot be restrained by the fact that the plaintiff has elected to pursue a common-law remedy in a state court.

Belden v. Chase, 150 U. S. 674, 691, 37 L. ed. 1218, 1224, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264.

Where a conclusion of law as to a Federal right and a finding of fact are so intermingled as to make it necessary, in passing upon the Federal question, to analyze the facts, the power to do so to such extent exists.

Creswill v. Grand Lodge K. P. 225 U. S. 246, 261, 56 L. ed. 1074, 1080, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822.

The contention that there was no evidence tending to show liability under a Federal statute involves a Federal question.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. McWhirter, 229 U. S. 265, 57 L. ed. 1179, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 858.

The competency of evidence, or its sufficiency to warrant the conclusion, on a mixed question of law or fact, may present a Federal question.

Cedar Rapids Gaslight Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 223 U. S. 655, 56 L. ed. 594, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

A verdict against the party asserting navigability does not conclude this court, which has a right to consider under what instructions and definitions given by the trial court the jury found their verdict.

Leovy v. United States, 177 U. S. 621, 627, 44 L. ed. 914, 917, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797.

The failure of the state court to pass upon the Federal question does not affect this court's jurisdiction.

West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Illinois, 201 U. S. 506, 519, 50 L. ed. 845, 850, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 580, 50 L. ed. 596, 604, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 231, 41 L. ed. 979, 982, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

The rights claimed by the state under the statutes and authority of the United States were duly claimed in the state courts:

1. By special assignments of error presenting the claims of rights under the acts of Congress, which are sufficient.

Rothschild v. Knight, 184 U. S. 334, 339, 46 L. ed. 573, 579, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Sully v. American Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 289, 298, 44 L. ed. 1072, 1076, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Cincinnati, P. B. S. & P. Packet Co. v. Bay, 200 U. S. 179, 182, 50 L. ed. 428, 432, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 487, 48 L. ed. 268, 271, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 530, 46 L. ed. 673, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Kaukauna Water Power Co. v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 142 U. S. 254, 269, 35 L. ed. 1004, 1009, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173.

2. Federal questions were duly raised in the state court. The special assignment of error was an amplification of statement of ground for relief claimed in the original information, as to which specific evidence as to the absence of Federal permit, opinion of the War Department, and need or lack of need of a Federal permit, was introduced by both parties.

Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co. 2 Pet. 245, 7 L. ed. 412; Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193, 197, 43 L. ed. 665, 666, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; The Montello (United States v. The Montello) 11 Wall. 411, 414, 20 L. ed. 191, 192; Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 43 L. ed. 364, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; Illinois C. R. Co. v. McKendree, 203 U. S. 514, 525, 51 L. ed. 298, 303, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 153; Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. 44, 19 L. ed. 370.

3. It is not necessary that the state supreme court should discuss the Federal question in its opinion.

Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 540, 31 L. ed. 235, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Gaar, S. & Co. v. Shannon, 223 U. S. 468, 471, 56 L. ed. 510, 512, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Illinois, 201 U. S. 506, 519, 520, 50 L. ed. 845, 850, 851, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Detroit, Ft. W. & B. I. R. Co. v. Osborn, 189 U. S. 383, 387, 47 L. ed. 860, 863, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 11, 51 L. ed. 681, 685, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Indiana, 194 U. S. 579, 589, 48 L. ed. 1124, 1129, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767; Atty. Gen. ex rel. Kies v. Lowrey, 199 U. S. 233, 239, 50 L. ed. 167, 170, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 115 U. S. 683, 697, 29 L. ed. 510, 515, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Chicago L. Ins. Co. v. Needles, 113 U. S. 574, 579, 28 L. ed. 1084, 1086, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

It is not necessary to state in terms on the record that the Constitution or a treaty or law of the United States has been drawn in question, or the validity of a state law, on the ground of its repugnancy to the Constitution. It is sufficient if the record shows that a law of the United States must have been construed, or that the authority exercised under the state must have been questioned as repugnant to the laws of the United States, and the decision has been in favor of the party claiming under such authority.

Digitized by Google

Home Ins. Co. v. Augusta, 93 U. S. 116, 121, 23 L. ed. 825, 826; Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co. 2 Pet. 245, 7 L. ed. 412; Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 409, 7 L. ed. 458, 467; Davis v. Packard, 6 Pet. 41, 48–50, 8 L. ed. 312, 315; Harris v. Dennie, 3 Pet. 292, 302, 7 L. ed. 683, 687; Craig v. Missouri, 4 Pet. 410, 428, 429, 7 L. ed. 903, 909, 910; Neilson v. Lagow, 12 How. 98, 109, 13 L. ed. 909, 914; Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 488, 43 L. ed. 521, 525, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Maryland, 21 Wall. 456, 466, 22 L. ed. 678.

The case was tried and evidence was received on both sides in the trial court, as to the application of, and compliance or noncompliance with, the acts of Congress.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Wilhoit, 87 C. C. A. 401, 160 Fed. 443.

The navigability of a stream claimed to be a navigable water of the United States within the acts of Congress presents Federal questions to be determined according to Federal law.

The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 563, 564, 19 L. ed. 999, 1001, 1002; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Passenger Cases, 7 How. 405, 415, 445, 455, 462, 12 L. ed. 753, 757, 770, 774, 777; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118; Wisconsin v. Duluth, 96 U. S. 379, 387, 24 L. ed. 668, 671; United States v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co. 176 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 437, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343; United States v. Rio Grande Dam & Irrig. Co. 174 U. S. 708, 43 L. ed. 1143, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co. 2 Pet. 245, 7 L. ed. 412; Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 591, 39 L. ed. 1092, 1105, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co. 18 How. 421, 431, 15 L. ed. 435, 437; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367, affirming 143 Fed. 377; Cummings v. Chicago, 188 U. S. 410, 47 L. ed. 525, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Illinois, 201 U. S. 506, 50 L. ed. 845, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Montgomery v. Portland, 190 U. S. 89, 47 L. ed. 965, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735; Hagan v. Richmond, 104 Va. 723, 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1120, 52 S. E. 385; South Carolina v. Georgia, 93 U. S. 4, 13, 23 L. ed. 782, 784; Miller v. New York, 109 U. S. 385, 27 L. ed. 971, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 228.

The additional assignment of error based on the act of Congress of March 3, 1899, and the acts amendatory thereof, was not made too late, and, within the rules of this court, having been considered by the state supreme court and denied, furnishes ground for jurisdiction here.

Rothschild v. Knight, 184 U. S. 334, 339, 46 L. ed. 573, 579, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Meyer v. Richmond, 172 U. S. 82, 43 L. ed. 374, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; Arrowsmith v. Harmoning, 118 U. S. 194, 30 L. ed. 243, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; Sully v. American Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 289, 44 L. ed. 1072, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Erie R. Co. v. Purdy, 185 U. S. 148, 153, 46 L. ed. 847, 850, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605; North Carolina R. Co. v. Zachary, 232 U. S. 248, ante, 591, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Miedreich v. Lauenstein, 232 U. S. 236, ante, 584, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309; Forbes v. State Council, 216 U. S. 396, 399, 54 L. ed. 534, 535, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Consolidated Turnp. Co. v. Norfolk & O. V. R. Co. 228 U. S. 326, 334, 57 L. ed. 857, 862, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510.

The assignment in the case at bar was not treated by the state court as made too late. If it had so considered it, it would not have allowed it to be filed. Its order allowing the assignment to be filed is conclusive of the propriety of filing it, and of the right to have it passed upon. The state supreme court is the judge of the question.

Cincinnati, P. B. S. & P. Packet Co. v. Bay, 200 U. S. 179, 182, 50 L. ed. 428, 432, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

General assignments of error are sufficient, under the Illinois practice, to present the questions here relied upon.

Chicago & R. I. R. Co. v. Northern Illinois Coal & I. Co. 36 Ill. 62, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 198; Ottawa, O. & F. River Valley R. Co. v. McMath, 91 Ill. 104.

The jurisdiction of this court does not depend upon the existence of several Federal questions, but one is sufficient. Where jurisdiction in this court exists because a Federal question is involved, the court may pass upon questions under both state and Federal law.

Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. 223 U. S. 573, 56 L. ed. 556, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316.

A party who insists that a judgment cannot be rendered against him consistently with the statutes of the United States may be fairly held, within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, to assert a right and immunity under such statutes, although the statutes may not give the party himself a personal or affirmative right that could be enforced by direct suit against his adversary.

Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 12, 19, 50 L. ed. 348, 352, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Illinois C.

Digitized by Google

R. Co. v. McKendree, 203 U. S. 514, 525, 51 L. ed. 298, 303, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 153; Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. 44, 19 L. ed. 370; Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 44 L. ed. 839, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687.

A judgment in favor of the other party, where such a claim is made, gives this court jurisdiction.

Acme Harvester Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co. 222 U. S. 300, 56 L. ed. 208, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96.

The claim that the stream is a navigable water of the United States need not be averred in those words, if the meaning of the pleading is clear from the other averments; nor it is necessary to quote the words of the Constitution or statute, or to cite by their numbers the particular chapter and section of the statute in the pleadings.

Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 43 L. ed. 364, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97.

To admit that the authority to review the action of a state court where it has decided a Federal question can be rendered unavailing by a suggestion that the court below may have rested its judgment on a non-Federal ground would simply amount to depriving this court of all power to review Federal questions if only a party chose to make such a suggestion.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. McWhirter, 229 U. S. 265, 276, 57 L. ed. 1179, 1186, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 858; Neilson v. Lagow, 12 How. 98, 13 L. ed. 909.

Mr. Frank H. Scott argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Gilbert E. Porter and Edgar A. Bancroft, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Where the state court denies the existence of the facts necessary to bring the case within the operation of the Federal statutes, this court has no jurisdiction to review.

Crary v. Devlin, 154 U. S. 619, and 23 L. ed. 510, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1199; Cameron v. United States, 146 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed. 1077, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184.

The question of navigability is purely one of fact.

Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300.

No title, right, privilege, or immunity was claimed in the information, nor in the trial court, as arising under this act. This court will not take jurisdiction upon such a record, where, under the state's rule of practice, a court of review will not pass on questions raised for the first time in that court, and which might and should have been raised in the trial court.

Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291–309, 47 L. ed. 480–485, 63 L.R.A. 33, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Spies v. Illinois, 123 U. S. 131, 181, 31 L. ed. 80, 91, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21, 22; Chappell v. Bradshaw, 128 U. S. 132, 32 L. ed. 369, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Jacobi v. Alabama, 187 U. S. 133, 47 L. ed. 106, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Cincinnati, P. B. S. & P. Packet Co. v. Bay, 200 U. S. 179, 182, 50 L. ed 428, 432, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; 3 Foster, Fed. Pr. 5th ed. 2402; Ex parte Chadwick, 159 Fed. 576; Masonic Fraternity Temple Asso. v. Chicago, 217 Ill. 58, 75 N. E. 439; Griveau v. South Chicago City R. Co. 213 Ill. 633, 73 N. E. 309.

That is the rule of practice in Illinois.

Dunn v. Crichfield, 214 Ill. 299, 73 N. E. 386; McKenzie v. Penfield, 87 Ill. 40.

The objection that an act is void raises the question under the state, and not the Federal, Constitution.

Levy v. Superior Ct. 167 U. S. 175, 177, 42 L. ed. 126, 127, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 49 L. ed. 394, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; Porter v. Foley, 24 How. 415, 420, 16 L. ed. 740; Miller v. Cornwall R. Co. 168 U. S. 134, 42 L. ed. 410, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34.

A Federal question foreclosed by prior decisions will not be reviewed by this court.

Leonard v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 198 U. S. 416–422, 49 L. ed. 1108–1111, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750.

The decision of the court that the river is not navigable made it unnecessary for the court to pass on the Federal question, if one existed.

Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Chrisman v. Miller, 197 U. S. 313, 49 L. ed. 770, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; King v. West Virginia, 216 U. S. 92, 54 L. ed. 396, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225; Mammoth Min. Co. v. Grand Central Min. Co. 213 U. S. 72, 53 L. ed. 702, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; Chapman & D. Land Co. v. Bigelow, 206 U. S. 41, 51 L. ed. 953, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 53 L. ed. 417, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; Rankin v. Emigh, 218 U. S. 27, 54 L. ed. 915, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672.

Neither in the information, assignment of errors, or briefs and arguments in the state court, nor in the opinion of that court, was any reference made to the Constitution. Its provisions cannot be invoked for the first time in this court.

Cox v. Texas, 202 U. S. 446, 451, 50 L. ed. 1099, 1101, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Scudder v. Comptroller (Scudder v. Coler) 175 U. S. 32, 44 L. ed. 62, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

The fact that the state court in its opinion said that it had "considered all of the questions" does not show that it had passed upon any Federal question under the act of 1899.

Consolidated Turnp. Co. v. Norfolk & O. V. R. Co. 228 U. S. 326, 57 L. ed. 857, 33 Sup.

Digitized by Google

Ct. Rep. 510; Forbes v. State Council, 216 U. S. 396, 54 L. ed. 534, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295.

The claim of the Federal character of the stream was not a claim of "the application of the Federal law thereto," or an assertion of any title, right, privilege, or immunity under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575.

Erie R. Co. v. Purdy, 185 U. S. 148, 46 L. ed. 847, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605; F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 655, 41 L. ed. 1149, 1151, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 85, 86, 49 L. ed. 394, 396, 397, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176.

Neither is the fact that the justice of the state court allowed the writ of error sufficient to show that any Federal question was involved.

Hulbert v. Chicago, 202 U. S. 275, 280, 50 L. ed. 1026, 1028, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 223, 50 L. ed. 157, 161, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31; Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 487, 488, 43 L. ed. 521, 525, 526, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

While it is true that the opinion of the supreme court of the state may be looked to to ascertain whether a Federal right was actually denied, yet it must clearly and unmistakably appear from such opinion that such question was actually decided against a Federal claim, and that the decision of the question was essential to the judgment rendered.

Montana ex rel. Haire v. Rice, 204 U. S. 291, 298, 51 L. ed. 490, 494, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 177, 47 L. ed. 765, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487.

General assignments of error are not sufficient, under the Illinois practice, to present the points here relied on.

Skakel v. People, 188 Ill. 291, 58 N. E. 1003; St. Louis Transfer Co. v. Canty, 103 Ill. 423; Berry v. Chicago, 192 Ill. 154, 61 N. E. 498; Hulbert v. Chicago, 202 U. S. 275, 50 L. ed. 1026, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Pelouze v. Slaughter, 241 Ill. 226, 89 N. E. 259; Swift & Co. v. Fue, 167 Ill. 443, 47 N. E. 761; Donnelly v. Chicago City R. Co. 163 Ill. App. 7; Doggett v. Ruppert, 178 Ill. App. 230.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a proceeding brought in the circuit court of Grundy county, Illinois, being an information filed by the attorney general of the state on behalf of the people of the state on the relation of the governor, against defendant in error, the Economy Light & Power Company, to restrain that company from erecting a dam across the Des Plaines river, and from causing the waters of the river to back up and overflow the lands of the state; to refrain from permitting the obstructions placed in the river to remain therein; and that certain deeds, leases, and contracts made by the canal commissioners of the state to the company be declared null and void. The information was dismissed by the circuit court and its decree was affirmed by the supreme court. This writ of error was then sued out by plaintiffs in error.

A motion is made to dismiss on the grounds—(1) that no Federal question was decided by the supreme court adversely to plaintiffs in error. (2) The Federal questions sought to be raised in this court were not raised in the trial court, and under the practice in Illinois were not open to review in the supreme court, and were not reviewed. (3) The Federal questions raised are without merit. (4) The decision of the supreme court is sustainable upon non-Federal grounds.

The motion makes necessary a consideration of the [511] allegations of the information and of the grounds of decision of the court. The information alleges the following: The state of Illinois was formed out of the Northwest territory ceded by Virginia to the United States in 1784, and by the ordinance for the government of the territory it was declared in article 4 that "the navigable waters leading into the Mississippi and St. Lawrence, and the carrying places between the same, shall be common highways, and forever free, as well to the inhabitants of the said territory as to the citizens of the United States and those of any other states that may be admitted into the Confederacy, without any tax, impost, or duty therefor." [1 Stat. at L. 52, note.]

On the 18th of May, 1796 [1 Stat. at L. 468, chap. 29, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1567], Congress passed an act for the sale of lands of the United States in the territory northwest of the Ohio river and above the mouth of the Kentucky river, by § 9 of which act it was provided that all navigable rivers within the territory to be disposed of by virtue of the act should be deemed to be and remain public highways. Subsequently there was separated from such territory by an act of Congress, dated May 7, 1800 [2 Stat. at L. 58, chap. 41], the portion thereof which now embraces the states of Illinois and Indiana, to be called Indiana territory. On March 26, 1804 [2 Stat. at L. 277, chap. 35], Congress, acting under the Constitution of 1787, passed an act for the disposal of the public lands in Indiana territory, by which it was provided that all the navigable rivers, creeks, and waters within that territory should be deemed to be and remain public highways.

Digitized by Google

By an act of February 3, 1809 [2 Stat. at L. 514, chap. 13], Congress divided the Indiana territory and constituted that portion of it which now comprises the state of Illinois a separate territory, to be called Illinois, and provided that its inhabitants should be entitled to and enjoy all and singular the rights, privileges, and advantages [512] granted and secured to the people of the Northwest territory by the ordinance of July 13, 1787.

On the 18th of April, 1818 [3 Stat. at L. 428, chap. 67], Congress passed an act to enable the people of Illinois to form a constitution and state government for admission into the Union upon an equality with other states, and provided that the government should be republican, and not repugnant to the ordinance of July 13, 1787. A constitution was adopted, and Congress, on the 3d of December, 1818 [3 Stat. at L. 536], declared the admission of the state into the Union, that its constitution and government was republican and in conformity to the provisions of the articles of compact between the original states and the people and the states in the territory northwest of the River Ohio, passed on July 13, 1787.

The river Des Plaines is situated in the Northwest territory, rises in Wisconsin, and flows southerly into the state of Illinois (its course is given), in all a distance of about 96 miles.

The river Kankakee rises in Indiana and flows westerly into Illinois and unites in Grundy county with the Des Plaines, forming with it the Illinois, which flows thence westerly and southwesterly through several counties in Illinois into the Mississippi river. Wherefore, by reason of the fact that the Des Plaines river is wholly within the Northwest territory, and that it empties its waters into the Mississippi, and by reason of the other facts set forth, it is subject to the provisions of the acts of Congress set out.

It is shown by early explorations and discoveries that the Des Plaines river was navigable from a point near where is now situated the city of Chicago to its mouth, and was used as a highway for commercial purposes, and commerce was carried on over it and over the Chicago river, located in Cook county, Illinois, and connection therewith made by a short portage between the two [513] rivers near the site of what is now the city of Chicago and was in use as a highway of commerce leading from Lake Michigan and the waters emptying into the St. Lawrence river, on the one hand, and the waters of the Mississippi river, on the other, thenceforward from the time of said first use up to and at the time when the ordinance of 1787 and the several acts of Congress were respectively enacted.

Afterward the state of Illinois, by and through its legislature, and in obedience to the several acts of Congress set forth, assumed charge of the river, and in 1839 gave permission for the building of a toll bridge across the river, and subsequently, by an act passed in 1839, amending the several laws in relation to the Illinois and Michigan canal, it was provided that no stream of water passing through the canal lands should pass by the sale so as to deprive the state of the use of such water if necessary to supply the canal without charge for the same; and it was further provided that the lands situated upon the streams which have been meandered by the surveys of public lands by the United States should be considered as bounded by the lines of those surveys, and not by the streams. In the same year an act was passed declaring the river a navigable stream, and providing that it should be deemed and held a public highway, and should be free, open, and unobstructed from its point of connection with the canal to its utmost limit within the state for the passage of all boats and water craft of every description.

In 1845 the state authorized the construction and continuance of the milldam across the river with reservation of the right to the state of improving the dam and of using the water for the canal, and for any other purpose; and in 1849, authorized the building of a bridge at Lockport. The state, by certain acts of its legislature (they are set out), created the Sanitary District of Chicago, under the provision of which a channel was constructed connecting Lake Michigan with the Des Plaines river, at a point [514] some 16 miles above the site of the dam in question, and through which about 300,000 cubic feet of water per minute are drawn through the Chicago river and the Sanitary District drainage channel, and discharged in the Des Plaines river.

It was provided that the channel when completed should be a navigable stream, and that when the general government should improve the river, it should have full control over the same for navigation purposes, but not to interfere with its control for sanitary drainage purposes.

On the 6th of December, 1907, the legislature passed an act, which is as follows:

"Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the people of the state of Illinois, represented in the general assembly: That the Des Plaines and Illinois rivers throughout their courses from below the water power plant of the main channel of the Sanitary District of Chicago in the township of Lockport, at or near Lockport, in the county of Will, are hereby recognized as and are hereby declared to be navigable streams, and it is made the special duty of the governor and the attorney general to prevent the erection of any structures in or across said streams without explicit authority from the general assembly, and the governor and attorney general are hereby authorized and directed to take the necessary legal action or actions to remove all and every obstruction now existing in said rivers that in anywise interferes with the intent and purpose of this act."

Digitized by Google

The relator, Charles S. Deneen, is the governor referred to in the act, and that, by virtue of the statute, his office and constitutional duty, he has a special interest and responsibility in the matters set forth.

The purchasers from the state in section 25 and other similarly situated lands with reference to the Des Plaines river did not take and did not claim to take under their several purchases that portion of the lands lying between [515] the meander line and the water of the river, and that the lands so lying have never been used by any individual under any claim of authority or right vested in the purchasers from the state of Illinois, save and except as claimed by defendant. Lands so lying, therefore, together with the bed of the stream of the river in said quarter section, and other lands similarly situated with reference to the river, have not passed by any purchase of adjoining lands from the state of Illinois, but the same and every part thereof is owned by the state, and held for the benefit of its people and of the people of the United States as a public highway for commerce.

The trustees of the Illinois and Michigan canal executed and delivered to one Charles E. Boyer a deed bearing date October 22, 1860, to land in section 25, excepting and reserving so much as was occupied by the canal and its waters, and a strip 90 feet wide on either side of the canal, containing 196 62-100 acres, the tract being a portion of the land granted by the United States to the state to aid the state in opening a canal to connect the waters of the Illinois river with those of Lake Michigan, and by the state granted to the board of trustees of the canal for the purposes set forth in the act of February 21, 1843.

The defendant derives its title by mesne conveyances from Boyer and certain contracts and leases entered into between the canal commissioners and one Harold F. Griswold and assigned to defendant, and, in pursuance of the claim of right thus obtained, defendant commenced the construction of a dam across the river, but that the said several leases, deeds, and contracts are ineffectual to confer any right to build or maintain the dam.

The legislature of the state, by a proper resolution passed on the 16th of October, 1907, has proposed the building of a deep waterway commencing at the southern end of the Chicago drainage canal and extending along the Des Plaines river, to be submitted to a vote of the people [516] of the state, and, if the same is built, as incident thereto locks and dams will necessarily be constructed across the deep waterway at or near the S. E. ¼ of section 25, which dams will incidentally afford water power of the value of several millions of dollars to the state, which will be lost to the state if the defendant be permitted to construct the dam in question.

The 90-foot strip along the line of the Illinois and Michigan canal constitutes an integral part of the canal, and the trustees of the canal and the canal commissioners of the state had no right or authority under the law to convey the same by deed, lease, or otherwise. Wherefore the defendant acquired no right to such strip, and said deeds, leases, contracts, and other agreements are void so far as they pertain to the bed of the stream of the river, and to the lands lying outside the meander line.

By virtue of the several acts of Congress set forth, the state is the owner of such lands and other lands similarly situated. The defendant, claiming to own such lands and other lands in section 25, has actually begun the erection of the dam referred to; the attorney general, therefore, on the 12th of December, 1907, served notice upon the defendant to desist from the erection of the dam and from further trespassing upon the lands owned by the state, and to remove any and all obstructions placed thereon. Defendant has ignored the notice, and, unless prevented by injunction, will complete the dam, to the great impairment of navigation, and to the great and irreparable damage to the people of the state.

There are other allegations in regard to the leases and contracts from the canal commissioners which are not necessary to be given.

The prayer of the information was for an injunction in accordance with the allegations.

Defendant in error summarizes its answer as follows: It denied that the Des Plaines river was or ever had been [517] navigable, and alleged that it never had been navigated for the purpose of commerce; and also that it had, from the earliest times, been completely obstructed by various bridges and dams built without legislative authority, and that the state itself had constructed and for many years maintained, and still maintains, a dam entirely across the river at Joliet. It set out correspondence with the War Department of the United States before the construction of the dam was begun, from which it appeared that the plans of the proposed structure were submitted to that Department for the purpose of ascertaining whether the project would be in harmony with the work of the improvement of the river proposed—but never decided upon—by the government, and that the officers of the Department stated not only that it would be so in harmony, but, if carried out, it would save the government large sums of money. The correspondence also stated that the river had never yet been considered a navigable stream of the United States, and that it was not subject to the provision of §§ 9-13 of the act of March 3, 1899 [30 Stat. at L. 1151, 1152, chap. 425, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3540-3542], or to other similar United States legislation.

Digitized by Google

The answer further alleged that subsequently defendant in error acquired the property, and that a large sum of money had been expended and heavy obligations incurred by it in carrying out the project of building the dam.

Upon the issues thus made, evidence was taken, which composes three large volumes, upon which the courts below decided against plaintiffs in error; and we are to consider whether, in so doing, any Federal right was passed upon or denied it.

To sustain the contention that such right was passed upon and denied, it is said "that at the time the information in equity was filed, and for over six years before the defendant in error became a riparian owner, the Des Plaines river, irrespective of the question of its navigability, [518] was a navigable river of the United States at the point where the dam was erected," and this because of the "concurrent action of the state and Federal governments by the construction of the Chicago Sanitary ship canal, the connection of it with the Chicago river and Lake Michigan on the northeast, and the discharge of the water into Lake Michigan from it into Des Plaines and Illinois on the southwest."

It is further contended that the state court did not decide this question adversely to plaintiffs in error, but, on the contrary, excluded the admitted fact as being immaterial because that condition was artificially created. And this because defendant in error urged in that court that the navigability of the river could not be determined by its capacity as improved by the addition of the water of the Sanitary District. The court, in its decision, therefore, it is the final contention, denied the rights arising from the condition of navigability thus created by state and Federal action, and plaintiffs in error insist that "if artificial navigability can create a public right which is entitled to protection against the acts of one who purchases riparian property after that condition was created, then, on the conceded law, the judgment of the state court was erroneous. And if those public rights are created or protected by Federal law, this court has jurisdiction to reverse the judgment."

The inquiry immediately occurs, How did the so-called public right arise? From the mere addition of water to the river or by the conditions upon which it was admitted? The bill alleges the enactment of many laws and a complex system of improvements by virtue of them, rights asserted by the state to the lands bordering on the river, and rights to the bed of the river, conveyances, leases, and contracts by public officers constituted by laws which verbally, at least, confer authority upon them, and rights asserted by defendant in error arising from the execution [519] of such authority. But all of the questions hence arising are state questions, whether depending upon law or fact, which it is not in our province to review. It would seem, therefore, at the outset, that one of the elements of the Federal right asserted is absent. However, let us see what the supreme court of the state has decided.

Mr. Justice Vickers, delivering the opinion of the court, says: "Appellant [the state] bases its claim to relief on three propositions—as follows: (1) That the state of Illinois owns the bed of the river at the point where it is proposed to build said dam; (2) that the Des Plaines river is a navigable stream, and that the proposed dam would constitute an obstruction to navigation; (3) that certain contracts executed by the commissioners of the Illinois and Michigan canal, under which appellee [defendant in error] claims certain rights in connection with the construction of said dam, are void, and that no rights were acquired by or can be asserted under said contracts." [241 Ill. 309, 89 N. E. 760.]

The first and third propositions manifestly involve state questions and were decided adversely to plaintiffs in error. They might be put out of discussion except so far as they may have bearing on the second proposition. By the second proposition the navigability of the river is presented as a question of fact, and of it the court said that it had received the most exhaustive treatment by counsel, and that if the dismissal of the bill by the court below had been without prejudice to renew the application for injunction, the action of the court could be sustained because of the utter failure of the plaintiffs in error to prove that the construction of the proposed dam would be an obstruction to the then navigation of the river. "There is no proof," the court said, "that the river is now being used as a public highway for commerce. On the contrary, the evidence not only shows that the river is not being so used, but it shows affirmatively that, [520] owing to the presence of numerous other dams and some fifty or more bridges which span the river, it would be impossible, under existing conditions, to navigate the stream. There being at present no navigation whatever upon the river, obviously the dam in question cannot be said to be an obstruction to navigation that has no existence in fact." The trial court not making the indicated reservation, but having rendered a decree based on the finding that the river was not navigable, thus settling the question for all time, the supreme court considered the question as presented on the merits. After a review of the evidence and the contentions of the parties, it decided that the river was not navigable in a state of nature, and declared that there was not in the entire record a well authenticated instance in which a boat engaged in commerce navigated the waters of the Des Plaines river. Referring to the testimony, the court said: "Whatever may be thought of the preponderance of it one way or the other, it can have but little weight as against the uncontroverted fact that the river has never been used as a public highway for commerce." And again, "After the most careful consideration of this question we are of the opinion that the Des Plaines river in its natural condition is not a navigable stream, and that the rights of parties to this suit must be determined upon that basis." The court besides rejected the contention that the Sanitary District act declared the river to be navigable. The contention, it was said, was "based on a sentence in § 24 of said act, as follows: 'When such channel shall be completed, and the water turned therein, to the amount of 300,000 cubic feet of water per minute, the same is hereby declared a navigable stream.' Appellant's [the state] contention, under this statute, is thus stated in its brief: 'The same means that the water flowing in that channel is a navigable stream. The water so turned in was navigable in fact, and it does not lose its navigability [521] in passing out of the artificial channel into the channel of the Des Plaines river. The water is just as navigable one-half mile southwest of Joliet as it is one-half mile northeast of Joliet.' The argument is based upon an erroneous construction of the word 'same.' That term refers to the channel of the Sanitary District, and has no reference to the water after it leaves the channel."

Digitized by Google

The court, however, said that even if the legislature had declared in unequivocal language that the river was navigable, as it did by the act of 1907 [the act under which the information was filed], the declaration could not affect the rights of defendant in error, they being protected by the Constitution of the state, which forbids private property from being taken for public use without just compensation previously made, for which the court cited a number of cases and Cooley on Constitutional Limitations, *591. And it was added that none of the legislative acts had the primary purpose of permitting a deep-water channel from the Lakes to the Gulf by means of improving the channel of the Des Plaines river, nor did the various acts passed in the interest of the Illinois and Michigan canal nor the Sanitary District act include a general scheme for the improvement of that river. "Up to this time," it was further said, "no general plan for the deep waterway has been adopted by the state or nation," and whether any such enterprise will ever be adopted, and whether it will include the Des Plaines river, "are all legislative questions with which the courts have no concern." If it be done, the court continued, it must be done "with due regard to the rights of every citizen, however humble and insignificant those rights may seem in contrast with the great public consummation."

We have already seen that the contention of the plaintiff in error that the bed of the river was in the state, and [522] not in the riparian owners, among whom is defendant in error, by force of the act of the legislature of the state of February 26, 1839, in relation to the Illinois and Michigan canal, was held untenable, and it was further held that the contracts of the canal commissioners under which defendant in error claims rights were valid. And the court further decided that the legislation of the state did not intend nor contemplate the improvement of the Des Plaines river from a condition of non-navigability to navigability, and no act, except that of 1907, had declared it to be navigable, and that no act could do so and affect private rights under the Constitution of the state. The supreme tribunal of the state has therefore decided that plaintiffs in error have no elements of right against defendant in error.

Digitized by Google

It is said, however, as a foundation of a right under the acts of Congress alleged, that the river, although it was not navigable in its natural state, became so by the addition of water from the Sanitary District. This contention was rejected by the supreme court, the court deciding, as we have seen, that the navigability of the river was to be determined by its natural condition, and not by its condition created by artificial means. In resistance to this conclusion of the court, and in assertion of a Federal right, plaintiffs in error cite, besides the acts of Congress referred to in the information, certain acts of Congress passed in 1899, 1900 [31 Stat. at L. 580, chap. 790], and 1902 [32 Stat. at L. 364, chap. 1079], appropriating money for "a survey and estimates of cost for the improvement of the upper Illinois and lower Des Plaines rivers in Illinois, with a view to the extension of navigation from the Illinois river to Lake Michigan," and adduce, besides, other recognitions by Congress of the navigability of the river, and contend that therefore, the rights of the state are based on Federal laws, and "that in its sovereign right, and as parens patriæ and of its citizens, and on behalf of the citizens of all of the United States [italics counsel's], it had [523] the right under those Federal laws to prevent the accomplishment by defendant of an act destructive of the navigability of the stream."

Plaintiffs in error state their contention another way. They say the acts of the two sovereignties, state and national, in furtherance of a common object, are so interwoven and related that the rights and questions arising from them, and the construction of their effect, necessarily create Federal questions.

But we have seen that the supreme court of the state decided there was no concurrence of the state in furtherance of the so-called common object; that is, that the various acts in regard to the Illinois and Michigan canal or the Sanitary District did not include any general scheme for the improvement of the Des Plaines river, and it was certainly within the competency of the court to so determine. The court was also of the view that, under the Constitution of the state, the state did not have the "sovereign right, and as parens patriæ," to restrain the acts of defendant in error.

The court seemed to consider that it had decided all of the contentions of the state when it had decided the question of the navigability of the river both in its natural condition and its condition after the addition of the waters of the Sanitary District. The fact was and is pivotal. The ordinance for the government of the Northwest territory and the subsequent acts of Congress set out in the information do not determine navigability of the streams, but only define rights which depend upon its existence. Passing the question, therefore, whether the ordinance or the acts refer to physical obstructions or to political regulations, and also passing the question whether they were of force after the admission of the state into the Union (on both questions see Willamette Iron Bridge Co. v. Hatch, 125 U. S. 1, 31 L. ed. 629, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811), the fact of navigability having been decided against the state by the state court, there is no Federal [524] right left to review. Crary v. Devlin, 154 U. S. 619, and 23 L. ed. 510, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1199; Cameron v. United States, 146 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed. 1077, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300. In the latter case it was decided that the question of navigability is purely one of fact.

It is said, however, that by the acts of 1899, 1900, and 1902, Congress has taken jurisdiction of the Des Plaines river. If so, the state is not the instrument through which the jurisdiction can be exercised. United States v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co. 176 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 437, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343; Willamette Iron Bridge Co. v. Hatch, supra; Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric R. Co. 201 U. S. 529, 50 L. ed. 854, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513.

But the cited acts are not appropriations for improvements undertaken, but for improvements which may be undertaken; not a jurisdiction exercised, but a jurisdiction to be exercised. And, as we have seen, it is alleged in the answer, and the allegation is sustained by the evidence, that the plans of defendant in error's structure were submitted to the War Department, and it was declared by that Department, "The work proposed is in general harmony with the work of improvement recommended by the board of engineers appointed under the authority of the rivers and harbors act of June 13, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 331, 334, chap. 1079)." But the Department, inasmuch as Congress had not authorized the improvement of the river, did "not deem it expedient to take further and definite action in the matter of approving the plans." It is manifest, therefore, that the state has no right under Federal laws which it may assert for itself or "on behalf of the citizens of all of the United States," and the motion to dismiss must be granted.

Dismissed.

Digitized by Google

[525] FRANKLIN K. LANE, Secretary of the Interior, and Clay Tallman, Commissioner of the General Land Office, Appts.,
v.
CORNELIUS C. WATTS, Dabney C. T. Davis, Jr., John Watts, and James W. Vroom.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 525–542.)

Private land claims — passing of title —effect of location and approval.

1. The location of the grant made by the act of June 21, 1860 (12 Stat. at L. 71, chap. 167), authorizing the selection in lieu of the land common to two Mexican land grants of an equal quantity of vacant land, not mineral, in the territory of New Mexico, to be surveyed and located by the surveyor general, and the approval of such location by the surveyor general and later by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, passed the title, notwithstanding subsequent discoveries of minerals therein, although there had not then been an official survey, and although the existence of any official determination of the nonmineral character of the land selected is but an inference deduced from the circumstances, a decision of such question being an official duty which could not be avoided or evaded.

[For other cases, see Private Land Claims, III. f, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Private land claims — devesting title once acquired — revocation of official action.

2. The title to land selected under the act of June 21, 1860, authorizing the selection in lieu of the land common to two Mexican land grants of an equal quantity of vacant land, not mineral, once having passed by an approved location of the grant in accordance with that act cannot be subsequently devested by an attempted revocation by the successor in office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office of his predecessor's action in approving the location.

[For other cases, see Private Land Claims, III. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Injunction — against public officers — restraining illegal acts.

3. The Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office may be enjoined from casting a cloud on a title vested by an approved location of the grant made by the act of June 21, 1860, by proceeding in the matter of certain attempted entries upon such land under the public land laws.

[For other cases, see Injunction, I. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

United States — immunity from suit — suit against officers.

4. The exemption of the United States from suit does not preclude the maintenance of an action to enjoin the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office from casting a cloud upon a title vested by an approved location of the grant made in the act of June 21, 1860, by proceeding in the matter of certain attempted entries upon such land under the public land laws.

[For other cases, see United States, 183–189, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Equity — jurisdiction — remedy at law.

5. Equitable jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office from casting a cloud upon a title vested by an approved location of the grant made in the act of June 21, 1860, by proceeding in the matter of certain attempted entries upon such land under the public land laws, cannot be successfully challenged on the theory that the real purpose of the suit is to recover real property by trial of the legal title.

[For other cases, see Equity, I. c; Cloud on Title, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Parties — necessary defendants — suit against officers of Land Department.

6. Persons who have initiated claims are not necessary parties to a suit to enjoin the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office from casting a cloud upon a title vested by an approved location of the grant made in the act of June 21, 1860, by proceeding in the matter of certain attempted entries upon the land under the public land laws.

[For other cases, see Parties, II. a, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — relation to Land Department — suit against officers.

7. The courts will not, on any theory of an attempted direct appeal from the decision of the Interior Department, decline jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office from casting a cloud upon a title vested by an approved location of the grant made in the act of June 21, 1860, by proceeding in the matter of certain attempted entries upon the land under the public land laws.

[For other cases, see Courts, I. e, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Parties — United States as necessary defendant — suit against officers.

8. The United States is not a necessary party to a suit in the District of Columbia courts to enjoin the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office from casting a cloud upon a title to lands in New Mexico vested by an approved location of the grant made by the act of June 21, 1860, by proceeding in the matter of certain attempted entries upon the land under the public land laws.

[For other cases, see Parties, II. a, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Private land claims — necessity of survey.

9. A survey was necessary to segregate from the public domain the lands selected under the act of June 21, 1860, authoriz-

---

NOTE—On suit against Federal officers or agents as suit against United States—see note to Louisiana v. Garfield, 53 L. ed. U. S. 92.

On injunction to restrain act of public officers—see note to Mississippi v. Johnson, 18 L. ed. U. S. 437.

Digitized by Google

ing the selection in lieu of the land common to two Mexican land grants of an equal quantity of vacant land, not mineral, in the territory of New Mexico, to be surveyed and located by the surveyor general.

[For other cases, see Private Land Claims, 527-584, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Private land claims — location — by whom approved — effect.

10. The approval by the General Land Office of a location of land under the act of June 21, 1860, authorizing the selection in lieu of the land common to two Mexican land grants of an equal quantity of vacant land, not mineral, in the territory of New Mexico, to be surveyed and located by the surveyor general of New Mexico, is no less effectual to pass title because based on the latter's approval rather than upon the approval of the surveyor general of the territory of Arizona, which embraced the land when the Land Office acted, since it was upon the Land Office that the ultimate responsibility devolved.

[For other cases, see Private Land Claims, 517-521; 632-643a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Private land claims — survey — expense.

11. The expense of the survey called for by the act of June 21, 1860, authorizing the selection in lieu of the land common to two Mexican land grants of an equal quantity of vacant land, not mineral, to be surveyed and located by the surveyor general, should be borne by the government, notwithstanding the provisions of the act of June 2, 1862 (12 Stat. at L. 410, chap. 90), requiring all grants to be surveyed at the expense of the claimants, since the claimants in question gave up their rights to a definite tract of land at the instance of the government, to accommodate conflicting claims.

[Survey of Private Land Claims, see Private Land Claims, III. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 889.]

Argued April 14, 15, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

APPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District, enjoining the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office from proceeding in the matter of certain attempted entries under the public land laws. Affirmed.[1]

See same case below, 41 App. D. C. 139.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General West and Mr. C. Edward Wright argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

Where a party gives a reason for his conduct and decision touching anything involved in a controversy, he cannot, after litigation has begun, change his ground, and put his conduct upon another and a different consideration. He is not permitted thus to mend his hold. He is estopped from doing it by a settled principle of law.

Ohio & M. R. Co. v. McCarthy, 96 U. S. 258, 24 L. ed. 693; Snyder v. Supreme Ruler, F. M. C. 122 Tenn. 248, 45 L.R.A.(N.S.) 209, 122 S. W. 985; Goodman v. Purnell, 109 C. C. A. 408, 187 Fed. 93; Taenzer v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 112 C. C. A. 153, 191 Fed. 551.

We are dealing with a grant from the United States of a mere right to select an acreage. In such cases the legal title never passes until official survey identifying and segregating the land from the public domain.

Joplin v. Chachere, 192 U. S. 94, 48 L. ed. 359, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Rutherford v. Greene, 2 Wheat. 196, 4 L. ed. 218; Hornsby v. United States, 10 Wall. 224, 19 L. ed. 900; Stoneroad v. Stoneroad, 158 U. S. 240, 39 L. ed. 966, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Lecompte v. United States, 11 How. 115, 126, 13 L. ed. 627, 632.

If a survey be not necessary to the passing of legal title, and if legal title has passed, as appellees claim, they have long been in a position where they could have maintained suits against trespassers for the possession of this land. They do not need this survey, on their contention; and we wonder why they want it, or the resulting plat and field notes, unless it possesses some efficacy of benefit to them. If it does, the Secretary, warned by the prima facie showing made against the integrity of their claim, should stay the filing of the plat and field notes.

Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 35 L. ed. 974, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; Peyton v. Desmond, 63 C. C. A. 651, 129 Fed. 1.

A claim to property, under a conveyance however inadequate to carry the true title to such property, and however incompetent may have been the power of the grantor in such conveyance to pass a title to the subject thereof, yet a claim asserted under the provisions of such a deed is strictly a claim under color of title.

Cameron v. United States, 148 U. S. 301, 308, 37 L. ed. 459, 461, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595.

The lands within the limits of the Tumacacori and Calabasas grants were reserved. They were not subject to selection by the Baca heirs, and it is immaterial what the Land Office did, for it had no power in the premises. In other words, it did not lie in the power of the Commissioners of the General Land Office, in any way or manner, to approve Baca Float No. 3, so far as it lay within the boundaries of the old Mexican

[1] Leave granted on June 22, 1914, to present petition for rehearing within thirty days.

Digitized by Google

grants. Had the survey been made, had it been approved, had all been done—yet the Land Office could pass no title, for the lands were not within its power to dispose of.

Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 173, 37 L. ed. 123, 126, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271.

The court erroneously assumed jurisdiction to try title to land situate in another jurisdiction.

Irrigation Land & Improv. Co. v. Hitchcock, 28 App. D. C. 587; Columbia Nat. Sand Dredging Co. v. Morton, 28 App. D. C. 288, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 114, 8 Ann. Cas. 511.

The trial court was without jurisdiction, and the court of appeals erred in assuming jurisdiction in the absence of the United States as a necessary party.

Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 50 L. ed. 935, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 46 L. ed. 954, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Louisiana v. Garfield, 211 U. S. 70, 53 L. ed. 92, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31; Kirwan v. Murphy, 189 U. S. 35, 47 L. ed. 698, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; United States ex rel. Goldberg v. Daniels, 231 U. S. 218, ante, 191, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84.

The court treated the suit practically as an appeal from the Secretary, and erroneously assumed jurisdiction to review, and did review, a matter exclusively within the jurisdiction of the appellants, involving, on their part, the exercise of judgment and discretion.

Fisher v. United States, 37 App. D. C. 436; United States ex rel. Ness v. Fisher, 223 U. S. 683, 56 L. ed. 610, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; United States ex rel. McKenzie v. Fisher, 39 App. D. C. 7; United States ex rel. Champion Lumber Co. v. Fisher, 39 App. D. C. 158; United States ex rel. McManus v. Fisher, 39 App. D. C. 176; United States ex rel. Red River Lumber Co. v. Fisher, 39 App. D. C. 181.

Mr. William C. Prentiss filed a brief in behalf of interested parties:

The area embraced in this private land claim was not "vacant" land, subject to selection by the heirs of Baca, but was land occupied and claimed under muniment of title of record in the official public records of the state of Sonora.

Faxon v. United States, 171 U. S. 244, 43 L. ed. 151, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 849.

This area was not only occupied and claimed, and in that sense not vacant, but it was in statutory reservation by virtue of the legislation of Congress following and designed to carry out the provisions of the treaties of Guadaloupe Hidalgo and Mesilla, the latter being known as the Gadsden purchase.

Re Tumacacori & C. Grant, 16 Land Dec. 408; Re Baca Float No. 3, 30 Land Dec. 97; Cameron v. United States, 148 U. S. 301, 37 L. ed. 459, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595.

Mr. Joseph W. Bailey argued the cause, and, with Mr. Herbert Noble, filed a brief for appellees:

This case was not appealable to this court from the court of appeals of the District of Columbia.

United States ex rel. Champion Lumber Co. v. Fisher, 227 U. S. 445, 57 L. ed. 591, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 329; United States ex rel. Foreman v. Meyer, 227 U. S. 452, 57 L. ed. 594, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331; Ansbro v. United States, 159 U. S. 698, 40 L. ed. 311, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187.

No provision was made for the determination as to whether the land selected by the heirs of Baca was vacant and not mineral by any officer of the government. That there must be action by someone on behalf of the government before the title to the land would vest in the heirs of Baca is plain.

Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 61 L.R.A. 230, 50 C. C. A. 79, 112 Fed. 4, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 633, affirming 190 U. S. 301, 312, 47 L. ed. 1064, 1072, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692.

The general jurisdiction over the public lands had been placed by Congress in the General Land Office, and, in the absence of any specific provision, the Commissioner of the General Land Office was the proper person to act on behalf of the government.

Fisher v. United States, 37 App. D. C. 436; Catholic Bishop v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 155, 39 L. ed. 931, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779; United States v. McClure, 174 Fed. 510.

The Commissioner was the officer authorized by law to pass upon the question whether the heirs of Baca were entitled to the land selected, and he could act on whatever evidence he saw fit.

Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 336, 337, 42 L. ed. 1059, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

The making, approving, and filing of survey was not prerequisite to passing of title.

Hornsby v. United States, 10 Wall. 224, 19 L. ed. 900; Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 321, 42 L. ed. 1053, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

Though the title passed from the government at the latest April 9, 1864, the survey by the government of the land was necessary to segregate the land from the public domain (Stoneroad v. Stoneroad, 158 U. S. 240, 39 L. ed. 966, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822), and to fix its out-boundaries, and until the survey was made and completed by filing in the Land Office (Clearwater Timber Co. v. Shoshone County, 155 Fed. 612), the owners of the land under the Baca title were unable to take possession of it, or, in case of persons being in possession, to proceed by proper legal action to obtain such possession.

Digitized by Google

The functions of the Land Department cease when the title passes out of the United States, and the jurisdiction of the courts then attaches (Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 176, 37 L. ed. 123, 127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Peyton v. Desmond, 63 C. C. A. 651, 129 Fed. 8). In such a case the United States is not a necessary party (Philadelphia Co. v. Stimson, 223 U. S. 605, 620, 56 L. ed. 570, 576, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340), and the rule that the United States cannot be sued without its consent has no application, because in such a case the officers are not sued as or because they are officers of the government, but as individuals, and the court is not ousted of jurisdiction because they assert authority as such officers.

Philadelphia Co. v. Stimson, 223 U. S. 605, 622, 56 L. ed. 570, 577, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Allen v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 114 U. S. 311, 29 L. ed. 200, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925, 962; Cunningham v. Macon & B. R. Co. 109 U. S. 446, 27 L. ed. 992, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292, 609; United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 27 L. ed. 171, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 23 L. ed. 623; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 21 L. ed. 447; Thomason v. Wellman, 124 C. C. A. 555, 206 Fed. 895; Texas Co. v. Central Fuel Oil Co. 114 C. C. A. 21, 194 Fed. 1; Wadsworth v. Boysen, 78 C. C. A. 437, 148 Fed. 771; Parsons v. Marye, 23 Fed. 113; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764; American School v. McAnnulty, 187 U. S. 94, 47 L. ed. 90, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 40 L. ed. 599, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 363, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 29 L. ed. 185, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962; Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 27 L. ed. 448, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. 524, 9 L. ed. 1181; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 161 Fed. 925; Wiemer v. Louisville Water Co. 130 Fed. 251.

A deed being over thirty years old, and bearing no suspicious indicia, is admissible in evidence without proof of execution, and establishes its genuineness and the fact of its execution by the parties who purport to execute it, and the authority of the attorney in fact will be presumed without proof, and the certificate of acknowledgment is conclusive, in the absence of fraud or duress, of the facts which the officer taking the acknowledgment was empowered to certify, which includes the identification of the parties executing the instrument.

Foote v. Brown, 81 Conn. 218, 70 Atl. 699; McMahon v. McDonald, 51 Tex. Civ. App. 613, 113 S. W. 322; Hodge v. Palms, 54 C. C. A. 570, 117 Fed. 396; McDonald v. Hanks, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 140, 113 S. W. 604; Goodhue v. Cameron, 142 App. Div. 470, 127 N. Y. Supp. 120; Ford v. Ford, 27 App. D. C. 401, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 442, 7 Ann. Cas. 245.

It is not pretended that the appellants have any title at all to the land in dispute, and consequently, if the appellees have any title at all, it is sufficient in this suit as against the appellants.

Rayner v. Lee, 20 Mich. 384; Reilly v. Wright, 117 Cal. 77, 48 Pac. 970; McGorray v. Robinson, 135 Cal. 312, 67 Pac. 279; Hall v. Kellogg, 16 Mich. 136; Newman v. Buzard, 24 Wash. 225, 64 Pac. 139; Davis v. Crump, 162 Cal. 513, 123 Pac. 294; Hornor v. Jarrett, 99 Ark. 154, 137 S. W. 820.

The appellees have at least a prima facie title to the land, which is sufficient, because where, as here, the two descriptions contained in the deeds are inconsistent, the grantee may rely on that most beneficial to him (Winter v. White, 70 Md. 305, 17 Atl. 84; Buchanan v. Steuart, 3 Harr. & J. 329; Merriman v. Blalack, 56 Tex. Civ. App. 594, 121 S. W. 552; Quade v. Pillard, 135 Iowa, 359, 112 N. W. 646; Sharp v. Thompson, 100 Ill. 447, 39 Am. Rep. 61; Armstrong v. Mudd, 10 B. Mon. 144, 50 Am. Dec. 545; Hall v. Gittings, 2 Harr. & J. 112; Colter v. Mann, 18 Minn. 96, Gil. 79); that description which accords with the intention of the parties will be adopted and the other rejected as false or mistaken (Co-operative Bldg. Bank v. Hawkins, 30 R. I. 171, 73 Atl. 617; Thompson v. Hill, 137 Ga. 308, 73 S. E. 640; Mylius v. Raine-Andrew Lumber Co. 69 W. Va. 346, 71 S. E. 404; Bender v. Chew, 129 La. 849, 56 So. 1023); that which gives effect to the deed rather than which defeats the deed will be adopted (Hall v. Bartlett, 158 Cal. 638, 112 Pac. 176); that applying to the land owned by the grantor will be adopted rather than that applying to land which he does not own (Piper v. True, 36 Cal. 606); the deed will be construed as a whole, and interpreted in the light of circumstances (Hubbard v. Whitehead, 221 Mo. 672, 121 S. W. 69); and finally, the deed will be construed most strongly against the grantor (Vance v. Fore, 24 Cal. 435; Marshall v. Niles, 8 Conn. 369; Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Whitham, 155 Ill. 514, 28 L.R.A. 612, 46 Am. St. Rep. 355, 40 N. E. 1014; Helms v. Howard, 2 Harr. & McH. 57; Carroll v. Norwood, 5 Harr. & J. 155; Carrington v. Goddin, 13 Gratt. 587).

The bare use of the word "trustees" after the names of the grantees in the deed does not create a trust, or prevent the grantees from taking absolute title.

Andrews v. Atlanta Real Estate Co. 92 Ga. 260, 18 S. E. 548; Brown v. Combs, 29 N. J. L. 36; Den ex dem. Cairns v. Hay, 21 N. J. L.

Digitized by Google

174; Sansom v. Ayer & L. Tie Co. 144 Ky. 555, 139 S. W. 778; Starr v. Starr Methodist Protestant Church, 112 Md. 171, 76 Atl. 595; Shaeffer v. Klee, 100 Md. 264, 59 Atl. 850.

Nor does an agreement to hold the proceeds of the sale of land in trust create a trust in the land.

Talbott v. Barber, 11 Ind. App. 1, 54 Am. St. Rep. 491, 38 N. E. 487; Dexter v. MacDonald, 196 Mo. 373, 95 S. W. 359.

One officer of the Land Office is not competent to cancel or annul the act of his predecessor, or to recall a decision devesting title.

Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; United States v. Stone, 2 Wall. 525, 535, 17 L. ed. 765, 767; Peyton v. Desmond, 63 C. C. A. 651, 129 Fed. 9; Macfarland v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. 37 Wash. L. Rep. 129.

The appellees contend that there was no reservation in the treaty, but that the reservation was purely statutory (Lockhart v. Johnson, 181 U. S. 516, 522, 45 L. ed. 979, 983, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665), and that the reservation did not attach until the petition was filed with the Surveyor General (Botiller v. Dominguez, 130 U. S. 247, 32 L. ed. 928, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Re Tumacacori & C. Grant, 16 Land Dec. 420; Lockhart v. Johnson, 181 U. S. 516, 45 L. ed. 979, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665; Astiazaran v. Santa Rita Land & Min. Co. 148 U. S. 80, 84, 37 L. ed. 376, 377, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457), and that such was the contemporaneous construction of the statute by the Department of the Interior, which construction is entitled to great weight with the courts (United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 763, 24 L. ed. 588), and that the statute itself provided for instructions to be given by the Secretary of the Interior, and, when given, such instructions became a part of the statute, and were not repealed until March 3, 1891 (Stoneroad v. Stoneroad, 158 U. S. 240, 39 L. ed. 966, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Catholic Bishop v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 167, 39 L. ed. 936, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264; Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S. 769, 25 L. ed. 920; Lockhart v. Johnson, 181 U. S. 516, 522, 45 L. ed. 979, 983, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665).

The construction contended for by the appellees is further sustained by the definition of the word "claim," which is: "In a just, judicial sense, a demand of some matter of right, made by one person upon another, to do or to forbear to do some act or thing as a matter of duty" (Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 615, 10 L. ed. 1089). "The assertion, demand, or challenge as a right, or the thing that is demanded or challenged" (Fordyce v. Godman, 20 Ohio St. 14). "Something asked for or demanded on the one hand, and not admitted or allowed, on the other" (Dowell v. Cardwell, 4 Sawy. 217, Fed. Cas. No. 4,039. See also 4 Rose's Notes [U. S.] 219).

All lands in the ceded territories not appropriated by the former government before they were acquired by the United States were the exclusive property of the United States, to be disposed of as it deemed advantageous (Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. 558, 561, 15 L. ed. 994, 996); the power of the United States to prescribe the mode of presenting and demanding lands claimed, and to provide for the forfeiture of claims not presented and claimed, is not to be questioned (Tameling v. United States Freehold & Emigration Co. 93 U. S. 644, 23 L. ed. 998; Botiller v. Dominguez, 130 U. S. 247, 32 L. ed. 928, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 222, 40 L. ed. 678, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; Barker v. Harvey, 181 U. S. 490, 45 L. ed. 968, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690), and the United States might have forfeited such claims by prescribing a limitation as to the presentation (Botiller v. Dominguez, 130 U. S. 247, 32 L. ed. 928, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525), or by directing the possession and appropriation of the land (United States v. DeRepentigny, 5 Wall. 211–268, 18 L. ed. 627–646).

The rights of the appellees were initiated under the law and decisions holding that the reservation of these grants related to the time of the filing of the petition with the Surveyor General, and could not be affected by subsequent rules, decisions, or practices adopted by the Land Department.

James v. Germania Iron Co. 46 C. C. A. 476, 107 Fed. 597; Cornelius v. Kessel, 128 U. S. 461, 32 L. ed. 483, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122.

Any attempt by the Department to change the rules became a judicial question, and would be an attempt to deprive the representatives of Baca of their property without due process of law (Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Burfenning v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 163 U. S. 323, 41 L. ed. 176, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018); and in such case it is the duty of the courts to overrule the Land Department if it departs from the law (Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. 558–567, 15 L. ed. 994–998; United States v. Temple, 105 U. S. 97, 99, 26 L. ed. 967, 968).

Moreover, the attempt of the Department to hold the location of June 17, 1863, subordinate to the alleged grants, is an attempt to read into the act of June 21, 1860, the words "or reserved," which is in violation of the rule that nothing is to be added to a law and nothing taken away.

Rex v. Burrell, 12 Ad. & El. 468, 4 Perry & D. 207, 9 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 337, 4 Jur. 1109; Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. ed. 634; Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 42 L. ed. 1050, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

Digitized by Google

The Tumacacori and Calabasas claims were found invalid by the United States Supreme Court (Faxon v. United States, 171 U. S. 244, 43 L. ed. 151, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 849); and the San José de Sonoita claim was found invalid except to the extent of 1¾ sitios, about 7,592 acres (Ely v. United States, 171 U. S. 220, 43 L. ed. 142, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840).

If swamp lands in unceded Indian country pass and become available on removal of the Indians (Callanan v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 10 Land Dec. 285; Re Michigan, 8 Land Dec. 308; Re Minnesota, 27 Land Dec. 418), why should not land covered by the Tumacacori and Calabasas claims, and the rejected portion of the San José de Sonoita claim, likewise become available to the representatives of Baca, assuming that they were reserved June 17, 1863, upon their having been found by the courts to be invalid?

It is submitted further that in using the word "vacant" in the act of June 21, 1860, the Congress intended land not appropriated by another in such a manner as to give notice of his claim to the heirs of Baca (Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 61 L.R.A. 230, 50 C. C. A. 79, 112 Fed. 4, 2 Mor. Min. Rep. 633, affirmed in 190 U. S. 301, 312, 47 L. ed. 1064, 1072, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692), and did not intend that the claims of Spanish or Mexican grantees, of which there was no record available to the heirs of Baca, and who were not in actual occupation of the land, but merely had a written grant concealed in whatever place such grantees kept their title deeds, should prevent the selection and location of the land by the heirs of Baca.

Mr. G. H. Brevillier also argued the cause, and, with Mr. James W. Vroom, filed a brief for appellees James W. Vroom and John Watts:

When legal title has passed from the United States, the Secretary of the Interior and Commissioner of the General Land Office may be enjoined from interfering therewith, and compelled to supply a muniment thereof.

Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Philadelphia Co. v. Stimson, 223 U. S. 605, 620, 622, 623, 56 L. ed. 570, 576–578, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Ballinger v. United States, 216 U. S. 240, 54 L. ed. 464, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338; Peyton v. Desmond, 63 C. C. A. 651, 129 Fed. 1; United States v. Stone, 2 Wall. 525, 535, 17 L. ed. 765, 767; Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249, 261, 53 L. ed. 168, 174, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Beley v. Naphtaly, 169 U. S. 353, 365, 42 L. ed. 775, 779, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 541, 23 L. ed. 623, 628; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 396, 402, 404, 26 L. ed. 167, 171, 173, 174; Allen v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 114 U. S. 311, 315, 29 L. ed. 200, 201, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925, 962.

Even though the officers allege that the United States claims legal title, the courts still have jurisdiction if the admitted facts fail to sustain the claim. Two recent cases where the defendant officers unwarrantably claimed that title was still in an Indian nation, to be administered by the United States under a trust or power in trust, uphold the jurisdiction of the courts in such cases.

Ballinger v. United States, 216 U. S. 240, 54 L. ed. 464, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338; Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

In the case at bar, no Commissioner or Secretary has ever attempted directly to revoke, annul, or even disapprove of the action herein of the Commissioner on April 9, 1864; they have simply attempted to apply their own varied construction of it. The construction of that action of April 9, 1864, and of what is necessary to pass title, are purely questions of law, involving substantive rights, and not matters of administrative detail, and the courts have full jurisdiction to make and enforce their own construction thereof, even as to whether, on the admitted facts, legal title has passed.

Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Forsythe, 159 U. S. 46, 61, 40 L. ed. 71, 76, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1020; Calhoun v. Violet, 173 U. S. 60, 63, 43 L. ed. 614, 615, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Menotti v. Dillon, 167 U. S. 703, 719, 42 L. ed. 333, 338, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 945; Sanford v. Sanford, 139 U. S. 642, 647, 35 L. ed. 290, 291, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 489, 44 L. ed. 1157, 1162, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

A direct revocation by the Department of its action by which legal title passed is an attempt to deprive an owner of his property without due process of law; the end desired can only be effected in a direct action by the United States to annul the grant.

Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 176, 37 L. ed. 123, 127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271.

The Secretary and the Commissioner may be compelled to do a ministerial act not involving discretion, such as issuing a patent or giving a muniment of title when the right thereto is vested, as such right is equivalent, so far as the government is concerned, to a patent or muniment already issued or given.

Ballinger v. United States, 216 U. S. 240, 250, 54 L. ed. 464, 468, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338; United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co. 200 U. S. 321, 335, 50 L. ed. 499, 505,

Digitized by Google

26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 497, 499, 30 L. ed. 1039, 1040, 1041, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; United States v. Stone, 2 Wall. 525, 535, 17 L. ed. 765, 767; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 402, 404, 26 L. ed. 173, 174.

A ministerial duty arises where an officer has no discretion as to whether or not he shall perform it, even though the officer must construe the law to find out what he must do.

Roberts v. United States, 176 U. S. 221, 231, 44 L. ed. 443, 447, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; Mississippi v. Johnson, 4 Wall. 475, 498, 18 L. ed. 437, 440.

Even a patent, with its words of conveyance, is often merely the muniment or documentary evidence of a title which passed some time previously thereto; in such cases the execution and delivery of a patent are ministerial acts, neither involving nor admitting any discretion whatsoever as to the propriety thereof.

Deseret Salt Co. v. Tarpey, 142 U. S. 241, 251, 35 L. ed. 999, 1002, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 510, 33 L. ed. 687, 694, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Langdeau v. Hanes, 21 Wall. 521, 22 L. ed. 606; Whitney v. Morrow, 112 U. S. 693, 28 L. ed. 871, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333; Morrow v. Whitney, 95 U. S. 551, 24 L. ed. 456; Simmons v. Wagner, 101 U. S. 260, 261, 25 L. ed. 910, 911.

A "muniment of title," such as the Commissioner on April 9, 1864, ordered the plat of survey to be, is only a means of evidence by which an owner may defend his boundaries or title.

Wedge v. Spencer, 4 Silv. Sup. Ct. 171, 7 N. Y. Supp. 173.

The determination of the Department is a final adjudication, even though it directs the marking out of the boundaries of a specific tract and the filing of a map thereof as a muniment of title.

Ballinger v. United States, 216 U. S. 240, 54 L. ed. 464, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 26 L. ed. 167.

The equitable remedy of mandatory injunction is well known.

Re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 556, 41 L. ed. 1110, 1113, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Parsons v. Marye, 23 Fed. 113; Wiemer v. Louisville Water Co. 130 Fed. 251.

The appellees, John Watts and James W. Vroom, have proved sufficient title in themselves to maintain this action.

Applegate v. Lexington & C. C. Min. Co. 117 U. S. 255, 262, 264, 29 L. ed. 892, 894, 895, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Fulkerson v. Holmes, 117 U. S. 389, 29 L. ed. 915, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; Derry v. Cray, 5 Wall. 795, 805, 18 L. ed. 653, 656; Wilson v. Snow, 228 U. S. 217, 57 L. ed. 807, 50 L.R.A. (N.S.) 604, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Little v. Palister, 4 Me. 209; McMahon v. McDonald, 51 Tex. Civ. App. 613, 113 S. W. 322; Hodge v. Palms, 54 C. C. A. 570, 117 Fed. 396; Ford v. Ford, 27 App. D. C. 401, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 442, 7 Ann. Cas. 245.

The 3d section of the act of June 21, 1860, confirmed to the heirs of Baca the land granted to their ancestor, Luis Maria Baca. It passed the title of the United States to this land as effectually as if it contained in words a grant de novo.

Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 331, 42 L. ed. 1050, 1057, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

The 6th section made two grants: The first, of a power to select in lieu of Las Vegas; and the second, of the right, "when required" by the heirs, to a subsequent survey of the land taken in execution of the power. The power "to select" is defined in the proviso thereto as a "right hereby granted." This is equivalent to "the grant of the right to take," and constituted a "grant in præsenti of lands to be thereafter identified" (Stalker v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 225 U. S. 142, 146, 148, 56 L. ed. 1027, 1030, 1031, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636; Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 172, 176. 37 L. ed. 123, 126, 127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271); and on the Department's approval of the propriety of the exercise of that right in the manner prescribed by it, title vested (Stalker v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 225 U. S. 148, 151, 153, 56 L. ed. 1031, 1032, 1033, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636; Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 592, 42 L. ed. 591, 592, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 172, 176, 37 L. ed. 126, 127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271).

The Commissioner had the unquestioned right to make regulations to "fill in the details" as to which no specific provision was made in the statute.

United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 516, 517, 520, 55 L. ed. 563, 567, 568, 569, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480; Leonard v. Lennox, 104 C. C. A. 296, 181 Fed. 760.

This section, therefore, granted to the heirs, in præsenti, a power in land and also a right to a subsequent survey. If they accepted and properly executed that power, the execution of it would vest in them the fee-simple title to the lands by them selected in lieu of the lands of "Las Vegas Grandes," and would give them the right to the survey when they requested it. Their title would rest upon and be granted by the statute of June 21, 1860, creating the power; and on the Commissioner's approval of the propriety of the selection it would take effect as if conveyed by that statute.

United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber

Digitized by Google

Co. 200 U. S. 321, 334, 335, 50 L. ed. 499, 504, 505, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Weyerhaeuser v. Hoyt, 219 U. S. 380, 388, 55 L. ed. 258, 261, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Stalker v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 225 U. S. 142, 56 L. ed. 1027, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636.

To execute this power only two acts were necessary: first, a seasonable selection by the heirs in due form of a tract of land claimed by them to be of the character specified in the act; and second, an approval on behalf of the United States of the propriety of the selection. The subsequent survey which it was the duty of the surveyor general to make when requested by the heirs was the second or collateral right conferred by the statute, and its exercise would not be necessary until the heirs, in their convenience, required it, and then would simply be an official identification on the ground of the description in the note of selection.

Glasgow v. Hortiz, 1 Black, 595, 601, 602, 17 L. ed. 110, 113, 114.

In the execution of the power granted by the 6th section of the act, the government had an equal interest with the heirs of Baca —an exchange of lands was contemplated; and Congress was desirous of making the exchange so that the inhabitants of Las Vegas—strangers to our laws and language, and unfriendly to our sovereignty over them —would not be disturbed in their possessions and settlements.

Maese v. Herman, 183 U. S. 572, 580, 581, 46 L. ed. 335, 338, 339, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91.

The United States has in fact received the full consideration for the relinquishment by the heirs of their title to Las Vegas. This court has decided that the title of the heirs to Las Vegas was devested (Maese v. Herman, 183 U. S. 572, 46 L. ed. 335, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91); there could not be a divestiture of title to Las Vegas until there was an investiture of title to the land selected in lieu thereof.

The word "vacant" means "unoccupied" (Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 332, 42 L. ed. 1057, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632); and by "land not mineral" is meant land which is not chiefly valuable for that purpose, to an extent justifying exploitation; the mere fact that there might be prospect holes, shafts, etc., of exhausted or abandoned mining operations, is insufficient to characterize the land as mineral land.

Davis v. Wiebbold, 139 U. S. 507, 519, 35 L. ed. 238, 242, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. ed. 575, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Colorado Coal & I. Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 31 L. ed. 182, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 29 L. ed. 423, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 340, 42 L. ed. 1050, 1060, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

After the election by the Baca heirs to take under the act of 1860, and the determination of the acreage of the Las Vegas grant, the various steps contemplated by the act of 1860 were as follows:

First: Selection by the heirs within the time limit of a square tract of land of proper size claimed by them to be vacant and nonmineral.

Second: Filing of a certificate of selection with the proper surveyor general, who, under the instructions of the Department, was to send it to the Department with his approval or disapproval thereof.

Third: Approval of the selection by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, although the statute was silent as to who should act for the government. Congress certainly intended that some government officer should act, and the Commissioner was the one intended.

Catholic Bishop v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 155, 166, 167, 39 L. ed. 931, 936, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779; United States v. Barnes, 222 U. S. 513, 521, 56 L. ed. 291, 294, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 117; Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 190 U. S. 301, 309, 47 L. ed. 1064, 1070, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692.

His approval of the selection would pass the title, as the final adjudication that the power had been properly exercised; it would be the final act to which any discretionary power was attached, and would be equivalent to a patent.

Beley v. Naphtaly, 169 U. S. 353, 365, 42 L. ed. 775, 779, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Stalker v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 225 U. S. 142, 148, 151, 153, 56 L. ed. 1027, 1031, 1032, 1033, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636; Louisiana v. Garfield, 211 U. S. 70, 75, 76, 53 L. ed. 92, 96, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31; Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 592, 42 L. ed. 591, 592, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

The statute did not contemplate a patent.

Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 341, 42 L. ed. 1050, 1060, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

Fourth: After the Commissioner had approved the selection, it became the ministerial "duty" of the surveyor general "to make survey and location" of the tract "when" the heirs required it. This ministerial duty had nothing to do with the vesting of the title (Glasgow v. Hortiz, 1 Black, 595, 601, 602, 17 L. ed. 110, 113, 114). The heirs could take their time about having the survey executed; Congress certainly saw no need for prompt surveys (Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 334, 42 L. ed. 1050, 1058, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632). In a grant under the 2d section of the act, there was a direction that it be "immediately" surveyed and segregated; the use of the different adverbs of time is most striking. Of course the heirs were not entitled to the performance of that "duty" until after the approval of the selection; in other words, the word "lawfully" must be read into the statute at this point. The Land Department held at the time, whenever the question arose in any of the floats, that its approval of the selection must precede survey and location by the surveyor general. On June 15, 1887, Secretary Lamar defined "location" as the "designation by approximate boundaries of a specific tract." Justice Field's definition is substantially the same (St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 649, 26 L. ed. 875, 879, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673). The survey and location which it was the "duty" of the surveyor general to make were the marking of the boundaries and the physical "location" or identification of the land, without any adjudicative authority.

Digitized by Google

Fifth: Filing of the field notes and plat of survey for the benefit of the heirs and the government, to serve as a "muniment of title" to the former and as a technical record of the description in the grant, "for future reference, as required by law," and to indicate to the government what land remained for other disposal (Langdeau v. Hanes, 21 Wall. 521, 530, 22 L. ed. 606, 609). The right to have a survey made imports the right to have a plat of it filed as a public record.

Adjudicative power either prior or subsequent to the approval of the location by the Commissioner was not an attribute of the general statutory power of the surveyor general.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 320, 38 L. ed. 992, 999, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030.

The powers to be exercised by the Commissioner were necessarily discretionary. In such case the rule is well settled that, whenever a statute gives discretionary power to any person, to be exercised by him upon his own opinion of certain facts, it is a sound rule of construction that the statute constitutes him the sole and exclusive judge of those facts.

Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat. 19, 31, 6 L. ed. 537, 541; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 729, 8 L. ed. 547, 561; United States v. California & O. Land Co. 148 U. S. 31, 43, 37 L. ed. 354, 360, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458.

The Commissioner's functions were judicial in their nature (Weyerhaeuser v. Hoyt, 219 U. S. 380, 388, 55 L. ed. 258, 261, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300); and his discretion could not be reviewed by the Secretary, and the Secretary's discretion thereby substituted for that of the Commissioner, in the absence of express statutory authority therefor (Butterworth v. United States, 112 U. S. 50, 56, 57, 28 L. ed. 656, 658, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25). Although the act of July 4, 1836 (now Rev. Stat. § 453, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 257), provided that the Commissioner's executive duties should be under the direction of the Secretary, every act of the Commissioner would, in contemplation of law, be that of the Secretary, even if the statute had given the latter the sole power of approval (United States v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 233, 243, 54 L. ed. 1015, 1020, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7). Their jurisdiction may have been concurrent (Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 177, 35 L. ed. 974, 978, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258), and either officer might have revoked a determination of the Commissioner before the passing of legal title, but the Secretary's supervisory power would be neither unlimited nor arbitrary (Ballinger v. United States, 216 U. S. 240, 248, 54 L. ed. 464, 467, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338).

After the passing of title, however, no officer had any power over the matter whatever (Beley v. Naphtaly, 169 U. S. 353, 365, 42 L. ed. 775, 779, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354).

After the exercise of the discretion, the courts will not entertain an inquiry as to the extent of the Commissioner's investigation, his knowledge on the points decided, or the methods by which he reached his determination (De Cambra v. Rogers, 189 U. S. 119, 122, 47 L. ed. 734, 735, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519). The only determinative consideration is, what final action did the Commissioner take in the exercise of his discretionary power?

When the Commissioner had acted finally, and the title had vested in the heirs of Baca, a legal presumption arose that every prerequisite to the grant had been performed both by the government and the heirs, and no negligence or omission, prior or subsequent thereto, by any government officer, can affect it.

Stalker v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 225 U. S. 142, 153, 56 L. ed. 1027, 1032, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636; Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. 314, 333, 13 L. ed. 153, 160; Patterson v. Jenks, 2 Pet. 216, 237, 7 L. ed. 402, 409; Glasgow v. Hortiz, 1 Black, 595, 601, 602, 17 L. ed. 110, 113, 114.

The adjudication of a question of fact, or of mixed law and fact, by one Commissioner, constitutes an absolute adjudication, and cannot be reviewed after the passing of legal title by any subsequent Commissioner, or by the Secretary of the Interior or any other executive officer; nor by the courts, except in a direct action by the United States to annul the grant.

United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 396, 402, 404, 26 L. ed. 167, 171, 173, 174;

Digitized by Google

United States v. Stone, 2 Wall. 525, 17 L. ed. 765; Whitcomb v. White, 214 U. S. 15, 53 L. ed. 889, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; Beley v. Naphtaly, 169 U. S. 353, 365, 42 L. ed. 775, 779, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 533, 24 L. ed. 848, 850; Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 176, 37 L. ed. 123, 127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 573, 585, 34 L. ed. 1063, 1068, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; American School v. McAnnulty, 187 U. S. 94, 108, 47 L. ed. 90, 96, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 330, 38 L. ed. 992, 1002, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Gardner v. Bonestell, 180 U. S. 362, 370, 45 L. ed. 574, 577, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Johnson v. Drew, 171 U. S. 93, 99, 43 L. ed. 88, 90, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 800; Burfenning v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 163 U. S. 321, 323, 41 L. ed. 175, 176, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 450, 451, 27 L. ed. 226, 227, 228, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 51, 29 L. ed. 570, 571, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Ballinger v. United States, 216 U. S. 240, 54 L. ed. 464, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338.

The case at bar is largely governed and controlled by Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 42 L. ed. 1050, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

What the Commissioner should have done on April 9, 1864, cannot be considered at this late day.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 330, 38 L. ed. 992, 1002, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 341, 42 L. ed. 1050, 1060, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

A grant delivered out for survey means a perfect title.

United States v. Hanson, 16 Pet. 196, 200, 10 L. ed. 935, 937; United States v. Boisdore, 11 How. 63, 92, 13 L. ed. 605, 617.

Where the statute does not contemplate conveyance by a patent, title passes either under the act itself or by an approval of the propriety of a selection thereunder (Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 592, 42 L. ed. 591, 592, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 172, 37 L. ed. 123, 126, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; United States v. Montana Lumber & Mfg. Co. 196 U. S. 573, 577, 49 L. ed. 604, 605, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367, where, however, by special act, title remained in abeyance until cost of survey was paid); and such approval "would be equivalent to a patent."

Beley v. Naphtaly, 169 U. S. 353, 365, 42 L. ed. 775, 779, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354.

Where there was a "grant of a right to take" lands for station buildings, etc., the exercise of that power by the railroad company, with the approval of the Department, vested the title, notwithstanding the non-compliance by the register with a Department regulation requiring the notation of the lands approved on a certain map in his office.

Stalker v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 225 U. S. 142, 56 L. ed. 1027, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636.

Even if the surveyor general had disapproved of the location, the Commissioner could have overruled him; consequently, so long as the highest authority has acted, any question as to whether or not the proper subordinate officer acted is immaterial.

Stalker v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 225 U. S. 142, 153, 56 L. ed. 1027, 1032, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636.

The making of survey, plat, and field notes were ministerial acts.

Glasgow v. Hortiz, 1 Black, 595, 601, 602, 17 L. ed. 110, 113, 114; Russell v. Maxwell Land Grant Co. 158 U. S. 253, 259, 39 L. ed. 971, 973, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827; Ballinger v. United States, 216 U. S. 240, 250, 54 L. ed. 464, 468, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338; Simmons v. Wagner, 101 U. S. 260, 261, 25 L. ed. 911; United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co. 200 U. S. 321, 335, 50 L. ed. 499, 505, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; United States v. Stone, 2 Wall. 525, 535, 17 L. ed. 765, 767.

In the case at bar there was a definite description of a specific tract, easily capable of identification, and therefore segregation by survey was not necessary to pass title.

Langdeau v. Hanes, 21 Wall. 521, 530, 531, 22 L. ed. 606, 609; Snyder v. Sickles, 98 U. S. 203, 213, 214, 25 L. ed. 97, 101, 102; Whitney v. Morrow, 112 U. S. 693, 695, 28 L. ed. 871, 872, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333; Glasgow v. Hortiz, 1 Black, 595, 601, 602, 17 L. ed. 110, 113, 114.

The function of the survey was not to pass title, but to mark out the land so that its boundaries might be officially monumented and designated on a plat of survey according to the township and section system,—the approved method of describing western lands; and it would also inform the government what land it had left. The government fixes the boundaries between its remaining land and the land of its grantee.

Russell v. Maxwell Land Grant Co. 158 U. S. 253, 39 L. ed. 971, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827; Langdeau v. Hanes, 21 Wall. 521, 530, 22 L. ed. 606, 609; Joplin v. Chachere, 192 U. S. 94, 48 L. ed. 359, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; United States v. Montana Lumber & Mfg. Co. 196 U. S. 573, 578, 49 L. ed. 604, 605, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

The delay of the ministerial officers of the government in performing the ministerial act of the survey can neither devest the title nor suspend its vesting.

Stalker v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 225 U. S. 142, 153, 56 L. ed. 1027, 1032, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636; Glasgow v. Hortiz, 1 Black, 595.

Digitized by Google

601, 602, 17 L. ed. 110, 113, 114; Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. 314, 333, 13 L. ed. 153, 160.

Congress had power to prescribe the mode of ascertaining the validity of titles under Spanish and Mexican claims or grants, and to provide for a forfeiture thereof unless the regulations for the ascertainment of the validity of the titles were complied with; or Congress could simply have directed the possession and appropriation of the land. Congress could act with process of law or without any process at all, especially as the 14th Amendment had not then been passed.

Barker v. Harvey, 181 U. S. 481, 486, 487, 45 L. ed. 963, 965, 966, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 208, 222, 40 L. ed. 673, 678, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; Botiller v. Dominguez, 130 U. S. 238, 32 L. ed. 926, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Tameling v. United States Freehold & Emigration Co. 93 U. S. 644, 661, 662, 23 L. ed. 998, 1002, 1003; United States v. De Repentigny, 5 Wall. 211, 268, 18 L. ed. 627, 646; Astiazaran v. Santa Rita Land & Min. Co. 148 U. S. 80, 37 L. ed. 376, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457.

Even if the 8th section of the act of 1854 had been extended to the land in question before the act of 1860, it would not, in any event, be read into the 6th section of the act of June 21, 1860, as that was a subsequent special act, complete in itself, clearly specifying the kind of land available thereunder.

Townsend v. Little, 109 U. S. 504, 512, 27 L. ed. 1012, 1015, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, 125, 49 L. ed. 114, 122, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, 1 Ann. Cas. 655; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 22, 43 L. ed. 341, 350, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; United States v. Nix, 189 U. S. 199, 205, 47 L. ed. 775, 777, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Menotti v. Dillon, 167 U. S. 703, 721, 42 L. ed. 333, 339, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 945; United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co 176 U. S. 28, 46, 44 L. ed. 358, 366, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261.

In all the railroad grants there were provisions specifically excepting or referring to reserved lands; there was no such exception in the case at bar. In the act of 1860, "vacant" means "unoccupied" (Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 332, 42 L. ed. 1057, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632). This court has found that the Tumacacori and Calabasas claims had no occupancy subsequent to 1855 (Faxon v. United States, 171 U. S. 244, 246, 43 L. ed. 151, 152, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 849); and they have been specifically declared invalid, and the land included therein to have been in 1863 public land (Ibid.).

Even if there were a reservation, the land remained public land, to be disposed of by Congress as it saw fit (Menotti v. Dillon, 167 U. S. 703, 721, 42 L. ed. 333, 339, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 945); especially as there was no appropriation of the land for the actual use of any department of the government (Scott v. Carew, 196 U. S. 100, 109, 49 L. ed. 403, 405, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193).

Where a statute is ambiguous and susceptible of two constructions, the courts will adopt that construction which best comports with the principles of reason, justice, and convenience (Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 77, 44 L. ed. 969, 984, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; United States v. Gue Lim, 176 U. S. 459, 467, 44 L. ed. 544, 547, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734); and the courts will lean to that construction of a statute which will uphold transactions consummated under it (Provident Life & T. Co. v. Mercer County, 170 U. S. 593, 600, 42 L. ed. 1156, 1159, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788; Andes v. Ely, 158 U. S. 312, 321, 39 L. ed. 996, 1001, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 954). An exemption from future legislation must also be express or by clear implication (Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Miller, 132 U. S. 75, 84, 33 L. ed. 267, 272, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34).

The regulations made by the Secretary under the specific provisions of the 8th and 9th sections of the act of July 22, 1854, are not only a part of the statute (United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 516, 517, 55 L. ed. 563, 567, 568, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480; Leonard v. Lennox, 104 C. C. A. 296, 181 Fed. 760; Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 190 U. S. 301, 47 L. ed. 1064, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692), but the Secretary's construction of the law, evidenced by such regulations, is controlling in the case of any ambiguity under the act (Jacobs v. Prichard, 223 U. S. 200, 213, 214, 56 L. ed. 405, 409, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289).

A "claim" is necessarily a demand upon or assertion to another of some matter as of right.

Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 615, 10 L. ed. 1060, 1089.

Not only did the Secretary require a presentation of claim, and a plat of survey or other evidence of boundaries, so that there might be no doubt thereafter in reserving the lands from sale, but this court also has understood that there was no reservation until the presentation or assertion of a claim (Lockhart v. Johnson, 181 U. S. 516, 521, 45 L. ed. 979, 982, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665; Ainsa v. New Mexico & A. R. Co. 175 U. S. 76, 89, 44 L. ed. 78, 83, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28). Such was the understanding of the Department until the year 1900 (Re San Juan De Las Boquilasy Nogales, 1 Land Dec. 167; Re Rancho San Rafael de la Zanja, 3 Land Dec. 439; Re Tres Alamos, 4 Land Dec.

Digitized by Google

431, Re Tumacacori & C. Grant, 16 Land Dec. 420; Apodaca v. Mulligan, 27 Land Dec. 608).

The burden of proof, with its consequent duty to assert the claim, was on the claimant.

United States v. Ortiz, 176 U. S. 422, 426, 44 L. ed. 529, 531, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466.

Such claims have never been treated as sub judice until a claim therefor had been duly made to the surveyor general under the regulations.

Astiazaran v. Santa Rita Land & Min. Co. 148 U. S. 80, 83, 84, 37 L. ed. 376, 377, 378, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457; Cameron v. United States, 148 U. S. 301, 310, 37 L. ed. 459, 462, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595; Ainsa v. New Mexico & A. R. Co. 175 U. S. 76, 86, 44 L. ed. 78, 82, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

Compliance with the regulations was necessary, not only to give certainty to the reservation, and notice to the Land Department, but also to protect innocent purchasers.

Menard v. Massey, 8 How. 293, 309, 12 L. ed. 1085, 1091.

The nonexistence of claims up to April 9, 1864, is res judicata.

United States v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 233, 54 L. ed. 1015, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7.

The government must bear the consequences of its own mistakes and blunders, and no default or neglect of any officer of the Land Department can affect the title.

Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. 314, 333, 13 L. ed. 153, 160; Stalker v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 225 U. S. 142, 153, 56 L. ed. 1027, 1032, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 730, 8 L. ed. 547, 561; Glasgow v. Hortiz, 1 Black, 595, 601, 602, 17 L. ed. 110, 113, 114.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Appeal from the decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, affirming a decree of the supreme court of the District, enjoining the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office from proceeding in the matter of certain attempted entries under the public land laws of the United States upon lands which the decree finds were selected and located by the heirs of Luis Maria Cabeza de Baca on June 17, 1863, and known as Baca Float No. 3, the title to which, the decree further finds, passed out of the United States and vested in said heirs on April 9, 1864. The decree further directs the filing of the field notes and plats of survey of the float for the purpose of defining the outboundaries thereof and segregating the same from the public lands of the United States.

The origin and history of the Baca grant are set out in Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 42 L. ed. 1050, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; Maese v. Herman, 183 U. S. 572, 46 L. ed. 335, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91, and Priest v. Las Vegas, 232 U. S. 604, ante, 751, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449.

It appears that there was a conflict between this grant and the grant to the town of Las Vegas, which was settled by an act passed on June 21, 1860 (12 Stat. at L. 71, chap. 167), which enabled the heirs of Baca to select "an equal quantity of vacant land, not mineral, in the territory of New Mexico, to be located by them in square bodies, not exceeding [527] five in number." It was made the duty of the surveyor general of New Mexico "to make survey and location of the lands so selected by said heirs of Baca when thereunto required by them: Provided, however, that the right hereby granted . . . shall continue in force during three years from the passage of this act, and no longer."

The Las Vegas grant was ascertained to contain nearly 500,000 acres (496,446 96-100). The Baca heirs were therefore entitled to locate that many acres "in square bodies, not exceeding five in number." This controversy concerns the third of the bodies selected. The selection of each tract was to be determined by the same considerations, and those considerations are declared in Shaw v. Kellogg, supra. Each location, it is there said, would necessarily be of considerable size; in fact, each one was nearly 100,000 acres; and each as a whole was to be nonmineral. "No provision was made for indemnity lands in case mineral should be found in any section or quarter section. So that when the location was perfected the title passed to all the lands or to none." The limits of location, it was said, was the territory of New Mexico, —limits not so broad as those of the territory ceded by Mexico; within the limits there were large areas of arid lands; "its surface was broken by a few mountain chains, and crossed by a few rivers." Lands, it was declared, could not be selected already occupied by others. The lands must be vacant. Nor could lands be selected "which were then known to contain mineral. Congress did not intend to grant any mines or mineral lands, but, with these exceptions, their right of selection was coextensive with the limits of New Mexico. We say 'lands then known to contain mineral,' for it cannot be that Congress intended that the grant should be rendered nugatory by any future discoveries of mineral. The selection was to be made within three years. The title was then to pass, and [528] it would be an insult to the good faith of Congress to suppose that it did not intend that the title, when it passed, should pass absolutely, and not contingently upon subsequent discoveries." And it was declared that the surveyor general of New Mexico was to determine the character of the lands; he was to make survey and location of the lands selected; upon him "was cast the specific duty of seeing that the lands selected were such as the Baca heirs were entitled to select." This is emphasized by saying that "he was the officer who, by virtue of his duties, was most competent to examine and pass upon the question of the character of the lands selected." In the survey and location it was recognized that he was subject to the "control and direction of the Land Department," and, while he was not to act in defiance and independently of the Land Department, "it was for him to say, in the first instance, at least, whether the lands so selected and by him surveyed and located were lands vacated and nonmineral."

Digitized by Google

These are the elements of the decision. How do they apply to the case at bar?

First, as to the allegations of the bill. There are detailed allegations of the origin of the grant to Baca, its presentation to the surveyor general of New Mexico under the then-existing law and regulations, and his recommendation of its confirmation, also of the confirmation of the grant to the town of Las Vegas, "leaving," as he said, "the respective claimants the right to adjust their conflicting claims in courts." The other facts which the bill alleges we set out in narrative form as follows:

Both grants were confirmed and the right given to the heirs of Baca, as we have seen, to select other lands equal in quantity to the lands claimed by Las Vegas.

On July 26, 1860, about a month after the act was passed, the Commissioner of the General Land Office informed the surveyor general of New Mexico that it was [529] the latter's duty to separate from the public lands the pueblos or individual confirmed claims, and in that connection drew his special attention to the act of June 21, 1860, which referred to the "claim of the Heirs of Luis Maria Baca," and in order to give the act timely effect the surveyor general was directed to give the claim priority in surveying private land claims. That officer was directed to have the exterior lines of Las Vegas run off, and, this being done, the right would accrue to the Baca claimants to select a quantity equal to the area elsewhere in New Mexico of vacant lands, not mineral, in square bodies, not exceeding five in number. The instructions then proceed as follows;

"You will furnish them with a certificate, transmitting at the same time a duplicate to this office, of their right and the area they are to select in five square parcels. Should they select in square bodies according to the existing line of the surveys, the matter may be properly disposed of by their application, duly indorsed and signed with your certificate, designating the parts selected by legal divisions or subdivisions, and so selected as to form five separate bodies in square form. Then the certificate thus indorsed is to be noted on the records of the register and receiver of Santa Fe, and sent on here by those officers for approval. Should the Baca claimants select outside of the existing surveys, they must give such distinct descriptions and connection with natural objects in their applications to be filed in your office, as will enable the deputy surveyor, when he may reach the vicinity of such selections in the regular progress of the surveys, to have the selections adjusted as near as may be to the lines of the public surveys, which may hereafter be established in the region of those selections. In either case the final conditions of the certificate to this office must be accompanied by a statement from yourself and register and receiver that the land is vacant and not mineral."

[530] The grant to the town of Las Vegas was surveyed and the fact communicated by the surveyor general to the representative of the heirs of Baca, and they were informed that they were entitled to select an equal quantity of land, that he was authorized to survey and locate the same, and that his office was ready to co-operate with their legal representative "and receive his application for the location of the lands granted by the government."

Thereupon, on or about June 17, 1863, in pursuance of the notice from the surveyor general and the act of Congress, the following was addressed to the surveyor general:

I, John S. Watts, the attorney of the heirs of Don Luis Maria Cabeza de Baca, have this day selected as one of the five locations confirmed to said heirs under the 6th section of the act of Congress approved June 21st, 1860, the following tract, to wit: Commencing at a point one mile and a half from the base of the Solero mountain in a direction north 45 degrees east of the highest point of said mountain, running thence from said beginning point west 12 miles, 36 chains, and 44 links, thence south 12 miles, 36 chains, and 44 links, thence east 12 miles, 36 chains, and 44 links, thence north 12 miles, 36 chains, and 44 links, to the place of beginning, the same being situated in that portion of New Mexico now included by act of Congress approved February 24, 1863 [12 Stat. at L. 664, chap. 56], in the territory of Arizona; said tract of land is entirely vacant, unclaimed by anyone, and is not mineral to my knowledge.

Digitized by Google

John S. Watts,
Attorney for the Heirs of Luis Maria Cabeza de Baca.

On the same day the surveyor general certified to the Commissioner of the General Land Office the fact of the application, repeating it, and concluding as follows:

[531] And I further certify that the said tract of land being the one-fifth part of the private claim confirmed to the said heirs, contains ninety-nine thousand two hundred and eighty-nine acres and thirty-nine hundredths of an acre, and that this location is the third of the series (application to locate the same, filed in this office October 31, 1862, dated October 30, 1862, having been withdrawn—see letter of Commissioner of the General Land Office dated February 5, 1863), and, with the three locations, numbered one, two, and four heretofore made, included four-fifths of the said private claim confirmed to the heirs of Luis Maria Cabeza de Baca, by the act of Congress approved June 21, 1860. Said location is hereby approved.

In witness whereof I have hereto set my hand this 17th day of June, 1863.

John A. Clark,
Surveyor General.

The communication was mailed the following day, with a letter to the Commissioner as follows:

Surveyor General's Office,
Santa Fe, New Mexico, June 18, 1863.

Honl. J. M. Edmunds, Comm'r of General Land Office,
Washington City, D. C.

Sir:—

I inclose herewith copy of the application and certificate of location No. 3 of the private claim confirmed to the heirs of Luis Maria Cabeza de Baca.

As this location is far beyond any of the public surveys, I have not deemed it necessary to procure any certificate from the register and receiver of the land office, as, from the nature of the case, they cannot officially know anything concerning it.

I am respectfully your
Obt. servt.
John A. Clark,
Surveyor General.

[532] On July 18th the Commissioner acknowledged the receipt of the communication, stating.

Your approval of the location under consideration is found to have ignored the imperative condition that the lands selected at the base of Solero mountain now included by the act of Congress approved February 24, 1863, in the territory of Arizona, is vacant land and not mineral. Before the application of location No. 3 of the heirs aforesaid can be approved, by this office, it is necessary that our instructions of the 26th of July, 1860, should be complied with by furnishing a statement from yourself and register and receiver that the land thus selected and embracing one fifth of the claim, or 99,289 39-100 acres, is vacant and not mineral.

I am very respectfully,
Your obt. servt.
J. M. Edmunds, Commissioner.

In a letter dated April 2, 1864, the surveyor general, in reply to that of the Commissioner, stated "that there is no evidence in the office of the surveyor general of New Mexico" that the tract selected "contains any mineral, or that it is occupied. There have been no public surveys made in the neighborhood of said tract, and there is no record of or concerning the land in question in the surveyor general's office, nor—as I believe—in the office of the register or receiver of the land office of New Mexico. As I am personally unacquainted with that region of country, I cannot certify that the land in question is 'vacant and not mineral' or otherwise. Those facts can only be determined by actual examination and survey."

On March 25, 1864, the receiver of the land office in New Mexico made a certificate stating that the lands applied for "are vacant and not mineral so far as the records of this office show (not having been surveyed)." The register, in his certificate of the same date, stated that [533] the lands "are not surveyed, and, from all information in this office, are vacant and not mineral."

On about April 9, 1864, having been required by the Baca heirs to survey the tract located by them, the Commissioner of the General Land Office issued instructions to the surveyor general of Arizona which recited that the location by the Baca heirs had been approved by the surveyor general of New Mexico, in whose jurisdiction, it was said, the application properly came at the date of the approval. The instructions referred to the act of Congress of 1860 and the rights it conferred, and stated that the act of June 2, 1862 [12 Stat. at L. 410, chap.

Digitized by Google

90], required all grants to be surveyed at the expense of the claimants, and that whenever the Baca claimants should pay or secure to be paid a sum sufficient to liquidate all the expenses a survey was to be directed of the application and transcripts of the field notes and plats to be transmitted to the General Land Office to constitute "the muniments of title, the law not requiring the issue of patents of these claims." Directions as to the manner of marking lands were given. Accompanying the instructions was a copy of the certificate of the surveyor general of New Mexico, dated June 17, 1863, and following that the following order:

General Land Office,
April 9, 1864.

Levi Bashford, Esq., Surveyor General, Tucson, Arizona.

Sir.—

The foregoing statement and the certificate of Surveyor General Clark having been submitted to this Department, and having undergone a careful examination, the location being approved by him to perfect title under the authority of the act approved June 21, 1860, application for survey having been made. Instructions (copy herewith attached) have been given to Surveyor General Levi Bashford of Arizona, in which territory the lands [534] located now are, to run the lines indicated and forward complete survey and plat, to be placed on file for future reference as required by law.

J. M. Edmunds, Commr.

In pursuance of this order a survey was undertaken, but the surveyors, while engaged in the work of the survey, were killed by hostile Indians, and no survey was ever returned (alleged on information and belief). Notwithstanding the repeated requests of the heirs of Baca, the Commissioner of the General Land Office failed and refused to continue or have made the survey ordered as above stated, and persisted in such refusal until on or about June 17, 1905, on which date the Commissioner, by an official order, authorized and directed the surveyor general of Arizona to cause a survey to be made, and in pursuance of and under contract No. 136, dated June 17, 1905, one Philip Contzen was authorized and required to run the lines indicated on the application of the Baca heirs (float No. 3) so as to adjust the lines, as near as might be, to the lines of the public surveys.

The survey was made and duly certified by the surveyor general of Arizona as strictly conformable to the field notes which had been examined, approved, and filed in his office, and that the plat and survey had been examined and found correct by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

On or about January 12, 1905, the Commissioner of the General Land Office, disregarding the decision and order of the then Commissioner of the Land Office of April 9, 1864, gave such instructions to the surveyor general of Arizona regarding his duties as to the character of the lands that that officer, in December, 1906, forwarded the plat and survey hereinbefore mentioned to the Commissioner of the General Land Office with a report, accompanied by the alleged information which he had gathered, [535] and the recommendation that the location of Baca Float No. 3, made, as hereinbefore stated, June 17, 1863, be entirely rejected.

On or about May 13, 1907, contrary to law, and without jurisdiction so to do, and disregarding the order of his predecessor, the Commissioner rendered a decision ordering a hearing before the surveyor general of Arizona to determine whether said lands were, at the time of said location, vacant and nonmineral. On or about June 2, 1908, the First Assistant Secretary of the Interior, in a decision upon an appeal from said decision of the Commissioner, contrary to law and without jurisdiction, affirmed the decision of the Commissioner in so far as it remanded the case for a hearing before the surveyor general of Arizona.

A motion to review was subsequently made and denied.

By the acts done in the selection and location of the lands, including the order of Commissioner Edmunds of April 9, 1864, requiring a survey thereof, the title to the lands vested in fee in the heirs of Baca, and it was not within the power of the Land Department to revoke or annul the prior rulings, or to evade the rights of such heirs or their successors in title, and that (this on information and belief) the Land Department has always treated the lands selected as segregated from the public domain, and they have for many years been so marked upon the maps issued by the Department, as more especially appears from the map of the Territory of Arizona of 1903.

It is alleged that one Henry Ohm and one Lyman W. Wakefield have filed homestead applications upon land lying within the lands located by the Baca heirs, and instructions have been issued from the officers of the Land Department, permitting proofs to be made thereof. It is alleged that there are many other entries upon the lands, and that they and Ohm's and Wakefield's applications will cast clouds upon the title of the Baca location.

[536] The value of the lands located is alleged to be over $100,000, and that plaintiffs have no adequate remedy at law.

Digitized by Google

An injunction was prayed restraining defendants from further proceeding in the homestead applications, that they be required to place on file for future reference, as required by law, the Contzen survey and plat dated June 17, 1905; that anything shown thereby or connected therewith, other than that included in the order of the Commissioner of April 9, 1864, and other than the exterior boundaries, accessory lines, crosses and distances, monuments and measurements showing the tract located by the Baca heirs known as location No. 3, together with any topographical features and the references to the lines of the public surveys be canceled and expunged from the said plat of said survey, and particularly the lines, crosses and distances, monuments and measurements purporting to show the segregation from said land of the alleged mineral portion, the Tubac township, and the conflicting portions of the San José, Sonoita, Tumacacori, and Calabasas claims.

A demurrer was filed to the bill which set out as grounds: (1) The real purpose of the suit is to recover certain real estate situated in the territory of Arizona by trial of the legal title thereto, and that the relief, if any, plaintiffs are entitled to, is at law. (2) If the legal title to the property passed to plaintiffs, as alleged, on April 9, 1864, "naught else remains for the defendants to do than to perform the ministerial duty of receiving and recording the plat of survey and field notes thereof," and the remedy is by mandamus. (3) If the legal title to the land has not passed to plaintiffs, as alleged, it is still in the United States, which it is not shown has consented to this suit; and the court in such event is without jurisdiction. (4) On the face of the bill it is impossible to grant the prayers of plaintiffs without deciding whether the title is still in [537] the United States. The determination of the suit, therefore, affects the United States, and they are real and indispensable parties in interest, and have not consented to be sued. (5) The acts sought to be enjoined are exclusively within the jurisdiction of the Interior Department and are not subject to judicial control. (6) The parties who have initiated claims are materially interested in the suit and are necessary parties to it. (7) The court is without jurisdiction to expunge the matters and things prayed to be expunged from the plat of the survey of the San José de Sonoita claim for the reason that the claimants are not parties to the suit, and their claim has been confirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States (Ely v. United States, 171 U. S. 220, 43 L. ed. 142, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840). (8) The citizens of Tubac township are necessary parties. (9) There never has been an adjudication by the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office, or either of them, that the lands involved were, on June 17, 1863, nonmineral and vacant or unoccupied lands such as the heirs of Baca were authorized to select under the terms of the 6th section of the act of June 21, 1860 (12 Stat. at L. 71, chap. 167). (10) The plaintiffs are not entitled to the relief prayed for, or to any relief. (11) The bill is in other respects uncertain, informal, and insufficient to entitle plaintiffs to any relief.

The demurrer was overruled, Mr. Justice Barnard of the supreme court saying that the main question to be decided on the demurrer was as to the effect of the act of Congress, and, considering the act and the proceedings taken under it, recited in the bill, he said he was of opinion that the title to the "tract vested in the heirs of said Baca when the location was approved and the survey ordered," and that, therefore, plaintiffs might maintain their bill for some portion, at least, of the substantial relief for which they prayed, and that the demurrer, being to the whole bill, must be overruled. And he said: "This conclusion [538] as to title, if correct, will enable the suit to be maintained notwithstanding the objection made as to want of other parties defendant. Title being out of the United States, it has no interest and is not a necessary party; and the Land Department cannot rightfully treat the tract as open to public entry, and the officers may therefore be enjoined."

The defendants (appellants) then answered.

The answer admitted what must be regarded as the fundamental elements of the bill. So far as its denials of any of the averments of the bill or its allegations of fact are material, we shall refer to them hereafter. The proofs taken under the bill and answer were not regarded by the supreme court as determining a different decision from that expressed on the demurrer to the bill; that is, the court repeated its view that the title passed on April 9, 1864, to the heirs of Baca, and that the court had authority to enjoin defendants from treating the land as being public land. The injunction prayed for was granted except that the "Contzen" survey and plat were ordered to be filed unchanged. A decree was entered accordingly. It was affirmed by the court of appeals, as we have said.

The crux of the case, in the views of the courts below, is the question whether title to the lands passed out of the United States in April, 1864, and the careful and elaborate consideration of it makes the discussion of it mere repetition.

The contentions of the parties are very accurately opposed. Appellants contend that "under a proper construction of the act of June 21, 1860, title to the 'float' cannot pass until there has been an official survey and a final determination by the proper officers that the land selected in 1863 was of the character which the statute permitted the heirs to take,—a matter still sub judice in the Department," except as to certain conflicting grants. The appellees insist, and the courts below, as we have [539] seen, decided, that the location of the grant and the approval of it by the surveyor general of New Mexico, and subsequently, in April, 1864, by Commissioner Edmunds of the Land Office, transferred the title to the heirs of Baca.

Digitized by Google

There is some controversy upon the fact as to whether the Commissioner had before him the proof he had demanded of the nonmineral character of the land. We think the lower courts rightly deduced from the evidence "that the Commissioner," to quote from the opinion of the court of appeals, "having carefully considered all the facts in the case, concluded to adopt the approval of the surveyor general of New Mexico of this location to perfect title under the authority of said act [act of 1860], and in order completely to segregate this land from the public domain ordered the survey." [41 App. D. C. 153.] And that this action was within the authority of those officers we may refer to Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 42 L. ed. 1050, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632. In that case, we have seen, the surveyor general of New Mexico was the officer selected and who was most competent to examine and pass upon the question of the character of the lands, and to pass upon them at the time of location,—not upon evidence collected many years after the location, directed to what might have been known many years before. The selection and location was to be made within three years of the passage of the act in a comparative wilderness, and the "title was then to pass," and "pass absolutely, and not contingently upon subsequent discoveries."

We recognized in Shaw v. Kellogg that the action of the surveyor general was subject to the supervision of the Land Department, and that condition is satisfied in the case at bar. The Commissioner was put in possession of all of the facts as to the lands, and, exercising his judgment upon them, approved the location.

The facts in Shaw v. Kellogg give pertinence to its principles, [540] notwithstanding some differences between its facts and those in the case at bar. In that case there was a positive declaration by the surveyor general of the nonmineral character of the lands; in the case at bar it is an inference deduced from the circumstances, it being the "duty of the officers to decide the question,"—a duty which they "could not avoid or evade." In that case the Land Office undertook to reserve from the grant lands which might be subsequently discovered to be mineral. In this case it directed an inquiry of their character long after the location of the grant, and seeks to determine the legality of the location by the information said to be obtained.

The title having passed by the location of the grant and the approval of it, the title could not be subsequently devested by the officers of the Land Department. Ballinger v. United States, 216 U. S. 240, 54 L. ed. 464, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338. In other words, and specifically, the action of the Commissioner in approving the location of the grant cannot be revoked by his successor in office, and an attempt to do so can be enjoined. Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Philadelphia Co. v. Stimson, 223 U. S. 605, 56 L. ed. 570, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340. The suit is one to restrain the appellants from an illegal act under color of their office which will cast a cloud upon the title of appellees.

This disposes of the contentions of appellants that this is a suit against the United States, or one for recovery of land merely, or that there is a defect of parties, or that the suit is an attempted direct appeal from the decision of the Interior Department, or a trial of a title to land not situated within the jurisdiction of the court "wherein an essential party is not present in the forum and is not even suable,—the United States."

We agree with the courts below that a survey was necessary to segregate the lands from the public domain. Stoneroad v. Stoneroad, 158 U. S. 240, 39 L. ed. 966, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822. This was done by the [541] Contzen survey, which, we have seen, was directed to be filed by the lower courts without alteration,—a decision which we approve.

There are other contentions of appellants which call for no extended comment, as we concur with the courts below in regard to them. For instance, it is contended that the surveyor general of New Mexico had lost authority to approve the location, and that duty had devolved upon the surveyor general of Arizona. To the contention it may be replied, as the court of appeals in effect replied, that the act of 1860 devolved the duty on the surveyor general of New Mexico, and the Land Office, upon whom devolv l the ultimate responsibility, approved the location.

A point is made upon attempts to change the location, of which it is enough to say that they were not accepted by the Land Department, and the claimants were remitted to the location under consideration.

Digitized by Google

Another contention is made on the conflict of the grant as located with other grants, to which the court of appeals replied that it was not now concerned with such question, and that if, as suggested, a controversy should arise, it "will properly be adjudicated in the courts where the lands are located." In this we concur.

Whose duty it was to pay the expense of the survey is also in controversy. The appellants assert it to have been the duty of the claimants under the act of June 2, 1862 (12 Stat. at L. 410, chap. 90), and that was the view, we have seen, of the Land Department. The appellees contend that the obligation was upon the government under the granting act. That act provides, as we have seen, that "it shall be the duty of the surveyor general of New Mexico to make survey and location of the land so selected by the said heirs of Baca when thereunto required by them. . . ." The obligation is explicit, and there was reason for it. To accommodate conflicting claims, and at the instance of [542] the government, the Baca claimants gave up their rights to a definite tract of land, and, as appellees say, expressing the equities of the claimants, whatever its character or condition, and the government therefore would naturally make provision for the location of the substituted land as expeditiously as possible, and without expense to the Baca heirs. We therefore think the act of 1860, not that of 1862, applied.

The contention that appellees have not shown sufficient title is untenable.

Decree affirmed.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
WILLIAM BROWN and Rosa Brown.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 542–547.)

States — relation to national government — extraterritorial operation of mental anguish statute.

1. Damages for mental anguish, arising out of the negligent failure of a telegraph company to deliver in the city of Washington a telegram forwarded without delay to that city from the company's office in South Carolina, where it was received, cannot be recovered in an action of tort in the South Carolina courts, under the authority of S. C. Civ. Code, § 2223, without infringing upon the exclusiveness of the control of the United States over the District of Columbia.

[For other cases, see States, IV. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation of telegraph companies — mental anguish.

2. A recovery in an action of tort in the South Carolina courts of damages for mental anguish arising out of the negligent failure of a telegraph company to deliver in the city of Washington a telegram forwarded without delay to that city from the company's office in South Carolina, where it was received, cannot be authorized, as is done by S. C. Civ. Code, § 2223, as construed by the state courts, without violating the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 368–375, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 355.]

Argued May 5, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of South Carolina to review a judgment which affirmed, on a second appeal, a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas of the County of Charleston, in that state, in favor of plaintiffs in an action to recover damages for mental anguish arising out of the failure of a telegraph company to deliver a message. Reversed.

See same case below, 92 S. C. 354, 75 S. E. 542.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Rush Taggart and Francis Raymond Stark argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George H. Fearons and Julian Mitchell, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Any statute is an invalid regulation of interstate commerce which imposes a liability outside of that created by the contract and unknown to the common law for an act or omission occurring in the course of inter-

---

NOTE—Statute permitting recovery for mental anguish in telegraph cases as interference with commerce.

WESTERN U. TELEG. CO. v. BROWN decides, contrary to the judgment below in the South Carolina supreme court, and to the decision in Ivy v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 165 Fed. 371, reversed on other grounds in 100 C. C. A. 481, 177 Fed. 63, that a state statute permitting a recovery for mental anguish for the failure to deliver a telegram addressed to a point outside the state is an invalid regulation of commerce. Had the default occurred in South Carolina, however, a different result must have been reached, under the doctrine of Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Crovo, 220 U. S. 364, 55 L. ed. 498, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399, where a state statute under which a penalty is incurred by a telegraph company which negligently fails to transmit within the state as promptly as practicable a message received at an office in the state for transmission to state transportation or transmission entirely outside the borders of the state.

Digitized by Google

Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 500, 57 L. ed. 317, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Birkett v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 103 Mich. 361, 33 L.R.A. 404, 50 Am. St. Rep. 374, 61 N. W. 645; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Polt, 232 U. S. 165, ante, 554, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Hanley v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 187 U. S. 617, 47 L. ed. 333, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Jacob v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 135 Mich. 600, 98 N. W. 402; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 262, 54 L. ed. 472, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. ed. 268, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Stoutenburgh v. Hennick, 129 U. S. 141, 32 L. ed. 637, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Carew, 15 Mich. 525; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Commercial Mill. Co. 218 U. S. 406, 54 L. ed. 1088, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 220, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59, 21 Ann. Cas. 815; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Crovo, 220 U. S. 364, 55 L. ed. 498, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 40 L. ed. 1105, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Jackson Vinegar Co. 226 U. S. 217, 57 L. ed. 193, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

The statute is unconstitutional because conflicting with the exclusive legislative power of Congress in the District of Columbia.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Chiles, 214 U. S. 274, 53 L. ed. 994, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Greer, 115 Tenn. 368, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 525, 89 S. W. 327; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Snodgrass, 94 Tex. 284, 86 Am. St. Rep. 851, 60 S. W. 308.

Mr. Frank J. Hogan argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. Turner Logan and John P. Grace, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The statute is in no way in contravention of the Federal Constitution.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 100, 43 L. ed. 909, 911, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 255.

A state, acting within its police powers, may pass laws designed for the protection of persons within its borders, although such laws incidentally affect interstate commerce, provided Congress has not legislated upon the subject, and it is one not purely national in its nature.

Ivy v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 165 Fed. 371; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 40 L. ed. 1105, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Commercial Mill. Co. 218 U. S. 406, 54 L. ed. 1088, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 220, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59, 21 Ann. Cas. 815; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Crovo, 220 U. S. 364, 55 L. ed. 498, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of tort brought by the party to whom a telegraphic message was addressed. The message was delivered to the company in South Carolina, addressed to the plaintiff in Washington, District of Columbia, and read, "Come at once. Your sister died this morning." It was forwarded without delay to Washington, but there, through negligence, as the jury found, was not delivered. The declaration alleges that the failure caused the plaintiff to miss attending her sister's funeral in South Carolina, and subjected the plaintiff to mental anguish, which of itself is made a cause of action by a statute of South Carolina. Civil Code, § 2223. The defendants in error state that the action was brought under this section. There was a trial at which, by the instructions to the jury, a recovery was allowed under the act for the negligence in Washington, irrespective of the law prevailing here. The jury found a verdict for $750, which was sustained by the supreme court of the state. 92 S. C. 354, 75 S. E. 542. The plaintiff in error saved its rights under the Constitution of the United States (so plainly that it is not necessary to discuss the matter), and brought the case here.

---

a person in another state was held to be a valid exercise of the police power of the state, in the absence of any legislation by Congress on the subject.

In Ivy v. Western U. Teleg. Co. supra, the action was based upon a failure to deliver a message sent to a point in Indiana from a place in Arkansas, in which latter state the suit was brought. The court applied the Arkansas mental anguish statute, and held that, as so applied, the statute, though incidentally affecting contracts for the transmission of interstate messages, was not an unconstitutional regulation of interstate commerce. See also note to Nitka v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 49 L.R.A.(N.S.) 337, on constitutionality of statutes permitting recovery for mental anguish in telegraph cases, and note to Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Commercial Mill. Co. 36 L.R.A. (N.S.) 220, on state law affecting telegraph companies as regulation of interstate commerce.

Digitized by Google

Whatever variations of opinion and practice there may [547] have been, it is established as the law of this court that when a person recovers in one jurisdiction for a tort committed in another, he does so on the ground of an obligation incurred at the place of the tort that accompanies the person of the defendant elsewhere, and that is not only the ground but the measure of the maximum recovery. Slater v. Mexican Nat. R. Co. 194 U. S. 120, 126, 8 L. ed. 900, 902, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Cuba R. Co. v. Crosby, 222 U. S. 473, 478, 480, 56 L. ed. 274-276, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 40, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132. (A limitation of liability may stand on different grounds. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Mellor, May 25, 1914 [233 U. S. 718, ante, 1171, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754]). The injustice of imposing a greater liability than that created by the law governing the conduct of the parties at the time of the act or omission complained of is obvious; and when a state attempts in this manner to affect conduct outside its jurisdiction, or the consequences of such conduct, and to infringe upon the power of the United States, it must fail. The principle would be illustrated by supposing a direct clash between the state and Federal statutes; but it is the same whenever the state undertakes to go beyond its jurisdiction into territory where the United States has exclusive control. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Chiles, 214 U. S. 274, 53 L. ed. 994, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; see also Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Commercial Mill. Co. 218 U. S. 406, 416, 54 L. ed. 1088, 1091, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 220, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59, 21 Ann. Cas. 815.

What we have said is enough to dispose of the case. But the act also is objectionable in its aspect of an attempt to regulate commerce among the states. That is, as construed, it attempts to determine the conduct required of the telegraph company in transmitting a message from one state to another or to this District by determining the consequences of not pursuing such conduct, and in that way encounters Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126, a decision in no way qualified by Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Commercial Mill. Co. 218 U. S. 406, 54 L. ed. 1088, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 220, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59, 21 Ann. Cas. 815.

Judgment reversed.

[548] UNITED STATES et al., Appts.,
v.
OHIO OIL COMPANY. (No. 481.)

UNITED STATES et al., Appts.,
v.
STANDARD OIL COMPANY. (No. 482.)

UNITED STATES et al., Appts.,
v.
STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF LOUISIANA. (No. 483.)

UNITED STATES et al., Appts.,
v.
PRAIRIE OIL & GAS COMPANY. (No. 506.)

UNITED STATES et al., Appts.,
v.
UNCLE SAM OIL COMPANY. (No. 507.)

UNITED STATES et al., Appts.,
v.
ROBERT D. BENSON et al., Doing Business under the Partnership Name of the Tide Water Pipe Company, Limited. (No. 508.) [1]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 548-575.)

Carriers — who are — pipe lines — government control.

1. Oil companies controlling interstate pipe lines in which is carried all oil offered between the oil fields east of California and the Atlantic seaboard upon condition that the offerer shall first sell the oil to them on practically their own terms are embraced by the provision of the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288), extending the operation of the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), to persons or corporations engaged in the transportation of oil by means of pipe lines, "who shall be considered and held to be common carriers within the meaning and purpose of this act."

[For other cases, see Carriers, I.; III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[1] Reported by the Official Reporter under the title of "The Pipe Line Cases."

NOTE.—On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

Digitized by Google

Commerce — what is — transportation of oil in pipe lines.

2. The transportation of oil in pipe lines between points in different states is interstate commerce, although all the oil transported may belong to the owners of the pipe lines.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — congressional control — pipe lines — due process of law.

3. Construing the provisions of the act of June 29, 1906, extending the operation of the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887, to persons or corporations engaged in the transportation of oil by pipe lines, as embracing existing pipe lines controlled by oil companies in which is carried all oil offered between the oil fields east of California and the Atlantic seaboard upon condition that the offerer shall first sell them the oil on practically their own terms, does not render the statute invalid under U. S. Const., 5th Amend., but it is a valid exercise by Congress of its control over interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. a; III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — who are — pipe lines — government control.

4. An oil company using a pipe line solely for the purpose of conducting its own oil from its own wells in one state to its own refinery in another state is not comprehended by the provisions of the act of June 29, 1906, extending the operation of the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887, to persons or corporations engaged in the transportation of oil by means of pipe lines, "who shall be considered and held to be common carriers within the meaning and purpose of this act."

[For other cases, see Carriers, I.; III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 481, 482, 483, 506, 507, 508.]

Argued and submitted October 15 and 16, 1913. Decided June 22, 1914.

SIX APPEALS from the United States Commerce Court to review decrees enjoining the enforcement of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission requiring parties in control of oil pipe lines to file with the Commission schedules of rates and charges for transportation. Decree in No. 507 affirmed; other decrees reversed.

See same case below, 204 Fed. 798.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Davis argued the cause and filed a brief for the United States:

To ascertain the evils at which an act is aimed, its legislative history, etc., the debates in Congress attending its enactment may be consulted.

American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468, 473, 35 L. ed. 821, 823, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Binns v. United States, 194 U. S. 486, 495, 496, 48 L. ed. 1067, 1090, 1091, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816; Blake v. National City Bank, 23 Wall. 307, 319, 23 L. ed. 119, 120; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 465, 36 L. ed. 227, 230, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Jennison v. Kirk, 98 U. S. 453, 459, 25 L. ed. 240, 243, 4 Mor. Min. Rep. 504.

The rule of construction followed in United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. ed. 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527, is not applicable here.

The object of the pipe line amendment, namely, to regulate interstate commerce in oil by protecting well owners and independent refiners from duress by pipe-line owners, rendering possible real competition, and preventing monopoly of interstate commerce in oil, is one for which the authority of Congress may properly be exercised.

Central Lumber Co. v. South Dakota, 226 U. S. 157, 57 L. ed. 164, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 53 L. ed. 417, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220.

Every possible presumption is in favor of the validity of a statute.

Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 348, 45 L. ed. 224, 228, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11–31, 49 L. ed. 643–651, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 Ann. Cas. 765; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 423, 4 L. ed. 579, 605; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678–685, 32 L. ed. 253–256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 25 L. ed. 496.

The private operation of pipe lines carrying oil in interstate commerce tends to monopoly.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 210, 40 L. ed. 940, 944, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 49 L. ed. 518, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276.

The operation of pipe lines as common carriers is beyond question commercially practicable, and has been universally recognized.

Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; West Virginia Transp. Co. v. Volcanic Oil & Coal Co. 5 W. Va. 382, 5 Mor. Min. Rep. 389; West Virginia Transp. Co. v. Ohio River Pipe Line Co. 22 W. Va. 600, 46 Am. Rep. 527; Charlestown Natural Gas Co. v. Lowe, 52 W. Va. 664, 44 S. E. 410; Griffin

Digitized by Google

v. South West Pennsylvania Pipe Lines, 172 Pa. 580, 33 Atl. 578; Columbia Conduit Co. v. Com. 90 Pa. 307, 14 Mor. Min. Rep. 197; National Transit Co. v. Weston, 121 Pa. 494, 15 Atl. 569, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 143; Boyle v. Smithman, 146 Pa. 255, 23 Atl. 397; 18 Enc. Britannica, 9th ed. p. 718; 13 New International Enc. 1020; Wyman, Pub. Service Corp. § 416.

The pipe line amendment is not in violation of the due process clause.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 592, 50 L. ed. 596, 609, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Hoke v. United States, 227 U. S. 308, 57 L. ed. 523, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 906, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 905; Lottery Case, 188 U. S. 358, 47 L. ed. 502, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561; Noble State Bank v. Haskell, 219 U. S. 104, 55 L. ed. 112, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1062, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 186, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 487; Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 53 L. ed. 417, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220.

In many instances regulations of interstate commerce have been upheld which take the form of prohibition except upon such terms as would protect the public welfare.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A. (N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. ed. 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Dixie Tobacco Co. 228 U. S. 593, 57 L. ed. 980, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Southern R. Co. v. Reid, 222 U. S. 424, 438, 56 L. ed. 257, 260, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

That the condition is not expressed, but implied, is immaterial.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A. (N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Noble State Bank v. Haskell, 219 U. S. 104, 55 L. ed. 112, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1062, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 186, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 487.

Nor is this sort of regulation confined to industries "affected with a public interest" in the technical sense.

Engel v. O'Malley, 219 U. S. 128, 55 L. ed. 128, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 55 L. ed. 369, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 160; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 669, 31 L. ed. 205, 213, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Noble State Bank v. Haskell, 219 U. S. 104, 55 L. ed. 112, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1062, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 186, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 487; Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana, 177 U. S. 190, 202, 210, 44 L. ed. 729, 736, 739, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 466.

Nor is the law violative of the due process clause in that, being general in its terms, it might cover any pipe lines which are not public markets for oil.

Purity Extract & Tonic Co. v. Lynch, 226 U. S. 192, 201, 57 L. ed. 184, 187, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 46 L. ed. 623, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Com. v. Gilbert, 160 Mass. 157, 22 L.R.A. 439, 35 N. E. 454; Knoxville Iron Co. v. Harbison, 183 U. S. 13, 46 L. ed. 55, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Lemieux v. Young, 211 U. S. 489, 53 L. ed. 295, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 685, 32 L. ed. 253, 256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394.

As to the prohibition of private operation, there is not a taking.

United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. ed. 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 669, 31 L. ed. 205, 213, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Noble State Bank v. Haskell, 219 U. S. 104, 110, 55 L. ed. 112, 116, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1062, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 186, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 487; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. ed. 297, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

It may be said that, in so far as the owners elect to operate the lines under the condition, there is a "taking" in the subjection to the quasi public use as common carrier. The thing so taken is, however, only the compensated, occasional use of the pipe line.

Clark v. Nash, 198 U. S. 361, 49 L. ed. 1085, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676, 4 Ann. Cas. 1171; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 53 L. ed. 441, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Otis Co. v. Ludlow Mfg. Co. 201 U. S. 140, 50 L. ed. 696, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353.

Mr. Charles W. Needham argued the cause and filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission:

Congress had the power to declare that thereafter all persons or corporations engaged in the transportation of oil by pipe lines should be common carriers, for the purpose of protecting the interest of the public in a business affected with a public interest.

Allnutt v. Inglis, 12 East, 539, 11 Revised Rep. 482; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 154, 24 L. ed. 77, 94; Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 517, 522, 36 L. ed. 247, 250, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700,

Digitized by Google

747, 25 L. ed. 496, 511; Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 354, 28 L. ed. 173, 176, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 686, 31 L. ed. 841, 842, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Columbus Gaslight & Coke Co. 34 Ohio St. 582, 32 Am. Rep. 390; Ruggles v. People, 91 Ill. 262; Davis v. State, 68 Ala. 58, 44 Am. Rep. 128; Sawyer v. Davis, 136 Mass. 239, 49 Am. Rep. 27; State ex rel. Webster v. Nebraska Teleph. Co. 17 Neb. 126, 52 Am. Rep. 404, 22 N. W. 237; Hockett v. State, 105 Ind. 258, 55 Am. Rep. 201, 5 N. E. 178; Chesapeake & P. Teleph. Co. v. Baltimore & O. Teleg. Co. 66 Md. 414, 59 Am. Rep. 167, 7 Atl. 809; State ex rel. Webster v. Nebraska Teleph. Co. 17 Neb. 126, 52 Am. Rep. 404, 22 N. W. 237; Nash v. Page, 80 Ky. 539, 44 Am. Rep. 490; Inter-Ocean Pub. Co. v. Associated Press, 184 Ill. 438, 48 L.R.A. 568, 75 Am. St. Rep. 184, 56 N. E. 822; New York & C. Grain & Stock Exch. v. Board of Trade, 127 Ill. 163, 2 L.R.A. 411, 19 N. E. 855; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 467, 468, 45 L. ed. 619, 626, 627, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 177, 52 L. ed. 436, 443, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 410, 411, 53 L. ed. 849, 850, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

The general purpose and aim in construing a statute is to ascertain its true meaning and its true application to concrete cases. For this purpose resort may be had—

1. To the language and arrangement of the statute.

2. The intention and object to be secured by the legislation.

3. Matters and circumstances attending its passage.

4. Sense in which it was understood by the legislators and contemporaries.

5. Its relation to the law into which it is incorporated as an amendment.

6. As amended, the statute must be considered as a whole.

36 Cyc. pp. 1102, 1136, 1138.

If, after considering the language of the entire statute, there remains a doubt as to its meaning, the court may consider extrinsic matters, such as the circumstances existing at the time of its enactment.

Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 50, 55 L. ed. 619, 641, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734.

Courts, in construing a statute, may with propriety recur to the history of the times when it was passed, and this is frequently necessary in order to ascertain the reason, as well as the meaning, of particular provisions in it.

United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 79, 23 L. ed. 228.

To destroy a monopoly created by transportation methods is a proper object of legislation under the commerce clause.

Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 646, 676, 40 L. ed. 838, 848, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249.

Congress has power to "regulate" interstate and foreign commerce, and make all laws necessary and proper to carry into effect the power to regulate.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 196, 6 L. ed. 23, 70; Hoke v. United States, 227 U. S. 308, 57 L. ed. 523, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 906, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 905.

The power to regulate includes the power to prohibit particular interstate and foreign commerce.

United States ex rel. Wilson v. The William, 2 Am. L. J. 255, Fed. Cas. No. 16,700; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 392, 50 L. ed. 515, 521, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

If the Lodge amendment had for its purpose the destruction of a monopoly created by the transportation of oil by means of pipe lines by private persons or corporations, and it has that effect only, the destruction of the monopoly is not a taking of property prohibited by the 5th Amendment. It is an exercise of what is commonly denominated the police power, and any loss must fall upon the owner.

Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635, 25 L. ed. 336; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 47 L. ed. 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 392, 50 L. ed. 515, 521, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 26, 56 L. ed. 74, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, 3 N. C. C. A. 822; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 415, 416, 53 L. ed. 836, 851, 852, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

Mr. John G. Milburn argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Frank L. Crawford and Walter F. Taylor, filed a brief for appellee in No. 481:

The interstate commerce act provided a code of rules for the regulation of common-carrier transportation in the interest of shippers and of the public.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 276, 36

Digitized by Google

L. ed. 699, 703, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Harriman, 211 U. S. 407, 418, 53 L. ed. 253, 262, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

That is very different from the compulsory conversion into common carriers of persons and corporations who are not common carriers in any sense, in order to bring them within the operation of the act, thereby forcing them into a business in which they had never been engaged, and depriving them of the exclusive beneficial use of their property. Only language susceptible of no other construction can be sufficient to give the act such an abnormal and unprecedented operation, even if it could be legally done.

Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 230 U. S. 324, 335, 57 L. ed. 1501, 1505, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 385, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890.

Effect must be given to the intention of the legislature as manifested by the words of the statute, interpreted according to their natural signification (McBroom v. Scottish Mortg. & Land Invest. Co. 153 U. S. 318, 323, 38 L. ed. 729, 731, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 852), and the subject-matter to which the statute relates (Washington Market Co. v. Hoffman, 101 U. S. 112, 116, 25 L. ed. 782, 783). All general terms in statutes should be limited in their application so as not to lead to injustice, oppression, or any unconstitutional operation, if that be possible (Carlisle v. United States, 16 Wall. 153, 21 L. ed. 429), and so even to avoid grave constitutional doubts or objections (Harriman v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 211 U. S. 407, 422, 53 L. ed. 253, 264, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 408, 53 L. ed. 836, 849, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527).

Debates in Congress are not appropriate sources of information from which to discover the meaning of the language of a statute passed by that body.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 318, 41 L. ed. 1007, 1019, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 230 U. S. 324, 333, 57 L. ed. 1501, 1505, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 385, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890.

The decision of this court in the very recent case of Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 230 U. S. 324, 57 L. ed. 1501, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 385, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890, seems to be a direct authority for the appellee.

To make the owners of private pipe lines common carriers as to those lines is to subject private property to a public use, and is a "taking" of property within the meaning of the 5th Amendment.

Forster v. Scott, 136 N. Y. 577, 18 L.R.A. 543, 32 N. E. 976; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 53 L. ed. 441, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Washington ex rel. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Fairchild, 224 U. S. 510, 523, 56 L. ed. 863, 868, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 217 U. S. 196, 205, 54 L. ed. 727, 730, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461, 18 Ann. Cas. 989; Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 180, 20 L. ed. 557, 561; United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 47 L. ed. 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349.

Since the act, as thus construed, takes private property without providing for due compensation, it violates the 5th Amendment.

Weems S. B. Co. v. People's S. B. Co. 214 U. S. 345, 355, 53 L. ed. 1024, 1028, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 661, 16 Ann. Cas. 1222; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. West Coast Naval Stores Co. 198 U. S. 483, 49 L. ed. 1135, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745.

The power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce, like all other powers delegated to that body, is subject to the limitation imposed by the 5th Amendment of the Constitution.

Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 52 L. ed. 436, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764.

The contention of the United States that just compensation is provided is untenable. The rates to be paid for transportation are not the compensation intended by the 5th Amendment.

Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 336, 37 L. ed. 463, 471, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Lewis, Em. Dom. 3d ed. § 684.

There is nothing inherent in the nature or operation of private pipe lines which causes a tendency to monopoly.

Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 51, 61, 76, 55 L. ed. 641, 645, 651, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734, 173 Fed. 177; United States v. Reading Co. 183 Fed. 427.

It follows, therefore, that the act, even regarded as an act prohibiting the operation of pipe lines, save as common carrier, cannot be sustained as an appropriate means to prevent monopoly, because there is no real and substantial relation between what the act ordains and monopoly.

Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 320, 34 L. ed. 458, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 593, 50 L. ed. 596,

Digitized by Google

609, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 179, 180, 52 L. ed. 436, 444, 445, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 137, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 57, 49 L. ed. 937, 941, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133.

The right to carry goods from one state to another is not a franchise to be granted or withheld by Congress at its pleasure. It is an inherent right of the citizen that springs from the nature and necessities of social order.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 211, 6 L. ed. 23, 73; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

The act cannot be sustained as contended on behalf of the Interstate Commerce Commission, by resorting to the doctrine of the elevator and stockyard cases, because, as applied to private pipe lines, the act does not regulate a business affected with a public interest in the sense of those cases.

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 126, 24 L. ed. 77, 84; People v. Budd, 117 N. Y. 1, 5 L.R.A. 559, 15 Am. St. Rep. 460, 22 N. E. 670, 143 U. S. 517, 36 L. ed. 247, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Brass v. North Dakota, 153 U. S. 391, 38 L. ed. 757, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 670, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Ratcliff v. Wichita Union Stock-Yards Co. 74 Kan. 1, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 118 Am. St. Rep. 298, 86 Pac. 150, 10 Ann. Cas. 1016; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 45 L. ed. 619, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

Neither the utilization by a pipe line company of the right of way of a common-carrier railroad for the laying of a pipe line, nor the crossing under a public highway by such pipe line, impresses upon the pipe line or its owner the nature or the obligation of a common carrier.

Barclay v. Howell, 6 Pet. 498, 513, 8 L. ed. 477, 483; Callen v. Columbus Electric Light Co. 66 Ohio St. 166, 58 L.R.A. 782, 64 N. E. 141; Daily v. State, 51 Ohio St. 348, 24 L.R.A. 724, 46 Am. St. Rep. 578, 37 N. E. 710; Huffman v. State, 21 Ind. App. 449, 69 Am. St. Rep. 368, 52 N. E. 713; Old Town v. Dooley, 81 Ill. 257; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Eaton, 170 Ill. 513, 39 L.R.A. 722, 62 Am. St. Rep. 390, 49 N. E. 365; Winter v. Peterson, 24 N. J. L. 524, 61 Am. Dec. 678; Pemberton v. Dooley, 43 Mo. App. 178; Paul v. Carver, 24 Pa. 210, 64 Am. Dec. 649; Angell, Highways, 2d ed. p. 366.

The law of common carriers has always assumed, as a necessary element, that the carrier voluntarily undertakes, and holds himself out, to carry for others.

United States Exp. Co. v. Backman, 28 Ohio St. 150; Samms v. Stewart, 20 Ohio, 70, 55 Am. Dec. 445; Moore, Carr. p. 20; United States v. Sioux City Stock Yards Co. 162 Fed. 556.

Mr. John G. Milburn also argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Chester O. Swain and M. F. Elliott, filed a brief for appellee in No. 482:

Prior to the transfer to the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey of the pipe lines now owned by it, their use by the National Transit Company and New York Transit Company did not constitute them common-carrier lines. But, even had they been common-carrier lines, they would have been released from the obligations of common carriers upon their transfer to appellee in 1906.

Oman v. Bedford-Bowling Green Stone Co. 67 C. C. A. 190, 134 Fed. 64.

Even where a fee simple in land is taken by condemnation, there is no reversion to the former owners when the particular use for which the land was taken ceases, and the property may be disposed of for private purposes.

Rexford v. Knight, 11 N. Y. 314; Wyoming Coal & Transp. Co. v. Price, 81 Pa. 175; Currie v. New York Transit Co. 66 N. J. Eq. 313, 105 Am. St. Rep. 647, 58 Atl. 308.

Neither the utilization by a pipe line company of the right of way of a common-carrier railroad for the laying of a pipe line, nor the crossing under a public highway by such pipe line, impresses upon the pipe line or its owner the nature or the obligations of a common carrier.

Currie v. New York Transit Co. supra; Barclay v. Howell, 6 Pet. 498, 513, 8 L. ed. 477, 483; Starr v. Camden & A. R. Co. 24 N. J. L. 592; Winter v. Peterson, 24 N. J. L. 524, 61 Am. Dec. 678; Wright v. Carter, 27 N. J. L. 76; Huffman v. State, 21 Ind. App. 449, 69 Am. St. Rep. 368, 52 N. E. 713; Pemberton v. Dooley, 43 Mo. App. 178, Angell, Highways, 2d ed. p. 366; State v. Laverack, 34 N. J. L. 203; Weller v. McCormick, 52 N. J. L. 472, 8 L.R.A. 798, 19 Atl. 1101; State, Roebling, Prosecutrix, v. Trenton Pass. R. Co. 58 N. J. L. 670, 33 L.R.A. 129, 34 Atl. 1090; Bloomfield & R. Natural Gaslight Co. v. Calkins, 62 N. Y. 386; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 159; Thomas v. Ford, 63 Md. 346, 52 Am. Rep. 513; Chesapeake & P. Teleph. Co. v. Mackenzie, 74 Md. 36, 28 Am. St. Rep. 219, 21 Atl. 690.

Railroad companies are companies organized for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating railroads. They are given certain franchises and privileges for public purposes, in return for which the state retains a right of supervision and control in excess of that exercised over purely private corporations. In the very grant of the franchise there is, in effect, an implied condition that it shall be held as a public or quasi trust (1 Elliott, Railroads, § 1). Franchises of a railroad corporation are rights or privileges which are essential to the operations of the corporation, and without which its roads and works would be of little value, such as the franchise to run cars, to take tolls, to appropriate earth and gravel for the bed of its road, or water for its engines, and the like (Morgan v. Louisiana, 93 U. S. 217, 223, 23 L. ed. 860, 861; 1 Elliott, Railroads, § 63). The consideration for a franchise is "the implied undertaking to perform corporate duties beneficial to the public, or it may be an express agreement to do or not to do a designated act (1 Elliott, Railroads, § 66). Therefore, a railroad corporation may not, without statutory authority, transfer any of its property or privileges which are essential to a fulfilment of the purposes for which it was chartered (1 Elliott, Railroads, § 70). In accepting the grant of rights and franchises from the state, a railroad corporation impliedly assumed the duty of a common carrier. From the fact that the company is authorized to build, maintain, and operate a commercial railroad may be inferred its duties, rights, and obligations as a common carrier of goods and passengers (4 Elliott, Railroads, § 1392), or they may be expressly imposed.

Digitized by Google

None of these propositions applies to a refining company which, as an incident to its refining business, transports its own oil through its own pipes. No franchise is conferred upon it to locate its line in invitum; to appropriate land for it; or to take tolls. The duties, rights, and obligations of a common carrier are not imposed upon it, and there is no acceptance of a franchise from which they may be inferred. It is not arguable that such consequences flow from the grant of an easement to maintain its pipe under the surface of the lands of a railroad company which in no way interferes with their use for the purposes or franchises of the railroad company. There is no logical connection between such an easement and the rights, duties, and obligations of a common carrier as there is between such rights, duties, and obligations, and the acceptance of a franchise to build, maintain, and operate a railroad. In the one case, there is an acceptance of a privilege conferred by the state which necessarily involves a reciprocal obligation. In the other, there is a mere grant of a property right inter partes which involves no obligation other than the actual consideration for the grant. To construct out of such a grant an obligation to the public such as flows from the acceptance of a franchise to build, maintain, and operate a railroad is without any warrant in reason or principle.

Mr. John G. Milburn also argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Chester O. Swain and M. F. Elliott, filed a brief for appellee in No. 483:

The appellee is not, in respect of the transportation of oil through its pipe lines, engaged in interstate commerce, and is therefore not subject to the interstate commerce act, whatever may be the determination of the court as to the construction or constitutionality of that act as applied to corporations whose pipe lines transport oil between states.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403, 51 L. ed. 540, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360; Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Sabin Tram Co. 227 U. S. 111, 127–130, 57 L. ed. 442, 448–450, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

The crossing under a highway by a pipe line does not impress upon that pipe line the nature or obligations of a common carrier.

Hatch v. Arnault, 3 La. Ann. 486; Mendez v. Dugart, 17 La. Ann. 173; Bradley v. Pharr, 45 La. Ann. 432, 19 L.R.A. 647, 12 So. 618.

Mr. W. S. Fitzpatrick argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. B. F. Cates, L. W. Keplinger, and C. W. Trickett, filed a brief for appellee in No. 506:

So radical an innovation upon the common law, and so grave an interference with the natural rights of man to refuse to go into a business against his will, as is contended for by the government, ought not to depend upon the presence or absence of a comma.

Re Irwine, 1 Clark (Pa.) 82, Fed. Cas. No. 7,086; Ewing v. Burnet, 11 Pet. 54, 9 L. ed. 630; United States v. Voorhees, 9 Fed. 143; Cushing v. Worrick, 9 Gray, 382.

That "it would have been easy to say so" is a principle that has often been applied against a construction not directly and positively expressed.

Tillson v. United States, 100 U. S. 46, 25 L. ed. 543; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Grant, 98 U. S. 403, 25 L. ed. 233; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 627, 25 L. ed. 189; Harrington v. Herrick, 12 C. C. A. 231, 29 U. S. App. 103, 64 Fed. 471; Austin v. United States, 155 U. S. 417, 39 L. ed. 206, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 167; Ryan v. Carter, 93 U. S. 83, 23 L. ed. 809; Tompkins v. Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. 125 U. S. 127,

Digitized by Google

31 L. ed. 624, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762; United States v. Ryder, 110 U. S. 739, 28 L. ed. 311, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196; The Cherokee Tobacco Co. (Boudinot v. United States) 11 Wall. 620, 20 L. ed. 229; Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 744, 23 L. ed. 638; James v. Milwaukee, 16 Wall. 161, 21 L. ed. 267; United States v. Anderson, 9 Wall. 66, 19 L. ed. 617; Lawrence v. Allen, 7 How. 796, 12 L. ed. 918; United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 358, 2 L. ed. 304; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 8 L. ed. 547; Brown v. Barry, 3 Dall. 365, 1 L. ed. 638; Northern P. R. Co. v. Whalen, 149 U. S. 157, 37 L. ed. 686, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Van Horne v. Dorrance, 2 Dall. 304, 1 L. ed. 391, Fed. Cas. No. 16,857; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. ed. 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

The judgment of the court cannot in any degree be influenced by the construction placed upon it by individual members of Congress in the debate which took place on its passage, nor by the motive or reasons assigned by them for supporting or opposing amendments that were offered. The law as it passed is the will of a majority of both houses, and the only mode in which that will is spoken is in the act itself.

Aldridge v. Williams, 3 How. 23, 11 L. ed. 475; Mitchell v. Great Works Mill. & Mfg. Co. 2 Story, 648, Fed. Cas. No. 9,662; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 710, 28 L. ed. 1147, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730.

The oil, the monopoly of which it claimed the act was intended to prevent, certainly does not commence its final movement for transportation until after it becomes the property of the only person who can determine whether it shall be transported or not.

Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 524, 29 L. ed. 717, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475.

Congress is not the exclusive judge as to the means for the prevention of monopoly.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 217 U. S. 196, 54 L. ed. 727, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461, 18 Ann. Cas. 989; State v. Haun, 61 Kan. 154, 47 L.R.A. 369, 59 Pac. 340; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 236, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Bradshaw v. Rodgers, 20 Johns. 105; Harness v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. 1 Md. Ch. 248; Cairo & F. R. Co. v. Turner, 31 Ark. 494, 25 Am. Rep. 564; Doe ex dem. Carr v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. 1 Ga. 524; Loughbridge v. Harris, 42 Ga. 501; Sinnickson v. Johnson, 17 N. J. L. 129, 34 Am. Dec. 184.

The compulsory expenditure of the capital which is required in its own business in order to enable it to engage in the service of the general public would be a taking of property within the meaning of the 5th Amendment.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 217 U. S. 196, 54 L. ed. 727, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461, 18 Ann. Cas. 989.

That the act as construed would be invalid because of its failure to make the obligation of the pipe line owner to transport oil for the public dependent upon the necessities of the pipe line owner as to the transportation of its own oil, and the inability of the Commission to supply such omissions in the act, is clearly shown by the decision in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 53 L. ed. 441, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246.

Any actual and material interference with private property rights is a "taking" of property within the meaning of the provision in the Constitution referring to the taking of private property for public purposes without just compensation.

Portage County v. Gates, 83 Ohio St. 19, 93 N. E. 256.

The contention that the temporary deprivation of the use of the pipe lines by the pipe line owner during the time his lines are being used for the transportation of the oil of the public is not a taking of property is based upon a radical misconception of the meaning of the word "property." The right to use property is property.

Lewis, Em. Dom. § 52; Chicago & W. I. R. Co. v. Englewood Connecting R. Co. 115 Ill. 375, 56 Am. Rep. 173, 4 N. E. 246.

There will be here something more than an interference with the use of the property by the pipe line owner. During the time the line is being used by the public, there would be an actual physical dispossession of the owner, and an absolute deprivation of his exclusive use.

Old Colony & F. R. Co. v. Plymouth County, 14 Gray, 161; Lewis, Em. Dom. §§ 56, 57, 60, 61.

To the precise extent that the appellee's property is appropriated to the use of others against its will, there would be a taking within the meaning of the 5th Amendment.

Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 20 L. ed. 557; United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 47 L. ed. 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349.

Even if the petitioner had been engaged in transporting for the public at the time of the making of the amendment, it could have withdrawn itself from the operation of the act by using its lines exclusively for the transportation of its own oil.

Digitized by Google

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 85, 46 L. ed. 99, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Weems S. B. Co. v. People's S. B. Co. 214 U. S. 345, 53 L. ed. 1024, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 661, 16 Ann. Cas. 1222.

The right of private contract is property which cannot be taken without compensation.

Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; Mathews v. People, 202 Ill. 389, 63 L.R.A. 73, 95 Am. St. Rep. 241, 67 N. E. 28; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L.R.A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 781; Harbison v. Knoxville Iron Co. 103 Tenn. 421, 56 L.R.A. 316, 76 Am. St. Rep. 682, 53 S. W. 955.

Property cannot be taken under the police power without compensation.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 217 U. S. 196, 54 L. ed. 727, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461, 18 Ann. Cas. 989.

Mr. Albert L. Wilson argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee in No. 507:

Of two constructions equally warranted by the language of an amendment, that is to be preferred which best harmonizes with the general tenor and spirit of the act amended.

Griffin's Case, Chase, Dec. 364, Fed. Cas. No. 5,815; Van Riper v. Essex Public Road Board, 38 N. J. L. 23.

The principal objects of the interstate commerce act were to secure just and reasonable charges for transportation; to prohibit unjust discriminations in the rendition of like services under similar circumstances and conditions; to prevent undue or reasonable preferences to persons, corporations, or localities; to inhibit greater compensation for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line; and to abolish combinations for the pooling of freight.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 276, 36 L. ed. 699, 703, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Harriman, 211 U. S. 407, 418, 53 L. ed. 253, 262, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

These objects have no application or pertinency to a private railroad or pipe line; and the fact that they have not furnishes a convincing reason against a construction of the act which would bring such railroads or pipe lines within its terms or operation. To apply the act to a new subject presupposes an existing public use in connection with it in need of the regulation which the act provides.

The court, to preserve the act, will adopt that construction which is consistent with the Constitution, or which avoids grave constitutional objections.

United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 407, 408, 53 L. ed. 836, 848, 849, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Harriman, 211 U. S. 407, 422, 53 L. ed. 253, 264, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

If § 7 of the act is to be construed to apply to every corporation which transports its own oil by private pipe line for the purposes of its own business, the provisions relating to pipe lines clearly violate the 5th Amendment of the United States Constitution, in that they deprive the owners of private pipe lines of property without due process of law, and take private property for public use without compensation.

Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 324, 37 L. ed. 463, 467, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 47 L. ed. 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; United States v. Welch, 217 U. S. 333, 339, 54 L. ed. 787, 790, 28 L.R.A. (N.S.) 385, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527, 19 Ann. Cas. 680; Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 179, 20 L. ed. 557, 560.

Private wharves on navigable streams cannot be taken without compensation, and to compel the owners thereof to allow the wharves to be used by others would be to take property without due process of law.

Weems S. B. Co. v. People's S. B. Co. 214 U. S. 345, 53 L. ed. 1024, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 661, 16 Ann. Cas. 1222.

The act contains no definition of the words "common carriers," except that they shall include express companies and sleeping-car companies. Whether a pipe line company in 1910 was in fact a common carrier or not must, therefore, be determined by the common-law definition of those words.

Judson, Interstate Commerce, 2d ed. p. 220; Manufacturers' R. Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 21 Inters. Com. Rep. 304.

At common law, the words "common carrier" were limited to one who undertook or held himself out to carry for all persons who wished to engage him.

Ingate v. Christie, 3 Car. & K. 61; Gisbourn v. Hurst, 1 Salk. 249; Nugent v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. P. Div. 19; Jackson Architectural Iron Works v. Hurlbut, 158 N. Y. 34, 70 Am. St. Rep. 432, 52 N. E. 665; Allen v. Sackrider, 37 N. Y. 341; Moore, Carr. p. 20: The Wildenfels, 89 C. C. A. 58, 161 Fed. 864; United States v. Sioux City

Digitized by Google

Stock Yards Co. 162 Fed. 556; 6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 237, 245.

Industrial railroads, built for the transaction of private business, are not subject to liability as common carriers.

Wade v. Lutcher & M. Cypress Lumber Co. 33 L.R.A. 255, 20 C. C. A. 515, 41 U. S. App. 45, 74 Fed. 517; E. E. Taenzer & Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 95 C. C. A. 436, 170 Fed. 240; Weidenfeld v. Sugar Run R. Co. 48 Fed. 615; McKivergan v. Alexander & E. Lumber Co. 124 Wis. 60, 102 N. W. 332, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 751.

From the point of view of the state granting a charter which confers the right of eminent domain and common-carrier franchises, or otherwise specifically provides for public service to be rendered under it, the acceptance by such corporation of such charter undoubtedly amounts to an undertaking by such corporation to serve all, and subjects the corporation to the duties of a common carrier.

Griffin v. South West Pennsylvania Pipe Lines, 172 Pa. 580, 33 Atl. 578; People ex rel. Van Dyke v. Colorado C. R. Co. 42 Fed. 638; Cincinnati, I. & W. R. Co. v. Connorsville, 170 Ind. 316, 83 N. E. 503.

But it by no means follows that such companies are within the provisions of the interstate commerce act.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 699, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Star Grain & Lumber Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 17 Inters. Com. Rep. 338; Weidenfeld v. Sugar Run R. Co. 48 Fed. 615.

The transactions of appellee are interstate transactions, but are not interstate commerce, as they do not constitute or involve any dealings between appellee and another. The Constitution does not give the Congress authority to regulate interstate transactions which do not amount to commerce, and if the act should be construed to apply to the transactions of appellee, it would be unconstitutional.

Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 203, 29 L. ed. 161, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 241, 44 L. ed. 147, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; United States v. Germaine, 99 U. S. 510, 25 L. ed. 483; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. ed. 629; 10 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 293; Bank of Columbia v. Okely, 4 Wheat. 235, 4 L. ed. 559; Hoover v. McChesney, 81 Fed. 472; Meyers v. Shields, 61 Fed. 718.

How is it possible for any law-abiding citizen to contend that the Uncle Sam Oil Company shall be compelled to receive and transport through its 3-inch pipe line all the oils which others may offer, and that it shall be compelled to take such oil and assume the absolute liability of delivering it to the consignee or owner, notwithstanding the transportation of this oil for others would suspend the operation of its refinery for lack of ability to transport its own oil to its refinery? How can it be claimed that this liability and injury could be forced upon the Uncle Sam Oil Company when it has never offered to transport any oil for any person, and has never transported oil for any person? If the duties and obligations of a common carrier can be imposed upon the Uncle Sam Oil Company under these conditions, then they can be imposed upon every farmer in the United States who hauls his grain and products from his farm to market. The public highways are for the use of the public. The Uncle Sam Oil Company is a part of the public, and it has as much right to use the public highway to transport its oil in a pipe line as it would have to transport its oil in a wagon drawn by oxen.

State ex rel. Coleman v. Kansas Natural-Gas, Oil, Pipe-Line & Improv. Co. 71 Kan. 508, 114 Am. St. Rep. 507, 80 Pac. 962; La Harpe v. Elm Twp. Gaslight, Fuel & P. Co. 69 Kan. 97, 76 Pac. 448; McCann v. Johnson County Teleph. Co. 69 Kan. 210, 66 L.R.A. 171, 76 Pac. 870, 2 Ann. Cas. 156.

The acceptance of a right of way from the Interior Department does not make the appellee a common carrier.

United States use of Choctaw & C. Nations v. McMurray, 181 Fed. 723; Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62, affirming 30 App. D. C. 177; Midland Oil Co. v. Turner, 102 C. C. A. 368, 179 Fed. 74; Morrill v. Jones, 106 U. S. 466, 27 L. ed. 267, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

Mr. W. I. Lewis and Archibald F. Jones submitted the cause for appellees in No. 508. Mr. R. R. Lewis was on the brief:

The power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce must be exercised subject to the limitations imposed by the Constitution.

Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 180, 52 L. ed. 436, 445, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 331, 336, 37 L. ed. 469, 471, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Richmond, 86 U. S. 584, 22 L. ed. 173; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851.

When one dedicates his property to public use, that use is subject to public regulation.

Digitized by Google

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 517, 36 L. ed. 247, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Brass v. North Dakota, 153 U. S. 391, 38 L. ed. 757, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 670, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 31 L. ed. 841, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; Weems S. B. Co. v. People's S. B. Co. 214 U. S. 345, 53 L. ed. 1024, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 661, 16 Ann. Cas. 1222; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 45 L. ed. 619, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

Interstate pipe lines are not monopolies.

United States v. Standard Oil Co. 173 Fed. 177.

Can Congress, under the commerce clause, prohibit interstate commerce?

Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 500, 52 L. ed. 297, 309, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

Conceding, for the purpose of argument, what we do not admit as a fact, that privately owned pipe lines may become the instruments of monopoly, the conclusion does not necessarily follow that they may be taken for public use without just compensation.

Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 80 U. S. 166, 20 L. ed. 557; Weems S. B. Co. v. People's S. B. Co. 214 U. S. 345, 53 L. ed. 1024, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 661, 16 Ann. Cas. 1222.

There is no method of compensation, nor provision for compensation, in the act. Such omission renders the legislation unconstitutional.

United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 47 L. ed. 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Gibson v. United States, 166 U. S. 269, 41 L. ed. 996, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, 45 L. ed. 126, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 43 L. ed. 364, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97.

Congress cannot prohibit the transportation of petroleum for any lawful purpose.

West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 221 U. S. 229, 55 L. ed. 716, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1193, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Haskell v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 224 U. S. 217, 56 L. ed. 738, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442.

The use of public highways by the pipe lines does not impress a public use upon them.

In the states through which our pipe line passes, the highways are public easements, and the public right is confined to the surface, the fee of the land remaining in the owner.

Barclay v. Howell, 6 Pet. 498, 8 L. ed. 477; Bloomfield & R. Natural Gaslight Co. v. Calkins, 62 N. Y. 386; Woodring v. Forks Twp. 28 Pa. 355, 70 Am. Dec. 134; Winter v. Peterson, 24 N. J. L. 524, 61 Am. Dec. 678; Platt v. Pennsylavnia Co. 43 Ohio St. 228, 1 N. E. 420; Palatine v. Krueger, 121 Ill. 72, 12 N. E. 75; Kincaid v. Indianapolis Natural Gas Co. 124 Ind. 577, 8 L.R.A. 602, 19 Am. St. Rep. 113, 24 N. E. 1066.

The appellees are not a corporation, but a partnership organized under the laws of the state of Pennsylvania.

Great Southern Fire Proof Hotel Co. v. Jones, 177 U. S. 449, 44 L. ed. 842, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

By the act of Congress of June 29, 1906, chap. 3591, 34 Stat. at L. 584, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288, the act to regulate commerce was amended so that the 1st section reads in part as follows: "That the provisions of this act shall apply to any corporation or any person or persons engaged in the transportation of [558] oil or other commodity, except water and except natural or artificial gas, by means of pipe lines, or partly by pipe lines and partly by railroad, or partly by pipe lines and partly by water, who shall be considered and held to be common carriers within the meaning and purpose of this act." Thereafter the Interstate Commerce Commission issued an order requiring the appellees, among others, being parties in control of pipe lines, to file with the Commission schedules of their rates and charges for the transportation of oil. 24 Inters. Com. Rep. 1. The appellees thereupon brought suit in the commerce court to set aside and annul the order, and a preliminary injunction was issued by that court, on the broad ground that the statute applies to every pipe line that crosses a state boundary, and that thus construed it is unconstitutional. 204 Fed. 798. The United States, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and other intervening respondents appealed.

The circumstances in which the amendment was passed are known to everyone. The Standard Oil Company, a New Jersey corporation, owned the stock of the New York Transit Company, a pipe line made a common carrier by the laws of New York, and of the National Transit Company, a Pennsylvania corporation of like character, and by these it connected the Appalachian oil field with its refineries in the east. It owned nearly all the stock of the Ohio Oil Company, which connected the Lima-Indiana field with its system; and the National Transit Company, controlled by it, owned nearly all the stock of the Prairie Oil & Gas Company, which ran from the mid-continent field in Oklahoma and Kansas and the Caddo field in Louisiana to Indiana, and connected with the previously mentioned lines. It also was largely interested in the Tide Water Pipe Company, Limited, which connected with the Appalachian and other fields and pursued the methods of the Standard Oil Company about to be described. By the before-mentioned and subordinate [559] lines the Standard Oil Company had made itself master of the only practicable oil transportation between the oil fields east of California and the Atlantic ocean, and carried much the greater part of the oil between those points. Before the recent dissolution, the New York and Pennsylvania companies had extended their lines into New Jersey and Maryland to the refineries, and the laws of those states did not require them to be common carriers. To meet the present amendment the Standard Oil Company took a conveyance of the New Jersey and Maryland lines, and the common carrier lines now end at insignificant places where there are neither market nor appliances except those of the Standard Oil, by which it would seem that the whole transport of the carriers' lines is received. There is what seems to be merely a formal breach of continuity when the carriers' pipes stop. The change is not material to our view of the case.

Digitized by Google

Availing itself of its monopoly of the means of transportation the Standard Oil Company refused, through its subordinates, to carry any oil unless the same was sold to it or to them, and through them to it, on terms more or less dictated by itself. In this way it made itself master of the fields without the necessity of owning them, and carried across half the continent a great subject of international commerce coming from many owners, but, by the duress of which the Standard Oil Company was master, carrying it all as its own. The main question is whether the act does and constitutionally can apply to the several constituents that then had been united into a single line.

Taking up first the construction of the statute, we think it plain that it was intended to reach the combination of pipe lines that we have described. The provisions of the act are to apply to any person engaged in the transportation of oil by means of pipe lines. The words "who shall be considered and held to be common carriers within the meaning and purpose of this act" obviously are not intended [560] to cut down the generality of the previous declaration to the meaning that only those shall be held common carriers within the act who were common carriers in a technical sense, but an injunction that those in control of pipe lines and engaged in the transportation of oil shall be dealt with as such. If the Standard Oil Company and its cooperating companies were not so engaged no one was. It not only would be a sacrifice of fact to form, but would empty the act if the carriage to the seaboard of nearly all the oil east of California were held not to be transportation within its meaning, because by the exercise of their power the carriers imposed as a condition to the carriage a sale to themselves. As applied to them, while the amendment does not compel them to continue in operation, it does require them not to continue except as common carriers. That is the plain meaning, as has been held with regard to other statutes similarly framed. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 195, 203, 55 L. ed. 167, 178, 181, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164. Its evident purpose was to bring within its scope pipe lines that, although not technically common carriers, yet were carrying all oil offered, if only the offerers would sell at their price.

The only matter requiring much consideration is the constitutionality of the act. That the transportation is commerce among the states we think clear. That conception cannot be made wholly dependent upon technical questions of title, and the fact that the oils transported belonged to the owner of the pipe line is not conclusive against the transportation being such commerce. Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 512, 51 L. ed. 295, 297, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159. See Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Sabine Tram Co. 227 U. S. 111, 57 L. ed. 442, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229. The situation that we have described would make it illusory to deny the title of commerce to such transportation, beginning in purchase and ending in sale, for the same reasons that make it transportation within the act.

The control of Congress over commerce among the [561] states cannot be made a means of exercising powers not intrusted to it by the Constitution, but it may require those who are common carriers in substance to become so in form. So far as the statute contemplates future pipe lines and prescribes the conditions upon which they may be established there can be no doubt that it is valid. So the objection is narrowed to the fact that it applies to lines already engaged in transportation. But, as we already have intimated, those lines that we are considering are common carriers now in everything but form. They carry everybody's oil to a market, although they compel outsiders to sell it before taking it into their pipes. The answer to their objection is not that they may give up the business, but that, as applied to them, the statute practically means no more than they must give up requiring a sale to themselves before carrying the oil that they now receive. The whole case is that the appellees, if they carry, must do it in a way that they do not like. There is no taking and it does not become necessary to consider how far Congress could subject them to pecuniary loss without compensation in order to accomplish the end in view. Hoke v. United States, 227 U. S. 308, 323, 57 L. ed. 523, 527, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 906, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 905; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 357, 47 L. ed. 492, 501, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561.

Digitized by Google

These considerations seem to us sufficient to dispose of the cases of the Standard Oil Company, the Ohio Oil Company, the Prairie Oil & Gas Company, and the Tide Water Pipe Company, Limited. The Standard Oil Company of Louisiana was incorporated since the passage of the amendment, and before the beginning of this suit, to break up the monopoly of the New Jersey Standard Oil Company. It buys a large part of its oil from the Prairie Oil & Gas Company, which buys it at the wells in the mid-continent field and transfers the title to the Louisiana Company in that state. Its case also is covered by what we have said.

There remains to be considered only the Uncle Sam Oil [562] Company. This company has a refinery in Kansas and oil wells in Oklahoma, with a pipe line connecting the two which it has used for the sole purpose of conducting oil from its own wells to its own refinery. It would be a perversion of language, considering the sense in which it is used in the statute, to say that a man was engaged in the transportation of water whenever he pumped a pail of water from his well to his house. So as to oil. When, as in this case, a company is simply drawing oil from its own wells across a state line to its own refinery, for its own use, and that is all, we do not regard it as falling within the description of the act, the transportation being merely an incident to use at the end. In that case the decree will be affirmed. In the others the decree will be reversed.

No. 507, decree affirmed.

Nos. 481, 482, 483, 506, and 508, decrees reversed.

The Chief Justice, concurring:

Agreeing in every particular with the conclusions of the court and with its reasoning except as to the one special subject, my concurrence as to that matter, because of its importance, is separately stated. The matter to which I refer is the exclusion of the Uncle Sam Oil Company from the operation of the act. The view which leads the court to exclude it is that the company was not engaged in transportation under the statute,—a conclusion to which I do not assent. The facts are these: That company owns wells in one state from which it has pipe lines to its refinery in another state, and pumps its own oil through such pipe lines to its refinery; and the product, of course, when reduced at the refinery, passes into the markets of consumption. It seems to me that the business thus carried on is transportation in interstate commerce within the statute. But despite this I think the company is not [563] embraced by the statute because it would be impossible to make the statute applicable to it without violating the due process clause of the 5th Amendment, since to apply it would necessarily amount to a taking of the property of the company without compensation. It is shown beyond question that the company buys no oil, and by the methods which have been mentioned simply carries its own product to its own refinery; in other words, it is engaged in a purely private business. Under these conditions in my opinion there is no power under the Constitution without the exercise of the right of eminent domain to convert without its consent the private business of the company into a public one.

Of course this view has no application to the other companies which the court holds are subject to the act, because, as pointed out, the principal ones were chartered as common carriers, and they all, either directly or as a necessary result of their association, were engaged in buying oil and shipping it through their pipes; in other words, were doing in reality a common carrier business, disguised, it may be, in form, but not changed in substance. Under these conditions I do not see how it would be possible to avoid the conclusion which the court has reached without declaring that the shadow, and not the substance, was the criterion to be resorted to for the purpose of determining the validity of the exercise of legislative power.

Mr. Justice McKenna, dissenting:

I am unable to concur in the judgment of the court or in the reasoning upon which it is based. I pass by the construction of the amendment of June 29, 1906, set out in the opinion, although its application to the business of appellee companies is in controversy. I shall assume its application, therefore, and pass to the other and more serious questions. Extended discussion [564] of them is not now possible. Indeed, any discussion may not be worth while, as I express only my individual views. In order to be brief, I have to refer to the principles of the decision of the court, and indeed I am impelled more to dissent from them than from the judgment. It is of little consequence, aside from the rights of the appellee companies, whether they are subject to be regulated as common carriers, but it is of great consequence whether the sanctions of property be impaired.

Digitized by Google

The outside principle of the decision is the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce; but to assert that power solves none of the difficulties of the questions in the case. I need not pause to demonstrate that the exercise of that power is subject to other provisions of the Constitution, and one of those provisions is invoked by the appellees. It is contended that the act offends the 5th Amendment in that it takes their property without due process of law. But what is due process of law, and wherein does its requirement limit the power of Congress? Neither question can be answered in a word, and the usual considerations are encountered when the courts are called upon to investigate the limits of legislative power. Autocracy is free from such perplexities. When authority can say, "The State—it is I!" it meets no impediments to its exercise. But that extreme illustration is not necessary. Even a government under a Constitution, if it be unwritten, may have a power that leaves nothing for the courts to do other than to enforce the flats of legislative authority. Under a written Constitution, however, there is a sovereignty superior to the legislature, that of the people expressed in the Constitution. How to reconcile legislation with the limitations of the Constitution and leave government practical in its exercise is a problem which comes to this court often. It is the problem in the case at bar. It is to be regretted that there is no indisputable standard for its solution,—no indisputable test of [565] due process of law. We know that an act of legislation does not necessarily satisfy it. It may, however, be sufficient, or, to be more careful and accurate, there may be a regulation of the uses of property whose legality cannot be denied. Regulation is not a taking, and we are brought to the inquiry, what uses of property will subject it to regulation? I mean regulation in a special sense, not in the sense in which all property, whether its uses be public or private, is subject to regulation. "Property," it is said, "becomes clothed with a public interest when used in a manner to make it of public consequence, and affect the community at large." "When, therefore, one devotes his property to a use in which the public has an interest, he, in effect, grants to the public an interest in that use, and must submit to be controlled by the public for the common good, to the extent of the interest he has thus created." Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 517, 36 L. ed. 247, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Brass v. North Dakota, 153 U. S. 391, 38 L. ed. 757, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 670, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; German Alliance Ins. Co. v. Lewis, 233 U. S. 389, ante, 1011, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612. Manifestly the principle needs the definition of the facts of the cases. In three of them the fees for storage of grain were regulated; in the other the price of fire insurance; but dominant in all, as giving character to the property, was the fact that its use was voluntarily offered to the public. There was no compulsion of use or service. This must be kept in mind as the determining circumstance. Conduct may be regulated which cannot be initially commanded. The rates of interest may be regulated, but loans cannot be compelled. There is further illustration in a case subsequent to those cited. In W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 45 L. ed. 619, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423, an injunction was sought against the operation of an elevator and warehouse situated on the right of way of a railroad until its operator should have obtained a license from the railroad and warehouse commission of the state under a law of the state. The defendant company bought and sold grain, although its [566] elevator was used for storing its own grain only. The state court decided that the business was of a "public character," and was "sufficiently affected with a public interest to warrant a very considerable amount of regulation of it by the state." This conclusion was put upon the ground that the elevator was a kind of public market place, and it was important to see that correct weights were had, uniform grades given, proper amount of dockage taken, and no dishonest practice allowed. The provision for a license was sustained. The act, however, provided for many other regulations, among others, for the receipt and storage of the grain of others and the rates of charges therefor. The state court, passing on these and other regulations, said that there were many provisions in the act which applied only to warehouses and elevators in which grain was stored for others or for the public, and which could not apply to such warehouses as the one in question, and there were perhaps provisions in the act which it would be unconstitutional to apply to such warehouses. The court, however, said: "Such matters need not be considered at this time. The provision recognizing license is not one of these." One of the judges of the court was of opinion that, on account of the interdependence of the provisions of the act, many of them, when applied to warehouses not used for the storage of grain by others, were beyond the police power of the state, and therefore invalid, and made the whole act so. This court, by Mr. Justice Harlan, sustained the judgment of the state court and said "that the mere requirement of a license was not forbidden by the 14th Amendment." Answering the suggestion that other provisions were repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, it was said that the license would give authority to carry on the business under the valid laws of the state and the valid regulations of the commission. The case, therefore, manifestly decides that the use of the warehouse by others could not [567] have been legally compelled, and in the other cases, as we have seen, it was the act of the parties, not the power of the law, which devoted the property to the public interest. In the Munn Case it was said of the owners of the elevators that there was no attempt to compel them "to grant the public an interest in their property, but to declare their obligations if they used it in this particular manner." And further, "He may withdraw his grant by discontinuing the use; but so long as he maintains the use, he must submit to the control."

Digitized by Google

In the cases cited, therefore, there was a regulation of uses which were extended voluntarily to others. I recall no case where the use was compelled, and by the use so compelled regulation was justified. The case at bar has no fellow in our jurisprudence.

These considerations are not touched upon in the opinion of the court, and how far they affect the decision can only be conjectured. It may be not at all. At any rate, other considerations are given explicit prominence. The impulse of the amendment is said to be the control which the Standard Oil Company had acquired over the pipe-line transportation of oil. It is further said that it availed "itself of its monopoly of the means of transportation" by refusing to carry "through its subordinates any oil unless the same was sold to them, and through them to it on terms more or less dictated by itself, and thereby became master of the fields without owning them." It is not very clear whether this is intended as a statement merely of the motive of the amendment or of its legal justification. If stated as the motive of the amendment, I have no concern with it; as a justification of the amendment, its foundation must be considered.

The facts of the cases the opinion of the court does not give. They are, however, quite necessary to a discussion of the questions which they present. I quote the summary of the commerce court:

[568] "The Prairie Oil & Gas Company is a corporation organized in 1900 under the laws of the state of Kansas. It owns and operates a system of pipe lines consisting of gathering lines in the mid-continent field, in the states of Kansas and Oklahoma, a trunk line from that field to Griffith in the state of Indiana, where it connects with the Indiana pipe line, and a trunk line in the state of Arkansas, connecting the Oklahoma pipe line with the pipe line of the Standard Oil Company of Louisiana. This company has no refinery, and its business is confined to producing, purchasing, and selling crude oil, which it delivers to its customers by means of the pipe lines described. Its own wells yield only about 12,000 barrels per day and it purchases approximately 70,000 barrels per day on the average. Its trunk lines are about 860 miles in length, of which some 300 miles are located on the right of way of the Atchison, Topeka, & Sante Fe Railway Company under contract arrangement with that company.

"The Uncle Sam Oil Company is a corporation organized in 1905 under the laws of the state (then territory) of Arizona. It owns and operates a pipe line from its wells in the state of Oklahoma to its refinery at Cherryvale, Kansas. The extent to which this company purchases oil from other producers, if it engages in that business at all, does not appear from the record.

"Robert D. Benson et al. are the members of a partnership, organized in 1878 for the term of twenty years, and reorganized in 1898 for a further term of twenty years, in compliance with the laws of the state of Pennsylvania, and doing business under the name of the Tide-Water Pipe Company (Ltd.). This company transports oil from the Appalachian field in the western part of Pennsylvania, and also oil received through connecting lines from other fields, to the Tide-Water Oil Company refinery at Bayonne, in the state of New Jersey. It also owns and operates branch lines in New York and Pennsylvania, and a line extending [569] from Stoy, Illinois, through the states of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Pennsylvania. The greater part of the crude oil transported by this company is purchased from other producers. The lines which it owns and the Bayonne refinery which it serves are under common or unified control.

Digitized by Google

"The Ohio Oil Company is a corporation organized in 1887 under the laws of the state of Ohio. It owns and operates pipe lines in the states of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, and also leases and operates a line from Negley, Ohio, to Centerbridge, in the state of Pennsylvania. It is an extensive purchaser of crude oil from other producers.

"The Standard Oil Company, designated, for convenience, 'Standard Oil Company of New Jersey,' is a corporation organized in 1882 under the laws of the state of New Jersey, and its principal pipe lines are the following: (a) A line extending from Unionville, in the state of New York, near the boundary line of New Jersey, through the latter state to its refineries at Bayonne; (b) a line from Centerbridge, in the state of Pennsylvania, near the boundary of New Jersey, through the latter state to its refineries at Bayonne and Bayway; and (c) a line from Fawn Grove, in the state of Pennsylvania, near the boundary of Maryland, through the latter state to its refinery at Baltimore. The record indicates that much the greater part of the oil transported through these lines, and perhaps all of it, is oil which this company has purchased.

"The Standard Oil Company of Louisiana is a corporation organized in 1909 under the laws of that state. It owns and operates a refinery at Baton Rouge and a trunk line extending thereto from the town of Ida, near the northern line of Louisiana, and also gathering lines in the Caddo field, in the states of Louisiana and Texas. It purchases a considerable part of the crude oil which its lines transport.

"None of the petitioning corporations is organized or [570] derives any of its corporate powers from laws of the state of its creation under which common carrier or other public service corporations are organized, but each of them was formed and has always conducted its operations under and in compliance with state laws which relate to private as distinguished from public business."

The companies do not possess the right of eminent domain, and their lines are laid over private rights of way, except some of them for short distances have laid their lines along the rights of way of certain railroads under some contract arrangement with the railroads, one of them for a distance of about 300 miles. They, however, have in many instances also laid their lines across or along public streets and highways by permission or consent of the local authorities. None of them has ever held itself out as a common carrier, or in fact ever carried oil for others, but they have carried only such oil as they produced from their own wells or purchased from other producers, and which they owned when the transportation took place.

Concluding its recitation of facts, the commerce court said: "In short, so far as their legal status is fixed by the laws of the states of their creation, and so far as their acts and attitude could make them such, all the petitioners [appellee companies] carry on a private business, at least, in the sense that they transport only their own oil, and have always refused to transport for others; and all of them have evidently sought and claimed to so conduct their operations as to avoid any public activity which might subject them to public regulation."

These being the facts, it is yet insisted that the appellee companies are common carriers "in substance," and Congress by its action has only made them so "in form," and that this is unquestionably within the power of Congress. But there is something more to be considered than an antithesis of words. There is an antithesis of [571] legal consequences,—the subjecting of property to other uses than those of its owner. A manifest taking, therefore.

But let me get away from any appearance of considering words or forms of expression to an estimation of the facts. The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey is made prominent, and the exemplar of all of the other companies, and its stock ownership in some of them is assumed to destroy their individuality and unite them all in operation, character, and effect. Indeed, it is represented as the single controlling force and master of the transportation of oil "between the oil fields east of California and the Atlantic ocean." Under its sway are pictured all the other companies except the Standard Oil of Louisiana, the latter company, however, having a baneful potency of dictation to the other owners in the oil fields, as has its exemplar, the Standard Oil of New Jersey. In other words, it is argued, the companies have made themselves masters of their respective fields by the constraint of the sale of the oil of other owners to them upon terms more or less dicated by them by availing themselves of their "monopoly of the means of transportation." This is the charge. The facts of the case do not sustain it except as they exhibit the advantages of the possession of property which others do not possess. Must it be shared by those others for that reason? The conception of property is exclusiveness, the rights of exclusive possession, enjoyment, and disposition. Take away these rights and you take all that there is of property. Take away any of them, force a participation in any of them, and you take property to that extent. These are commonplaces, but at times—it may be always—commonplaces are our best guides when rights are concerned. They are pertinent to this case. The employment of one's wealth to construct or purchase facilities for one's business greater than others possess constitutes no monopoly that does not appertain to all property. Such facilities may give [572] advantages, and, it may be, power; so does all property and in proportion to its extent. It may well, then, be asked—What extent of trade advantages, what degree of power in purchasing, what superiority in facilities of transportation or disposition of articles may be grounds of the exercise of congressional control? If the owner of a small oil well may be given rights in the facilities of the appellee companies, why may not the owner of a small business be given rights in the facilities of a larger business, if Congress sees fit to say that the public welfare requires the gift? Can any privilege be claimed for oil that cannot be claimed for other commodities? May a jobber of merchandise in Washington who conducts a trade in Baltimore and other places, and owns special facilities for the transportation of his merchandise, be compelled to share them with competitors who may not be able to afford as ample ones, and in consequence be forced to sell their property to him at a disadvantage? Or, recurring to the illustration of W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, can one who erects elevators for the storage of grain of his own raising (such instances exist), and uses it as well for grain of his purchase (there are more of such instances), be compelled to share their advantage with other growers or purchasers of grain? The advantages of his situation are quite as manifest as the advantages the appellees enjoy, and the effect on interstate commerce transportation as marked. Upon the same principle, one who builds a railroad to a coal field or to a forest must share it with other owners in the field or forest if he ventures to purchase their productions. Such is the principle of the present decision. Under it what attribute of private property is left?

Digitized by Google

Let us not exaggerate the conditions or by form of statement put out of view essential elements. What duress is employed that is not employed when terms are exacted as a condition of the use of property? Or, rather, [573] and more accurately, what duress is used except the exclusion of others from the use of property which they do not own? There were no prior or present rights in other owners of oil wells to the use of the lines of the appellee companies. They contributed nothing to the construction of the lines, and their exclusion from their use is the exclusion resulting from the separate ownership of property as distinguished from rights of community ownership.

There is quite a body of opinion which considers the individual ownership of property economically and politically wrong and insists upon a community of all that is profit-bearing. This opinion has its cause, among other causes, in the power—may I say the duress?—of wealth. If it accumulates 51 per cent of political power, may it put its conviction into law and justify the law by the advancement of the public welfare by destroying the monopoly and mastery of individual ownership?

I submit, with deference, that it is misleading to say that the use of the lines by other oil owners was permitted only on terms dictated by the companies, and that through such dictation they "became masters of the fields without owning them." And I take it if the companies had not made purchases of oil or refused offers of oil, they would not be held subject to the act. Such is the situation of the Uncle Sam Company and the ground of decision in regard to that company. It is not held to be within the act. It seems to be minimized and considered not big enough for the application of the law, and yet it owns and operates a pipe line from the oil fields of Oklahoma to its refineries in Kansas. The extent to which it purchases oil from producers, if it does so at all, does not appear from the record. It may be supposed that if it venture to make purchases of oil it will lose its immunity. But why its exemption? Why is the fact of purchases of oil important? Is it not the concern of the small oil owners to get to market? Indeed, is not that the advantage they get [574] from the law, thereby being able to break away from the supposed subjection to, and "duress" of, the superior advantages of the appellee companies? The result which the amendment under review was intended to effect as beneficial to the public welfare. The query then occurs, May all of the other oil companies give up their purchases, and, if they should, will they thereby get the freedom of the Uncle Sam Company? What, then, of the owners of oil? It may be they cannot sell their oil at all,—the local market is taken from them, a distant market is not possible for them. Is not the public welfare concerned for them in such situation? Must they remain in it dependent upon the richer owner balancing the advantages of remaining under the law or becoming free from it? Or may the power which has brought them to such situation extricate them from it by one more act of legislation in the public interest, and to take from the companies their mastery of the fields of production?

Digitized by Google

United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. ed. 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527, opens a curious speculation and illustrates the effect of the power exercised in the legislation under review. The appellee companies, the decision is, engaging in interstate commerce, may be declared common carriers and made to carry the products of others as well as their own products. Then, having been made common carriers, under the authority of the cited case, they can be forbidden to carry their own products, and so by legal circumlocution property legally devoted to the use of its owners is forbidden such use and devoted wholly to the use of others. A queer outcome.

I have extended this discussion beyond what I had intended. Much more, however, could be said and decisions adduced on the various elements of the case. Prophecies of the result of the principles of the decision could be made which I am afraid could not be pronounced fanciful, and projects whose shadows may even now be discerned [575] will plead a justification by the decision in these cases. It is to be remembered that there are many jurisdictions of legislation. It is to be remembered that there cannot be one measure of control for Congress over private property and its uses and another measure of control for the states. In other words, the power which Congress has in its domain, the states have in their domain. Alarms, however, are not arguments, and I grant that legislation must be practical. But, while making this concession, and giving to the legislation in question the presumption of constitutionality to which all legislation is entitled, I am yet constrained to say that it transcends the limits of the power of regulation and takes property without due process of law.

As I have not the power of decision, I do not enter into a discussion of the facts which distinguish the cases. It may be that the judgment of the commerce court as to the Standard Oil Company should be reversed because the lines of the company were common carriers before their acquisition, and it may be that the Prairie Oil & Gas Company was made a common carrier by the law which created it. This, however, is in controversy.

I concur in the judgment as to the Uncle Sam Oil Company. From the judgments as to the other companies, I dissent.

---

[576] CHARLESTON & WESTERN CAROLINA RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
LIZZIE THOMPSON. (No. 751.)

CHARLESTON & WESTERN CAROLINA RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
GEORGE THOMPSON. (No. 752.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 576-578.)

Error to state court — Federal question — claim of immunity from liability under Federal law.

1. A decision of a state court, enforcing the liability of a railroad company for personal injuries to an interstate passenger traveling on a pass issued to her under authority of the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288), § 1, as wife of an employee, on the ground that such pass was not gratuitous, but was issued in consideration of the employee's services, and that therefore she was not bound by a stipulation therein on which the railroad company relied, exempting the carrier from liability, presents a question under that act reviewable by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1393-1430, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — government regulation — pass to employee's family — gratuity.

2. A pass issued by a railroad company for interstate transportation to the wife of an employee under the authority of the act of June 29, 1906, § 1, must be deemed

---

Note.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On validity of stipulation in pass limiting carrier's liability—see notes to Walther v. Southern P. Co. 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 235, and Boering v. Chesapeake Beach R. Co. 48 L. ed. U. S. 742.

Digitized by Google

to have been gratuitous, and not issued upon consideration of the services of the employee, especially in view of the prohibition in § 2 of that act against charging a greater, or less, or different compensation for the transportation of passengers from that scheduled in the carrier's published rates.

Carriers — pass to employee's family — limitation of liability.

3. A railroad carrier may validly stipulate in a pass for interstate transportation issued gratuitously to the wife of an employee under the authority of the act of June 29, 1906, § 1, that it shall not be liable for negligent injury to her person.

[For other cases, see Carriers, II. a, 8, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 751, 752.]

Argued April 15 and 16, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

TWO WRITS of Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of Georgia to review judgments which affirmed judgments of the City Court of Richmond County, in that state, in favor of plaintiffs in actions to recover damages arising out of personal injuries received by a passenger traveling on a free pass. Reversed.

See same case below, 13 Ga. App. 541, 79 S. E. 242.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. F. Barron Grier and W. K. Miller argued the cause, and, with Mr. T. P. Cothran, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Where a party to litigation in a state court insists, by way of objection to or requests for instruction, upon a construction of a statute of the United States, or on possible findings of fact from the evidence which may lead to a judgment in his favor, and his claim in this respect, being duly set up, is denied by the highest court of the state, then the question thus raised may be reviewed in this court. The plain reason is that in all such cases he has claimed in the state court a right or immunity under a law of the United States and it has been denied to him. Jurisdiction so clearly warranted by the Constitution and so clearly conferred by the act of Congress needs no justification. But it may not be out of place to say that in no other manner can a uniform construction of the statute laws of the United States be secured, so that they shall have the same meaning and effect in all the states of the Union.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 293, 52 L. ed. 1067, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464.

A party who insists that a judgment cannot be rendered against him consistently with the statutes of the United States may fairly be held, within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, to assert a right and immunity under such statutes, although the statutes may not give the party himself a personal or affirmative right that could be enforced by direct suit against his adversary.

Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 12, 50 L. ed. 348, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216.

The Federal question will be decreed sufficiently claimed and set up if it appear from the opinion that the point was fully considered as a Federal question, and decided against the plaintiff in error.

Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York, 119 U. S. 110, 30 L. ed. 342, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Home for Incurables v. New York, 187 U. S. 155, 47 L. ed. 117, 63 L.R.A. 329, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 47 L. ed. 480, 63 L.R.A. 33, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 177, 47 L. ed. 765, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co. 200 U. S. 412, 50 L. ed. 529, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Montana ex rel. Haire v. Rice, 204 U. S. 291, 51 L. ed. 490, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 12, 50 L. ed. 348, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Jackman, 204 U. S. 532, 51 L. ed. 603, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Hammond v. Whittredge, 204 U. S. 538, 51 L. ed. 606, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Chambers v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 207 U. S. 142, 52 L. ed. 143, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Duvall, 225 U. S. 477, 56 L. ed. 1171, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Hesterly, 228 U. S. 704, 57 L. ed. 1033, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 57 L. ed. 1129, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. McWhirter, 229 U. S. 265, 57 L. ed. 1179, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 858; Wadkins v. Producers' Oil Co. 227 U. S. 368, 57 L. ed. 551, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 492, 57 L. ed. 315, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Miller, 226 U. S. 513, 57 L. ed. 323, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Dixie Tobacco Co. 228 U. S. 595, 57 L. ed. 981, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Southern P. Co. v. Schuyler, 227 U. S. 602, 57 L. ed. 662, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 901, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277.

As an incident to the right to issue a free pass, as a gratuity, to an employee or his family, the carrier has the right to impose upon the issuance, acceptance, and use of such pass the condition that the carrier shall not be liable in damages for personal injury to the recipient in consequence of its negligence. In denying the right to issue such free pass, the court of appeals denies the right of limitation incident to such primary right.

Digitized by Google

Northern P. R. Co. v. Adams, 192 U. S. 441, 48 L. ed. 513, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 408; Boering v. Chesapeake Beach R. Co. 193 U. S. 442, 48 L. ed. 742, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Hutto v. Southern R. Co. 75 S. C. 295, 55 S. E. 445.

An interstate carrier is authorized to issue only gratuitous passes to its employees or their families; it is not authorized to issue a pass in part payment of the employee's services, in fulfilment of an obligation to that effect undertaken at the time and as a part of the contract of service.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. ed. 297, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. United States, 219 U. S. 486, 55 L. ed. 305, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; State v. Union P. R. Co. 87 Neb. 29, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 657, 126 N. W. 859; Smith v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 114 C. C. A. 157, 194 Fed. 79; Peterson v. Seattle Traction Co. 23 Wash. 615, 53 L.R.A. 586, 63 Pac. 539, 65 Pac. 543.

Mr. William H. Fleming argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The mere discussion of Federal questions in the opinions of state courts affords no legal basis for a writ of error.

Howard v. Fleming, 191 U. S. 126, 48 L. ed. 121, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49.

Such questions must be unmistakably made in the pleadings, and not left for mere inference.

Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 309, 47 L. ed. 480, 485, 63 L.R.A. 33, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375.

Every so-called "free pass" is not a gratuity. Many of such passes have a valid consideration behind them, and when there is a consideration, the stipulation for exemption is void.

Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Stevens, 95 U. S. 655, 24 L. ed. 535, 10 Am. Neg. Cas. 638; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. 485, 486, 14 L. ed. 509, 510; New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 21 L. ed. 627, 10 Am. Neg. Cas. 624; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Beebe, 174 Ill. 13, 43 L.R.A. 210, 66 Am. St. Rep. 253, 50 N. E. 1019; Baker v. Boston & M. R. Co. 74 N. H. 100, 124 Am. St. Rep. 937, 65 Atl. 386, 12 Ann. Cas. 1072; Nickles v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. 74 S. C. 102, 54 S. E. 255; Dugan v. Blue Hill Street R. Co. 193 Mass. 431, 79 N. E. 748.

Liability under free pass is a state, and not a Federal, question.

Southern P. Co. v. Schuyler, 227 U. S. 601–610, 57 L. ed. 662–668, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 901, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277.

In the Hepburn act, the words "free pass" were used in the ordinary, accepted sense, and not necessarily as a pure gratuity. The mere fact that the railroad company, in its plea in the state court, claimed that the alleged pass was issued under the Hepburn act, does not show that the railroad had any right under that act, as a defense to the cases.

Price v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 113 U. S. 218, 28 L. ed. 980, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 192 U. S. 371, 48 L. ed. 484, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325.

A rejected amendment is no part of the record, and is not before the reviewing court unless embodied in the bill of exceptions (which was not done in this case).

Ledbetter v. Savannah Brewing Co. 8 Ga. App. 282, 68 S. E. 950.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff, Lizzie Thompson, sued the railroad company, the plaintiff in error, to recover for personal injuries inflicted upon her while she was a passenger upon a train that was carrying her from South Carolina to Georgia. The railroad pleaded that she was traveling on a free [577] pass that exempted the company from liability, the same having been issued to her gratuitously under the Hepburn act of June 29, 1906, chap. 3591, § 1 [34 Stat. at L. 584, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288], as wife of an employee. This plea was struck out, subject to the defendant's exception. The defendant also asked for an instruction that if the plaintiff was traveling on a free pass providing that the railroad should not be liable for negligent injury to her person, she could not recover. This was refused and was made a ground for a motion for a new trial, referring to the act of Congress. The motion was overruled seemingly on the notion that by the state law the defendant was liable within the conditions of the free pass. The court of appeals held such a stipulation binding in a free pass, but held that the Hepburn act created an exception, and that a so-called free pass under that act, issued to a member of an employee's family, really was not a free pass, but was issued upon consideration of the services of the employee. After this writ of error was taken it modified its statement so as to say that the jury might infer that the pass was issued for value. But no such issue was before the jury, as the defense had been excluded altogether, and apart from other objections we are of opinion that the change does not help the decision. The railroad company assigns the construction of the court of appeals and the two rulings below as error. There is a motion to dismiss, but we are of opinion that a question is presented under the act.

Digitized by Google

The main question is whether, when the statute permits the issue of a "free pass" to its employees and their families, it means what it says. The railroad was under no obligation to issue the pass. It may be doubted whether it could have entered into one, for then the services would be the consideration for the duty and the pass, and by § 2 it was forbidden to charge "a greater or less or different compensation" for transportation of passengers from that in its published rates. The antithesis in the statute is [578] between the reasonable charges to be shown in its schedules and the free passes which it may issue only to those specified in the act. To most of those enumerated the free pass obviously would be gratuitous in the strictest sense, and when all that may receive them are grouped in a single exception, we think it plain that the statute contemplates the pass as gratuitous in the same sense to all. It follows, or rather is saying the same thing in other words, that even on the improbable speculation that the possibility of getting an occasional free pass entered into the motives of the employee in working for the road, the law did not contemplate his work as a conventional inducement for the pass, but, on the contrary, contemplated the pass as being what it called itself, free.

As the pass was free under the statute, there is no question of the validity of its stipulations. This was conceded by the court of appeals, as we have stated, and is established by the decisions of this court. Northern P. R. Co. v. Adams, 192 U. S. 440, 48 L. ed. 513, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 408; Boering v. Chesapeake Beach R. Co. 193 U. S. 442, 48 L. ed. 742, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515.

Judgment reversed.

By agreement of parties the judgment in No. 752 was to follow the foregoing. Therefore in No. 752 also the judgment is reversed.

---

[579] INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY OF AMERICA, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 579-589.)

Writ and process — service on foreign corporation — what is doing business.

1. The continuous solicitation of orders through the local agents of a nonresident manufacturing corporation, which are sent to another state to be filled, the articles ordered being delivered within the state, and the agents having authority to receive payment in money, check, or draft, and to take notes payable at banks in the state, amounts to the doing of business in the state to the extent which will authorize the service of process upon its agents thus engaged.

[For other cases, see Writ and Process, 47-77, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — service of process on foreign corporation.

2. A foreign corporation engaged in interstate commerce only is not for that reason immune from the service of process under the laws of the state in which it is carrying on such business.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 297.]

Argued April 24, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the Breckenridge Circuit Court in that state of violating the state anti-trust law. Affirmed.[1]

See same case below, 147 Ky. 655, 145 S. W. 393.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Alexander Pope Humphrey and Edgar A. Bancroft argued the cause, and, with Mr. Victor A. Remy, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The Harvester Company, at the time process was served upon it, was not doing business in Kentucky.

Com. v. Hogan, M. & T. Co. 25 Ky. L. Rep. 41, 74 S. W. 737; Com. v. Eclipse Hay Press Co. 31 Ky. L. Rep. 824, 104 S. W. 224; Three States Buggy & Implement Co. v. Com. 32 Ky. L. Rep. 385, 105 S. W. 971.

In order to obtain a personal judgment against a foreign corporation by process served upon anyone, the corporation must be doing business in the state.

Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 406, 47 L. ed. 1113, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728; Caledonian Coal Co. v. Baker, 196 U. S. 432, 49 L. ed. 540, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Remington

[1] Leave granted on June 22, 1914, to present petition for rehearing within thirty days.

NOTE.—On soliciting trade as doing business within the state—see notes to Berger v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 9 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1214, and Saxony Mills v. Wagner & Co. 23 L.R.A. (N.S.) 834.

Digitized by Google

v. Central P. R. Co. 198 U. S. 95, 49 L. ed. 959, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Kendall v. American Automatic Loom Co. 198 U. S. 477, 49 L. ed. 1133, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; Peterson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 841, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Green v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 205 U. S. 530, 51 L. ed. 916, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595; Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, 215 U. S. 437, 54 L. ed. 272, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125; Saxony Mills v. Wagner, 94 Miss. 233, 23 L.R.A. (N.S.) 834, 136 Am. St. Rep. 575, 47 So. 899, 19 Ann. Cas. 199; Fawkes v. American Motor Car Sales Co. 176 Fed. 1010.

At the time of the attempted service. the defendant was doing nothing but an interstate commerce business with the people of Kentucky.

Com. v. Chattanooga Implement & Mfg. Co. 126 Ky. 636, 104 S. W. 389; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 38 L. ed. 719, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

The carrying on of interstate commerce by the defendant with persons residing in this state does not constitute a doing of business in Kentucky.

Com. v. Hogan, M. & T. Co. 25 Ky. L. Rep. 41, 74 S. W. 737; Com. v. Eclipse Hay Press Co. 31 Ky. L. Rep. 824, 104 S. W. 224; Havens & G. Co. v. Diamond, 93 Ill. App. 564.

Merely soliciting orders is not doing business in a state.

Green v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 205 U. S. 530, 51 L. ed. 916, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595; North Wisconsin Cattle Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 105 Minn. 198, 117 N. W. 391; Fawkes v. American Motor Car Sales Co. 176 Fed. 1012; Earle v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 127 Fed. 235; N. K. Fairbank & Co. v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 4 C. C. A. 403, 9 U. S. App. 212, 54 Fed. 423; William Grace Co. v. Henry Martin Brick Mach. Mfg. Co. 98 C. C. A. 167, 174 Fed. 131; Saxony Mills v. Wagner, 94 Miss. 233, 23 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 136 Am. St. Rep. 575, 47 So. 899, 19 Ann. Cas. 199.

To hold that defendant can be prosecuted in these cases would violate the commerce clause of the United States Constitution.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 43, 44 L. ed. 657, 663, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Hadley Dean Plate Glass Co. v. Highland Glass Co. 74 C. C. A. 462, 143 Fed. 244; Albertype Co. v. Gust Feist Co. 102 Tex. 219, 114 S. W. 791; Eclipse Paint & Mfg. Co. v. New Process Roofing & Supply Co. 55 Tex. Civ. App. 553, 120 S. W. 532; Moroney Hardware Co. v. Goodwin Pottery Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 120 S. W. 1088.

The fact that the Harvester Company formerly carried on business in Kentucky does not alter the situation.

Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 406, 47 L. ed. 1113, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728; International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Alexander, 227 U. S. 226, 57 L. ed. 488, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245.

Before a foreign corporation can be sued, it must submit to the jurisdiction of the state court.

St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 350, 354, 27 L. ed. 222, 224, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Harris, 12 Wall. 65, 81, 20 L. ed. 354, 358; Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 406, 47 L. ed. 1113, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728; Peterson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 364, 394, 51 L. ed. 841, 853, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, 215 U. S. 437, 442, 54 L. ed. 272, 276, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125; Ex parte Schollenberger, 96 U. S. 369, 376, 24 L. ed. 853, 854.

A state can impose no condition whatever upon the right to carry on interstate commerce.

Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 401, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1542, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 57, 58, 35 L. ed. 649, 652, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Cooper Mfg. Co. v. Ferguson, 113 U. S. 727, 736, 28 L. ed. 1137, 1139, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Barrett v. New York, 232 U. S. 14, 30, 31. ante, 483, 490, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205; Harrison v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 232 U. S. 318, 331, ante, 621, 625, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333.

Mr. Charles Carroll argued the cause, and, with Mr. James Garnett, Attorney General of Kentucky, and Messrs. Frank E. Daugherty, J. R. Mallory, J. C. Dedman, C. R. Hill, and G. D. Florence, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Plaintiff in error cannot raise the question in this court that the proceedings against it in these cases were a denial to it of due process of law.

Com. v. Cheek, 1 Duv. 26; Com. v. Neat, 89 Ky. 242, 12 S. W. 256; Payne v. Com. 16 Ky. L. Rep. 839, 30 S. W. 416; Sharp v. Com. 16 Ky. L. Rep. 840, 30 S. W. 414; York v. Texas, 137 U. S. 15, 20, 34 L. ed. 604, 605, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; Cosmopolitan Min. Co. v. Walsh, 193 U. S. 469, 48 L. ed. 752, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489.

The process in this case was served upon the proper person, and the judgment rendered thereon was valid and binding.

St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Alexander, 227 U. S. 227, 57 L. ed. 489, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245; Good Roads Machinery Co. v. Com. 146 Ky. 690, 143 S. W. 18; Boyd Commission Co. v. Coates, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 730, 69 S. W. 1090; Nelson v. Rehkopf, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 352, 75 S. W. 203; Green v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 205 U. S. 530, 51 L. ed. 916, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Roller, 49 L.R.A. 77, 41 C. C. A. 22, 100 Fed. 738; International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A. (N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; Delamater v. South Dakota, 205 U. S. 93, 51 L. ed. 724, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 447, 10 Ann. Cas. 733; 19 Cyc. 1347, 1348.

Digitized by Google

To hold that plaintiff in error was properly served with process, and that the judgment rendered against it is valid, will not violate the commerce clause of the United States Constitution.

International Harvester Co. v. Com. 147 Ky. 657, 145 S. W. 393.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case presents the question of the sufficiency of the service of process on an alleged agent of the International Harvester Company in a criminal proceeding in Breckenridge county, Kentucky, in the court of which county an indictment had been returned against the Harvester Company for alleged violation of the anti-trust laws of the state of Kentucky. The Harvester Company appeared and moved to quash the return, substantially upon the ground that service had not been made upon an authorized agent of the company, and that the company was not doing business within the state of Kentucky, and it set up that any action under the attempted service would violate the due process and commerce clauses of the Federal Constitution. The only question involved, says the court of appeals, and we find none other in the record, is whether there was such service of process as would sustain the judgment. The court overruled the motion, and, the case being called for trial and the Harvester Company failing to appear or plead, judgment by default for $500 penalty was entered against it, which was affirmed by the court of appeals of Kentucky (147 Ky. 655, 145 S. W. 393).

It appeared that prior to October 28, 1911, before this indictment was returned, the Harvester Company had [583] been doing business in Kentucky, and had designated Louisville, Kentucky, as its principal place of business, in compliance with the statutes of Kentucky in that respect. It further appeared that the company had revoked the agency of one who had been appointed under the Kentucky statute, and had not appointed anyone else upon whom process might be served.

It is conceded in the brief of the learned counsel for the plaintiff in error that whether the person upon whom process was served was one designated by the law of Kentucky as an agent to receive summons on behalf of the Harvester Company was a question within the province of the court of appeals of Kentucky to finally determine, and no review of that decision is asked here. We come, then, to the first question in this case, which is, Whether, under the circumstances shown in this case, the Harvester Company was carrying on business in the state of Kentucky in such manner as to justify the courts of that state in taking jurisdiction of complaints against it.

For some purposes a corporation is deemed to be a resident of the state of its creation; but when a corporation of one state goes into another, in order to be regarded as within the latter it must be there by its agents authorized to transact its business in that state. The mere presence of an agent upon personal affairs does not carry the corporation into the foreign state. It has been frequently held by this court, and it can no longer be doubted, that it is essential to the rendition of a personal judgment that the corporation be "doing business" within the state. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Alexander, 227 U. S. 218, 226, 57 L. ed. 486, 488, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245, and cases there cited. As was said in that case, (each case must depend upon its own facts,) and their consideration must show that this essential requirement of jurisdiction has been complied with, and that the corporation is actually doing business within the state.

In the case now under consideration the court of appeals [584] of Kentucky found, with warrant for the conclusion, that the Harvester Company's method of conducting business might be shown to the best advantage from the general instruction of the company to its agents, of date November 7, 1911, as follows:

"The company's transactions hereafter with the people of Kentucky must be on a strictly interstate commerce basis. Travelers negotiating sales must not hereafter have any headquarters or place of business in that state, but may reside there.

"Their authority must be limited to taking orders, and all orders must be taken subject to the approval of the general agent outside of the state, and all goods must be shipped from outside of the state after the orders have been approved. Travelers do not have authority to make a contract of any kind in the state of Kentucky. They merely take orders to be submitted to the general agent. If anyone in Kentucky owes the company a debt, they may receive the money, or a check, or a draft for the same, but they do not have any authority to make any allowance or compromise any disputed claims. When a matter cannot be settled by payment of the amount due, the matter must be submitted to the general collection agent, as the case may be, for adjustment, and he can give the order as to what allowance or what compromise may be accepted. All contracts of sale must be made f. o. b. from some point outside of Kentucky, and the goods become the property of the purchaser when they are delivered to the carrier outside of the state. Notes for the purchase price may be taken, and they may be made payable at any bank in Kentucky. All contracts of any and every kind made with the people of Kentucky must be made outside of that state, and they will be contracts governed by the laws of the various states in which we have general agencies handling interstate business with the people of Kentucky. For example, contracts [585] made by the general agent at Parkersburg, West Virginia, will be West Virginia contracts.

Digitized by Google

"If any one of the company's general agents deviates from what is stated in this letter, the result will be just the same as if all of them had done so. Anything that is done that places the company in the position where it can be held as having done business in Kentucky will not only make the man transacting the business liable to a fine of from $100 to $1,000 for each offense, but it will make the company liable for doing business in the state without complying with the requirements of the laws of the state. We will therefore depend upon you to see that these instructions are strictly carried out."

Taking this as the method of carrying on the affairs of the Harvester Company in Kentucky, does it show a doing of business within that state to the extent which will authorize the service of process upon its agents thus engaged?

Upon this question the case is a close one, but upon the whole we agree with the conclusion reached by the court of appeals, that the Harvester Company was engaged in carrying on business in Kentucky. We place no stress upon the fact that the Harvester Company had previously been engaged in doing business in Kentucky, and had withdrawn from that state for reasons of its own. Its motives cannot affect the legal questions here involved. In order to hold it responsible under the process of the state court, it must appear that it was carrying on business within the state at the time of the attempted service. As we have said, we think it was. Here was a continuous course of business in the solicitation of orders which were sent to another state, and in response to which the machines of the Harvester Company were delivered within the state of Kentucky. This was a course of business, not a single transaction. The agents not only solicited such orders [586] in Kentucky, but might there receive payment in money, checks, or drafts. They might take notes of customers, which notes were made payable, and doubtless were collected, at any bank in Kentucky. This course of conduct of authorized agents within the state in our judgment constituted a doing of business there in such wise that the Harvester Company might be fairly said to have been there, doing business, and amenable to the process of the courts of the state.

It is argued that this conclusion is in direct conflict with the case of Green v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 205 U. S. 530, 51 L. ed. 916, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595. We have no desire to depart from that decision which, however, was an extreme case. There the railway company, carrying on no business in Pennsylvania, other than that hereinafter mentioned, and having its organization and tracks in another state, was sought to be held liable in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Pennsylvania by service upon one Heller, who was described as an agent of the corporation. As incidental and collateral to its business proper the company solicited freight and passenger traffic in other parts of the country than those through which its tracks ran. For that purpose it employed Heller, who had an office in Philadelphia, where he was known as district freight and passenger agent, to procure passengers and freight to be transported over the company's line. He had clerks and traveling passenger and freight agents who reported to him. He sold no tickets and received no payment for the transportation of freight, but took the money of those desiring to purchase tickets, and procured from one of the railroads running west from Philadelphia a ticket for Chicago and a prepaid order which gave the holder the right to receive from the company in Chicago a ticket over its road. Occasionally he sold to railroad employees, who already had tickets over intermediate lines, orders for reduced rates over the company's line. [587] In some cases, for the convenience of shippers who had received bills of lading from the initial line for goods routed over the company's line, he exchanged bills of lading over its line, which were not in force until the freight had been actually received by the company. Summarizing these facts, Mr. Justice

Digitized by Google

Moody, speaking for the court, said (p. 533):

"The business shown in this case was in substance nothing more than that of solicitation. Without undertaking to formulate any general rule defining what transactions will constitute 'doing business' in the sense that liability to service is incurred, we think that this is not enough to bring the defendant within the district so that process can be served upon it."

In the case now under consideration there was something more than mere solicitation. In response to the orders received, there was a continuous course of shipment of machines into Kentucky. There was authority to receive payment in money, check, or draft, and to take notes payable at banks in Kentucky.

It is further contended that, as enforced by the decision of the Kentucky court, the law, in its relation to interstate commerce, operates to burden that commerce. It is argued that a corporation engaged in purely interstate commerce within a state cannot be required to submit to regulations such as designating an agent upon whom process may be served as a condition of doing such business, and that as such requirement cannot be made, the ordinary agents of the corporation, although doing interstate business within the state, cannot by its laws be made amenable to judicial process within the state. The contention comes to this: so long as a foreign corporation engages in interstate commerce only, it is immune from the service of process under the laws of the state in which it is carrying on such business. This is indeed, as was said by the court of appeals of Kentucky, a novel proposition, and we are unable to [588] find a decision to support it, nor has one been called to our attention.

True, it has been held time and again that a state cannot burden interstate commerce or pass laws which amount to the regulation of such commerce; but this is a long way from holding that the ordinary process of the courts may not reach corporations carrying on business within the state which is wholly of an interstate commerce character. Such corporations are within the state, receiving the protection of its laws, and may, and often do, have large properties located within the state. In Davis v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 217 U. S. 157, 54 L. ed. 708, 27 L.R.A. (N.S.) 823, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463, 18 Ann. Cas. 907, this court held that cars engaged in interstate commerce and credits due for interstate transportation are not immune from seizure under the laws of the state regulating garnishment and attachment because of their connection with interstate commerce, and it was recognized that the states may pass laws enforcing the rights of citizens which affect interstate commerce, but fall short of regulating such commerce in the sense in which the Constitution gives sole jurisdiction to Congress; citing Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 103, 23 L. ed. 819, 820; Johnson v. Chicago & P. Elevator Co. 119 U. S. 388, 30 L. ed. 447, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 23, 32 L. ed. 346, 351, 2 Interst. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. ed. 268, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; and The Winnebago, 205 U. S. 354, 362, 51 L. ed. 836, 840, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509, in which this court sustained a lien under the laws of Michigan on a vessel designed to be used in both foreign and domestic trade.

In International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A. (N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103, it is said, it was held that a law of Kansas which required the filing by a foreign corporation engaged in interstate commerce of a statement of its financial condition as a prerequisite of the right to do such business, and which required a certificate from the secretary of state showing that such statements had been filed as a condition precedent to the right of the corporation to maintain a suit in that state, was void. But that case did not hold, as we should be [589] required to do to sustain the contention of the plaintiff in error in this case, that the fact that the corporation was carrying on interstate commerce business through duly authorized agents made it exempt from suit within the state by service upon such agents.

We are satisfied that the presence of a corporation within a state necessary to the service of process is shown when it appears that the corporation is there carrying on business in such sense as to manifest its presence within the state, although the business transacted may be entirely interstate in its character. In other words, this fact alone does not render the corporation immune from the ordinary process of the courts of the state.

It follows that the judgment of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky must be affirmed.

Digitized by Google

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY OF AMERICA, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 589–591.)

This case is governed by the decisions in International Harvester Co. v. Kentucky, ante, 1284, and International Harvester Co. v. Kentucky, ante, 1479.

[No. 298.]

Argued April 24, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the Boyle Circuit Court, in that state, of a violation of the state anti-trust laws. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 149 Ky. 41, 147 S. W. 760.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Alexander Pope Humphrey and Edgar A. Bancroft argued the cause, and, with Mr. Victor A. Remy, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Charles Carroll argued the cause, and, with Mr. James Garnett, Attorney General of Kentucky, and Messrs. Frank E. Daugherty, J. R. Mallory, J. C. Dedman, C. R. Hill, and G. D. Florence, filed a brief for defendant in error.

For contentions of counsel, see their briefs as reported in International Harvester Co. v. Kentucky, ante, 1479.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

A penal action was instituted by the defendant in error against the plaintiff in error in the Boyle circuit court of Kentucky under the anti-trust laws of that state. Summons having been served upon an alleged agent of the plaintiff in error, it filed a motion to quash the return for the reason, as alleged, that the person upon whom service had been made was not the authorized agent of the plaintiff in error, and that it was not doing business in Kentucky. The facts in this case, which are identical with those set out in the previous case (International Harvester Co. v. Kentucky, just decided, 234 U. S. 579, ante, 1479, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 944), show that the plaintiff in error had, prior to the commencement of this action, revoked the authority of an agent designated by it in compliance [591] with the laws of Kentucky, and had removed its office from the state, but that it had continued through its agents, the party served in this case being one of them, to solicit orders to be accepted outside of the state for the sale of machines which were to be delivered in Kentucky, and that its agents were authorized to receive money, checks, and drafts in payment therefor, or take the notes of purchasers, payable at any bank in Kentucky.

There are two questions in this case. The court of appeals, deciding that this case was governed by the previous case from Breckenridge county (147 Ky. 655, 145 S. W. 393), held that the service was good and that the anti-trust act was not unconstitutional and violative of the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution. 149 Ky. 41, 147 S. W. 760. Since the Federal question involving the validity of the anti-trust act was considered and decided adversely in the court of appeals, it, as well as the question of due service, is properly before us. Miedreich v. Lauenstein, 232 U. S. 236, 243, ante, 584, 589, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309, and cases there cited.

As we have just dealt with the sufficiency of service in the previous case, involving the same question, it may be disposed of here by merely referring to that decision. And, as the constitutional validity of the anti-trust act was specifically determined in cases Nos. 276, 291, and 292, entitled International Harvester Co. v. Kentucky, decided June 8, 1914, 234 U. S. 216, ante, 1284, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 853, that question is also concluded.

We therefore reach the conclusion that the plaintiff in error was doing business in Kentucky and that the service was sufficient, but that the law under which the action was brought is unconstitutional, and that the judgment of the Court of Appeals must be reversed, and accordingly remand the case to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

---

[592] LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
JOE HIGDON, Doing Business under the Firm Name of Crescent Coal Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 592–600.)

Error to state court — Federal question — raising on second trial.

1. Federal questions first raised by amend-

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

Digitized by Google

ed answers tendered after the case had been remanded by the highest state court to the trial court for a new trial will support the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court of a writ of error to the highest state court to review a judgment which affirmed the refusal of the trial court to permit the filing of such answers, where the highest state court gave consideration on the second appeal to the answers in their Federal aspect, and ruled concerning them.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1168–1248, 1288–1291, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — equal protection of the laws — procedure.

2. The protection of the due process of law and equal protection of the laws clauses of U. S. Const., 14th Amend., first invoked by the tender of amended answers after the case had been remanded to the trial court by the highest state court for a new trial, is not denied by the affirmance in the highest state court on a second appeal of the ruling of the trial court, refusing to permit the filing of such amended answers, where the highest state court in effect held that the facts upon which the Federal rights were based had been concluded by the former decision, which was the law of the case, and that to permit a relitigation of these facts because the result reached was alleged to violate constitutional provisions would reopen that which the court held had been settled by the decision on the first appeal, in which no infraction of Federal right was duly set up as required to lay the foundation for review.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 8, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulations — requiring carrier to move local freight between private spurs.

3. The effect upon interstate commerce of requiring under state authority that an interstate carrier move purely local freight between private spurs in the same city is so indirect and consequential that such requirement cannot be deemed to deprive the carrier of rights secured by the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 322.]

Submitted March 19, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a judgment which, on a second appeal, affirmed a judgment of the Henderson Circuit Court, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in a suit to recover damages from a carrier for its failure to furnish cars. Affirmed.

See same case below on first appeal, 143 Ky. 73, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 442, 135 S. W. 768; on second appeal, 149 Ky. 321, 148 S. W. 26.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Benjamin D. Warfield and Charles H. Moorman submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Malcolm Yeaman was on the brief:

This court has jurisdiction.

Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 43 L. ed. 364, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; Bridge Proprs. v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 1 Wall. 116, 17 L. ed. 571; Roby v. Colehour, 146 U. S. 153, 36 L. ed. 922, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York, 119 U. S. 110, 30 L. ed. 342, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Gross v. United States Mortg. Co. 108 U. S. 477, 27 L. ed. 795, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 940; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Mallatt v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 45 L. ed. 1015, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 241; National Mut. Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Brahan, 193 U. S. 635, 48 L. ed. 823, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 177, 47 L. ed. 765, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Fullerton v. Texas, 196 U. S. 193, 49 L. ed. 443, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; Corkran Oil & Development Co. v. Arnaudet, 199 U. S. 182, 50 L. ed. 143, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; Montana ex rel. Haire v. Rice, 204 U. S. 291, 51 L. ed. 490, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 136, 54 L. ed. 698, 29 L.R.A.(N.S.) 802, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126; Gloucester

---

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

As to when Federal question is raised in time to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of Federal Supreme Court over state courts—see note to Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 49 L. ed. U. S. 414.

On error to state court in cases presenting questions of the equal protection of the laws—see note to Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Cohen, ante, 1245.

On error to state courts involving questions of due process of law—see note to Burt v. Smith, 51 L. ed. U. S. 121.

On the duty of carrier to accept freight originating and terminating within city limits—see note to this case in the Kentucky Court of Appeals as reported in 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 442.

Digitized by Google

Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826.

Messrs. Henry Lane Stone and Edward S. Jouett also submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. Benjamin D. Warfield, Charles H. Moorman, and William A. Colston were on the brief:

The judgment of the court of appeals of Kentucky in this case deprives the plaintiff in error of the reasonable control of its property and facilities used in the conduct of its business, and therefore violates the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 158; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Hall, 136 Ky. 379, 124 S. W. 372, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 364; Fred G. Clark Co. v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 558; Dixon v. Central of Georgia R. Co. 110 Ga. 173, 35 S. E. 369; Elkins v. Boston & M. R. Co. 23 N. H. 275; Elliott, Railroads, § 1466; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Michigan R. Commission, 231 U. S. 457, ante, 310, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Hoover v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 156 Pa. 229, 22 L.R.A. 263, 36 Am. St. Rep. 43, 27 Atl. 282; Harp v. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. 118 Fed. 169; Hutchinson, Carr. §§ 59, 60, 144; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 699, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 69 Fed. 227; Johnson v. Midland R. Co. 4 Exch. 367, 18 L. J. Exch. N. S. 366, 6 Eng. Ry. & C. Cas. 61; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Nichols, 9 Kan. 247, 12 Am. Rep. 494; Railroad Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 173; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858. 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf, & S. I. R. Co. 84 Miss. 339, 66 L.R.A. 453, 37 So. 134; Lee v. Burgess, 9 Bush. 652; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 108 Ky. 628, 57 S. W. 508; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 105 Ky. 179, 43 L.R.A. 550, 48 S. W. 416; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 53 L. ed. 441, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Miner v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 422; Moore, Carr. p. 98; Oxlade v. North Eastern R. Co. 1 C. B. N. S. 454, 26 L. J. C. P. N. S. 129, 3 Jur. N. S. 637; Pitlock v. Wells, F. & Co. 109 Mass. 452; Pfister v. Central P. R. Co. 70 Cal. 169, 59 Am. Rep. 404, 11 Pac. 686; Santa Fe, P. & P. R. Co. v. Grant Bros. Constr. Co. 13 Ariz. 186, 108 Pac. 467; State ex rel. Ellis v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 52 Fla. 646, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 506, 41 So. 705; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Varble v. Bigley, 14 Bush, 698, 29 Am. Rep. 433; Wilson Produce Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 170; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

The judgment of the court of appeals of Kentucky in this case is contrary to the 14th Amendment because it requires plaintiff in error to perform a service at a rate that does not afford reasonable compensation for such service.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398; Atty. Gen. v. Old Colony R. Co. 160 Mass. 62, 22 L.R.A. 112, 35 N. E. 252; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 31 L. ed. 841, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 179, 32 L. ed. 380, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 403, 41 L. ed. 489, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The decision of the court of appeals of Kentucky in this case and §§ 214 and 215 of the Constitution of the state, as construed by the court in this decision, impose an unreasonable burden upon the interstate commerce of plaintiff in error, and are therefore repugnant to the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Wharton, 207 U. S. 328, 52 L. ed. 230, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Herndon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 135, 54 L. ed. 970, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 203 U. S. 335, 51 L. ed. 209, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 136, 54 L. ed. 698, 29 L.R.A.(N.S.) 802, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126.

Messrs. James W. Clay and J. F. Clay submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. A. Y. Clay was on the brief:

After a case has been tried on its merits, decided by the lower court upon the issues raised, and reversed by the state court of last resort, and remanded to the lower court for proceedings in conformity with the opinion, for the purpose of assessing and awarding the damages sustained, or for an accounting, then such opinion becomes the law of the case, by which the trial court is bound, and it is then too late for the defendant to raise a Federal question not raised upon the former trial.

Digitized by Google

Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Kirchoff, 169 U. S. 103, 42 L. ed. 677, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 395, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Western Electrical Supply Co. v. Abbeville Electric Light & P. Co. 197 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 765, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Hopkins v. Adam Roth Grocery Co. 105 Ky. 357, 49 S. W. 18; Thompson v. Louisville Bkg. Co. 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1611, 55 S. W. 1080.

The circuit court may have overruled the motion to file the amendments upon the ground that they were not verified as required by § 116 of the Civil Code of Kentucky.

Armstrong v. Foley, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 802, 15 S. W. 355; Park v. McReynolds, 111 Ky. 651, 64 S. W. 517.

Or upon the ground that no showing was made by affidavit or otherwise why the issues presented were so long delayed.

Asher v. Uhl, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 938, 87 S. W. 307.

Or it may have thought that to permit the amendments to be filed at that late day would be an abuse of discretion.

Donnelly v. Pepper, 91 Ky. 363, 15 S. W. 879; Louisville Underwriters v. Pence, 93 Ky. 96, 40 Am. St. Rep. 176, 19 S. W. 10.

A common carrier may have and may operate its terminal facilities for its own convenience. It may have the right to refuse the use of these facilities for local shipments, between industries within the terminal limits of Henderson; but when it furnishes cars and transports them from one industry to another in such terminal limits, having physical connection with its road, it is bound to perform similar service for all having such connection. It is therefore the duty of the plaintiff in error in this case to accept and transport the coal of the defendant in error.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 138, 53 L. ed. 443, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Bedford-Bowling Green Stone Co. v. Oman, 115 Ky. 369, 73 S. W. 1038; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Pittsburg & K. Coal Co. 111 Ky. 960, 55 L.R.A. 601, 98 Am. St. Rep. 447, 64 S. W. 969; Straight Creek Coal & Coke Co. v. Straight Creek Coal Min. Co. 135 Ky. 536, 122 S. W. 842; McDuffee v. Portland & R. R. Co. 52 N. H. 430, 13 Am. Rep. 72; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Garrett, 231 U. S. 298, ante, 229, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Union P. R. Co. v. Goodridge, 149 U. S. 681, 37 L. ed. 896, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 970; Interstate Stock-Yards Co. v. Indianapolis Union R. Co. 99 Fed. 472; Barden v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 194; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Keystone M. & M. Co. v. L. & N. R. R. Co. (State Railroad Commission, Nov. 30, 1909); Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Michigan R. Commission, 231 U. S. 457, ante, 310, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Mississippi R. Commission, 203 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 289, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Northern P. R. Co. v. North Dakota, 216 U. S. 579, 54 L. ed. 624, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

Having established a flat rate of $2 per car, plus $2 per car for car rental, for all commodities where such service is performed, it was legally bound to perform the same service for the defendant in error at that rate.

Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Mississippi R. Commission, 203 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 289, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. ed. 258, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Augusta Brokerage Co. v. Central of Georgia R. Co. 5 Ga. App. 187, 62 S. E. 996; American Warehousemen's Asso. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 7 Inters. Com. Rep. 564; Hilton Lumber Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 141 N. C. 171, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 225, 53 S. E. 823; Straight Creek Coal & Coke Co. v. Straight Creek Coal Min. Co. 135 Ky. 537, 122 S. W. 842.

Where a carrier demands and receives a higher price for its service than it is legally entitled to charge, the excess paid may be recovered. Where, however, it refuses to perform the service, and the shipper, by reason thereof, has to pay a higher price or a higher rate, to obtain delivery, from or to other sources, the carrier is liable for the difference between what the shipper would have had to pay if the service had been performed, and what he necessarily did have to pay by reason of the refusal of the carrier to perform the service.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Walker, 110 Ky. 965, 63 S. W. 20.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant in error, Joe Higdon, doing business under the name of the Crescent Coal Company, brought suit in the Henderson circuit court, of Kentucky, to recover damages for alleged loss because of the failure of the railroad company to furnish him with cars at the Keystone Mining & Manufacturing Company's mine at Henderson, Kentucky, with which to perform certain contracts which he had made, and which he was prevented [595] from fulfilling by the refusal of the railroad company. While the action was originally brought at law, it was transferred upon motion of the plaintiff in error to the equity docket. The decree of the circuit court dismissing the petition was reversed in the court of appeals for Kentucky, and the case was remanded for a new trial in conformity to the opinion of that court (143 Ky. 73, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 442, 135 S. W. 768. The case was again tried and a decree for Higdon for damages was affirmed by the court of appeals (149 Ky. 321, 148 S. W. 26), and the case was brought here on writ of error. A motion to dismiss the writ for want of jurisdiction was, on December 16, 1912, postponed to the hearing upon the merits.

Digitized by Google

From the facts found and apparent in the record it appears: Higdon, doing business as the Crescent Coal Company, was engaged in buying and selling coal in the city of Henderson, and the railroad company was a common carrier having its main line running in and through that city. It had a belt line and various spurs and tracks leading from its main and belt lines into industrial plants in Henderson. The Keystone Company was operating a coal mine in Henderson, which was connected with the main and belt lines of the plaintiff in error's road by a spur which the latter operated and controlled. Higdon contracted with the Keystone Company for 20,000 tons of coal to be delivered to him on the spur track, and afterwards contracted with various plants having spur connections to deliver coal in carload lots at certain prices. Thereafter he applied to the railroad company to furnish him cars at the Keystone Company's mine, and to transport coal in them to other spurs at Henderson, offering to pay therefor $4 per car, or at the rate of about 10 cents a ton, which he contended was according to the published rates of the railroad company. It refused to furnish him cars except at the rate of 50 cents a ton, which Higdon declined, and [596] afterwards the railroad company informed him that it would not furnish cars at any price. This action was brought with the result which we have stated.

No Federal question was raised in the first trial or upon the first appeal to the Kentucky court of appeals. The alleged Federal questions are said to arise because of two amended answers which the plaintiff in error tendered, and which the circuit court refused to permit it to file. In its first amended answer the plaintiff in error alleged that it had built side tracks and spurs from its main track to certain industries in Henderson for the delivery and receipt of freight to and from points beyond that city; that it had constructed such a spur to the mine of the Keystone Company, with the express understanding that the plaintiff in error would not transport coal for the Keystone Company or for anyone else between that spur and other spurs at Henderson, but that it should be used solely for traffic coming into and going out of Henderson; that it was not engaged and did not propose to engage in the business of transportation as a common carrier between industries at Henderson or any other station, or in transporting coal from the Keystone Company's mine to spur tracks at Henderson, and that while it performed a switching service, it did so only when it preceded or followed transportation beyond Henderson. It further alleged that the service requested by Higdon was a transportation service which the railroad company declined to perform because it did not profess to and did not engage in that business, and that it was not its duty as a common carrier so to do or to furnish cars for such purpose. It also alleged that its tariffs did not fix a rate for the movement of coal from the mine of the Keystone Company to the spurs at Henderson, and that it did not offer by such tariffs to perform such service; and that there was no other demand for such service, and no other coal mine at Henderson. And it alleged that it was not its duty to [597] perform such service for $4 per car or for any other sum, but that a rate of 50 cents a ton, which was the legal rate in effect for hauling coal from points near Henderson to that city and which was reasonable, would have been a reasonable charge for the service requested by Higdon, and that a smaller rate would not have been adequate compensation therefor; and concluded that to compel the railroad company to perform the service asked by Higdon at $4 per car or for a rate less than 50 cents a ton would be to compel it to perform a service which, under the law, it was not its duty to perform, and at less than cost thereof, and for less than the service was worth, with the result of depriving the railroad company of its property without due process of law, and denying it the equal protection of the law, contrary to the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

In its second amended answer it set up, besides certain of the allegations in the first amended answer to the effect that it was not its duty to move freight between private spurs, that its facilities at Henderson for delivering and receiving freight were amply sufficient to accommodate the public; that it was engaged in interstate commerce, and that to require the defendant to perform the service asked by Higdon would impose upon it the duty of performing like services at other points on its line in Kentucky, and would impose upon it unreasonable, unjustifiable, and unwarrantable duties which it as a common carrier was not required to perform, and would be a direct and unreasonable and unwarrantable interference with its interstate business and its duties as a carrier of interstate commerce, and would impose an unreasonable burden upon interstate commerce, contrary to § 8 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States.

Digitized by Google

Had the court of appeals put its decision upon the ground that the duty of the circuit court was simply to [598] give effect to the judgment of the court of appeals by enforcing the rights of the parties upon the principles settled by it in its first decision, and that the attempt to inject Federal questions into the record by amended pleadings after the case was remanded did not seasonably raise Federal questions reviewable by the court of appeals, the case would be ruled by Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Kirchoff, 169 U. S. 103, 42 L. ed. 677, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260, in which this court held that such attempts to raise Federal questions came too late to lay the foundation for review here. See also Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 395, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Bonner v. Gorman, 213 U. S. 86, 53 L. ed. 709, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 483.

The court of appeals of Kentucky in the opinion delivered in the second case did affirm the principle of the binding character of its first decision, but as it gave consideration to the offered amended answers in their Federal aspect, and ruled concerning them, we have concluded not to sustain the motion to dismiss, but to regard the Federal questions as so far passed upon by the court of appeals as to present a case reviewable here. Miedreich v. Lauenstein, 232 U. S. 236, 243, ante, 584, 589, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309.

Looking to the opinion of the court of appeals in the second case, as we may properly do, to determine the nature of its ruling concerning the offered amended answers, we find that it held that the first part of the first amended answer was simply an elaboration of the defense presented by the second paragraph of the original answer, and that on the former appeal it had held that those facts did not present a defense to the action, and that the former opinion was the law of the case, and further consideration of that matter was unnecessary. Coming, then, to consider the conclusion of the averment of the first amended answer that a rate of $4 per car would be below the cost of the service, and therefore confiscatory, it did not pass upon the effect of that charge if required of the railroad company against its will, but held that its rates as fixed [599] by its own tariffs, interpreted by its conduct, as held in the first opinion of the court of appeals, had made that rate applicable to the shipments requested by Higdon, and that therefore the requirement of performing the service at $4 per car was not imposed upon the plaintiff in error except because of its own tariff rate, which it might itself change at any time, but which, while it was in force, should affect all shippers alike, including Higdon. A reference to the former opinion of the court shows that the question whether the published tariffs of the railroad company applied to such service as Higdon required was elaborately considered, and it was held that it did so apply, and that as the railroad company was performing that service for other shippers similarly situated, to avoid discrimination, which the Constitution and laws of Kentucky inhibited, it was required to give the same rate to Higdon. It therefore results that in the so-called denial of the Federal right set up in the first amended answer the court in effect held that the facts upon which it was based had been concluded by the former decision, which was the law of the case, and to permit the railroad company to relitigate these facts because the result reached was alleged to violate constitutional provisions would permit it to relitigate that which the court held had been settled against it by the first decision of the court of appeals, in which no infraction of Federal right was duly set up as required to lay the foundation for review.

As to the matter set up in the second amended answer, the court held that it made no defense within the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, because all the court had done was to make a decision which required the carrier to obey the state Constitution and laws which prevented discrimination as to purely intrastate shipments. We think the court was right in this conclusion. The state had full authority over shipments purely intrastate, and the facts set up in the [600] second amended answer, that the requirement made at Henderson might be made at other points in the state, and would result in an unnecessary and unreasonable burden upon interstate commerce, only avers an indirect effect upon such commerce of the exercise of a right clearly within the authority of the state; and being only of that indirect and consequential character, it does not deprive the railroad company of rights secured by the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States.

Digitized by Google

We conclude that the rulings made in the Court of Appeals of Kentucky concerning the first and second amended answers which were not permitted to be filed in the court of original jurisdiction did not deprive the railroad company of rights secured by the Federal Constitution.

Affirmed.

EASTERN STATES RETAIL LUMBER DEALERS' ASSOCIATION et al., Appts.,
v.
UNITED STATES. (No. 511.)

WILLIAM C. McBRIDE, Individually and as President of the Retail Lumbermen's Association of Philadelphia, et al., Appts.,
v.
UNITED STATES. (No. 550.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 600–614.)

Monopoly — combination of retailers — suppressing competition by wholesalers:

The concerted, systematic, and periodic circulation by associations of retail lumber dealers among their members through a so-called "official report" of confidential information of the names of wholesale lumber dealers engaged in interstate trade reported as soliciting from, or selling directly to, consumers, such members, upon learning of any such instances, being called upon to report the same promptly, supplying detailed information as to the particulars of the transaction, violates the prohibitions of the anti-trust act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), against combinations in restraint of interstate trade and commerce, where, although each retailer is left free to act as he sees fit, these reports were circulated with the intention and effect of causing the retailers to withhold their patronage from the listed wholesalers, and thus directly and appreciably impairing their interstate trade.

[For other cases, see Monopolies, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 511, 550.]

Argued October 24 and 27, 1913. Decided June 22, 1914.

TWO APPEALS from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a decree enjoining a combination of retail lumber dealers, alleged to violate the Sherman anti-trust act. Affirmed.

See same case below, 201 Fed. 581.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. A. B. Cruikshank argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants in No. 511:

The decree appealed from is in almost direct conflict with the decision in the Anderson Case by this court.

Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.

The learned court below failed to apply, as it should have done, the rule of reason to the determination of this case.

Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; Harrison v. Glucose Sugar Ref. Co. 58 L.R.A. 915, 53 C. C. A. 484, 116 Fed. 304; Re Greene, 52 Fed. 118; Fisheries Co. v. Lennen, 116 Fed. 217; National Enameling & Stamping Co. v. Haberman, 120 Fed. 415; Camors-McConnell Co. v. McConnell, 140 Fed. 412; Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; United States v. American Tobacco Co. 221 U. S. 106, 55 L. ed. 663, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; Anderson v. United States, supra; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 53 Fed. 450.

The words "in restraint of trade," used in the anti-trust act, should be interpreted in this case as having the meaning given to them at common law.

Standard Oil Co v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 59, 55 L. ed. 619, 644, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; 1 Kent, Com. p. 464; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 545, 9 L. ed. 773, 823; Rice v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 1 Black, 358, 17 L. ed. 147, Hardcastle, Statutory Law, 4th ed. p. 161; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 24 L.R.A. 73, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 443, 7 C. C. A. 15, 19 U. S. App. 36, 58 Fed. 58; Prescott & A. C. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 73 Fed. 438.

In former days in England the rule of reason was always applied in determining what was a restraint of trade at common law; and nothing was held to be such which did not create or was not intended to create a monopoly.

Homer v. Ashford, 3 Bing. 326, 11 J. B. Moore, 91, 4 L. J. C. P. 62; Mitchel v. Reynolds, 1 P. Wms. 181; Horner v. Graves, 7 Bing. 735, 5 Moore & P. 768, 9 L. J. C. P. 192; Ward v. Byrne, 5 Mees & W. 548, 9 L. J. Exch. N. S. 14, 3 Jur. 1175; Mallan v. May, 11 Mees. & W. 667; Whittaker v. Howe, 3 Beav. 383; Pollock, Contr. pp. 359, 360;

NOTE.—On illegal trusts under modern anti-trust laws—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689.

On the legality of combinations or agreements which restrict the class of persons to whom commodities shall be sold, or from whom they shall be bought—see note to Cleland v. Anderson, 5 L.R.A. (N.S.) 136.

Digitized by Google

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 347, 41 L. ed. 1029, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

Trade-restrictive customs, practices, and regulations to enforce specialization were extant in England in the Middle Ages, and later, with the sanction of the common law, and were never considered as being in restraint of trade or otherwise illegal.

Ashley, English Economic History, pt. 1, p. 95, pt. 2, pp. 16, 165; Lalor's Cyc. "Guilds"; Ashley's Introduction to English Economic History & Theory, 1893, vol. 1, p. 104, vol. 2, p. 13.

The modern common-law decisions are to the same effect; private agreements or combinations made in restraint of private competition for trade defensive or competitive purposes have not been considered in restraint of trade. There is no common-law authority, ancient or modern, for the contrary doctrine.

Hearn v. Griffin, 2 Chitty, 407; Wickens v. Evans, 3 Younge & J. 318; Leather Cloth Co. v. Lorsont, L. R. 9 Eq. 354, 39 L. J. Ch. N. S. 86, 21 L. T. N. S. 661, 18 Week. Rep. 572; Collins v. Locke, L. R. 4 App. Cas. 674, 48 L. J. P. C. N. S. 68, 41 L. T. N. S. 292, 28 Week. Rep. 189; Rousillon v. Rousillon, L. R. 14 Ch. Div. 351, 49 L. J. Ch. N. S. 338, 42 L. T. N. S. 679, 28 Week. Rep. 623, 44 J. P. 663; Nordenfelt v. Maxim-Nordenfelt Guns & Ammunition Co [1894] A. C. 535, 63 L. J. Ch. N. S. 908, 11 Reports, 1, 71 L. T. N. S. 489, 6 Eng. Rul. Cas. 413; Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. 64, 66, 22 L. ed. 315, 318; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 564, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Fowle v. Park, 131 U. S. 88, 33 L. ed. 67, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; National Enameling & Stamping Co. v. Haberman, 120 Fed. 415; Camors-McConnell Co. v. McConnell, 140 Fed. 412; Central Shade Roller Co. v. Cushman, 143 Mass. 353, 9 N. E. 629; Skrainka v. Scharringhausen, 8 Mo. App. 522; Herriman v. Menzies, 115 Cal. 16, 35 L.R.A. 318, 56 Am. St. Rep. 81, 46 Pac. 730, 44 Pac. 660; California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 259, 65 Am. Dec. 511; Hubbard v. Miller, 27 Mich. 19, 15 Am. Rep. 153; Beal v. Chase, 31 Mich. 490; Harbison-Walker Refractories v. Stanton, 227 Pa. 55, 75 Atl. 988; Smalley v. Greene, 52 Iowa, 241, 35 Am. Rep. 267, 3 N. W. 78; Ontario Salt Co. v. Merchants' Salt Co. 18 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 540; Mandeville v. Harman, 42 N. J. Eq. 185, 7 Atl. 37; Bancroft v. Union Embossing Co. 72 N. H. 402, 64 L.R.A. 298, 57 Atl. 97; Kronschnabel-Smith Co. v. Kronschnabel, 87 Minn. 230, 91 N. W. 892; People's Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Chicago Gaslight & Coke Co. 20 Ill. App. 473; Andrews v. Kingsbury, 212 Ill. 97, 72 N. E. 11; Master Stevedores' Asso. v. Walsh, 2 Daly, 1; Watertown Thermometer Co. v. Pool, 51 Hun, 157, 4 N. Y. Supp. 861; Diamond Match Co. v. Roeber, 106 N. Y. 473, 60 Am. Rep. 464, 13 N. E. 419; Hodge v. Sloan, 107 N. Y. 244, 1 Am. St. Rep. 816, 17 N. E. 335; Wood v. Whitehead Bros. Co. 165 N. Y. 545, 59 N. E. 357; Chappel v. Brockway, 21 Wend. 157; Matthews v. Associated Press, 136 N. Y. 333, 32 Am. St. Rep. 741, 32 N. E. 981.

And whereas formerly the distinction was in some instances attempted to be made between contracts in partial restraint of trade, but which were reasonable and valid, and therefore might be enforced, and those in general restraint of trade, which were invalid and unenforceable; the true and modern rule is that while contracts in actual restraint of trade are illegal, no contract which is reasonable can be considered to be in restraint of trade.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 24 L.R.A. 73, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 443, 7 C. C. A. 15, 19 U. S. App. 36, 58 Fed. 72.

Neither the acts performed by defendants nor those attributed to them in this proceeding constitute a monopoly or tend thereto.

Re Greene, 52 Fed. 115; Monopolies Case, 11 Coke, 84b; Noyes, Intercorporate Relations, 2d ed. §§ 332, 389; State v. Duluth Bd. of Trade, 107 Minn. 506, 23 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1260, 121 N. W. 395; People v. North River Sugar Ref. Co. 54 Hun, 354, 5 L.R.A. 386, 7 N. Y. Supp. 406; National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, 197 U. S. 115, 129, 49 L. ed. 689, 694, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Lough v. Outerbridge, 143 N. Y. 282, 25 L.R.A. 674, 42 Am. St. Rep. 712, 38 N. E. 292; Brady v. Mattern, 125 Iowa, 158, 106 Am. St. Rep. 291, 100 N. W. 358; Herriman v. Menzies, 115 Cal. 20, 35 L.R.A. 318, 56 Am. St. Rep. 81, 46 Pac. 730, 44 Pac. 660; Rafferty v. Buffalo City Gas Co. 37 App. Div. 618, 56 N. Y. Supp. 288.

Whatever interference with competition and with interstate commerce was attendant upon the action of the defendants was incidental, indirect, and comparatively insignificant, and furnishes no ground for interference by this or any other court; nor could it be judicially interfered with without attacking the very competitive system which the Federal statute aims to sustain.

Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Phillips v. Iola Portland Cement Co. 61 C. C. A. 19, 125 Fed. 593; Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689, 60 C. C. A. 290, 125 Fed. 454.

Contracts between parties, which have for their object the removal of a rival and competitor in a business, are not to be regarded as contracts in restraint of trade. They do not close the field of competition except to the particular party to be affected.

Digitized by Google

Wood v. Whitehead Bros. Co. 165 N. Y. 551, 59 N. E. 357; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 593, 43 L. ed. 290, 296, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 616, 43 L. ed. 300, 306, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 568, 43 L. ed. 259, 287, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 234, 245, 44 L. ed. 136, 145, 149, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Cincinnati, P. B. S. & P. Packet Co. v. Bay, 200 U. S. 179, 50 L. ed. 428, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Re Greene, 52 Fed. 115; United States Chemical Co. v. Provident Chemical Co. 64 Fed. 946; Re Grice, 79 Fed. 644; Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689, 60 C. C. A. 290, 125 Fed. 458; Phillips v. Iola Portland Cement Co. 61 C. C. A. 19, 125 Fed. 593; Camors-McConnell Co. v. McConnell, 140 Fed. 412; Bigelow v. Calumet & H. Min. Co. 167 Fed. 704; United States v. Standard Oil Co. 173 Fed. 177; Union Pacific Coal Co. v. United States, 97 C. C. A. 578, 173 Fed. 737; Virtue v. Creamery Package Mfg. Co. 102 C. C. A. 413, 179 Fed. 115; California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 258, 65 Am. Dec. 511; Smalley v. Greene, 52 Iowa, 241, 35 Am. Rep. 267, 3 N. W. 78; Schwalm v. Holmes, 49 Cal. 665; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L.R.A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 398, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; Walsh v. Dwight, 40 App. Div. 513, 58 N. Y. Supp. 91; Brown v. Rounsavell, 78 Ill. 589; Noyes, Intercorporate Relations, § 335, p. 603.

It is, of course, settled that in order to obtain a decree against defendants, enjoining their proceedings as in restraint of trade, it must be made to appear either that their object or means adopted were unlawful.

Citizens' Light, Heat & P. Co. v. Montgomery Light & Water P. Co. 171 Fed. 560; Allen v. Flood [1898] A. C. 166, 67 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 119, 77 L. T. N. S. 717, 46 Week. Rep. 258, 17 Eng. Rul. Cas. 285.

The transactions complained of are lawful even if considered as constituting a contract for exclusive dealing.

Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 361, 48 L. ed. 679, 710, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Re Corning, 51 Fed. 211; Re Terrell, 51 Fed. 213; Re Greene, 52 Fed. 117; Moroney Hardware Co. v. Goodwin Pottery Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 120 S. W. 1088; Chappel v. Brockway, 21 Wend. 157; Hodge v. Sloan, 107 N. Y. 244, 1 Am. St. Rep. 816, 17 N. E. 335; Harbison-Walker Refractories Co. v. Stanton, 227 Pa. 55, 75 Atl. 988; California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 259, 65 Am. Dec. 511; Schwalm v. Holmes, 49 Cal. 665; Southern Fire Brick & Clay Co. v. Garden City Sand Co. 223 Ill. 616, 9 L.R.A. (N.S.) 446, 79 N. E. 313, 7 Ann. Cas. 50; Clark v. Crosby, 37 Vt. 188; Meyer v. Estes, 164 Mass. 457, 32 L.R.A. 283, 41 N. E. 683; Forrest Photographic Co. v. Hutchinson Grocery Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 108 S. W. 768; Crystal Ice Mfg. Co. v. San Antonio Brewing Asso. 8 Tex. Civ. App. 1, 27 S. W. 210; Bancroft v. Union Embossing Co. 72 N. H. 402, 64 L.R.A. 298, 57 Atl. 97; Walter A. Wood Mowing & Reaping Co. v. Greenwood Hardware Co. 75 S. C. 378, 9 L.R.A. (N.S.) 501, 55 S. E. 973, 9 Ann. Cas. 902; Continental Ins. Co. v. Fire Underwriters, 67 Fed. 310; Dunlap's Cable News Co. v. Stone, 39 N. Y. S. R. 237, 15 N. Y. Supp. 2; Wickens v. Evans, 3 Younge & J. 318; People's Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Chicago Gaslight & Coke Co. 20 Ill. App. 473; Collins v. Locke, L. R. 4 App. Cas. 674, 48 L. J. P. C. N. S. 68, 41 L. T. N. S. 292, 28 Week. Rep. 189; Jones v. Fell, 5 Fla. 510; Hearn v. Griffin, 2 Chitty, 407; Ontario Salt Co. v. Merchants' Salt Co. 18 Grant, Ch. (U. C.) 540.

Similar arrangements have been held to be legal even where prices were to be fixed in combination.

Central Shade Roller Co. v. Cushman, 143 Mass. 353, 9 N. E. 629; Herriman v. Menzies, 115 Cal. 16, 35 L.R.A. 318, 56 Am. St. Rep. 81, 46 Pac. 730, 44 Pac. 660; Walsh v. Dwight, 40 App. Div. 513, 58 N. Y. Supp. 91; Lough v. Outerbridge, 143 N. Y. 271, 25 L.R.A. 674, 42 Am. St. Rep. 712, 38 N. E. 292, 145 N. Y. 601, 40 N. E. 164; Skrainka v. Scharringhausen, 8 Mo. App. 522.

The transactions complained of were lawful if considered as a combination.

Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Hollis (Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Lumbermen's Asso.) 54 Minn. 223, 21 L.R.A. 337, 40 Am. St. Rep. 319, 55 N. W. 1119; Dueber Watch Case Mfg. Co. v. E. Howard Watch & Clock Co. 55 Fed. 851; National Fireproofing Co. v. Mason Builders' Asso. 26 L.R.A. (N.S.) 148, 94 C. C. A. 535, 169 Fed. 259; Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor [1892] A. C. 49, 61 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 295, 66 L. T. N. S. 1, 40 Week. Rep. 337, 7 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 120, 56 J. P. 101; Collins v. American News Co. 34 Misc. 260, 69 N. Y. Supp. 638; Com. v. Hunt, 4 Met. 134, 38 Am. Dec. 346; Hunt v. Simonds, 19 Mo. 583; Brewster v. C. Miller's Sons Co. 101 Ky. 368, 38 L.R.A. 505, 41 S. W. 301; Ulery v. Chicago Live Stock Exch. 54 Ill. App. 233; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 599, 602, 43 L. ed. 290, 298, 299, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Arkansas Brokerage Co. v. Dunn, 35 L.R.A. (N.S.) 464, 97 C. C. A. 454, 173 Fed. 899; Jacobs v. Cohen, 183 N. Y. 207, 2 L.R.A. (N.S.) 292, 111 Am. St. Rep. 730, 76 N. E. 5, 5 Ann. Cas. 280; Macauley Bros. v. Tierney, 19 R. I. 255, 37 L.R.A. 455, 61 Am. St. Rep. 770, 33 Atl. 1; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Asso. 175 N. Y. 1, 62 L.R.A. 632, 96 Am. St. Rep. 578, 67 N. E. 136; Heim v. New York Stock Exch. 64 Misc. 529, 118 N. Y. Supp. 591.

Digitized by Google

The transactions complained of were lawful if considered as concerted acts.

Cooley, Torts, 328; Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689, 60 C. C. A. 290, 125 Fed. 454; Mills v. United States Printing Co. 99 App. Div. 608, 91 N. Y. Supp. 185; Continental Ins. Co. v. Fire Underwriters, 67 Fed. 310; Fonotipia v. Bradley, 171 Fed. 959; Wellington v. Small, 3 Cush. 145, 50 Am. Dec. 719; Vegelahn v. Guntner, 167 Mass. 108, 35 L.R.A. 722, 57 Am. St. Rep. 443, 44 N. E. 1077; Karges Furniture Co. v. Amalgamated Woodworkers Local Union, 165 Ind. 421, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 788, 75 N. E. 877, 6 Ann. Cas. 829; Hunt v. Simonds, 19 Mo. 583; Ulery v. Chicago Live Stock Exch. 54 Ill. App. 233; Brewster v. C. Miller's Sons Co. 101 Ky. 368, 38 L.R.A. 505, 41 S. W. 301; Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Hollis (Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Lumbermen's Asso.) 54 Minn. 223, 21 L.R.A. 337, 40 Am. St. Rep. 319, 55 N. W. 1119; National Protective Asso. v. Cumming, 170 N. Y. 321, 58 L.R.A. 135, 88 Am. St. Rep. 648, 63 N. E. 369, 53 App. Div. 236, 65 N. Y. Supp. 946; Jacobs v. Cohen, 183 N. Y. 212, 2 L.R.A. (N.S.) 292, 111 Am. St. Rep. 730, 76 N. E. 5, 5 Ann. Cas. 280; Wunch v. Shankland, 59 App. Div. 482, 69 N. Y. Supp. 349; Collins v. American News Co. 34 Misc. 263, 69 N. Y. Supp. 638; Allen v. Flood [1898] A. C. 1, 67 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 119, 77 L. T. N. S. 717, 46 Week. Rep. 258, 17 Eng. Rul. Cas. 285; Allis-Chalmers Co. v. Iron Molders' Union, 150 Fed. 155; W. & A. Fletcher Co. v. International Asso. — N. J. Eq. —, 55 Atl. 1077; Atkins v. W. A. Fletcher Co. 65 N. J. Eq. 658, 55 Atl. 1074; Foster v. Retail Clerks' International Protective Asso. 39 Misc. 48, 78 N. Y. Supp. 860; Com. v. Hunt, 4 Met. 111, 38 Am. Dec. 346; Longshore Printing Co. v. Howell, 26 Or. 527, 28 L.R.A. 464, 46 Am. St. Rep. 640, 38 Pac. 547; Jones v. Fell, 5 Fla. 510; Gregory v. Brunswick, 6 Mann. & G. 205, 1 Car. & K. 24, 1 Dowl. & L. 518, 6 Scott, N. R. 809.

The practice and methods of defendants in obtaining information, sending notices, etc., were proper.

6 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 595; Montgomery Ward & Co. v. South Dakota Retail Merchants' & Hardware Dealers' Asso. 150 Fed. 418; National Fireproofing Co. v. Mason Builders' Co. 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 148, 94 C. C. A. 535, 169 Fed. 269; Cote v. Murphy, 159 Pa. 420, 23 L.R.A. 135, 39 Am. St. Rep. 686, 28 Atl. 190; National Protective Asso. v. Cumming, 170 N. Y. 315, 58 L.R.A. 135, 88 Am. St. Rep. 648, 63 N. E. 369; Allen v. Flood [1898] A. C. 1, 67 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 119, 77 L. T. N. S. 717, 46 Week. Rep. 258, 17 Eng. Rul. Cas. 285; Reynolds v. Plumbers' Material Protective Asso. 30 Misc. 709, 63 N. Y. Supp. 303; Vegelahn v. Guntner, 167 Mass. 92, 35 L.R.A. 722, 57 Am. St. Rep. 443, 44 N. E. 1077; Macauley Bros. v. Tierney, 19 R. I. 255, 37 L.R.A. 455, 61 Am. St. Rep. 770, 33 Atl. 1; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Asso. 175 N. Y. 12, 62 L.R.A. 632, 96 Am. St. Rep. 578, 67 N. E. 136.

There has been no unlawful boycott in this case.

Mills v. United States Printing Co. 99 App. Div. 610, 91 N. Y. Supp. 185; Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. 19 L.R.A. 387, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 522, 54 Fed. 738.

The acts of defendants complained of here are not within the mischiefs sought to be remedied or prevented by the Sherman act.

United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 51–57, 55 L. ed. 641, 644, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; Brett v. Ebel, 29 App. Div. 260, 51 N. Y. Supp. 573; Spelling, Trusts, 1893, § 120; Cook, Corp. § 503a; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 53 Fed. 455, 166 U. S. 290, 355, 41 L. ed. 1007, 1032, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 403, 48 L. ed. 679, 727, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; United States v. Du-Pont, 188 Fed. 151.

All the legal presumptions are in favor of the defendants in this proceeding, and the petitioner is required not merely to make out an affirmative case, but to overcome those presumptions incident to the character of the charges.

Cincinnati, P. B. S. & P. Packet Co. v. Bay, 200 U. S. 179, 184, 50 L. ed. 428, 432, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Bigelow v. Calumet & H. Min. Co. 94 C. C. A. 13, 167 Fed. 732.

The anti-trust act of July 2, 1890, under which this proceeding is brought, is a criminal act, and for this and other reasons should be cautiously construed and applied, and all doubts resolved against the petitioner.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 24 L.R.A. 73, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 443, 7 C. C. A. 15, 19 U. S. App. 36, 58 Fed. 77; United States v. Swift, 188 Fed. 97; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 401, 48 L. ed. 679, 726, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Prescott & A. C. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 73 Fed. 438; Leslie v. Lorillard, 110 N. Y. 533, 1 L.R.A. 456, 18 N. E. 363; Herriman v. Menzies, 115 Cal. 21, 35

Digitized by Google

L.R.A. 318, 56 Am. St. Rep. 81, 46 Pac. 730, 44 Pac. 660.

The facts that certain wholesale lumber dealers have been and they or others may be deprived of certain sales and profits by defendant associations' propaganda work does not create a right to injunctive relief; it is a case of damnum absque injuria.

National Fireproofing Co. v. Mason Builders' Asso. 145 Fed. 260, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 148, 94 C. C. A. 535, 169 Fed. 259; National Protective Asso. v Cumming, 53 App. Div. 227, 65 N. Y. Supp. 946, 170 N. Y. 315, 58 L.R.A. 135, 88 Am. St. Rep. 648, 63 N. E. 369; Heywood v. Tillson, 75 Me. 225, 46 Am. Rep. 373; Rogers v. Dutt, 13 Moore, P. C. C. 209; Allen v. Flood [1898] A. C. 138, 67 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 119, 77 L. T. N. S. 717, 46 Week. Rep. 258, 17 Eng. Rul. Cas. 285; Thomas v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 788, 62 Fed. 819.

Even admitting petitioner's theory of an actual combination, defendants have deprived no one of any substantial legal right.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 24 L.R.A. 73, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 443, 7 C. C. A. 15, 19 U. S. App. 36, 58 Fed. 86.

The effect on prices is not determinative of the character of any contract or combination under the anti-trust act.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 323, 41 L. ed. 1007, 1021, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Jellico Mountain Coal & Coke Co. 12 L.R.A. 753, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 626, 46 Fed. 432; United States v. Coal Dealers' Asso. 85 Fed. 252; Strait v. National Harrow Co. 18 N. Y. Supp. 224; Re Greene, 52 Fed. 117; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 592, 43 L. ed. 290, 296, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

The decree asked for by petitioner is not warranted by sound public policy.

United States Chemical Co. v. Provident Chemical Co. 64 Fed. 950; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 403, 48 L. ed. 727, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; National Ben. Co. v. Union Hospital Co. 45 Minn. 275, 11 L.R.A. 437, 47 N. W. 806; Leslie v. Lorillard, 110 N. Y. 534, 1 L.R.A. 456, 18 N. E. 363; Beal v. Chase, 31 Mich. 521; Fonotipia v. Bradley, 171 Fed. 959; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 53 Fed. 440, 24 L.R.A. 73, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 443, 7 C. C. A. 15, 19 U. S. App. 36, 58 Fed. 69, 166 U. S. 323, 41 L. ed. 1021, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Board of Trade v. Christie Grain & Stock Co. 198 U. S. 236, 247, 49 L. ed. 1031, 1037, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 637; Nordenfelt v. Maxim-Nordenfelt Guns & Ammunition Co. [1894] A. C. 552, 63 L. J. Ch. N. S. 908, 11 Reports, 1, 71 L. T. N. S. 489, 6 Eng. Rul. Cas. 413; Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Hollis (Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Lumbermen's Asso.) 54 Minn. 232, 21 L.R.A. 337, 40 Am. St. Rep. 319, 55 N. W. 1119; Bitterman v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 207 U. S. 205, 52 L. ed. 171, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91, 12 Ann. Cas. 693; People's Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Chicago Gaslight & Coke Co. 20 Ill. App. 491; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Asso. 175 N. Y. 1, 62 L.R.A. 632, 96 Am. St. Rep. 578, 67 N. E. 136; Chesapeake & O. Fuel Co. v. United States, 53 C. C. A. 256, 115 Fed. 623.

The weight of the authority of actually adjudicated cases rests with the defendants.

Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Hollis (Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Lumbermen's Asso.) 54 Minn. 223, 21 L.R.A. 337, 40 Am. St. Rep. 319, 55 N. W. 1119; Jackson v. Stanfield, 137 Ind. 592, 23 L.R.A. 588, 36 N. E. 345, 37 N. E. 14; Olive v. Van Patten, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 630, 25 S. W. 428; Macauley Bros. v. Tierney, 19 R. I. 255, 37 L.R.A. 455, 61 Am. St. Rep. 770, 33 Atl. 1; Bailey v. Master Plumbers' Asso. 103 Tenn. 99, 46 L.R.A. 561, 52 S. W. 853; Cleland v. Anderson, 66 Neb. 252, 5 L.R.A.(N.S.) 136, 92 N. W. 306, 96 N. W. 212, 98 N. W. 1075, 105 N. W. 1092; Sanford v. People, 121 Ill. App. 619; Montgomery Ward & Co. v. South Dakota Retail Merchants' & Hardware Dealers' Asso. 150 Fed. 413; State v. Adams Lumber Co. 81 Neb. 392, 116 N. W. 302; Retail Lumber Dealers' Asso. v. State, 95 Miss. 337, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1054, 48 So. 1021, affirmed in 217 U. S. 433, 54 L. ed. 826, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535.

Mr. Howard Taylor argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles E. Morgan, C. E. Morgan, 3d, and Charles B. Brophy, filed a brief for appellants in No. 550:

The Sherman act prohibits simply undue limitations on competitive conditions.

Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; Nash v. United States, 229 U. S. 373, 57 L. ed. 1232, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; United States v. Reading, 226 U. S. 324, 369, 57 L. ed. 243, 258, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 226 U. S. 84, 57 L. ed. 132, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53; United States v. Terminal R. Asso. 224 U. S. 394, 395, 56 L. ed. 813, 814, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 507; United States v. American Tobacco Co. 221 U. S. 158, 55 L. ed. 685, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

The combination, or concerted action, of these defendants in distributing circulars stating the true position of lumbermen in the trade, was not a combination which unduly restrained competition.

Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Hollis (Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Lumbermen's Asso.) 54 Minn. 223, 21 L.R.A. 337, 40 Am. St. Rep. 319, 55 N. W. 1119; Montgomery Ward &

Digitized by Google

Co. v. South Dakota Retail Merchants' & Hardware Dealers' Asso. 150 Fed. 413; Aikens v. Wisconsin, 195 U. S. 194, 49 L. ed. 154, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3; Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor [1892] A. C. 25, 61 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 295, 66 L. T. N. S. 1, 40 Week. Rep. 337, 7 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 120, 56 J. P. 101, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 614; National Protective Asso. v. Cumming, 170 N. Y. 315, 58 L.R.A. 135, 88 Am. St. Rep. 648, 63 N. E. 369; Mills v. United States Printing Co. 99 App. Div. 605, 91 N. Y. Supp. 185; Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. 328; Quinn v. Leathem [1901] A. C. 514, 70 L. J. P. C. N. S. 76, 65 J. P. 708, 50 Week. Rep. 139, 85 L. T. N. S. 289, 17 Times L. R. 749, 1 B. R. C. 197; Allen v. Flood [1898] A. C. 1, 67 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 119, 77 L. T. N. S. 717, 46 Week. Rep. 258, 17 Eng. Rul. Cas. 285; Ertz v. Produce Exch. 79 Minn. 140, 48 L.R.A. 90, 79 Am. St. Rep. 433, 81 N. W. 737; Macauley Bros. v. Tierney, 19 R. I. 255, 37 L.R.A. 455, 61 Am. St. Rep. 770, 33 Atl. 1; Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 564; Carew v. Rutherford, 106 Mass. 14, 8 Am. Rep. 287; Continental Ins. Co. v. Fire Underwriters, 67 Fed. 310; Collins v. American News Co. 34 Misc. 260, 69 N. Y. Supp. 638, affirmed in 68 App. Div. 639, 74 N. Y. Supp. 1123; Dueber Watch Case Mfg. Co. v. E. Howard Watch & Clock Co. 55 Fed. 851, 14 C. C. A. 14, 35 U. S. App. 16, 66 Fed. 637; Wabash R. Co. v. Hannahan, 121 Fed. 563; Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. 19 L.R.A. 387, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 522, 54 Fed. 738.

A conspiracy within the Sherman act can never be predicated upon the fact that a number of different people, when advised of a situation, are likely to take the same course of action.

United States v. Kissel, 218 U. S. 601, 54 L. ed. 1168, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; United States v. Reading Co. 226 U. S. 324, 57 L. ed. 243, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.

Instances of boycott coming before the courts of late in connection with anti-trust acts have been decided adversely to the defendants only where threats or acts of violence were an integral part of the boycott, or else in instances where the court in question has explicitly held that the standard of reason was not involved in the language of the particular statute discussed.

Cooke, Trade & Labor Combinations, 1909, chap. v., headed "Boycotts;" Loewe v. Lawlor, 208 U. S. 274, 52 L. ed. 488, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301, 13 Ann. Cas. 815; Gompers v. Buck's Stove & Range Co. 221 U. S. 418, 55 L. ed. 797, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 874, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 492; Grenada Lumber Co. v. Mississippi, 217 U. S. 433, 54 L. ed. 826, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535; State v. Adams Lumber Co. 81 Neb. 392, 116 N. W. 302; Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. 19 L.R.A. 395, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 54 Fed. 730.

These present appellants are not responsible for the actions of individuals in other local associations.

State v. Adams Lumber Co. 81 Neb. 392, 116 N. W. 302; Lawlor v. Loewe, 109 C. C. A. 288, 187 Fed. 522; United States v. Reading Co. 226 U. S. 324, 57 L. ed. 243, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.

Assistant to the Attorney General Todd argued the cause and filed a brief for the United States:

The evidence establishes an agreement or combination between the defendant retailers to prevent wholesalers from selling directly to consumers by refusing to buy from (boycotting) them if they do.

1. The declared purpose of the defendant associations, as shown by their constitutions and by-laws.

2. The compilation and circulation of the so-called "official reports," or blacklists.

3. The actual course of conduct of defendants in concertedly withdrawing their patronage from listed wholesalers.

4. Admissions of members of defendant associations, and other testimony showing general recognition of and obedience to a tacit or moral obligation upon members so to withdraw their patronage.

5. The inference of an agreement to boycott is confirmed by the decisions of other courts in conspiracy cases.

Com. v. McLean, 2 Pars. Sel. Eq. Cas. 367; 3 Greenl. Ev. § 93; Patnode v. Westenhaver, 114 Wis. 460, 90 N. W. 467; Reg. v. Murphy, 8 Car. & P. 297; Reilley v. United States, 46 C. C. A. 25, 106 Fed. 896; State v. Adams Lumber Co. 81 Neb. 392, 116 N. W. 302; United States v. Sacia, 2 Fed. 754; Webb v. Drake, 52 La. Ann. 290, 26 So. 791; 2 Whart. Crim. Law, § 1398.

An agreement or combination by retailers to refuse to buy from (boycott) wholesalers who sell directly to consumers interferes with the free and normal flow of trade, and therefore violates the anti-trust act.

Bailey v. Master Plumbers' Asso. 103 Tenn. 99, 46 L.R.A. 561, 52 S. W. 853; Beck v. Railway Teamsters' Protective Union, 118 Mich. 497, 42 L.R.A. 407, 74 Am. St. Rep. 421, 77 N. W. 13; Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Hollis (Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Lumbermen's Asso.) 54 Minn. 223, 21 L.R.A. 337, 40 Am. St. Rep. 319, 55 N. W. 1119; Boutwell v. Marr, 71 Vt. 1, 43 L.R.A. 803, 76 Am. St. Rep. 746, 42 Atl. 607; Brown v. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co. 115 Ga. 429, 57 L.R.A. 547, 90 Am. St. Rep. 126, 41 S. E. 553; Casey v. Cincinnati Typographical Union, 12 L.R.A. 193, 45 Fed. 135; Doremus v. Hennessy, 176 Ill. 608, 43 L.R.A. 797, 68 Am. St. Rep. 203, 52 N. E. 924, 54 N. E. 524; Ellis v. Inman, P. & Co. 65 C. C. A.

Digitized by Google

488, 131 Fed. 183; Gompers v. Buck's Stove & Range Co. 221 U. S. 418, 55 L. ed. 797, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 874, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 492, 33 App. D. C. 83, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 748; Grenada Lumber Co. v. Mississippi, 217 U. S. 433, 54 L. ed. 826, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535; Hawarden v. Youghiogheny & L. Coal Co. 111 Wis. 545, 55 L.R.A. 828, 87 N. W. 472; Hopkins v. Oxley Stave Co. 28 C. C. A. 99, 49 U. S. App. 709, 83 Fed. 912; Jackson v. Stanfield, 137 Ind. 592, 23 L.R.A. 588, 36 N. E. 345, 37 N. E. 14; Klingel's Pharmacy v. Sharp & Dohme, 104 Md. 218, 7 L.R.A. (N.S.) 976, 118 Am. St. Rep. 399, 64 Atl. 1029, 9 Ann. Cas. 1184; Loewe v. Lawlor, 208 U. S. 274, 52 L. ed. 488, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301, 13 Ann. Cas. 815; Lucke v. Clothing Cutters' & T. Assembly, 77 Md. 396, 19 L.R.A. 408, 39 Am. St. Rep. 421, 26 Atl. 505; Macauley Bros. v. Tierney, 19 R. I. 255, 37 L.R.A. 455, 61 Am. St. Rep. 770, 33 Atl. 1; Montgomery Ward & Co. v. South Dakota Retail Merchants' & Hardware Dealers' Asso. 150 Fed. 413; W. W. Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38, 48 L. ed. 608, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307; Olive v. Van Patten, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 630, 25 S. W. 428; Purington v. Hinchliff, 219 Ill. 159, 2 L.R.A. (N.S.) 824, 109 Am. St. Rep. 322, 76 N. E. 47; Retail Lumber Dealers' Asso. v. State, 95 Miss. 337, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1054, 48 So. 1021; State v. Adams Lumber Co. 81 Neb. 393, 116 N. W. 302; Steers v. United States, 112 C. C. A. 423, 192 Fed. 1; Thomas v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 4 Interst. Com. Rep. 788, 62 Fed. 803; Webb v. Drake, 52 La. Ann. 290, 26 So. 791; Brennan v. United Hatters, 73 N. J. L. 729, 9 L.R.A. (N.S.) 254, 118 Am. St. Rep. 727, 65 Atl. 165, 9 Ann. Cas. 698.

Viewing the agreement or combination between the defendants merely as one to circulate amongst themselves lists of wholesalers who sell directly to consumers, it unreasonably restricts competition between wholesalers and retailers in selling to consumers, and therefore violates the anti-trust act.

United States v. American Tobacco Co. 221 U. S. 106, 55 L. ed. 663, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; Nash v. United States, 229 U. S. 373, 57 L. ed. 1232, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; Quinn v. Leatham [1901] A. C. 495, 70 L. J. P. C. N. S. 76, 65 J. P. 708, 50 Week. Rep. 139, 85 L. T. N. S. 289, 17 Times L. R. 749, 1 B. R. C. 197; Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502.

The plea that this combination was a reasonable and necessary measure to defend the position of retailers in the trade is irrelevant in law and unfounded in fact.

Chesapeake & O. Fuel Co. v. United States, 53 C. C. A. 256, 115 Fed. 610; Grenada Lumber Co. v. Mississippi, 217 U. S. 433, 54 L. ed. 826, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535; Lawlor v. Loewe, 109 C. C. A. 288, 187 Fed. 522.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

These are appeals from a decree of the district court of the United States for the southern district of New York [605] in an action brought by the United States under the Sherman anti-trust act (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), having for its object an injunction against certain alleged combinations of retail lumber dealers, which, it was averred, had entered into a conspiracy to prevent wholesale dealers from selling directly to consumers of lumber. The defendants are various lumber associations composed largely of retail lumber dealers in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maryland, and the District of Columbia, and the officers and directors of the associations. The record is very voluminous, but the facts essential to a consideration of the decree of the district court are in comparatively narrow compass. While the record also concerns practices which are said to have been abandoned, the decree entered, declaring the defendants named to be in a combination or conspiracy to restrict and restrain competition, depends solely upon the method adopted and being used by the defendants in the distribution of the information contained in a certain document known as the "Official Report," the form of which, set forth in the decree, is as follows:

Official Report.

(Name of the Particular Association Circulating it.)

Statement to Members (with the Date).

You are reminded that it is because you are members of our Association and have an interest in common with your fellow members in the information contained in this statement, that they communicate it to you; and that they communicate to you in strictest confidence, and with the understanding that you are to receive it and treat it in the same way.

The following are reported as having solicited, quoted, or as having sold direct to the consumers:

(Here follows a list of the names and addresses of various wholesale dealers.)

[606] Members upon learning of any instance of persons soliciting, quoting, or selling direct to consumers, should at once report same, and in so doing should, if possible, supply the following information:

Digitized by Google

The number and initials of car.

The name of consumer to whom the car is consigned.

The initials or name of shipper.

The date of arrival of car.

The place of delivery.

The point of origin;

and the defendants were enjoined from combining, conspiring, or agreeing together to distribute, and from distributing, to members of the associations named or any other person or persons, any information showing soliciting, quotations, or sales and shipments of lumber and lumber products from manufacturers and wholesalers to consumers of or dealers in lumber, and from the preparation and distribution of the lists above described as the "Official Report," or the use of a similar device.

The record discloses that the defendant associations are constituted largely of retail lumber dealers, each of whom has the natural desire to control his local trade, which the retailers contend have been unduly interfered with by the wholesalers in selling to consumers within the local territory in such wise as to conflict with what they regard as a strictly local trade, and it appears that the defendant associations have for their object, among other things, the adoption of ways and means to protect such trade and to prevent the wholesale dealers from intruding therein. The particular thing which this case concerns in the retailers' efforts to promote the end in view is the attempt in the manner shown, by the circulation of the reports in question, to keep the wholesalers from selling directly to the local trade. The trade of the wholesalers involved covers a number of states, and there is no question but that the supplying of lumber to the large numbers [607] of retailers in these associations in different states is interstate trade, and that if the practices are illegal within the Sherman act they may be reached by this proceeding. Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 49 L. ed. 518, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; Loewe v. Lawlor, 208 U. S. 274, 300, 52 L. ed. 488, 501, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301, 13 Ann. Cas. 815.

The record discloses a systematic circulation among the members of the defendant associations of the official report above quoted. The method of operation as stated by the learned counsel for the appellants is thus summarized in his brief:

"The names on this list are obtained and placed thereon as the result of complaints made by individual retailers. When an individual member of a retail association learns of a sale by a wholesaler to one of the customers of the retailer he may complain in writing to the secretary of his association, whose duty it is thereupon to ascertain the facts by correspondence with the wholesaler in question and such other means as may seem proper. Should the report or complaint be without proper foundation, or should the secretary become satisfied that the matter is a trifling one, or the result of inadvertence, the incident usually terminates at this point; but should the complaint appear to be serious and well founded, the case is submitted to the board of directors of the retail association at its next meeting, and should the board be satisfied that the wholesaler is generally making a practice of selling to consumers or customers of the retail trade, the secretary is directed to report the name of such wholesaler for the official list. Thereupon the secretary sends the name to Mr. Crary of New York, who adds it upon the next report to the names of those already thereupon. Each report contains the names of all wholesalers who have been reported from the very beginning as selling to consumers, and whose names have not been removed for cause. The reports or lists after being printed in New York are distributed amongst the secretaries of the defendant associations; [608] those for each association being marked with its name, and in that way only being distinguished from those sent to the other associations. The secretary of each association then distributes the lists to his members. Should any wholesaler desire to have his name removed from the list he can have it done upon satisfactory assurance to the local secretary that he is no longer selling in competition with the retailers. In practice the greatest care is taken to make the list accurate, and as a matter of fact, it only contains the names of such wholesalers as are absolutely committed to the practice of competing with retailers for the custom of builders and contractors."

The reading of the official report shows that it is intended to give confidential information to the members of the associations of the names of wholesalers reported as soliciting or selling directly to consumers, members upon learning of any such instances being called upon to promptly report the same, supplying detailed information as to the particulars of the transaction. When viewed in the light of the history of these associations and the conflict in which they were engaged to keep the retail trade to themselves and to prevent wholesalers from interfering with what they regarded as their rights in such trade, there can be but one purpose in giving the information in this form to the members of the retail associations of the names of all wholesalers who, by their attempt to invade the exclusive territory of the retailers, as they regard it, have been guilty of unfair competitive trade. These lists were quite commonly spoken of as blacklists, and when the attention of a retailer was brought to the name of a wholesaler who had acted in this wise it was with the evident purpose that he should know of such conduct and act accordingly. True it is that there is no agreement among the retailers to refrain from dealing with listed wholesalers, nor is there any penalty annexed for the failure so to do; but he is blind indeed who does not see the [609] purpose in the predetermined and periodical circulation of this report to put the ban upon wholesale dealers whose names appear in the list of unfair dealers trying by methods obnoxious to the retail dealers to supply the trade which they regard as their own. Indeed, this purpose is practically conceded in the brief of the learned counsel for the appellants:

Digitized by Google

"It was and is conceded by defendants, and the court below found, that the circulation of this information would have a natural tendency to cause retailers receiving these reports to withhold patronage from listed concerns. That was, of course, the very object of the defendants in circulating them."

In other words, the circulation of such information among the hundreds of retailers as to the alleged delinquency of a wholesaler with one of their number had and was intended to have the natural effect of causing such retailers to withhold their patronage from the concern listed.

The Sherman act has been so frequently and recently before this court as to require no extended discussion now. Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; United States v. American Tobacco Co. 221 U. S. 106, 55 L. ed. 663, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; United States v. Terminal R. Asso. 224 U. S. 383, 56 L. ed. 810, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 507; Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. United States, 226 U. S. 20, 57 L. ed. 107, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 226 U. S. 61, 57 L. ed. 124, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53; United States v. Reading Co. 226 U. S. 324, 57 L. ed. 243, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; United States v. Patten, 226 U. S. 525, 57 L. ed. 333, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 325, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Nash v. United States, 229 U. S. 373, 57 L. ed. 1232, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; Straus v. American Pub. Asso. 231 U. S. 222, ante, 192, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84. It broadly condemns all combinations and conspiracies which restrain the free and natural flow of trade in the channels of interstate commerce. It is true that this court held in the Standard Oil and Tobacco Cases, supra, and in the subsequent cases following them, that in its proper construction the act was not intended to reach normal and usual contracts incident to lawful purposes and intended to [610] further legitimate trade, and summarizing the meaning of the act in the Tobacco Case, this court said (221 U. S. 179):

"Applying the rule of reason to the construction of the statute, it was held in the Standard Oil Case that as the words 'restraint of trade' at common law and in the law of this country at the time of the adoption of the anti-trust act only embraced acts or contracts or agreements or combinations which operated to the prejudice of the public interests by unduly restricting competition, or unduly obstructing the due course of trade, or which, either because of their inherent nature or effect, or because of the evident purpose of the acts, etc., injuriously restrained trade, that the words as used in the statute were designed to have and did have but a like significance."

The same principle was affirmed in Nash v. United States, 229 U. S. 373, 57 L. ed. 1232, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780. The court in the Standard Oil Case construed the act as intended to reach only combinations unduly restrictive of the flow of commerce, or unduly restrictive of competition, and, illustrating what were such undue or unreasonable combinations, it classed as illegal (p. 58) "all contracts or acts which were unreasonably restrictive of competitive conditions, either from the nature or character of the contract or act, or where the surrounding circumstances were such as to justify the conclusion that they had not been entered into or performed with the legitimate purpose of reasonably forwarding personal interest and developing trade, but, on the contrary, were of such a character as to give rise to the inference or presumption that they had been entered into or done with the intent to do wrong to the general public and to limit the right of individuals, thus restraining the free flow of commerce and tending to bring about the evils, such as enhancement of prices, which were considered to be against public policy." And in Loewe v. Lawlor, supra, this court held that a combination to boycott [611] the hats of a manufacturer and deter dealers from buying them in order to coerce the manufacturer to a particular course of action with reference to labor organizations, the effect of the combination being to compel third parties and strangers not to engage in a course of trade except upon conditions which the combination imposed, was within the Sherman act. In Gompers v. Buck's Stove & Range Co. 221 U. S. 418, 55 L. ed. 797, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 874, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 492, after citing Loewe v. Lawlor, supra, this court said (p. 438):

Digitized by Google

"But the principle announced by the court was general. It [the Sherman act] covered any illegal means by which interstate commerce is restrained, whether by unlawful combinations of capital, or unlawful combinations of labor; and we think also whether the restraint be occasioned by unlawful contracts, trusts, pooling arrangements, blacklists, boycotts, coercion, threats, intimidation, and whether these be made effective, in whole or in part, by acts, words, or printed matter."

And see W. W. Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38, 48 L. ed. 608, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307.

These principles are applicable to this situation. Here are wholesale dealers in large number engaged in interstate trade upon whom it is proposed to impose as a condition of carrying on that trade that they shall not sell in such manner that a local retail dealer may regard such sale as an infringement of his exclusive right to trade, upon pain of being reported as an unfair dealer to a large number of other retail dealers associated with the offended dealer, the purpose being to keep the wholesaler from dealing not only with the particular dealer who reports him, but with all others of the class who may be informed of his delinquency. "Section 1 of the act . . . is not confined to voluntary restraints, as where persons engaged in interstate trade or commerce agree to suppress competition among themselves, but includes as well involuntary restraints, as where persons not so engaged conspire to compel action by others, or to create artificial [612] conditions, which necessarily impede or burden the due course of such trade or commerce, or restrict the common liberty to engage therein." United States v. Patten, 226 U. S. 541, 57 L. ed. 341, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 325, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141. This record abounds in instances where the offending dealer was thus reported, the hoped-for effect, unless he discontinued the offending practice, realized, and his trade directly and appreciably impaired.

But it is said that in order to show a combination or conspiracy within the Sherman act some agreement must be shown under which the concerted action is taken. It is elementary, however, that conspiracies are seldom capable of proof by direct testimony, and may be inferred from the things actually done; and when, in this case, by concerted action the names of wholesalers who were reported as having made sales to consumers were periodically reported to the other members of the associations, the conspiracy to accomplish that which was the natural consequence of such action may be readily inferred.

The circulation of these reports not only tends to directly restrain the freedom of commerce by preventing the listed dealers from entering into competition with retailers, as was held by the district court, but it directly tends to prevent other retailers who have no personal grievance against him, and with whom he might trade, from so doing, they being deterred solely because of the influence of the report circulated among the members of the associations. In other words, the trade of the wholesaler with strangers was directly affected, not because of any supposed wrong which he had done to them, but because of the grievance of a member of one of the associations, who had reported a wrong to himself, which grievance, when brought to the attention of others, it was hoped would deter them from dealing with the offending party. This practice takes the case out of those normal and usual agreements in aid of trade and commerce which may be found not to be within the act, and puts it within the prohibited [613] class of undue and unreasonable restraints, such as was the particular subject of condemnation in Loewe v. Lawlor, 208 U. S. 274, 300, 52 L. ed. 488, 501, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301, 13 Ann. Cas. 815.

The argument that the course pursued is necessary to the protection of the retail trade and promotive of the public welfare in providing retail facilities is answered by the fact that Congress, with the right to control the field of interstate commerce, has so legislated as to prevent resort to practices which unduly restrain competition or unduly obstruct the free flow of such commerce, and private choice of means must yield to the national authority thus exerted. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 241, 242, 44 L. ed. 136, 147, 148, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96.

Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50, is cited and relied upon by the appellants. In that case this court sustained, as against an attack under the Sherman law, the legality of an association called the Traders' Live Stock Exchange in Kansas City. An agreement among purchasers of cattle for the purpose of regulating and controlling the local business among themselves had been entered into, and one of the rules provided that the members of the exchange should not deal with any other yard trader unless he was a member of such exchange. It was said (p. 613):

Digitized by Google

"There is no evidence that these defendants have in any manner other than by the rules above mentioned hindered or impeded others in shipping, trading, or selling their stock, or that they have in any way interfered with the freedom of access to the stock yards of any and all other traders and purchasers, or hindered their obtaining the same facilities which were therein afforded by the stock yards company to the defendants as members of the exchange, and we think the evidence does not tend to show that the above results have flowed from the adoption and enforcement of the rules and regulations referred to."

[614] As distinguished from this situation the present case shows that the trade of the listed wholesalers is hindered or impeded; that competition is suppressed and the natural flow of commerce interfered with as the direct result of the circulation of the official reports in the manner stated. The case is quite different from the Anderson Case. And see W. W. Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 48, 48 L. ed. 612, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307.

A retail dealer has the unquestioned right to stop dealing with a wholesaler for reasons sufficient to himself, and may do so because he thinks such dealer is acting unfairly in trying to undermine his trade. "But," as was said by Mr. Justice Lurton, speaking for the court in Grenada Lumber Co. v. Mississippi, 217 U. S. 433, 54 L. ed. 826, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535, "when the plaintiffs in error combine and agree that no one of them will trade with any producer or wholesaler who shall sell to a consumer within the trade range of any of them, quite another case is presented. An act harmless when done by one may become a public wrong when done by many acting in concert, for it then takes on the form of a conspiracy, and may be prohibited or punished, if the result be hurtful to the public or to the individual against whom the concerted action is directed."

When the retailer goes beyond his personal right, and, conspiring and combining with others of like purpose, seeks to obstruct the free course of interstate trade and commerce and to unduly suppress competition by placing obnoxious wholesale dealers under the coercive influence of a condemnatory report circulated among others, actual or possible customers of the offenders, he exceeds his lawful rights, and such action brings him and those acting with him within the condemnation of the act of Congress, and the District Court was right in so holding. It follows that its decree must be affirmed.

[615] WILL JONES, Plff. in Err.,
v.
MARGUERITE JONES and Her Husband, Albert Jones.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 615-619.)

Civil rights — statute of descent — discrimination.

The surviving brothers and sisters of a colored freedman dying intestate, who were the children of a born slave and were themselves born slaves, are not denied the equal protection of the laws, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., by a decision of a state court construing Shannon's Comp. Tenn. Laws, § 4163, preferring the brothers and sisters of an intestate dying without issue over the husband or widow, as applying only to brothers and sisters born free, with the result that the intestate's real property acquired by him while he was a freedman passed to his widow under § 4165, which provides that if one dies intestate "leaving no heir at law capable of inheriting the real estate, it shall be inherited by the husband or wife in fee simple."

[Race discrimination, see Civil Rights, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 339.]

Argued April 30, 1914. Decided June 2, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Tennessee to review a decree which, reversing a decree of the Court of Civil Appeals of that state, affirmed a decree of the Chancery Court of Shelby County, granting the relief prayed in the bill in a suit to remove a cloud on title. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. H. Harrelson argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. P. Metcalf, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The 14th Amendment was ordained to secure equal civil rights to all persons, and extends its protection to races and classes, and prohibits any state legislation which has the effect of denying to any race or class, or to any individual, the equal protection of the laws.

Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 25 L. ed. 989; Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 41 L. ed. 256, 16 Sup.

NOTE.—As to validity of class legislation, generally—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection, generally—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

On civil rights of negroes—see note to Civil Rights Cases, 27 L. ed. U. S. 836.

Digitized by Google

Ct. Rep. 1138; Humes v. United States, 170 U. S. 212, 42 L. ed. 1012, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 602; Hodges v. United States, 203 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 65, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Gibson v. Mississippi, 162 U. S. 565, 40 L. ed. 1075, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 904; Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 389, 26 L. ed. 571; Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 303, 25 L. ed. 664, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 515.

The plain object of this Amendment, as well as of the statutes enacted pursuant thereto, was to place the negro race, with respect to civil rights, upon the same level with the white. They made the rights and responsibilities, civil and criminal, of the two races exactly the same.

Gibson v. Mississippi; Neal v. Delaware; and Strauder v. West Virginia,—supra.

The protection extended by the 14th Amendment is not confined to the negro race alone, but may be invoked by all persons, regardless of their race or color, for the protection of their equal civil rights and to maintain their equality before the law; and, with respect to the 13th Amendment, it reaches every race and every individual, and the slavery or involuntary servitude of the Mexican, Chinese, Italians, or Anglo-Saxon is as much within its compass as slavery or involuntary servitude of the Africans. Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Hodges v. United States, 203 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 65, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6.

Therefore, although a statute, on its face, may not be obnoxious to this provision of the 14th Amendment, yet if it is so administered by the legislative, executive, or judicial authorities of the state as to deny to any individual or class of individuals the equal protection of the laws and equal civil rights under the laws, a case arises within the constitutional inhibition. Whoever, by virtue of his public position under a state government, deprives another of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, or denies or takes away the equal protection of the laws, or undertakes to deprive any person or class of persons of their civil rights under the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, and the Civil Rights Bill passed by Congress in aid thereof, violates that inhibition, and as he acts in the name of and for the state, and is clothed with her power, his act is her act, and Congress has the power, by virtue of the 5th section of the 14th Amendment, to protect and enforce the rights denied or withheld.

Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676; Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, 26 L. ed. 567; Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 303, 25 L. ed. 664, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 515.

Although the 14th Amendment is prohibitory in terms, it confers by necessary implication a positive immunity, or right, most valuable to persons of the colored race,—the right to exemption from discriminations imposed by public authority, which imply legal inferiority in civil society, lessen the security of their rights, and are steps towards reducing them to the conditions of a subject race,—the right to exemption from unfriendly legislation against them distinctively as colored.

Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 303, 25 L. ed. 664, 3 Am. Crim. Rep. 515.

Colored persons are citizens, and citizens without distinction as to race or color, or previous condition of servitude, and have the same right to make and enforce contracts, to sue, to be parties and give evidence, to inherit, purchase, lease and sell, hold and convey property, real and personal, and to full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property, as is enjoyed by white citizens, and are entitled to the same civil rights as the white citizens of the different states wherein they may reside. Hall v. DeCuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547.

Mr. B. F. Booth argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The 14th Amendment and §§ 1977 and 1978 of the Revised Statutes of the United States do not control in this case, because the right claimed here is a right subject to state legislation and decisions.

Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 180, 19 L. ed. 360; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394.

The Federal Constitution is satisfied if all persons similarly situated are treated alike in privileges conferred or liabilities imposed.

Hodges v. United States, 203 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 65, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 618, 48 L. ed. 1142, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 38 L. ed. 485, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570.

Before the act of the legislature of Tennessee, passed in 1865 and 1866, slaves in Tennessee could not inherit at all, and it so remained until the passage of the above act.

Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 15 L. ed. 691.

The decisions of the Tennessee supreme court have established a rule of property which has been the law in Tennessee since 1871, and has been relied upon as the settled law upon the subject of collateral inheritance between ex-slaves ever since.

Andrews v. Page, 3 Heisk. 668; Shepherd v. Carlin, 99 Tenn. 64, 41 S. W. 340; Laughlin v. Johnson, 102 Tenn. 460, 52 S. W. 816; Dennis v. Dennis, 105 Tenn.

Digitized by Google

86, 58 S. W. 284; Carver v. Maxwell, 110 Tenn. 75, 71 S. W. 752.

The courts of the state of Tennessee had the right to say which of its citizens should inherit the lands of another citizen dying intestate and leaving lands.

Bates v. Brown, 5 Wall. 710, 18 L. ed. 535; Stevenson v. Sullivant, 5 Wheat. 207, 5 L. ed. 70; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 44 L. ed. 998, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Hutchinson Invest. Co. v. Caldwell, 152 U. S. 65, 38 L. ed. 356, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 504; Dawson v. Godfrey, 4 Cranch, 321, 2 L. ed. 634.

The Federal courts have established a rule, followed by a long line of decisions, upholding the decisions of the highest court in a state in matters of inheritance and title to land, made in accordance with the laws of the locality in which the land is situated.

Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682, 34 L. ed. 832, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Williamson v. Suydam, 6 Wall. 733, 18 L. ed. 971; Suydam v. Williamson, 24 How. 427, 16 L. ed. 742; Bondurant v. Watson, 103 U. S. 281, 26 L. ed. 447; Beauregard v. New Orleans, 18 How. 497, 15 L. ed. 469; M'Keen v. Delancy, 5 Cranch, 22, 3 L. ed. 25; Massie v. Watts, 6 Cranch, 148, 3 L. ed. 181; Thatcher v. Powell, 6 Wheat. 119, 5 L. ed. 221; Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. 488, 14 L. ed. 510; Halsted v. Buster, 140 U. S. 273, 35 L. ed. 484, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 782; Ridings v. Johnson, 128 U. S. 212, 32 L. ed. 401, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Gormley v. Clark, 134 U. S. 338, 33 L. ed. 909, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; McElvain v. Brush, 142 U. S. 155, 35 L. ed. 971, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 156.

Nothing is better settled than the proposition that questions of descent are to be determined by local law.

Levy v. M'Cartee, 6 Pet. 102, 8 L. ed. 334; Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682, 34 L. ed. 832, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Gardner v. Collins, 2 Pet. 58, 7 L. ed. 347; Maxwell v. Moore, 22 How. 185, 16 L. ed. 251.

Equal protection of the law is not denied by a law or course of procedure which would have been applied to any other persons in the state under similar circumstances and conditions.

Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 105, 43 L. ed. 96, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 805.

Whenever the law operates alike upon all persons and property similarly situated, equal protection cannot be said to be denied.

Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; State ex rel. Astor v. Schlitz Brewing Co. 104 Tenn. 732, 78 Am. St. Rep. 941, 59 S. W. 1033.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a question of collateral descent arising under the Tennessee statutes.

[616] One John Jones, a colored freedman, died in 1889, the owner of a tract of 87 acres of land lying in Shelby county, Tennessee, upon which he and his wife had lived for many years. He died intestate and without issue. The title to the land was claimed by his widow, the defendant in error, Marguerite Jones, who has, since the death of John Jones, intermarried with the other defendant in error, Albert Jones. Her claim was rested upon § 4165, Shannon's Compilation of Tennessee Laws, which provides that if one die intestate, "leaving no heir at law capable of inheriting the real estate, it shall be inherited by the husband or wife in fee simple." The plaintiff in error, Will Jones, contested the claim of the widow, contending that the land passed to the surviving brothers and sisters of the intestate, under whom, through quitclaim deeds, he claimed the title. The widow's bill was for the purpose of canceling these deeds as clouds upon her title. The Tennessee court sustained her bill and adjudged that the intestate having died without issue, and without heirs at law capable of inheriting, his real estate passed to his widow under § 4165, supra.

The deeds denounced as clouds upon the widow's title were attacked upon a number of grounds, among them fraud in their procuration. The decree ordering their cancelation was apparently based only upon the ground that their makers, assuming them to be legitimate full brothers and sisters of the intestate John Jones, were sons and daughters of a born slave and themselves born slaves, and as such were not his heirs within the meaning of the Tennessee statutes of descent.

There is a Tennessee statute of descent which provides that the land of an intestate shall pass to his brothers and sisters in case the owner die without issue, and the contention is that if this statute preferring the brothers and sisters of an intestate dying without issue over the husband or widow be construed as applying only to brothers and [617] sisters born free, it discriminates against those born slaves, and thereby violates that equal protection of the law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution.

This provision of the Tennessee canon of descent by which the brothers and sisters of an intestate dying without issue take his real estate is as old as the state, and comes from the common law. It does not distinguish in terms between brothers and sisters born free and those born slaves. Neither does it distinguish between those who are born bastards and those born in wedlock, and those who are aliens and those who are not. Nevertheless, neither a bastard nor an alien has inheritable blood, nor are they capable of inheriting as heirs unless by aid of some statute: 2 Kent, Com. *211; 2 Bl. Com. *249; Levy v. M'Cartee, 6 Pet. 102, 8 L. ed. 334. The civil status of slaves in Tennessee, as well as in other states in which slavery existed, was such as to disable them from inheriting or transmitting property by descent. Thus it was said: "They cannot take property by descent or purchase, and all they find and all they hold belongs to the master. They cannot make lawful contracts, and they are deprived of civil rights. They are assets in the hands of executors for the payment of debts." 2 Kent, Com. 11th ed. 278, *253; Jackson ex dem. People v. Lervey, 5 Cow. 397. Slaves, therefore, were not within the meaning and effect of the statutes of descent, and no descent from or through a slave was possible except as provided by some special statute. The rule was the same as to aliens and illegitimates.

Digitized by Google

After the emancipation of the slaves of the South the statutes of inheritance were extended in many states so as to confer upon the children of parents born in slavery the right to inherit from their parents. But these enlargements of the canon of descent extended only to lineal descendants and did not embrace collaterals. The Tennessee [618] statute, which was claimed in the court below to be broad enough to embrace collateral relatives, is that of 1865-66, chap. 40, § 5, carried into Shannon's Compilation as § 4179. That act declared that slaves who, within the state, had lived together as man and wife, should be regarded as lawfully married, and that the children of such slave marriages should be "legitimately entitled to an inheritance in any property heretofore acquired or that may be hereafter acquired, to as full an extent as children of white citizens are entitled by the laws of this state." But this statute has been more than once construed as not extending the right of inheritance beyond the lineal descendants of the parents. Shepherd v. Carlin, 99 Tenn. 64, 41 S. W. 340; Carver v. Maxwell, 110 Tenn. 75, 71 S. W. 752. In Shepherd v. Carlin, supra, the question here presented was decided. Agnes Lee, a colored woman, born in slavery, died intestate and without issue. Her land was claimed by her surviving husband under § 4165, Shannon's Compilation, heretofore referred to, and by her niece as her only collateral relative. The court held that the right to inherit the real estate of an intestate born in slavery had been extended only in favor of lineal descendants, and that collaterals possessed no inheritable blood. To the same effect are many cases, among them: Tucker v. Bellamy, 98 N. C. 31, 4 S. E. 34; Jones v. Hoggard, 108 N. C. 178, 12 S. E. 906, 907; Williams v. Kimball, 35 Fla. 49, 26 L.R.A. 746, 48 Am. St. Rep. 238, 16 So. 783.

Inheritance is governed by the lex rei sitæ. It is not a natural or absolute right, but the creation of statute law. If one claim the right to succeed to the real property of another as heir, and his right is denied because he must trace his pedigree or title to or through an alien, a bastard, or a slave, the question is one to be determined by the local law. Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682, 34 L. ed. 832, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Levy v. M'Cartee, supra; Blythe v. Hinckley, 180 U. S. 333, 45 L. ed. 557, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390. In Levy v. M'Cartee, supra, the question was one of inheritance, the [619] plaintiff tracing his pedigree through an alien ancestor. After first deciding that a question of inheritance to land in New York was one to be determined by the law of that state, the court held: first, that an alien had no inheritable blood and could neither take land himself by descent, nor transmit it to others; second, that under the law of New York one citizen of the state could not inherit in the collateral line of another when he must make his pedigree or title through a deceased alien ancestor.

It is true that the land of the intestate John Jones was acquired when he was a freedman. Under the law of the state when he acquired it, he had the right to dispose of it by deed or will. If he died intestate, leaving issue, it descended to such issue. But if he left no such descendants, it passed, by the express terms of the statute, to his widow.

We are unable to see in the Tennessee statute of descent any such denial of the equal protection of the law as is prohibited by the 14th Amendment.

The decree is accordingly affirmed.

MOORE-MANSFIELD CONSTRUCTION COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
ELECTRICAL INSTALLATION COMPANY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 619-626.)

Appeal — from district court — Federal question.

A case otherwise within the jurisdiction of a Federal district court, and reviewable in a circuit court of appeals, is not one which may come direct to the Supreme Court under the Judicial Code, § 247, as one "which involved the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States," merely because, in the course of the case, a question arose touching the effect upon a railway construction contract of a subsequent change of decision in the state courts, by which it was held that contractors were not included in the local mechanics' lien law, there being no claim that the statute is invalid.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938-989, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 358.]

Argued May 5, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the District of Indiana to review a decree rendered in a creditors' suit denying the right of a contractor for railway construction to a mechanics' lien upon the railway property. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.[1]

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. William A. Ketcham and A. S. Worthington argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Cassius C. Shirley argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. H. H. Miller, S. D. Miller, and W. H. Thompson, filed a brief for appellees.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

The primary question concerns the jurisdiction of this court to entertain this as a direct appeal from the district court.

The decree below was rendered under a general creditors' bill, by which the assets of the Indianapolis, Crawfordsville, & Western Traction Company, an insolvent [621] Indiana corporation, had been impounded, its debts ascertained, and the order of payment determined. Among the creditors proving their debts were some claiming liens. One was the Marion Trust Company, trustee under a general mortgage securing an issue of mortgage bonds. Another creditor was this appellant, the Moore-Mansfield Construction Company. That company had, under contract with the traction company, constructed a part of its line of railway, and for the balance of its debt claimed a lien upon its property. The decree from which this appeal was taken gave priority to the mortgage, and denied to appellant any lien upon the property of the traction company, and adjudged that its debt as fixed should be paid ratably out of the funds applicable to the payment of general debts.

Counsel for appellant thus states the issue upon this appeal,—"The precise controversy presented by the record is: (a) Has the construction company a valid, subsisting, enforceable mechanics' lien under the laws of Indiana upon the railway property of the traction company? (b) Is such lien senior and paramount to the lien of the trust deed or mortgage given to secure the outstanding bonds?"

The defense asserted to the mechanics' lien was that there was no statute giving to a contractor for railway construction a lien upon the railway property, and, second, if there existed any such lien, the construction company, for the purpose of giving security to the holders of the construction bonds, had expressly covenanted and agreed to waive and forego whatever right or rights it might have had at the time of the execution of its contract, or which it might thereafter acquire, to claim a lien against the property of the railway company under the laws of the state of Indiana.

The court filed no opinion, but the decree recites that "the construction company is not entitled to enforce a [622] mechanics' lien against any of the property of said defendant traction company in the hands of the receiver of this court or elsewhere, if any; nor against the proceeds thereof; and that no such lien exists."

Thus, it is not clear whether the lien asserted was denied because of the waiver referred to, or because the statute of Indiana of March 6, 1883, being the statute under which the lien was claimed, did not embrace contractors. Appellant moved the court to amend the decree so as to make it more specific by stating whether it had no lien, because, under the law of Indiana, a contractor could acquire no such lien, or because it had waived its right to any such lien, as contended by the appellee. This motion was denied. We shall assume for the purpose of this case that the lien was denied upon the first ground stated, and upon that basis determine whether the case is one which can come direct to this court.

That appellant could have carried this case for review to the circuit court of appeals is plain. The jurisdiction of the district court under the original bill was based only upon diversity of citizenship.

[1] Leave granted on June 22, 1914, to present petition for rehearing within thirty days.

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of judgments of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741, and B. Altman & Co. v. United States, 56 L. ed. U. S. 894.

Digitized by Google

Neither did the contention that, in the progress of the case, there arose a question claimed to involve the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States, deprive the unsuccessful party of the right to go to the circuit court of appeals, where all of the questions would be open to review. But the contention is that the appellant had an election to carry the case to the circuit court of appeals or bring it direct to this court under § 5 of the act of 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549], now § 247 of the Judicial Code of 1913 [36 Stat. at L. 1158, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 230], as a case "which involved the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States." Shortly stated the contention is, first, that under the decisions of the Indiana supreme court prior to the accruing of the rights of this appellant under its contracts, contractors were included within those who might, by compliance with [623] the mechanics' lien statute, secure liens; and, second, that the subsequent change of decision by which that court held that contractors were not included in the mechanics' lien law constituted a law which impaired the obligation of its contract within the meaning of the contract clause of the Constitution of the United States. It therefore assigns as error the action of the court below in not declaring the rights of appellant to be as they existed under the line of judicial decisions at the time such rights accrued.

The title of the Indiana act of March 6, 1883, under which appellant claims to have acquired a lien, was "an act concerning liens of mechanics, laborers, and materialmen." A provision of the Constitution of Indiana, § 19, article 4, provides that "every act shall embrace but one subject and matters properly connected therewith, which subject shall be expressed in the title." The contention is that for many years contractors had been regarded as entitled to a lien under this act and prior acts having a similar title, though it is conceded that the sufficiency of the title had never been expressly decided. On February 18, 1909, the Indiana supreme court in the case of Indianapolis Northern Traction Co. v. Brennan, 174 Ind. 1, 30 L.R.A. (N.S.) 85, 87 N. E. 215, 90 N. E. 65, 68, 91 N. E. 503, held that the act of 1883 did not include contractors or subcontractors. The act was not held to have been unconstitutionally enacted (Wilkes County v. Coler, 180 U. S. 506, 45 L. ed. 642, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458), nor that contractors and subcontractors might not have been included among those to whom the privilege of a lien was extended. The decree was confined to the single point that the title did not include contractors. It was therefore a mere construction of the act as not including obligations to contractors as distinguished from obligations to mechanics, laborers, and materialmen. This is claimed to have been such a change of decision as to impair the obligation of the contract under which the appellant had constructed [624] the railway of the traction company. Curiously enough, the supreme court of Indiana has, pending this appeal, retracted the construction it placed upon the act of 1883, and has held that contractors are within the intent and meaning of the act. Moore-Mansfield Constr. Co. v. Indianapolis, N. C. & C. R. Co. 179 Ind. 536, 44 L.R.A. (N.S.) 816, 101 N. E. 296. But a change in the opinion of a court as to the proper construction or scope of statute law of a state is not within article 1, § 10, of the Constitution of the United States, which provides that "no state shall . . . pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts." That provision is a restraint upon the legislative power of the state, and, as was said by this court, "it concerns the making of laws, not their construction by the courts. It has been so regarded from the beginning." Ross v. Oregon, 227 U. S. 150, 161, 57 L. ed. 458, 463, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220. There had been no subsequent legislation which in anywise affected liens of contractors.

It has been many times decided that a writ of error will not lie from this court to a state court under § 709, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), on the ground that the obligation of a contract has been impaired by a change in the decision of the court in respect to the meaning and scope of a statute, the validity of which has not been denied. "In order to come within the provision of the Constitution of the United States, which declares that no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts, not only must the obligation of a contract have been impaired, but it must have been impaired by some act of the legislative power of the state, and not by a decision of its judicial department only. The appellate jurisdiction of this court, upon writ of error to a state court, on the ground that the obligation of a contract has been impaired, can be invoked only when an act of the legislature alleged to be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States has been decided by the state court to be valid, and not [625] when an act admitted to be valid has been misconstrued by the court." Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 109, 40 L. ed. 91, 93, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep.

Digitized by Google

80; see also Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 220, 41 L. ed. 132, 137, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 479, 493, 45 L. ed. 285, 291, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; National Mut. Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Brahan, 193 U. S. 635, 48 L. ed. 823, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532. If, therefore, a mere change of decision by a state court in respect of the meaning and scope of a state statute, not claimed to be invalid or repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, does not constitute an impairment of a contract within the meaning of the contract clause of the Constitution, it must follow that a case otherwise within the jurisdiction of a district court of the United States, and reviewable in the circuit court of appeals, is not a case which may come direct to this court merely because, in the course of the case, a question arises touching the effect of such a change of decision upon the rights of the parties.

Courts of the United States are courts of independent jurisdiction, and when a question arises in a United States court as to the effect of a change in decision which detrimentally affects contract rights and obligations entered into before such change, such rights and obligations should be determined by the law as judicially determined at the time the rights accrued. In every such case the Federal courts, while leaning to the view of the state court as to the validity or interpretation of a law of the state, will exercise an independent judgment, and will not necessarily follow state judicial decisions rendered subsequently. Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 33, 27 L. ed. 359, 365, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 479, 493, 45 L. ed. 285, 291, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174.

Under the settled rule it was the duty of the court below, when confronted with the question whether appellant had acquired a lien under the act of 1883, to determine for itself the meaning and scope of that act, and to declare the rights of that company under the law as it had been judicially determined. The decisions to this effect are [626] numerous. Some of them are: Folsom v. Township Ninety-six, 159 U. S. 611, 624, 40 L. ed. 278, 282, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. supra; Jones v. Great Southern Fireproof Hotel Co. 30 C. C. A. 108, 58 U. S. App. 397, 86 Fed. 370, affirmed by this court in 193 U. S. 532, 48 L. ed. 778, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576. If the district court erred in following the later decision of the Indiana court, the error could have been corrected by the circuit court of appeals, and the judgment of the latter court might be reviewed by this court under a writ of certiorari. The cases of Folsom v. Township Ninety-six, and Jones v. Great Southern Fireproof Hotel Co. supra, reached this court through the circuit court of appeals, one by a certified request for an instruction, and the other by certiorari.

The right to bring the case to this court from the district court by a direct appeal depended upon the question whether the decree denying to appellant the lien it claimed under the law of Indiana "necessarily and directly involved the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States." Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Hanley, 205 U. S. 225, 232, 51 L. ed. 779, 782, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476. The change of decision in respect of the scope of the Indiana statutes was not a law of the state impairing the obligation of the contract, which is the only basis for the claim that the case is one which involved the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States. We are therefore precluded from an examination of the merits of the case (Cosmopolitan Min. Co. v. Walsh, 193 U. S. 460, 48 L. ed. 749, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489; Knop v. Monongahela River Consol. Coal & Coke Co. 211 U. S. 485, 53 L. ed. 294, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188), and the appeal must be dismissed.

---

[627] STATE OF LOUISIANA v. WILLIAM GIBBS McADOO, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 627-634.)

United States — immunity from suit — review of official action.

1. The immunity of the United States from suit prevents the state of Louisiana, as a producer of sugar through its operation of sugar plantations and mills, from maintaining an original bill in the Federal Supreme Court against the Secretary and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury to review their official judgment as to the rate of duty to be exacted under the tariff acts of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 151, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1626), and October 3, 1913 (38 Stat. at L. chap. 16), and the commercial treaty with Cuba of December 11, 1902 (33 Stat. at L. 2136), as made effective by the act of December 17, 1903 (33 Stat. at L. 3,

---

Note.—On suit against Federal officers or agents as suit against United States—see note to Louisiana v. Garfield, 53 L. ed. U. S. 92.

On injunction to restrain act of public officers—see note to Mississippi v. Johnson, 18 L. ed. U. S. 437.

Digitized by Google

chap. 1, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 739), upon importations of Cuban sugar.
[For other cases, see United States, IV. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Injunction — to control official action.

2. The official judgment of the Secretary and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury as to the rate of duty to be exacted on importations of Cuban sugar under the tariff acts of July 24, 1897, and October 3, 1913, and the commercial treaty with Cuba of December 11, 1902, as made effective by the act of December 17, 1903, cannot be controlled by injunction.
[For other cases, see Injunction, I. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. —, Original.]

Argued April 14, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

MOTION for leave to file a petition against the Secretary and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury to review their official judgment as to the rate of duty to be exacted on importations of Cuban sugar. Leave to file petition denied.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Ruffin G. Pleasant, Attorney General of Louisiana, and Mr. Joseph W. Bailey argued the cause, and, with Mr. Paul J. Christian, filed a brief for petitioner.

Solicitor General Davis argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Adkins, filed a brief for respondents:

The suit is one against the United States, brought without its consent.

Cunningham v. Macon & B. R. Co. 109 U. S. 446, 451, 27 L. ed. 992, 994, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292, 609; United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 207, 27 L. ed. 171, 177, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 1, 33 L. ed. 842, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 504; Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 387, 46 L. ed. 954, 962, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 50 L. ed. 935, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Kansas v. United States, 204 U. S. 331, 341, 51 L. ed. 510, 513, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 388; Louisville ex rel. New York Guaranty & I. Co. v. Steele, 134 U. S. 230, 33 L. ed. 891, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 27 L. ed. 448, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; North Carolina v. Temple, 134 U. S. 22, 33 L. ed. 849, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509; Re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 31 L. ed. 216, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Hopkins v. Clemson Agri. College, 221 U. S. 636, 642, 55 L. ed. 890, 894, 35 L.R.A. (N.S.) 243, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654.

The state of Louisiana has no legal interest in the subject-matter.

Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 265, 287, 32 L. ed. 239, 242, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1370; Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 536, 23 L. ed. 623, 626.

The duty of the defendants in the premises is not ministerial, it is political, and requires the exercise of executive discretion.

Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. 497, 515, 10 L. ed. 559, 568; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60; Mississippi v. Johnson, 4 Wall. 475, 18 L. ed. 437; Georgia v. Stanton, 6 Wall. 50, 18 L. ed. 721; Gaines v. Thompson, 7 Wall. 347, 19 L. ed. 62; Litchfield v. The Register (Litchfield v. Richards) 9 Wall. 575, 19 L. ed. 681; United States ex rel. Dunlap v. Black, 128 U. S. 40, 32 L. ed. 354, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock, 190 U. S. 316, 47 L. ed. 1074, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698; Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

The state of Louisiana has appeared at the bar of this court, through its attorney general, for the purpose of obtaining permission to file this petition against the Honorable William Gibbs McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and the Honorable C. S. Hamlin, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. The United States, by its Solicitor General, has appeared in opposition, contending that the suit is one against the United States, and cannot, therefore, be brought without its consent.

No principle is better established than that the United States may not be sued in the courts of this country without its consent. If, therefore, this be a suit against the United States, the state, though entitled as a state to appeal to the original jurisdiction of this court, must show some authority from Congress under which such a suit may be brought, or leave to file must be denied. United [629] States v. Clarke, 8 Pet. 436, 8 L. ed. 1001; United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 27 L. ed. 171, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Kansas v. United States, 204 U. S. 331, 333, 51 L. ed. 510, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 388.

That the United States is not named on the record as a party is true. But the question whether it is in legal effect a party to the controversy is not always determined by the fact that it is not named as a party on the record, but by the effect of the judgment or decree which can here be rendered. Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 387, 46 L. ed. 954, 962, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Kansas v. United States, 204 U. S. 331, 333, 51 L. ed. 510, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 388.

The facts, briefly stated, upon which relief is asked, are these:

Digitized by Google

The state, as a part of its economic policy, operates with its convicts three sugar plantations and three sugar mills. It is therefore a producer of sugar, which must find a market in competition with that imported from the Republic of Cuba and other sugar exporting countries.

The petition avers that under the instructions of the defendant Treasury officials Cuban sugar, since March 1, 1914, the date upon which the Underwood tariff act became effective, is admitted into the United States at a rate of 1 1-100 cents per pound, being 80 per cent of 75 per cent of the rate of duty on sugar imposed by the Dingley tariff act of 1897 [30 Stat. at L. 151, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1620], which was 1 685-1000 cents per pound. The contention made is that the rate which should be collected on Cuban sugar is the rate imposed by the Dingley tariff bill, less a reduction of 20 per cent, making the net rate legally collectable 1 348-1000 cents per pound, as provided in the commercial treaty between the United States and the Republic of Cuba of December 11, 1902 [33 Stat. at L. 2136], as made effective by the act of Congress of December 17, 1903 (33 Stat. at L. p. 3, chap. 1, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 739), "or, in the alternative, the duty on all such sugar imported into the United States should be 75 per cent of the Dingley bill rate, or 1 26-100 cents per pound, as provided . . . in the Underwood bill of October 3, 1913, without any preferential rate whatever being allowed in favor of said Cuban sugar."

[630] Article 2 of the convention referred to provides that the products of the soil or industry of Cuba not included in article 1 "shall be admitted at a reduction of 20 per cent of the rates of duty . . . as provided by the tariff act of the United States approved July 24, 1897, or as may be provided by any tariff law of the United States subsequently enacted." A proviso to article 8 is in these words:

"That while this convention is in force, no sugar imported from the Republic of Cuba, and being the product of the soil or industry of the Republic of Cuba, shall be admitted into the United States at a reduction of duty greater than twenty per centum of the rates of duty thereon as provided by the tariff act of the United States approved July 24, 1897, and no sugar, the product of any other foreign country, shall be admitted by treaty or convention into the United States, while this convention is in force, at a lower rate of duty than that provided by the tariff act of the United States approved July 24, 1897."

The reduction in all sugar duties made by the tariff act of 1913, effective March 1, 1914, is 25 per cent upon the former rate of the Dingley bill, and the same act after May 1, 1916, provides for the free admission of all sugar.

The contention seems to be that the proviso that no sugar shall be admitted into the United States at a reduction of duty greater than 20 per cent of the rate of duty provided by the Dingley act operates to prevent any reduction in favor of Cuban sugar after March 1, 1914, since the reduction made in duty on all imported sugar, including Cuban sugar, is 25 per cent of the Dingley rate, and that, as such reduction is more than the preferential under the Cuban convention, the preferential duty under that convention ceases. Upon the other hand, the contention is that the Underwood act manifested a plain purpose to continue a preferential of 20 per cent upon the reduced duties provided therein, a purpose manifested by the abrogation [631] of the proviso of article 8 which might have interfered with such intent.

It is not the purpose of the court to intimate any opinion upon the merits of the contentions thus presented, and we have only stated the opposing views far enough to enable us to decide whether the suit is or is not one against the United States.

The petition proceeds by averring that the action of the defendant Treasury officials in instructing customs officers to admit Cuban sugar after March 1, 1914, at a reduction of 20 per cent of the rate effective on that date, was "arbitrary, illegal, and unjust . . . and will work great and irreparable injury to your petitioner unless they are restrained and inhibited from demanding and collecting the said illegal charges on Cuban sugar imported into the United States; and another, and higher duty, as shown above, be exacted and collected by said officials on said sugar instead." It is then contended that this direction to continue the allowance of a reduction of 20 per cent upon the reduced rates fixed by the Underwood act is such a flagrant exercise of arbitrary power as to make it the duty of a court of equity, upon application of anyone having a definite and distinct interest, to prohibit the allowance of the reduction and require the collection of the full duty imposed by the Underwood act, or, if any preferential be allowed, it be only upon the higher duty exacted by the act of 1897.

But what definite and distinct interest has the state of Louisiana whether the rate collected be too high or too low? She is a producer of sugar which must be sold in competition with foreign sugar, and the petition avers that the lowering of the duty upon Cuban sugar will lower the price for which she must sell her sugar yet unsold. But if Louisiana, as a mere producer and seller of sugar, may review the action of the Secretary of the Treasury in determining the rate to be collected on Cuban sugar, why [632] may not any consumer, though not an importer, make a similar complaint if, in his judgment, the Secretary of the Treasury is exacting a higher rate than justified by the law, thereby enhancing the price he must pay in the market upon imported articles which he uses? Obviously such suits to review the official action of the Secretary of the Treasury in the exercise of his judgment as to the rate which should be exacted under his construction of the tariff acts would operate to disturb the whole revenue system of the government, and affect the revenues which arise therefrom. Such suits would obviously, in effect, be suits against the United States. Louisiana ex rel. New York Guaranty & I. Co. v. Steele, 134 U. S. 230, 33 L. ed. 891, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 27 L. ed. 448, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Hopkins v. Clemson College, 221 U. S. 636, 642, 55 L. ed. 890, 894, 35 L.R.A. (N.S.) 243, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654.

Digitized by Google

There have always been remedies by which an importer may recover an excess rate of duty exacted from him by a customs collector, either by common-law action against the collector, as in Elliott v. Swartwout, 10 Pet. 137, 9 L. ed. 373, or by statute, § 2931, Revised Statutes; act of June 10, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. pp. 131, 137, chap. 407, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1886); act of August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. p. 11, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 741). But the claim that even an importer may complain, by appeal or otherwise, of the exaction of too low a rate of duty, seems not to have been asserted until 1912, when an appeal by an importer against an assessment as too low was sustained by the customs court of appeals, 3 Customs Appeal, 24, upon the theory that one might be aggrieved by an assessment too low as well as by one too high. But this decision did not meet with favor, and the remedy by appeal was confined to cases in which the duty imposed was claimed to be higher than authorized by existing law. Act of October 3, 1913 (38 Stat. at L. chap. 16, § 3, part N).

But we can discover no precedent where even an importer has sought to clog the wheels of government by reviewing the action of the Secretary of the Treasury by a bill such as this.

[633] The duties imposed upon the Secretary of the Treasury in the collection of sugar tariffs are not ministerial. They are executive, and involve the exercise of judgment and discretion. The facts show a situation in which the Secretary of the Treasury was confronted with the necessity of construing the law, and then instructing the customs officers as to whether the 20 per cent preferential duty on Cuban sugar required by the convention and the act of 1903 confirming that treaty had been superseded or in anywise affected by the later provisions of the Underwood act.

By statute originally enacted in 1792 [1 Stat. at L. 280, chap. 37], now § 249, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 137), it is expressly provided that the Secretary of the Treasury is to "superintend the collection of customs duties as he shall think best." His interpretation of any custom law is made conclusive and binding upon all officers of customs, and upon his successors, until reversed by judicial decision. Rev. Stat. § 2652, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1821; act March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. p. 469, chap. 136, § 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 137). In the discharge of his duties, semijudicial in character, the Secretary of the Treasury is, by statute, entitled to the opinion of the Attorney General, which, as we may judicially know, was obtained in this matter. Opinion of the Attorney General, Feb. 14, 1914, vol. 30, p. —.

There is a class of cases which hold that if a public officer be required by law to do a particular thing, not involving the exercise of either judgment or discretion, he may be required to do that thing upon application of one having a distinct legal interest in the doing of the act. Such an act would be ministerial only. But if the matter in respect to which the action of the official is sought is one in which the exercise of either judgment or discretion is required, the courts will refuse to substitute their judgment or discretion for that of the official intrusted by law with its execution. Interference in such a case would be to interfere with the ordinary functions of government. [634] Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. 524, 610, 9 L. ed. 1181, 1215; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 26 L. ed. 167, are examples of instances where the duty was supposed to be ministerial. Cases upon the other side of the line are Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. 497, 514, et seq., 10 L. ed. 559, 567; Mississippi v. Johnson, 4 Wall. 475, 18 L. ed. 437; Cunningham v. Macon & B. R. Co. 109 U. S. 446, 27 L. ed. 992, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292, 609; United States ex rel. Dunlap v. Black, 128 U. S. 40, 32 L. ed. 354, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; United States ex rel. International Contracting Co. v. Lamont, 155 U. S. 303, 39 L. ed. 160, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; Roberts v. United States, 176 U. S. 221, 44 L. ed. 443, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock, 190 U. S. 316, 47 L. ed. 1074, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698; United States ex rel. Ness v. Fisher, 223 U. S. 683, 56 L. ed. 610, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356.

Digitized by Google

This application for leave to file must be denied.

The Chief Justice took no part in the decision of this case.

Mr. Justice McKenna concurs upon the ground last stated.

PATRICK COLLINS, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 634–638.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — indefiniteness of criminal statute — breaking tobacco pool.

A conviction of selling pooled tobacco without the consent of the agent of the pool, contrary to Ky. Stat. § 3941a, is wanting in due process of law because of the uncertainty of the test of the legality of the pool prescribed by Ky. Stat. § 3915 and Ky. Const. 1891, § 198, which, as construed by the state courts, make its validity depend upon whether or not it raises prices above the real value, the necessary consequence, if it does, being to penalize the accused for remaining in the combination, and to punish him, if it does not, for not keeping his tobacco in the pool.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 9; Criminal Law, I. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 35.]

Submitted April 22, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the Circuit Court of Mason County, in that state, of selling pooled tobacco without the consent of the agent of the pool. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 141 Ky. 564, 133 S. W. 233.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Note.—On illegal trusts under modern anti-trust acts—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689.

Messrs. E. L. Worthington and J. M. Collins submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

A statute which makes the guilt of a person charged with crime hinge on something which is unknowable violates the due process of law clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The decision of this court in United States v. Patten, 226 U. S. 525, 57 L. ed. 333, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 325, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141, is decisive of the present case.

Mr. James Garnett, Attorney General of Kentucky, submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The act neither discriminates nor gives exclusive privilege or immunity.

Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278, 46 L. ed. 196, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 605, 607, 47 L. ed. 323, 327, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 10 Wheat. 152, 6 L. ed. 289; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 568, 55 L. ed. 339, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259.

The standard adopted to determine whether or not there has been a violation of the Kentucky anti-trust law is fixed and certain.

Com. v. International Harvester Co. 131 Ky. 551, 133 Am. St. Rep. 256, 115 S. W. 703, 137 Ky. 668, 126 S. W. 352, 144 Ky. 403, 138 S. W. 248.

The Kentucky statutes do not violate the Federal anti-trust law.

Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 58, 55 L. ed. 644, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error, Patrick Collins, and other tobacco growers of Mason county, Kentucky, entered into a pooling contract with the Burley Tobacco Society and the Mason County Board of Control whereby they consigned to the society their respective crops of tobacco (raised in the year 1907), to be sold by the society as their agent upon such terms as it should prescribe, but not less than a minimum price. Because Collins disposed of his crop without the consent of the agents of the pool, he was indicted. He demurred to the indictment upon both state and Federal grounds, setting forth as the latter that the statutes under which he was prosecuted contravened the 14th Amendment of the Federal Constitution, in that they denied to him the equal protection of the laws and deprived him of liberty and property without due process of law, and also were repugnant to the commerce clause and the Federal anti-trust act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p 3200). The demurrer was overruled and trial was had. There was evidence that the tobacco had been removed by Collins to Cincinnati, Ohio, and there sold; Collins was found guilty and sentenced [636] to pay a fine. The court of appeals having affirmed the judgment (141 Ky. 565, 133 S. W. 233), this writ of error is prosecuted.

Digitized by Google

The conviction was under the provisions of § 3941a of the Kentucky statutes, being the act of March 21, 1906 (Laws 1906, chap. 117), as amended by the act of March 13, 1908 (Laws 1908, chap. 8). The act of 1906 permitted persons to "pool or combine" the crops of "tobacco, wheat, corn, oats, hay, or other farm products" raised by them "for the purpose of obtaining a better or higher price therefor than could or might be obtained by selling said crops separately or individually." The persons so agreeing were also allowed to select agents to receive and to sell or dispose of the crops, so placed, in order to accomplish the object of the combination. The amendment of 1908, in addition to giving remedies by way of injunction and damages, provided that the agent, "when so selected," should have "the sole right to sell said crop so pooled or combined," that it should be unlawful "for any owner of such crop to sell or dispose of same, and for any person to knowingly purchase the same without the written consent of such agent," and that "upon conviction thereof," a fine should be imposed.

This statute, as construed by the court of appeals of Kentucky, is not to be regarded as an independent enactment, but is to be viewed in connection with the Kentucky anti-trust act of 1890 (Ky. Stat. § 3915), and in the light of § 198 of the Kentucky Constitution adopted in 1891. The statute of 1890 forbade the formation of pools or combinations for the purpose of regulating, controlling, or fixing the price of merchandise or property of any kind. Section 198 of the Constitution provided that it should be the duty of the general assembly from time to time to enact such laws as might be necessary "to prevent all trusts, pools, combinations, or other organizations from combining to depreciate below its real value any article, [637] or to enhance the cost of any article above its real value." It was held that the constitutional provision did not repeal the act of 1890 (Com. v. Grinstead, 108 Ky. 59, 55 S. W. 720, 57 S. W. 471); and in Com. v. International Harvester Co. 131 Ky. 551, 133 Am. St. Rep. 256, 115 S. W. 703, it was further held (approving the views expressed in Owen County Burley Tobacco Soc. v. Brumback, 128 Ky. 137, 107 S. W. 710) that the act of 1906 did not violate § 198 of the Constitution, in as much as it "did not authorize a pool to enhance the cost of crops above their real value," but that the effect of the last-mentioned act, "when considered in connection with the act of 1890, § 198 of the Constitution, and the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, was to confer, not only upon the farmer, but upon all others, the right to pool their products, skill, or capital for the purpose of obtaining the real value thereof." See Com. v. Hodges, 137 Ky. 233, 241, 125 S. W. 689; International Harvester Co. v. Com. 144 Ky. 405, 410, 138 S. W. 248; 147 Ky. 557, 559, 144 S. W. 1070; 147 Ky. 564, 565, 144 S. W. 1064. Section 3941a is treated as an amendment to § 3915; and, as was said in Com. v. International Harvester Co. 147 Ky. 573, 575, 144 S. W. 1068, the state court "upheld the validity of both statutes, but also held that the last amended or modified the first to the extent of legalizing pools, trusts, combinations, agreements, etc., but that both statutes are so governed and restricted in their operation by § 198, Constitution, as that they cannot be held to allow, but, on the contrary, prohibit, persons, associations, copartnerships, or corporations, engaged or participating in a pool, trust, combination, or agreement, by means thereof, to fix, control, or regulate the price of any commodity or article by raising or depreciating, or attempting to raise or depreciate, it above or below its real value."

As the present prosecution was under this legislation, thus construed as constituting in effect a single act, the [638] question presented is the same as that decided by this court in International Harvester Co. v. Kentucky, 234 U. S. 216, ante, 1284, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 853. It was found that the statute in its reference to "real value" prescribed no standard of conduct that it was possible to know; that it violated the fundamental principles of justice embraced in the conception of due process of law in compelling men, on peril of indictment, to guess what their goods would have brought under other conditions not ascertainable.

The Harvester Company was prosecuted for being a party to a price-raising combination; Collins, for breaking a combination agreement and selling outside the pool which he had joined. With respect to each, the test of the legality of the combination was said to be whether it raised prices above the "real value." If it did—in Collins' case—he would be subject to penalties for remaining in the combination; if it did not, he would be punishable for not keeping his tobacco in the pool. He was thus bound to ascertain the "real value;" to determine his conduct not according to the actualities of life, or by reference to knowable criteria, but by speculating upon imaginary conditions and endeavoring to conjecture what would be the value under other and so-called normal circumstances with fair competition, eliminating the abnormal influence of the combination itself, and of all other like combinations, and of still other combinations which these were organized to oppose. The objection that the statute, by reason of its uncertainty, was fundamentally defective, was as available to Collins as it was to the Harvester Company.

Digitized by Google

In this view, it is unnecessary to consider the objection under the commerce clause, or the alleged conflict, as to interstate transactions, with the Federal anti-trust act.

The judgment is reversed and the cause is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

---

[639] THOMAS MALONE, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 639.)

This case is covered by the decision in Collins v. Kentucky, ante, 1510.

[No. 36.]

Submitted April 22, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction of the Circuit Court of Mason County, in that state, of selling pooled tobacco without the consent of the agent of the pool. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 141 Ky. 570, 133 S. W. 235.

Messrs. E. L. Worthington and J. M. Collins submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Mr. James Garnett, Attorney General of Kentucky, submitted the cause for defendant in error.

For contentions of counsel, see their briefs as reported in Collins v. Kentucky, ante, 1510.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This writ of error has been sued out to review a judgment of the court of appeals of Kentucky which affirmed the conviction of Thomas Malone, the plaintiff in error, for selling pooled tobacco without the consent of the agents of the pool, contrary to § 3941a of the Kentucky statutes. 141 Ky. 570, 133 S. W. 235.

The case is the same in all material respects as that of Collins v. Kentucky, decided this day [234 U. S. 634, ante, 1510, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 924], with the exception that the tobacco in question was sold by the plaintiff in error within the state of Kentucky. For the reasons stated in the opinion in the Collins Case, the judgment must be reversed.

Judgment reversed.

---

[640] ORDER OF ST. BENEDICT OF NEW JERSEY, Petitioner,
v.
ALBERT STEINHAUSER, Individually and as Administrator, etc., of Augustin Wirth, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 640-652.)

Religious societies — membership — termination.

1. Membership in a monastic brotherhood is not terminated by absence from the Abbey while engaged in pastoral work, where such absence was with the consent of the Abbot, and the absent member was subject to recall at any time.

[Matters as to religious societies, see Religious Societies, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Religious societies — vow of poverty — release.

2. A special permission granted by the Abbot of a monastic brotherhood to enable a member to retain and use for charitable purposes the proceeds of his literary labors did not, and could not, release him from the agreement expressed in the constitution of the brotherhood, that the gains and acquisitions of members shall belong to the Order, although its rules recognize the right of a member to keep whatever the Abbot permits him to have.

[Matters as to religious societies, see Religious Societies, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Contracts — public policy — vow of poverty.

3. The agreement expressed in the constitution of a monastic brotherhood incorporated by special act, that the gains and acquisitions of members shall belong to the Order, is not opposed to public policy, where the constitution expressly recognizes the privilege of withdrawal; and the Order is therefore entitled to all the personal property left by a deceased member, including that derived from his literary labors.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Contracts, IV. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trusts — in property of member of monastic order.

4. The equitable ownership of the copyrights obtained by a member of a monastic brotherhood, and of the proceeds of his literary labors, vested in the Order under an agreement in the constitution that the gains and acquisitions of members shall belong to the Order, and as to both the member stood in the position of a trustee.

[For other cases, see Trusts, I, d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Limitation of actions — suit to establish trust — when statute begins to run.

5. The six years' limitation prescribed by Minn. Laws 1905, § 4076, for actions to enforce a trust, does not begin to run against a suit by a monastic brotherhood to enforce its equitable ownership under the constitution of the Order in the gains and acquisitions of a member until the latter's death, where there is no repudiation of the trust during his lifetime.

[For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, II. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 267.]

Argued March 11, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which, reversing a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Minnesota, directed the dismissal of a bill to establish the title of a monastic brotherhood to personal property left by a deceased member, and the granting of the prayer of a cross bill filed by the administrator of the decedent's estate, asserting ownership in his representative capacity. Decree of Circuit Court of Appeals reversed, and that of Circuit Court affirmed.

See same case below, 114 C. C. A. 249, 194 Fed. 289.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Morgan J. O'Brien argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Frederick C. Gladden, Frank W. Arnold, J. Warren Greene, Otto Kueffner, and Albert Schaller, filed a brief for petitioner:

The contract was not void as against public policy.

Egerton v. Brownlow, L. R. 4 H. L. 1, 23 L. J. Ch. N. S. 348, 18 Jur. 71, 24 Eng. Rul. Cas. 118; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 175 U. S. 91, 44 L. ed. 84, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Smith v. Du Bose, 78 Ga. 413, 6 Am. St. Rep. 260, 3 S. E. 309; Vidal v. Philadelphia, 2 How. 127, 197, 11 L. ed. 205, 233; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 30 L.R.A. 193, 17 C. C. A. 62, 36 U. S. App. 152, 70 Fed. 202; Swann v. Swann, 21 Fed. 301; Goesele v. Bimeler, 14 How. 589, 14 L. ed. 554; Gasely v. Separatists Soc. 13 Ohio St. 144; Schriber v. Rapp, 5 Watts, 351, 30 Am. Dec. 327; Waite v. Merrill, 4 Me. 102, 16 Am. Dec. 238; Gass v. Wilhite, 2 Dana, 170, 26 Am. Dec. 446; Schwartz v. Duss, 93 Fed. 529, 43 C. C. A. 323, 103 Fed. 567, 187 U. S. 8, 47 L. ed. 53, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Benziger v. Steinhauser, 154 Fed. 151.

An inchoate right to a copyright may be transferred by parol prior to the actual taking out of the copyright.

Black v. Henry G. Allen Co. 9 L.R.A. 433, 42 Fed. 618; Callaghan v. Myers, 128 U. S. 617, 32 L. ed. 547, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; Carte v. Evans, 27 Fed. 861; Pierpont v. Fowle, 2 Woodb. & M. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 11,152; Gould v. Banks, 8 Wend. 562, 24 Am. Dec. 90.

Although the copyright vests in the name of the party who takes it out, he may nevertheless be a mere holder in trust for the legal owner; and in such a case, where another is the actual owner, a court of equity may compel an assignment.

Lawrence v. Dana, 4 Cliff. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 8,136; Little v. Gould, 2 Blatchf. 165, Fed. Cas. No. 8,394; Pulte v. Derby, 5 McLean, 328, Fed. Cas. No. 11,465.

The person who employs another to prepare a work may, because of the circumstances of the employment, become entitled to whatever literary property exists in the production.

Lawrence v. Dana, supra; Carte v. Evans, 27 Fed. 861; Callaghan v. Myers, 128 U. S. 617, 32 L. ed. 547, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177.

Messrs. William H. Pitzer and William Hayward argued the cause and filed a brief for respondent:

The contract for which indorsement is sought in the bill is as to property of which Augustin Wirth died seised, and which forms the subject-matter of this suit, and is contrary to public policy and void.

Hershy v. Clark, 35 Ark. 17, 37 Am. Rep. 4; Bates Mach. Co. v. Bates, 87 Ill. App. 225; Montgomery Palace Stock Car Co. v. Street Stable Car Line, 142 Ill. 315, 31 N. E. 434; McFarland v. Stanton Mfg. Co. 53 N. J. Eq. 649, 51 Am. St. Rep. 647, 33 Atl. 962; Aspinwall Mfg. Co. v. Gill, 32 Fed. 697; Baltimore Humane Impartial Soc. v. Pierce, 100 Md. 520, 70 L.R.A. 485, 108 Am. St. Rep. 450, 60 Atl. 277, 99 Md. 352, 58 Atl. 26.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought by the Order of St. Benedict of New Jersey, a corporation of that state, to establish its title to personal property left by Augustin Wirth, deceased, a member of the Order, who died at Springfield, Minnesota, in December, 1901. The defendant Albert Steinhauser as administrator of the estate of the decedent, holding letters from the probate court of Brown county, Minnesota, filed a cross bill asserting ownership in his representative capacity, and praying discovery and account with respect to whatever part of the estate had come into the complainant's possession. The circuit court entered a decree dismissing the cross bill and granting the relief sought by the complainant's bill. 179 Fed. 137. The circuit court of appeals reversed this decree, directing the dismissal of the original bill and the granting of the prayer of the cross bill. 114 C. C. A. 249, 194 Fed. 289. Certiorari was allowed.

Digitized by Google

The monastic brotherhood known as the Order of St. Benedict was established by St. Benedict in the early part of the sixth century at Subiaco, Italy, whence it spread over western Europe. It was brought to the United States in 1846. The members of the brotherhood follow what is known as "the rule of St. Benedict," a collection [642] of mandates essentially unchanged from the beginning. The vows are those of obedience, stability, chastity, and poverty.

We are not concerned in the present case with any question of ecclesiastical requirement or monastic discipline. The question is solely one of civil rights. The claim in suit rests upon the constitution of the complainant corporation, and the obligations inherent in membership.

The Order of St. Benedict of New Jersey was incorporated in 1868 by special act of the legislature of that state. The incorporators were described as "being a society of religious men, living in community, and devoted to charitable works and the education of youth." The corporation was empowered to hold property and to make by-laws for the government of the Order, provided that these should not be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States or of the state of New Jersey, that the clear yearly income of the real estate should not exceed a sum stated, and that no one should remain an incorporator "except regular members of said religious society living in community, and governed by the laws thereof." Under this charter the Order adopted a constitution, among the provisions of which are the following:

"Section 11. Membership is lost at once:

"1. By being dismissed according to the disciplinary statutes of the Order of St. Benedict of New Jersey, approved of by Pope Pius IX. for the American Cassinese Congregation of Benedictines.

"2. By voluntary leaving the Order for any purpose whatsoever.

"3. By joining any other order or secret society, or any other religious denominations.

"Section 12. Since the Order of St. Benedict of New Jersey is solely a charitable institution, the real estate of said order and the individual earnings of its members are and must be considered as common property of the [643] Order of St. Benedict of New Jersey, from which the members of said Order derive their support, and the balance of which income and property should serve for the following up and carrying out of the charitable objects of the Order.

"It is therefore agreed upon by all the members of the said Order of St. Benedict of New Jersey that no member can or will claim at any time or under any circumstances more than their decent support for the time for which they are members of the Charter of the Order of St. Benedict of New Jersey, and no further.

"And moreover, that each member individually pledges himself to have all property which he now holds or hereafter may hold in his own name conveyed as soon as possible to the legal title of the Order of St. Benedict of New Jersey."

Augustin Wirth was born in Bavaria in 1828. He came to this country in 1851; and, in the next year, he took the solemn vows of the Order at St. Vincent's Abbey in Pennsylvania, and was ordained to the priesthood. For a few years he had charge of a church at Greenburgh, Pennsylvania, near St. Vincent's, and in 1857 he went to Kansas, where he established a college and a church which afterwards became an abbey. He continued his work in Kansas until 1868, and then was sent to Minnesota, where he remained until 1875. He then resumed his pastorate at Greenburgh, Pennsylvania, and later had charge of a parish at Elizabeth, New Jersey, until 1887. It is evident that while in Kansas he had joined the monastery of St. Benedict there established, and in 1887, with the permission of both Abbots, he transferred his stability to St. Mary's Abbey in Newark, New Jersey, the home of the complainant, the New Jersey Order, of which he thus became a member. He remained continuously at this Abbey for about two years, until 1889; he was in ill-health and was taken care of by the Order. He was then sent to a church in Wilmington, Delaware, and after a few [644] months he returned to his pastorate in Elizabeth, New Jersey, in which he continued until 1897. After traveling for some time in Europe for his health, visiting Rome and various monasteries, he took a parish, in 1898, at Springfield, Minnesota, with the requisite permission ad tempus from the Abbot of St. Mary's; and there he remained until his death. At the request of the New Jersey Abbot he was buried in the cemetery of the Benedictine Order in Minnesota. The circuit court found that his membership in the complainant Order continued to the last, and this finding was not disturbed by the circuit court of appeals. We regard the fact as satisfactorily established. His absence from the Abbey when engaged in pastoral work was upon the consent of the Abbot, and he was subject to recall at any time.

Digitized by Google

Father Wirth published many works on religious subjects. He obtained copyrights for his books, and made his contract with the publishers, in the name of "Augustine Wirth, O. S. B." The property here in question consists chiefly of the proceeds received from sales of these books (including notes and mortgages in which they had been invested), credits on account of sales made before and after his death, and the copyrights. He received the royalties personally during his lifetime; and after his death, until October 17, 1906 (when suit was brought against the publishers by the administrator), the accruing royalties were paid to the complainant. The New Jersey Order also, through the Abbot of St. John's Abbey in Minnesota, collected certain sums on outstanding notes held by the decedent, and paid therefrom the decedent's debts.

It is clear that, according to the principles of the complainant's organization, Father Wirth was not entitled to retain for his own benefit either the moneys which he received for his services in the various churches with which he was connected, or those which he derived from [645] the sale of his books. By the explicit provision of the constitution of the complainant (§ 12), it was a necessary consequence of his continued membership, that his gains—from whatever source—belonged to it, and that, as against the complainant, he could not assert title to the property which he received. The claim of the Order, based upon this conception of its rights, is resisted upon the grounds, (1) that the decedent had the permission of the Abbot to retain, as his own property, the proceeds of the sales of his books, and (2) that the obligation sought to be enforced by the complainant is void as being against public policy.

1. While there was evidence that Father Wirth was required to account to the Abbot for the salary and perquisites received in his church work, it appeared that the income from his books was treated in a different manner. This income he was allowed to retain and use. When he joined the complainant, in 1887, he did not make a transfer of any property to the Order, although already he had some property as a result of his literary labors. The evidence showed that he made loans and investments; and from the moneys in his hands, he paid his personal expenses, including his outlays on his visit to Europe. Because of his going to Rome without leave, and his expenditures on this trip, he was admonished by the Abbot Primate, O. S. B., who had already written to the Abbot of St. Mary's that Father Wirth should be required to account. But no such account was given, and it would seem that such disagreements as arose between the decedent and his ecclesiastical superiors in this country related to church moneys, and not to the proceeds of book sales. The circuit court of appeals, disagreeing with the finding of the circuit court, concluded that Father Wirth was permitted by the Abbot of St. Vincent's, and by the complainant's Abbot, to retain these proceeds as his own property.

[646] It is undisputed that the decedent did have a special permission with respect to the use of this income. Originally given by the Abbot of St. Vincent's, it was continued by the Abbot of St. Mary's. It was given in recognition of the fact that his literary work was in addition to the duties which he was normally required to perform. But, as we think, the conclusion of the court below does not give proper weight to the testimony as to the nature and scope of the privilege thus accorded. It was explicitly testified by the Abbot that Father Wirth was permitted to keep the moneys in question, not as his own, but to have their use for charitable purposes with the permission of his superiors. It was this permission which was originally given and which the complainant's Abbot renewed. This testimony was not controverted, and, in view of the constitution of the Order, we find no ground for treating the permission as being of a different character. It is said that it does not appear how the decedent, while in Minnesota, for example, could have expended the money for the charitable purposes of the Order in New Jersey. But the purposes of this Order were broadly charitable and religious; the decedent prosecuted his educational and religious work with the Abbot's consent, and the use of these moneys for charitable purposes, wherever he was located for the time, might well be in furtherance of the objects of the Order. It may have been the concession of a special privilege to permit the decedent to act directly in the distribution of the moneys which he had earned by his additional labors, instead of turning them over to the head of the Order, but we cannot say that it was a permission without restriction, or one which essentially altered his relation to the Order and his fundamental duty while he remained a member of it.

Digitized by Google

On the contrary, we agree with the circuit court, not only in its finding of fact that the permission was limited as stated, but also in its holding that, in view of the basic [647] law of the organization, there is no warrant for the conclusion that the Abbot had any authority to allow Father Wirth to assert an independent title, or to hold the property as absolutely his own. It is said that the "Rule of St. Benedict" recognizes the right of the member of the Order to keep whatever the Abbot permits him to have. But this plainly refers to the necessities of life, and not to accumulations in direct antagonism to the principles of the society. Whatever indulgence may have been shown to the decedent with respect to the submission of appropriate accounts, it cannot be said that while his membership continued he had, or could have, the privilege of accumulating an individual estate for his own benefit and free from his obligations to the Order. This could not but be regarded as violative of the constitution of the complainant, and beyond the competency of its official head to grant.

2. We are thus brought to the question whether the requirement, which lies at the foundation of this suit, is void as against public policy; that is, whether, by reason of repugnance to the essential principles of our institutions, the obligation, though voluntarily assumed, and the trust arising from it, cannot be enforced. In support of this view, it seems to be premised that a member of the Order can be absolved from his vows only by the action of the Head of the Church; and that unless the requisite dispensation is thus obtained the member is bound for life in temporal, as well as in spiritual, affairs. This, it is said, is the necessary import of testimony given by the Abbot. It is thus assumed that the vows in connection with the "Rule" bind the member in complete servitude to the Order for life, or until the Head of the Church absolves him from his obligations; and it is concluded that an agreement for such a surrender, being opposed to individual liberty and to the inherent right of every person to acquire and hold property, is unenforceable in the civil [648] courts, and cannot form the basis for an equitable title in the complainant.

This argument, we think, disregards the explicit provision of the complainant's constitution as to voluntary withdrawal. It overlooks the distinction between civil and ecclesiastical rights and duties; between the Order of St. Benedict of New Jersey, a corporation of that state, and the monastic brotherhood subject to church authority; between the obligation imposed by the corporate organization and religious vows. As we have said, the question here is not one of canon law or ecclesiastical polity. The requirement of complainant's constitution must be read according to its terms, and its validity must be thus determined. Granted that it is to be examined in the light of that to which it refers, still, obligations which are inconsistent with its express provisions cannot be imported into it. This constitution, as already stated, definitely provides: "Membership is lost at once:— 2. By voluntary leaving the Order for any purpose whatsoever" (§ 11.) This language cannot be taken to mean other than what it distinctly says. So far as the corporation, and the civil rights and obligations incident to membership therein, are concerned, it leaves no doubt that the member may voluntarily leave the Order at any time. His membership in the corporation, and the obligation he assumes, are subject to that condition. If he severs his connection with the corporation, it cannot be heard to claim any property he may subsequently acquire. His obligation runs with his membership, and the latter may be terminated at will.

With this privilege of withdrawal expressly recognized, we are unable to say that the agreement expressed in § 12 of the complainant's constitution, that the gains and acquisitions of members shall belong to the corporation, must be condemned. These go to the corporation in exchange for the privileges of membership, and [649] to further the common purpose to which the members are devoted. No constitutional right is invaded and no statutory restriction is transgressed. The legislature of New Jersey, which, subject to constitutional inhibition, is the arbiter of the public policy of that state, granted the charter by special act to the Benedictine Society of "religious men living in community," and it cannot be said that the constitution adopted by the Order was repugnant to the charter provisions, or exceeded the authority plainly intended to be conferred. It would seem to be clear that the obligation assumed, instead of being opposed to the public policy of the state where it was created, was directly sanctioned.

The validity of agreements providing for community ownership with renunciation of individual rights of property during the continuance of membership in the community, where there is freedom to withdraw, has repeatedly been affirmed. The case of

Digitized by Google

Goesele v. Bimeler, 14 How. 589, 14 L. ed. 554, related to a religious society called Separatists. By an agreement made in 1819, the members of the society agreed to unite in a "communion of property." They renounced "all individual ownership of property, present or future, real or personal." Amendatory articles of like import were signed in 1824. As to these agreements, the court said: "The articles of 1819 and 1824 are objected to as not constituting a contract which a court of equity would enforce. . . . What is there in either of these articles that is contrary to good morals, or that is opposed to the policy of the laws? An association of individuals is formed under a religious influence, who are in a destitute condition, having little to rely on for their support but their industry; and they agree to labor in common for the good of the society, and a comfortable maintenance for each individual; and whatever shall be acquired beyond this shall go to the common stock. This contract provides for every member of the [650] community, in sickness and in health, and under whatsoever misfortune may occur. . . . By disclaiming all individual ownership of the property acquired by their labor, for the benefits secured by the articles, the members give durability to the fund accumulated, and to the benevolent purposes to which it is applied. No legal objection is perceived to such a partnership." (Id. pp. 606, 607.) In Schwartz v. Duss, 187 U. S. 8, 47 L. ed. 53, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4, the controversy related to the property of the Harmony Society, a community in Pennsylvania. It was said that the cardinal principle of the society was "self-abnegation" which was manifested "not only by submission to a religious head, but by a community instead of individual ownership of property, and the dedication of their labor to the society." It had been held by the supreme court of Pennsylvania that the agreements constituting the community were not offensive to the public policy of that state (Schriber v. Rapp, 5 Watts, 351, 30 Am. Dec. 327), and, as to this, it was said by this court: "The supreme court observed that the point made against the articles as being against public policy was attended with no difficulty, and Chief Justice Gibson said for the court: 'An association for the purposes expressed is prohibited neither by statute nor the common law.'" (Id. p. 26.) In Burt v. Oneida Community, 137 N. Y. 346, 19 L.R.A. 297, 33 N. E. 307, in describing the character of that society, the court of appeals of New York said that its main purpose was the "propagandism of certain communistic views as to the acquisition and enjoyment of property" and "the endeavor to put into practical operation an economic and industrial scheme which should embody and illustrate the doctrines which they held and inculcated." "Necessarily" said the court, "the basic proposition of such a community was the absolute and complete surrender of the separate and individual rights of property of the persons entering it; the abandonment of all purely selfish pursuits, and the investiture of the title to their [651] property and the fruits of their industry in the common body, from which they could not afterwards be severed or withdrawn except by unanimous consent. It was fashioned according to the pentecostal ideal, that all who believed should be together and have all things common. It was intended to be in fact, as they frequently styled themselves, but a single family upon a large scale, with only one purse, where self was to be abjured and the general good alone considered." The court, viewing it solely as a business undertaking, held that the organization "was not prohibited by any statute, or in contravention of any law regulating the possession, ownership, or tenure of property." See also Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S. 377, 30 L. ed. 718, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 610; Gasely v. Separatists Soc. 13 Ohio St. 144; Waite v. Merrill, 4 Me. 102, 16 Am. Dec. 238; Gass v. Wilhite, 2 Dana, 170, 26 Am. Dec. 446; State v. Amana Soc. 132 Iowa, 304, 109 N. W. 894, 8 L.R.A.(N.S.) 909, note, 11 Ann. Cas. 236, note.

It is said that in these cases, the contracts had been fully performed, and that the effort was made either to partition or distribute the property of the society, or to recover the value of property which had been actually conveyed, or services which had been rendered to it. But the validity of the agreements there in question, against the objection based upon public policy, was distinctly recognized.

In the present case, there was no infringement of Father Wirth's liberty or right to property. He did not withdraw from the Order. He had agreed, by accepting membership under the complainant's constitution, that his individual earnings and acquisitions, like those of other members, should go into the common fund, and, except as required for the maintenance of the members, should be used in carrying out the charitable objects of the Order. It is not unlikely that the copyrights upon his books derived their commercial value largely, if not altogether, from his membership. Certainly, the equitable ownership of these copyrights, by virtue of his obligation, vested in the complainant, [652] and the moneys in question when received became in equity its property and were subject to its disposition. As to both, Father Wirth stood in the position of a trustee.

Digitized by Google

The further objection that the claim is barred by the statute of limitations was held by the circuit court to be untenable, and we agree with that view. The applicable limitation is six years (Minn. Rev. Laws 1905, § 4076), and the bill was filed within six years after Father Wirth's death. There is no such clear evidence of repudiation of the trust as would warrant the conclusion that the statute began to run at an earlier date.

The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals is reversed and that of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

It is so ordered.

ARTHUR L. SELIG, Plff. in Err.,
v.
CHARLES E. HAMILTON, as Receiver of Evans, Johnson, Sloane Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 652–667.)

Bankruptcy — effect on state laws — stockholders' liability.

1. Bankruptcy proceedings against a corporation do not stand in the way of a resort to the method prescribed by Minn. Rev. Laws 1905, §§ 3184–3190, of enforcing the constitutional liability of a stockholder for the corporate debts.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — conclusiveness — nonresident stockholders' liability.

2. A nonresident notified only by publication and mailing of notice of the proceedings under Minn. Rev. Laws 1905, §§ 3184–3190, enacted to make more effective the constitutional liability of stockholders for the corporate debts, is not concluded in an action brought against him in another jurisdiction by the receiver for the recovery of the amount assessed against him as a stockholder upon any issue as to the transfer of his stock or the good faith with which the transfer was made, but may litigate any matter which bears upon the extent or duration of his stockholding or any other personal defense.

[For other cases, see Judgment, VI. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Corporations — stockholders' liability — transfer of stock.

3. The authority of the Minnesota courts under Minn. Rev. Laws 1905, §§ 3184–3190, enacted to make more effective the constitutional liability of stockholders for the corporate debts, cannot be deemed to be confined to proceedings to assess existing stockholders, in view of the express terms of such law, making it applicable to cases of liability arising upon shares "at any time held or owned by such stockholders," and providing for the making of an assessment against "all parties liable as stockholders."

[For other cases, see Corporations, IX. e, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — enforcing liability of nonresident stockholders.

4. A nonresident former stockholder in a domestic corporation is not denied rights under the Federal Constitution by Minn. Rev. Laws 1905, §§ 3184–3190, enacted to make more effective the constitutional liability of stockholders for the corporate debts, because under such statute he may be assessed for the corporate debts antedating the transfer, in proceedings in which he is represented by the corporation, and of which he is notified only by publication and mailing of notice.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 702, 703, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — conclusiveness — nonresident stockholders' liability.

5. The determination of the court upon the evidence before it in the proceedings under Minn. Rev. Laws 1905, §§ 3184–3190, enacted to make more effective the constitutional liability of stockholders for the corporate debts, with respect to the amount of the assessment to be made upon former stockholders for the purpose of providing for the corporate debts incurred while they held the stock, is conclusive in a suit brought by the receiver in another jurisdiction to recover the amount of the assessment from a former stockholder notified of the original proceedings only by publication and mailing of notice.

[For other cases, see Judgment, VI. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — enforcing stockholders' liability — scope — former stockholders.

6. All stockholders, past or present, who may be actually liable for the corporate debts, are embraced by the order made in the

---

NOTE.—On the relation of bankrupt law to assignments and insolvency proceedings under state laws—see note to State ex rel. Strohl v. Superior Ct. 45 L.R.A. 177.

On enforcing stockholders' liability outside of state of incorporation—see notes to Cushing v. Perot, 34 L.R.A. 737, and Edwards v. Schillinger, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 895.

On effect of assessment on stockholders, made under order of court in another state as res judicata—see note to Mutual F. Ins. Co. v. Phœnix Furniture Co. 34 L.R.A. 694.

On notice and hearing required, generally, to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L.R.A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 225.

As to what service of process is sufficient, generally, to constitute due process of law—see note to Pinney v. Providence Loan & Invest. Co. 50 L.R.A. 577.

On conflict of laws as to limitation of action to enforce liability of stockholder—see notes to Brunswick Terminal Co. v. National Bank, 48 L.R.A. 637, and Platt v. Wilmot, 48 L. ed. U. S. 809.

Digitized by Google

proceedings under Minn. Rev. Laws 1905, §§ 3184–3190, to enforce the constitutional liability of stockholders for the corporate debts, where the receiver's petition, although setting forth as existing stockholders the persons alleged to be liable, and averring that some of them were the owners of the beneficial interest, having transferred their stock to avoid liability, manifestly invoked the jurisdiction of the court for the making of such assessment as it might consider necessary in order to enforce the stockholders' liability as it actually existed with respect to the corporate debts remaining unpaid, and the order of assessment by its terms purports to include "each and every share of the capital stock" and "the persons or parties liable as stockholders."

[For other cases, see Judgment, III. a, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — conclusiveness — nonresident stockholders' liability.

7. A former stockholder in a Minnesota corporation cannot resist the recovery in an action brought by the receiver in another jurisdiction to enforce his liability under Minn. Rev. Laws 1905, §§ 3184–3190, for the corporate debts incurred prior to the transfer by him of his stock, because no separate and distinct assessment based upon the debts, antedating such transfer, was made by the Minnesota court when levying the assessment in conformity with the statute, but he must look to that court for the adjustment of such equities as he may have, the assessment order being a provisional one representing the best judgment of the court upon the evidence before it as to the amount of the assessment required, and directing that all moneys collected from the stockholders by the receiver shall be held until the further order of the court.

[For other cases, see Judgment, VI. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — judgment — corporate indebtedness.

8. Competent evidence that there are corporate debts remaining unpaid which antedated the transfer of stock by a former stockholder was furnished in a suit against him to enforce in a foreign jurisdiction his liability under Minn. Rev. Laws 1905, §§ 3184–3190, for the corporate debts incurred prior to such transfer, by decrees entered in the parent suit in Minnesota, which determined the amount of the outstanding claims and when they arose, and showed that there were debts in excess of the amount demanded of defendant, which arose before his shares were transferred.

[For other cases, see Evidence, IV. k; XII. h, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Limitation of actions — enforcing stockholders' liability in foreign jurisdiction.

9. The three years' limitation prescribed by N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 394, for actions against a director or stockholder of a moneyed corporation or banking association to recover a penalty or forfeiture imposed or to enforce a liability created by common law or by statute, does not govern a suit to enforce the liability of a stockholder in a foreign mercantile corporation.

[For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, 295, 302, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 361.]

Arugued May 6, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment enforcing the liability of a stockholder in a foreign corporation. Affirmed.

See same case below, 195 Fed. 153.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Abram I. Elkus argued the cause, and, with Mr. Wesley S. Sawyer, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

This court has jurisdiction.

Converse v. Hamilton, 224 U. S. 243, 252, 56 L. ed. 749, 752, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 1292; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. ed. 1163, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Old Wayne Mut. Life Asso. v. McDonough, 204 U. S. 8, 51 L. ed. 345, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236.

The sole determination of the Minnesota court is that an assessment, on a basis of all debts, of a specified percentage on the capital stock, will not more than pay the corporate debts. No other question was considered by the court in making the order of assessment.

Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 125, 83 N. W. 36; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 528, 51 L. ed. 1163, 1173, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Tiffany v. Giesen, 96 Minn. 488, 105 N. W. 901; Swing v. Humbird, 94 Minn. 1, 101 N. W. 938; Hamilton v. Loeb, 108 C. C. A. 109, 186 Fed. 7.

Defendant is liable only ratably on an assessment based on debts which existed on September 5, 1904, and are unrenewed, and based on all stockholders liable to contribute towards such debts. No such assessment has been made.

McDonald v. Dewey, 202 U. S. 510, 50 L. ed. 1128, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731, 6 Ann. Cas. 419; Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 125, 83 N. W. 36; Harper v. Carroll, 66 Minn. 487, 69 N. W. 610, 1069; Harpold v. Stobart, 46 Ohio St. 397, 15 Am. St. Rep. 618, 21 N. E. 637; Willius v. Mann, 91 Minn. 404, 98 N. W. 341, 867; Alsop v. Conway, 110 C. C. A. 366, 188 Fed. 568.

The Minnesota court did not have jurisdiction to render a decree with the effect, as construed by the trial court, of adjudging the liability of defendant.

Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516,

Digitized by Google

528, 532, 51 L. ed. 1163, 1173, 1175, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Converse v. Hamilton, 224 U. S. 243, 256, 260, 56 L. ed. 749, 754, 755, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 1292; Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 329, 40 L. ed. 986, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810; Commercial Bank v. Azotine Mfg. Co. 66 Minn. 413, 69 N. W. 217; Commonwealth Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Hayden Bros. 60 Neb. 636, 83 Am. St. Rep. 545, 83 N. W. 922; Howarth v. Lombard, 175 Mass. 570, 49 L.R.A. 301, 56 N. E. 888; Ward v. Joslin, 186 U. S. 142, 46 L. ed. 1093, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807; Schrader v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 133 U. S. 67, 33 L. ed. 564, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; Mutual F. Ins. Co. v. Phœnix Furniture Co. 108 Mich. 170, 34 L.R.A. 694, 62 Am. St. Rep. 693, 66 N. W. 1095; Covell v. Fowler, 144 Fed. 535; Clark v. Wells, 203 U. S. 164, 51 L. ed. 138, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; French v. Busch, 189 Fed. 483.

The order of assessment cannot be conclusive upon points other than those properly before the court and necessarily decided.

Stokes v. Foote, 172 N. Y. 341, 65 N. E. 176.

The action is barred by the statute of limitations contained in § 394 of the New York Code.

Staten Island Midland R. Co. v. Hinchliffe, 170 N. Y. 473, 63 N. E. 545; Morgan v. Hedstrom, 164 N. Y. 224, 58 N. E. 26; Shepard v. Fulton, 171 N. Y. 184, 63 N. E. 966.

The Supreme Court follows that rule of construction of the statute of limitations of a state which is adopted by the state courts.

Balkam v. Woodstock Iron Co. 154 U. S. 177, 187, 38 L. ed. 953, 956, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1010.

The Supreme Court, on ascertaining the construction of the state court, would apply that construction, regardless of its own prior decisions.

Green v. Neal, 6 Pet. 291, 8 L. ed. 402; Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 47, 54, 25 L. ed. 544, 546; Bauserman v. Blunt, 147 U. S. 647, 653, 37 L. ed. 316, 318, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Moores v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 104 U. S. 625, 629, 26 L. ed. 870, 872.

An expression as to the construction of a state statute by the highest court of the state is presumed to be made with due consideration.

Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Albro, 62 C. C. A. 213, 127 Fed. 281; San Diego Flume Co. v. Souther, 32 C. C. A. 548, 61 U. S. App. 134, 90 Fed. 164.

Mr. James E. Trask argued the cause, and, with Messrs. E. H. Morphy and John J. Clark, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Under the laws of Minnesota a stockholder cannot change or affect his relation or liability as a stockholder as to prior existing debts by any transfer of his stock.

Gunnison v. United States Invest. Co. 70 Minn. 292, 73 N. W. 149.

The liability of all stockholders and all parties liable, whether as past or present stockholders, must be enforced, if at all, in a single winding-up action and assessment proceeding.

Arthur v. Willius, 44 Minn. 413, 46 N. W. 851; Allen v. Walsh, 25 Minn. 543; Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 125, 83 N. W. 36; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. ed. 1163, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Woodsworth v. Bowles, 61 Kan. 577, 60 Pac. 331; Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 747, 30 L. ed. 825, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757.

The Minnesota statute for the better enforcement of the stockholders' liability by its terms applies equally to past and present stockholders.

Tiffany v. Giesen, 96 Minn. 488, 105 N. W. 901; Gunnison v. United States Invest. Co. 70 Minn. 292, 73 N. W. 149.

By the order of assessment the court intended to and did include the defendant Selig among those adjudged subject to the assessment under the general designation of "each and every person or party liable."

Hamilton v. Levison, 198 Fed. 446, affirmed in 122 C. C. A. 386, 204 Fed. 72; Hamilton v. Titus, 185 Fed. 144; Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 127, 83 N. W. 36.

As the Minnesota court had jurisdiction over all parties subject to a stockholder's liability, whether past or present stockholders, and exercised that jurisdiction in the present case, the assessment itself establishes the existence of the indebtedness which made it necessary, since the statute provides that the assessment shall be conclusive as to the necessity therefor and amount thereof.

Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 329, 337, 40 L. ed. 986, 990, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810; Gunnison v. United States Invest. Co. 70 Minn. 292, 73 N. W. 149; Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319, 332, 33 L. ed. 184, 192, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739.

Under the Minnesota statute the assessment is a judgment in a proceeding in which the court had jurisdiction, without personal service, to bring before it stockholders who had transferred their stock, for the purpose of determining whether indebtedness existed for which past stockholders remained liable, precisely as it had jurisdiction to bring before it present stockholders for the purpose of determining whether indebtedness existed for which present stockholders remained liable.

Digitized by Google

Neff v. Lamn, 99 Minn. 117, 108 N. W. 849; Hamilton v. Levison, 198 Fed. 444, 122 C. C. A. 386, 204 Fed. 72; Hamilton v. Simon, 178 Fed. 130; Hamilton v. Titus, 185 Fed. 140; Langworthy v. Garding, 74 Minn. 325, 77 N. W. 207; Howarth v. Lombard, 175 Mass. 570, 49 L.R.A. 301, 56 N. E 888; Howarth v. Ellwanger, 86 Fed. 54; Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319, 331, 33 L. ed. 184, 191, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Glenn v. Liggett, 135 U. S. 533, 34 L. ed. 264, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 56, 23 L. ed. 220; Burget v. Robinson, 51 C. C. A. 488, 113 Fed. 669, 59 C. C. A. 260, 123 Fed. 262, 188 U. S. 739, 47 L. ed. 677, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 848; Spargo v. Converse, 112 C. C. A. 337, 191 Fed. 823; Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 125, 83 N. W. 36; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. ed. 1163, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755.

The real owner of stock held by him in the name of a dummy is properly charged in an action at law with the statutory liability.

Davis v. Stevens, 17 Blatchf. 263, Fed. Cas. No. 3,653; Hunt v. Reardon, 93 Minn. 375, 101 N. W. 606; Rankin v. Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. 189 U. S. 242, 47 L. ed. 792, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Ohio Valley Nat. Bank v. Hulitt, 204 U. S. 162, 51 L. ed. 423, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; Marcy v. Clark, 17 Mass. 330.

The assessment is not subject to be attacked collaterally on the ground that no facts are found which show the defendant to be subject to the full assessment of $100 per share.

Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 125, 83 N. W. 36; Levison v. Hamilton, 122 C. C. A. 386, 204 Fed. 72; Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 505, 19 L. ed. 476, 478; Keyser v. Hitz, 133 U. S. 138, 33 L. ed. 531, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; Bushnell v. Leland, 164 U. S. 684, 41 L. ed. 598, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673, 24 L. ed. 168; Converse v. Hamilton, 224 U. S. 243, 56 L. ed. 749, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 1292.

Neither the question of the existence of the allowed indebtedness which arose prior to the alleged transfer by defendant of his stock, nor that of the bona fides of such alleged transfer, was jurisdictional.

Peninsular Sav. Bank v. Ward, 118 Mich. 97, 76 N. W. 161, 79 N. W. 912; Reinach v. Atlantic & G. W. R. Co. 58 Fed. 42, 12 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 129, 197; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 709, 8 L. ed. 547, 554; Figge v. Rowlen, 185 Ill. 240, 57 N. E. 195; Fisher v. Bassett, 9 Leigh, 131, 33 Am. Dec. 227; Wright v. Douglass, 10 Barb. 99; Van Fleet, Collateral Attack, § 60.

The statute, in conferring upon the Minnesota court jurisdiction without personal service, to bring before it in the assessment proceedings stockholders who have transferred their stock, for the purpose of considering proofs as to what parties are liable or subject to an assessment, and adjudging an assessment against them, is constitutional.

Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 125, 83 N. W. 36; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. ed. 1163, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Levison v. Hamilton, 122 C. C. A. 386, 204 Fed. 72; Tiffany v. Giesen, 96 Minn. 490, 105 N. W. 901; Gunnison v. United States Invest. Co. 70 Minn. 292, 73 N. W. 149; Hyatt v. Anderson, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 132, 74 S. W. 1094; White v. Green, 105 Iowa, 176, 74 N. W. 929; Brown v. Hitchcock, 36 Ohio St. 667; Wyman v. Bowman, 62 C. C. A. 189, 127 Fed. 257; Jackson v. Meek, 87 Tenn. 69, 10 Am. St. Rep. 620, 9 S. W. 225.

The constitutional liability of the stockholders did not pass to the trustee in bankruptcy, and the discharge in bankruptcy did not affect the right of creditors to enforce the liability by means of an order or decree of assessment in the state court.

Re People's Live Stock Ins. Co. 56 Minn. 185, 57 N. W. 468; Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 125, 83 N. W. 36; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. ed. 1163, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Way v. Barney, 116 Minn. 285, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 648, 133 N. W. 801, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 719; Marshall Paper Co. v. Train, 43 C. C. A. 38, 102 Fed. 872; Hill v. Harding, 130 U. S. 699, 32 L. ed. 1083, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725; Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. v. Agnew, 194 N. Y. 169, 24 L.R.A. (N.S.) 628, 86 N. E. 1116, 16 Ann. Cas. 1150.

The action was commenced within the six years' limitation prescribed by N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 382, and the cause of action is not barred.

Phillips v. Therasson, 11 Hun, 141; Knox v. Baldwin, 80 N. Y. 610; Corning v. McCullough, 1 N. Y. 47, 49 Am. Dec. 287; Conklin v. Furman, 48 N. Y. 527; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. ed. 1163, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought in the district court of the United States for the southern district of New York, to enforce the liability of a stockholder of an insolvent Minnesota corporation.

Digitized by Google

[656] In 1902 the Evans, Munzer, Pickering Company was incorporated under the laws of Minnesota for the purpose of transacting a mercantile business. In 1904 its name was changed to the Evans, Johnson, Sloane Company. Its capital stock consisted of 1,500 shares of common and 1,000 shares of preferred stock of the par value of $100 each. The plaintiff in error, Arthur L. Selig, became the owner of 50 shares of preferred stock in 1902, and held the same until September 5, 1904, when they were transferred on the books of the company to Max Mayer. On September 25, 1905, a petition in bankruptcy was filed against the company in the United States district court for the district of Minnesota; adjudication followed on October 13, 1905, and trustees in bankruptcy were appointed.

On May 28, 1906, a creditor of the company, on behalf of itself and all other creditors, brought a sequestration suit in the district court of Ramsey county, Minnesota, for the purpose of enforcing the liability of the stockholders of the company. In that suit, on June 25, 1906, Charles E. Hamilton (the defendant in error here) was appointed receiver. Further order was made on June 28, 1906, requiring creditors to exhibit their claims, and become parties to the suit, within six months from the date of the first publication of the order. On July 6, 1906, in the same suit, the receiver filed a petition for an assessment upon the stockholders. The court set a date for hearing and directed notice to be given by publication and mailing. Thereupon, on September 4, 1906, the court entered its order assessing the sum of $100 against each share of the capital stock and against those liable as stockholders on account of such shares; the latter were directed to pay to the receiver the amount of the assessment within thirty days, and the receiver was authorized in default of payment to institute an action against anyone liable as a stockholder, in any court having jurisdiction, whether in the state of Minnesota or elsewhere. On April 23, 1907, [657] the court entered a decree—in the sequestration suit—allowing the claims against the company as set forth in an annexed schedule, which showed the nature of each claim, its amount, and when it arose. A further decree allowing an additional claim was entered on February 13, 1908. It appeared from these decrees, and the schedules to which they referred, that of the claims thus allowed, upwards of $11,000 wholly arose prior to September, 1904, and, in addition, over $20,000 in part arose prior to that date.

Pursuant to the order of September 4, 1906, the present action was brought in December, 1909, to recover from Selig the amount assessed on 50 shares. The complaint set forth the proceedings in the sequestration suit, the statutes under which they were instituted, and the order of assessment. It was also alleged that Selig, on or about September 5, 1904, had transferred his stock, when the company was in an unsound financial condition, for the purpose of concealing his ownership, but that he remained the owner of the entire beneficial interest in the shares in question, and that the transfer was fraudulent as against the creditors; and also that, under the law of Minnesota, a stockholder in a corporation could not avoid his liability for prior debts by a bona fide sale of his shares to a solvent person and a recorded transfer. In his answer, Selig admitted the transfer of the shares at the time mentioned, alleged that it was duly made and entered on the corporate books, and denied the other allegations pertinent to his liability.

Upon the trial the record of the proceedings in the sequestration suit, including the order of assessment and the decrees allowing the claims of creditors, were received in evidence. The entry in the stock book showing the record of the issuance of 50 shares to Selig and their transfer, together with the original certificate as canceled, was introduced. Aside from what was contended to be the effect of the proceedings in the sequestration suit, there [658] was no evidence impeaching the transfer. This being the state of the proof, the plaintiff rested and the defendant moved to dismiss the complaint upon the grounds that the plaintiff had failed to prove facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, that the suit should have been brought in equity, and not at law, and that the cause of action had accrued more than three years prior to the commencement of the action, and hence was barred by the statute of limitations of the state of New York. Each party also moved for a direction of a verdict. The district judge directed a verdict in favor of the receiver for the sum of $5,000 with interest, and in the view that, in sustaining and enforcing the order of assessment, a question arose involving the application of the Federal Constitution, this writ of error has been sued out.

The legislation of Minnesota with respect to the liability of stockholders, as construed by the state court, was reviewed and its constitutional validity was upheld in Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. ed. 1163, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755. The conclusions there reached were reaffirmed in

Digitized by Google

Converse v. Hamilton, 224 U. S. 243, 56 L. ed. 749, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415. Briefly restating them, it may be said: The Constitution of Minnesota (art. 10, § 3) provides: "Each stockholder in any corporation (excepting those organized for the purpose of carrying on any kind of manufacturing or mechanical business) shall be liable to the amount of stock held or owned by him." The provision is self-executing. The liability of the stockholder, measured by the par value of his stock, "is not to the corporation, but to the creditors collectively; is not penal, but contractual; is not joint, but several; and the mode and means of its enforcement are subject to legislative regulation." (See Willis v. Mabon (Willis v. St. Paul Sanitation Co.) 48 Minn. 140, 16 L.R.A. 281, 31 Am. St. Rep. 626, 50 N. W. 1110; McKusick v. Seymour S. & Co. 48 Minn. 158, 50 N. W. 1114; Minneapolis Baseball Co. v. City Bank, 66 Minn. 441, 38 L.R.A. 415, 60 N. W. 331; Hanson v. Davison, 73 Minn. 454, 76 N. W. 254; Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 125, 83 N W. 36; London & N. W. American Mortg. Co. v. St. Paul Park Improv. Co. 84 [659] Minn. 144, 86 N. W. 872; Way v. Barney, 116 Minn. 285, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 648, 133 N. W. 801, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 719). Under the statute of 1894 (chap. 76), this liability was enforceable exclusively by means of a single suit in equity, in a court of the state, which was brought for the benefit of all the creditors against all the stockholders, or as many as could be served with process within the state. Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 839, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558. To make the remedy more effective, the act of 1899 (chap. 272) was passed, and under the provisions of this statute as continued in substance (Way v. Barney, 116 Minn. 294, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 648, 133 N. W. 801, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 719), in the Revised Laws of 1905, §§ 3184-3190, the proceedings here in question were had. Provision was made—upon hearing at the time appointed, and after notice by publication or otherwise, as directed by the court—for receiving evidence as to the probable indebtedness of the corporation, the expenses of the receivership, the amount of available assets the parties liable as stockholders, and the nature and extent of such liability; and, thereupon, the court was authorized to levy a ratable assessment "upon all parties liable as stockholders, or upon or on account of any stock or shares of such corporation, for such amount," proportion, or percentage of the liability as th court in its discretion might "deem proper, taking into account the probable solvency or insolvency of stockholders and the probable expenses of collecting the assessment." The order and the assessment thereby levied was made "conclusive upon and against all parties liable upon or on account of any stock or shares of said corporation, whether appearing or represented at said hearing or having notice thereof or not, as to all matters relating to the amount of and the propriety of and necessity for the said assessment." [206 U. S. 526.] After the expiration of the time fixed for payment of the amount assessed, the receiver was authorized to bring actions against every person failing to pay, wherever he might be found, whether in Minnesota or elsewhere. See chap. 272, Laws of 1899, §§ 3-6; [660] Rev. Laws 1905, §§ 3184-3187. The constitutional validity of these provisions was sustained upon the ground that the statute is a reasonable regulation for enforcing the liability assumed by those who become stockholders in corporations organized under the laws of Minnesota; that while the order levying the assessment is made conclusive as to all matters relating to the amount and propriety thereof, and the necessity therefor, one against whom it is sought to be enforced is not precluded from showing that he is not a stockholder, or is not the holder of as many shares as is alleged, or has a claim against the corporation which in law or in equity he is entitled to set off against the assessment, or has any other defense personal to himself; and that while the order is conclusive against the stockholder as to the matters stated, although he may not have been a party to the suit in which it was made, or notified that an assessment was contemplated, this is not a tenable objection, as the order is not in the nature of a personal judgment against him, and he must be deemed, by virtue of his relation to the corporation and the obligation assumed with respect to its debts, to be represented by it in the proceeding. Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 133, 136, 83 N. W. 36; Bernheimer v. Converse, supra, pp. 528, 532; Converse v. Hamilton, supra, p. 256.

Further, it must be assumed that a stockholder cannot, even by a bona fide transfer of his stock, escape liability for the debts of the corporation theretofore incurred. The Minnesota statute provides that a transfer of shares "shall not in any way exempt the person making such transfer from any liabilities of said corporation which were created prior to such transfer." Gen. Stat, 1894, § 2599; Rev. Laws 1905, § 2864. And in Gunnison v. United States Invest. Co. 70 Minn. 292, 73 N. W. 149, the court said that "by virtue of the statute a stockholder cannot relieve himself from the liability for the prior [661] debts of the corporation by a bona fide sale and transfer of his stock on the books of the corporation, whatever the rule may be in the absence of the statute.

Digitized by Google

In the light of the principles established by these decisions, it must be concluded:

(1) The bankruptcy proceedings against the corporation did not stand in the way of a resort to the statutory method of enforcing the stockholder's liability. It was not corporate assets (Minneapolis Baseball Co. v. City Bank, 66 Minn. 446, 38 L.R.A. 415, 69 N. W. 331; Way v. Barney, supra); and Congress had not undertaken to provide that the discharge in bankruptcy of a corporation should release the stockholders. No question as to this is raised by the plaintiff in error.

(2) The defendant, Selig, in this action brought by the receiver against him in the district court in New York to recover the amount assessed, was not concluded with respect to his personal liability. He was free to deny that he was, or had been, a stockholder in the company; to dispute the allegation as to the length of time that he remained a stockholder; in short, to litigate any matter which bore upon the extent or duration of his stockholding, or any other personal defense. Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. supra. The order of the Minnesota court in the proceedings for the purpose of the assessment, in which he was represented by the corporation, and of which he was notified only by publication and mailing of notice, did not conclude him with respect to the issue, so far as it concerned the transfer of his stock, or the good faith with which the transfer was made. Inasmuch as the transfer was proved to have been made in September 1904, and no evidence was introduced to discredit the transaction, it must be assumed, for the present purpose, that the defendant's stock ownership then ceased, and that he was not liable for the payment of debts subsequently contracted by the corporation.

[662] (3) But despite the transfer, Selig remained liable for the corporate debts previously incurred. Moreover, it cannot be doubted that the authority of the Minnesota court under the statute was not confined to proceedings to assess existing stockholders. The act of 1899, by its express terms, applied in cases of liability arising upon shares "at any time held or owned by such stockholders," and provided for the making of an assessment against "all parties liable as stockholders." Laws 1899, chap. 272, §§ 1, 3; Rev. Laws 1905, § 3185. This obviously included former stockholders in relation to debts antedating their transfers; and the constitutional validity of the act in this aspect is as clear as is its validity with respect to the authorization of an assessment against existing stockholders. So far as the jurisdiction of the court to levy the assessment is concerned, no distinction can be maintained. The basis of jurisdiction is the same in each case; it is found in the contractual obligation assumed in becoming a member of a Minnesota corporation, and in the consequent submission to the reasonable regulations of the state for the purpose of making the liability effectual. Bernheimer v. Converse, supra.

It follows that if the court, thus having jurisdiction, and acting upon the evidence before it in the statutory proceeding, assessed former stockholders for the purpose of providing for debts incurred while they held their stock, its determination with respect to the amount of the assessment and the necessity therefor must be deemed conclusive. These questions cannot be reopened in another court when the receiver sues to collect the amount of the assessment. The stockholder in such a suit is free to urge his personal defenses, but this does not mean that he may resist the receiver's demand upon the ground that the assessment was not needed. The marshaling of the amounts recovered from stockholders is also the appropriate subject for the consideration of the court which, [663] under the statute, collects and distributes the fund. It is quite obvious that another court, in an action by the receiver against the stockholder, could not undertake to fix the amount required to pay the debts for which the stockholder is liable unless it virtually assumed the duty imposed by the statute of determining what a ratable assessment should be, and thus denied due credit to the determination already made in a court of competent jurisdiction.

It is insisted, however, that no assessment was made against the defendant as a past stockholder; that the order of assessment as made by the Minnesota court was applicable to present stockholders only. It is true that in the receiver's petition for the levy of an assessment, the persons alleged to be liable were set forth as existing stockholders. Of these, it was averred that some (including the plaintiff in error) had transferred their stock for the purpose of avoiding liability, and that others had placed their shares in the names of agents; but as to all, it was asserted that they were, and continued to be, the owners of the entire beneficial interest. But the petition prayed that the probable amount of the indebtedness and of the costs and expenses of the proceedings, and the probable amount which could be collected "from said stockholders, and all persons or parties liable as such, on said stock," should be ascertained, and that the court should levy a ratable assessment upon each share and against each of the stockholders "liable on said stock." Taking the petition, in the light of the statute, we think that, despite the allegations with respect to the fraudulent character of the transfers mentioned and the continued ownership by the transferrers of the shares described, the exercise of the jurisdiction of the court was invoked for the making of such an assessment as the court in its discretion might consider necessary in order to enforce the stockholders' liability, as it actually existed, with respect to the corporate debts remaining unpaid.

Digitized by Google

[664] What the court did determine must be ascertained from the order of assessment. This order, after reciting that the matter came on to be heard at the time appointed, pursuant to the petition, and that the court had "received and duly considered all the evidence presented," provided for an assessment of an amount equal to the par value "on each and every share of the capital stock," and "against the persons or parties liable as stockholders . . . for, upon, or on account of such shares of stock." It further provided that "each and every person or party liable as such stockholder" should pay to the receiver the amount assessed, and the receiver was authorized to collect "the several amounts due from the several persons or parties liable as stockholders," and to bring suit in case of the failure of "any person . . . liable as a stockholder" to pay as required. These provisions are certainly broad enough to include all stockholders who were actually liable, and we should not be justified in treating the order as expressing less than its terms stated.

In Tiffany v. Giesen, 96 Minn. 488, 105 N. W. 901, the plaintiff, as receiver, by virtue of an order of assessment under the statute, sought to recover against a stockholder in an insolvent corporation who had transferred his shares. It appearing that the defendant was the owner of the stock during the existence of the indebtedness of the company, it was held that the plaintiff had made out a cause of action. The objection that, as the transferee was the person primarily liable, the action could not be maintained against the transferrer, was overruled.

It is urged that the plaintiff in error was bound to contribute only ratably with all other stockholders who were liable with respect to the debts which arose prior to September 5, 1904, the date of the transfer, and that no assessment had been made based upon those debts. But this objection, as we view it, does not go to the existence [665] of the jurisdiction to make the order of assessment, or to the scope of the order as it was actually made, but rather to the question whether the court committed error in the exercise of the authority which it unquestionably possessed. If it did, the remedy lay in an application to the Minnesota court for the correction deemed to be necessary, and not in a collateral attack. The order in question does not provide for the distribution of the amount to be paid by the plaintiff in error, but that all moneys collected from the stockholders by the receiver should be held until the further order of the court. It is not to be assumed that these moneys will be applied to any indebtedness as to which the stockholders contributing respectively are not liable. We cannot doubt that the plaintiff in error, if he so desires, will have suitable opportunity to be heard as to the application of the amount which he may pay to the receiver, that it will be used only in the discharge of his obligation, and that any surplus to which he may be entitled will be duly returned. Laws 1899, chap. 272, § 11. See Rev. Laws 1905, § 3190. The statute further provides that any stockholder who has paid his assessment shall be entitled to force contribution from any stockholder who has not paid, and for that purpose shall be subrogated to the rights of the creditors or the receiver of the corporation against every such delinquent stockholder in such manner and to such extent as may be just and equitable. Ibid.

We cannot regard it as essential to the exercise of the jurisdiction of the Minnesota court that it should be required, in order not to forego recovery from stockholders who had transferred their stock, to make a separate and distinct assessment against all the then stockholders at the date of every transfer appearing upon the books. The plan of the statute was intended to afford a practicable remedy, and the order to be made thereunder was, in the nature of things, a provisional one, representing the best [666] judgment of the court upon the evidence before it as to the amount of the assessment required. That assessment was leviable upon every share and against all persons liable as stockholders. If the plaintiff in error was among this number, he was not entitled to resist the recovery by reason of the nature or amount of the assessment, which was levied in conformity with the statute, but he was properly remitted to the Minnesota court for the adjustment of such equities as he might have.

Digitized by Google

It is said, however, that on the trial of the present action, there was no evidence that there were debts remaining unpaid, which antedated his transfer of stock. But the decrees, entered in the parent suit in Minnesota, which determined the amount of the outstanding claims and when they arose, were introduced in evidence. These decrees showed that there were debts, in excess of the amount demanded of the plaintiff in error, which arose before his shares were transferred. In the proceedings appropriate to the liquidation, which related to the allowance of these claims, the plaintiff in error, by virtue of his connection with the corporation and the obligation he had assumed, was sufficiently represented by the presence of the corporation itself (Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 532, 51 L. ed. 1175, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755); and we see no reason to question the admissibility of the evidence. There was no attempt to controvert it.

The remaining question relates to the statute of limitations. It is contended that the action is barred by § 394 of the New York Code of Civil Procedure. In Bernheimer v. Converse, supra (p. 535), the court expressed the opinion that this section did not apply where the corporation was not a "moneyed corporation or banking association," and that the period of limitation under the New York Code was six years (§ 382). (See Platt v. Wilmot, 193 U. S. 602, 48 L. ed. 809, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542, where, in the opinion of the court, delivered by [667] Mr. Justice Peckham, the history of § 394 is reviewed.) We adhere to this view, and the action must be regarded as brought in time.

The judgment is affirmed.

Judgment affirmed.

CHAPMAN & DEWEY LUMBER COMPANY, Chapman & Dewey Land Company, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS ST. FRANCIS LEVEE DISTRICT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 667-669.)

Error to state court — rehearing.

Leave to file a petition for rehearing will be denied where such petition is wholly wanting in merit.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, X., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 82.]

Decided June 22, 1914.

PETITION for rehearing of a decree which reversed a decree of the Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas, affirming a decree of the Chancery Court of Poinsett County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in a suit by a levee district to recover for timber alleged to have been wrongfully cut from unsurveyed land. Leave to file petition denied.

See ante, 564.

Messrs. Samuel Adams, H. F. Roleson, J. C. Hawthorne, and N. F. Lamb filed a brief in support of the petition:

The opinion completely ignores, but in effect overrules, the previous decisions of this court and of the supreme courts of Louisiana, Indiana, Michigan, and Arkansas on the point that a patent of a government subdivision includes all the land within the description.

Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. 190 U. S. 452, 47 L. ed. 1134, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; McDade v. Bossier Levee Board, 109 La. 626, 33 So. 628; Kean v. Roby, 145 Ind. 221, 42 N. E. 1011; Tolleston Club v. State, 141 Ind. 197, 38 N. E. 214, 40 N. E. 690; Stoner v. Rice, 121 Ind. 51, 6 L.R.A. 387, 22 N. E. 968; People v. Warner, 116 Mich. 228, 74 N. W. 705; Chapman & D. Lumber Co. v. St. Francis Levee Dist. 100 Ark. 94, 139 S. W. 625.

Moreover the opinion is utterly inconsistent with the following decisions of this court, which it also ignores:

Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 35 L. ed. 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840; St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Schurmeir, 7 Wall. 272, 19 L. ed. 74.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

Leave to file a petition for rehearing is sought in this case. The petition has been examined, and we find it so wanting in merit that leave to file it must be denied. Doubtless a formal denial would suffice, but we prefer to notice two statements in the petition.

As our opinion (232 U. S. 186, ante, 564, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297) shows, the controlling question was whether a patent issued to the state of Arkansas in 1858 under the swamp-land act embraced all the lands within the exterior boundaries of a designated [668] township, or only the lands lying without certain meander lines shown upon the official plat which, by reference, was made part of the description in the patent. The plat showed that large areas in the township, amounting to 8,000 acres or more, were meandered as bodies of water called "sunk lands," and that the remaining areas were surveyed into sections and parts of sections, the aggregate of which, according to an inscription upon the plat, was 14,329.97 acres. Deducting from the latter 514.30 acres in fractional section 16, which had passed to the state under the school-land grant, left 13,815.67 acres, and this was the acreage given in the patent, from which section 16 was excepted. The mode of claiming lands under the swamp-land act was by presenting selection lists to the surveyor general, and, as bearing upon what was intended to be conveyed by the patent, we stated that the list in this instance "described the township as containing 14,329.97 acres, the total of the surveyed areas as inscribed upon the plat," and that this, less the 514.30 acres in fractional section 16, was the area given in the patent.

Digitized by Google

One of the statements in the petition for rehearing is that our opinion "proceeds on the hypothesis, unsupported by the record," that the governor of Arkansas, in his request for the patenting of the township in question, stated its acreage. In assuming that it is our duty to deal with the case as it is disclosed by the record, counsel are clearly right. A like obligation rests upon counsel. The record (p. 207) contains a certificate from the General Land Office, introduced in evidence without objection, saying: "The original selection list of swamp lands in T. 12 N., R. 7 E., [the township in question] gives the area of the township as 14,329.97 acres, and that amount was also given in the approved list. Section 16, which passed to the state under the school grant, contains 514.30 acres, and as such lands were not granted under the swamp-land laws the area of section 16 was deducted from the [669] total of the township, leaving 13,815.67 acres, which amount was accounted for in the patent." The certificate stood uncontradicted in the record and was accepted by the supreme court of the state as determinative of the facts recited in it (100 Ark. 97, 139 S. W. 625). Nothing more need be said upon this point.

Another statement in the petition is that we erred in treating the meandered areas embodying the lands in controversy as unsurveyed lands. The record (p. 1) shows that the complaint filed in the court of first instance, and which counsel seek to maintain, alleged that these lands "were left unsurveyed by the United States government." The sunk lands were also described by the representative of the state as "not yet surveyed," when the state's claims under the swamp-land grant were being adjusted and settled in 1895. H. R. Rep. No. 1634, 54th Cong. 1st Sess. pp. 5 and 32. This will suffice upon this point. Leave to file petition denied.

EDMUND BURKE
v.
SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY and the Kern Trading & Oil Company. (No. 279.)

J. I. LAMPRECHT and F. M. Aiken, Trustees,
v.
SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, the Kern Trading & Oil Company, and T. S. Minot. (No. 280.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 669–711.)

Public lands — railroad land grant — gift.

1. The railway land grant made by the act of July 27, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278), to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, should not be treated as a mere gift.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 73–80, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — railway land grant — mineral lands — duty of Land Department.

2. Mineral lands known to be such at, or prior to, the issue of a patent therefor to a railway company under the authority of the railway land grant act of July 27, 1866, were not included in the grant, being expressly excluded from the operation of the act by the provisions of § 3, and the duty of determining the character of the lands was cast primarily on the Land Department, which was charged with the issue of patents.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 228–233, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — railway land grant — mineral lands — validity of patent.

3. The issuance by the Land Department of a patent to a railway company under the railway land grant act of July 27, 1866, which in § 3 expressly excludes mineral lands from the operation of the act, without any investigation, hearing, or determination as to the quality of the land, whether agricultural or mineral, although irregular, does not avoid the patent, but the title passes thereunder subject to the right of the government to attack the patent by a direct suit for its annulment if the land was known to be mineral when the patent issued.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 872–880, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads, generally—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

On nature of property in mineral oil or gas—see note to Williamson v. Jones, 25 L.R.A. 222.

Digitized by Google

Public lands — railway land grant — patent — reservation of mineral lands.

4. A clause "excluding and excepting all mineral lands should any such be found in the tracts aforesaid," inserted in a patent issued by the Land Department under the railway land grant act of July 27, 1866, which in § 3 expressly excluded mineral lands from its operation, is void as beyond the authority of the officers of the Land Department, notwithstanding the provision of the joint resolution of June 28, 1870 (16 Stat. at L. 382, No. 87), adopted chiefly to sanction a route which the Secretary of the Interior had disapproved, that it shall be the duty of that official to cause patents to be issued for lands coterminous to each constructed section along that route, "expressly saving and reserving all the rights of actual settlers, together with the other conditions and restrictions provided for" in § 3 of the granting act, which provision, properly construed, is a direction not to patent to the railway company lands occupied by actual settlers, or otherwise excluded or excepted from the grant.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 872-880, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — railway land grant — patent — collateral attack.

5. A patent issued by the Land Department under the railway land grant act of July 27, 1866, which, in § 3, expressly excludes mineral lands from the operation of the act, is, upon collateral attack, a conclusive and official declaration that the land is agricultural, and that there has been a compliance with all the requirements preliminary to the issuance of the patent.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 920-953, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — railway land grant — mineral lands — petroleum.

6. Petroleum or mineral oil, whatever may be the strict scientific view, is "mineral" within the meaning of that term as used in the railway land grant act of July 27, 1866, which, in § 3, expressly excluded from the operation of the act all mineral lands other than iron and coal lands.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 228-233, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — railway land grant — patent — collateral attack.

7. Persons not in privity with the government in any respect when a patent was issued under the railway land grant act of July 27, 1866, cannot attack such patent on the ground of fraud, error, or irregularity in the issuance of the patent.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 920-953, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Estoppel — attacking mineral exception in patent.

8. A railway company and its lessee are not estopped to deny the validity of a mineral land exception clause inserted in a patent issued to the railway company under the land grant act of July 27, 1866, as against strangers whose only claim was initiated after the issuance of the patent, because such clause was inserted with the railway company's consent, and under an understanding and an agreement between it and the officials of the Land Department that such clause should be effective to keep in the United States title to such of the lands described in the patent as were in fact mineral.

[For other cases, see Estoppel, III., b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 279, 280.]

Argued January 13, 14, 1913. Decided June 22, 1914.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, presenting questions as to the title of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to mineral lands patented under the authority of a railway land grant. Answered by sustaining the title of the railway company.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Frederic R. Kellogg and Roberts Walker argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edmund Burke, in propria persona, filed a brief for appellant in No. 279:

The act of issuing a patent is a ministerial act.

Moran v. Horsky, 178 U. S. 212, 44 L. ed. 1040, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. 317, 11 L. ed. 282.

The patent should issue as the result of a judgment of the Land Department.

Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

A patent has been called the record evidence of the judgment of the Land Department.

United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 15 C. C. A. 96, 32 U. S. App. 272, 67 Fed. 956.

If the patent be considered simply as a conveyance of title,—or, more accurately, as a confirmation or record of the title passed by the congressional grants,—it is impossible for the appellees to claim that any title to mineral lands passed thereby.

Maxwell Land Grant Co. v. Dawson, 151 U. S. 586, 604, 38 L. ed. 279, 285, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 97 U. S. 491, 24 L. ed. 1095; St. Joseph & D. C. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 103 U. S. 426, 26 L. ed. 578.

If the patent be considered as evidence of a judgment, such judgment was rendered by a court of special and limited, and not of general, jurisdiction.

Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 450, 27 L. ed. 227, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 328, 38 L. ed. 1002, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030:

Digitized by Google

Black, Judgm. § 283; 11 Cyc. 772; Bailey, Jurisdiction, § 124; 17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 1084; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 641, 26 L. ed. 876, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673.

The appellees, claiming that the tribunal acted within its jurisdiction, are bound, in support of their claim, to affirmatively show upon the face of the record (or perhaps by extrinsic evidence) that such jurisdiction existed.

Bailey, Jurisdiction, §§ 121, 124, 130, 173, 183; Black, Judgm. §§ 282, 431–434; Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 21 L. ed. 959; Kempe v. Kennedy, 5 Cranch, 173, 3 L. ed. 70; Thatcher v. Powell, 6 Wheat. 119, 5 L. ed. 221; Den ex dem. Walker v. Turner, 9 Wheat. 541, 6 L. ed. 155; Copley v. Ball, 100 C. C. A. 234, 176 Fed. 689; Grignon v. Astor, 2 How. 319, 11 L. ed. 283; 17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 1082; Secombe v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 3 Wall. 108, 23 L. ed. 67.

The Land Department never has had any jurisdiction to make grants in defiance of the will of Congress of lands which have been expressly reserved by Congress for other purposes. Any such attempt is void and inoperative.

Burfenning v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 163 U. S. 321, 41 L. ed. 175, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018; Johnson v. Drew, 171 U. S. 100, 43 L. ed. 91, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 800; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 647, 26 L. ed. 879, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673; Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 618, 31 L. ed. 844, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1228; Reynolds v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 116 U. S. 687, 29 L. ed. 774, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 591; Northern P. R. Co. v. Sanders, 166 U. S. 620, 41 L. ed. 1139, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. v. Montana Min. Co. 171 U. S. 655, 43 L. ed. 322, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 575; Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 519, 30 L. ed. 1048, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985.

The Land Department cannot arbitrarily abrogate the rights of an entryman.

Parsons v. Venzke, 164 U. S. 89, 41 L. ed. 360, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Guaranty Sav. Bank v. Bladow, 176 U. S. 453, 44 L. ed. 542, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 44 L. ed. 1157, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

Under this grant it had no jurisdiction to grant mineral lands, whether known or unknown, entered or not, for these were expressly reserved by Congress from the original grant.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; United States v. Central P. R. Co. 84 Fed. 218; Northern P. R. Co. v. Sanders, 166 U. S. 620, 41 L. ed. 1139, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671.

The patent itself must show the existence of the jurisdictional facts.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 327, 330, 38 L. ed. 1001, 1002, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Davis v. Wiebbold, 139 U. S. 526, 35 L. ed. 245, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 406, 29 L. ed. 427, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 21 L. ed. 959.

If the lands were known to be mineral, no decision that they were not mineral could possibly affect the situation. The very word "known" assumes a situation which the Land Department could not overturn by a decision to the contrary.

United States v. Central P. R. Co. 84 Fed. 218.

The lands were restricted from grant (St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 641, 26 L. ed. 876, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673). If such a decision were attempted, we believe that it would simply be a decision of law upon insufficient evidence, and, as such, always subject to attack.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Colburn, 164 U. S. 385, 41 L. ed. 479, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 489, 44 L. ed. 1162, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

Nor would such a decision be valid as giving jurisdiction unless the proceedings were had in accordance with the established rules of the Department as to notice and investigation, and unless these rules were reasonable, appropriate, and within the law.

26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 379; Leonard v. Lennox, 104 C. C. A. 296, 181 Fed. 764; Black, Judgm. § 530; Puget Mill Co. v. Brown, 54 Fed. 987, affirmed in 7 C. C. A. 643, 15 U. S. App. 274, 59 Fed. 35; 32 Cyc. 1025.

Of these rules this court takes judicial notice.

Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 38 L. ed. 415, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Leonard v. Lennox, 104 C. C. A. 296, 181 Fed. 764.

Whether or not the judgment might have been considered res judicata against collateral attack upon this point if the record had been silent, yet, where the record affirmatively discloses that this point—the essential point relating to jurisdiction—had not only not been decided, but had been expressly reserved from decision, all presumptions fall.

Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 21 L. ed. 959; Settlemier v. Sullivan, 97 U. S. 444, 24 L. ed. 1110; Butterfield v. Miller, 115 C. C. A. 152, 195 Fed. 203; Ritchie v. Sayers, 100 Fed. 520; Guaranty Trust & S. D. Co. v. Green Cove Springs & M. R. Co. 139 U. S. 137, 35 L. ed. 116, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512; Bailey, Jurisdiction, § 137; 23 Cyc. 1145, 1292; Cheely v. Clayton, 110 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 298, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 328; Old

Digitized by Google

Wayne Mut. Life Asso. v. McDonough, 204 U. S. 16, 51 L. ed. 348, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236; Indiana & A. Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Brinkley, 91 C. C. A. 91, 164 Fed. 968; Kempe v. Kennedy, 5 Cranch, 185, 3 L. ed. 73.

The appellees could not have been compelled to accept the patent if, as a matter of fact, it was improper in form.

LeRoy v. Jamison, 3 Sawy. 369, Fed. Cas. No. 8,271; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 399, 26 L. ed. 173; Cowell v. Colorado Springs Co. 100 U. S. 55, 25 L. ed. 547.

The Land Department had no power to transfer mineral lands under the terms of this grant. Its only jurisdiction to transfer any lands hung upon their being nonmineral lands; and, as we have shown, the only way in which they could gain jurisdiction to transfer lands which, as a matter of fact, were mineral lands, was by a judicial decision to the effect that the lands in question were nonmineral.

St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 641, 26 L. ed. 876, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673; Kent v. Lake Superior Ship Canal R. & Iron Co. 144 U. S. 75, 36 L. ed. 352, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650.

Whatever may have been thought of oil or natural gas at one time, it is now established beyond any question that oil or petroleum and natural gas are minerals and judicially must be so treated.

Thornton, Oil & Gas, 2d ed. § 18; Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana, 177 U. S. 190, 44 L. ed. 729, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 466; Re Union Oil Co. 25 Land Dec. 351.

Mr. Edmund Burke also filed a separate brief for appellant:

The grant to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company did not include mineral lands which were known to be mineral at or prior to the date of the patent.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; United States v. Central P. R. Co. 84 Fed. 219; Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. 284, 11 L. ed. 269; Van Ness v. Rooney, 160 Cal. 131, 116 Pac. 392; Kansas City Min. & Mill. Co. v. Clay, 3 Ariz. 326, 29 Pac. 9; Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelting Co. v. Haverly, 11 Ariz. 241, 90 Pac. 336; Garrard v. Silver Peak Mines, 82 Fed. 578, 36 C. C. A. 603, 94 Fed. 989; United States v. Culver, 52 Fed. 81; Blackburn v. United States, 5 Ariz. 162, 48 Pac. 904, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 684; United States v. Reed, 12 Sawy. 99, 28 Fed. 482; Northern P. R. Co. v. Barden, 46 Fed. 610; Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 29 L. ed. 423, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Davis v. Wiebbold, 139 U. S. 507, 35 L. ed. 238, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Alford v. Barnum, 45 Cal. 482, 10 Mor. Min. Rep. 422; Merrill v. Dixon, 15 Nev. 401; Colorado Coal & I. Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307–328, 31 L. ed. 182–190, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; United States v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 128 U. S. 673, 32 L. ed. 571, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; Sullivan v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 143 U. S. 431, 36 L. ed. 214, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555; Gold Hill Quartz Min. Co. v. Ish, 5 Or. 104, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 635; Loney v. Scott, 57 Or. 378, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 466, 112 Pac. 173; Morton v. Nebraska, 21 Wall. 660, 22 L. ed. 639, 12 Mor. Min. Rep. 451; Amador Medean Gold Min. Co. v. South Spring Hill Gold Min. Co. 36 Fed. 670; Ivanhoe Min. Co. v. Keystone Consol. Min. Co. 102 U. S. 168, 26 L. ed. 126, 13 Mor. Min. Rep. 214.

In the presence of a perfected, valid, subsisting mining location, an equitable title, the United States held, until patent or legal cancelation of the location, the paramount title in trust for the mining locators; and its attempted subsequent grant or alienation to another person under any law would be void and the patent would carry no title.

Noyes v. Mantle, 127 U. S. 349, 351, 32 L. ed. 169, 170, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1132, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 611; Haws v. Victoria Copper Min. Co. 160 U. S. 303, 40 L. ed. 436, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. v. Montana Min. Co. 171 U. S. 650–655, 43 L. ed. 320–322, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 575; 26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 381; Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 593, 42 L. ed. 591, 592, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476–489, 44 L. ed. 1157–1162, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 976; Clark v. Herington, 186 U. S. 206, 46 L. ed. 1128, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 872.

The patent, issuing without examination or adjudication as to the agricultural quality of the lands, is not conclusive nor res judicata on that question, as the fact of quality was never adjudicated nor passed on to an actual decision.

Leonard v. Lennox, 104 C. C. A. 296, 181 Fed. 760; United States Min. Co. v. Lawson, 67 C. C. A. 587, 134 Fed. 775, affirmed in 207 U. S. 1, 52 L. ed. 65, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 15; Montana Min. Co. v. St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. 42 C. C. A. 415, 102 Fed. 430, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 507; Nesbit v. Independent Dist. 144 U. S. 610, 36 L. ed. 562, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Roberts v. Northern P. R. Co. 158 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 873, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Lake County v. Sutliff, 38 C. C. A. 167, 97 Fed. 270; Lake County v. Platt, 25 C. C. A. 87, 49 U. S. App. 216, 79 Fed. 567; Linton v. National L. Ins. Co. 44 C. C. A. 54, 104 Fed. 584; Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Hamilton County, 54 C. C. A. 468, 117 Fed. 82; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 687, 39 L. ed. 861, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 205; 23 Cyc. 1223, notes.

Digitized by Google

There must be some evidence on which an actual finding is made to make a patent conclusive as to the quality of the land.

Love v. Flahive, 33 Mont. 348, 83 Pac. 882; United States v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233, 29 L. ed. 110, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Parsons v. Venzke, 4 N. D. 452, 50 Am. St. Rep. 669, 61 N. W. 1036, affirmed in 164 U. S. 89, 41 L. ed. 360, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Jordan v. Smith, 12 Okla. 703, 73 Pac. 308; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Burfenning v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 163 U. S. 321, 41 L. ed. 175, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018; Northern P. R. Co. v. Sanders, 166 U. S. 620, 41 L. ed. 1139, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 328, 329, 38 L. ed. 1002, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 30 L. ed. 1039, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; Ehrhardt v. Hogaboom, 115 U. S. 67, 29 L. ed. 346, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1157; French v. Fyan, 93 U. S. 169, 23 L. ed. 812; Hartwell v. Havighorst, 196 U. S. 635, 49 L. ed. 629, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 793, affirming 11 Okla. 189, 66 Pac. 337; 23 Cyc. 1223; 32 Cyc. 1021.

A patent is not any more solemn or conclusive than the judgment of the circuit court of the United States would be in an action to quiet title; and in that court only the actual facts determined would be conclusive and res judicata.

Russell v. Place, 94 U. S. 606, 608, 24 L. ed. 214, 215; Washington, A. & G. Steam Packet Co. v. Sickles, 5 Wall. 580, 592, 18 L. ed. 550, 553; Central Trust Co. v. Clark, 26 C. C. A. 397, 49 U. S. App. 453, 81 Fed. 269; Condon v. Knoxville, C. G. & L. R. Co. — Tenn. —, 35 S. W. 781; Hamlin v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 176 Mass. 514, 57 N. E. 1006; People ex rel. Bridgeman v. Hall, 104 N. Y. 177, 10 N. E. 135; Converse v. Davis, 90 Tex. 462, 39 S. W. 277; Groesbeck v. Crow, 91 Tex. 74, 40 S. W. 1028; Haralson v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 62 S. W. 788; Faison v. Grandy, 128 N. C. 438, 83 Am. St. Rep. 693, 38 S. E. 897; Martin v. Turner, — Ky. —, 115 S. W. 833; Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. v. Tibbs, 112 La. 51, 36 So. 223; Baker v. Williams & E. Bkg. Co. 42 Or. 213, 70 Pac. 711; Black, Judgm. § 616; Cox v. Von Ahlefeldt, 105 La. 543, 30 So. 175; St. Joseph Union Depot Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 32 C. C. A. 284, 60 U. S. App. 675, 89 Fed. 648; Fayerweather v. Ritch, 88 Fed. 713; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 683–687, 39 L. ed. 859–861, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 205; Herman, Estoppel & Res Judicata, § 441; Hosmer v. Wallace, 47 Cal. 461.

No presumption may flow where there is no record adjudication.

Leonard v. Lennox, 104 C. C. A. 296, 181 Fed. 760; United States Min. Co. v. Lawson, 67 C. C. A. 587, 134 Fed. 775.

The decisions of the Land Department, in order to be conclusive, must be made according to the regular rules of practice of the Department, and must be based on legal evidence or on some formal inquest in which there is an actual finding of fact.

Puget Mill Co. v. Brown, 54 Fed. 987; Doe ex dem. Dickin v. Mahana, 21 How. 276, 16 L. ed. 158; Hedrick v. Hughes, 15 Wall. 123, 21 L. ed. 52; Johanson v. Washington, 190 U. S. 179, 47 L. ed. 1008, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825.

A decision of the Land Department is conclusive as to the character of the land when that fact is actually determined.

Whart. Ev. § 822; Potter v. Randolph, 126 Cal. 461, 58 Pac. 905; Cragie v. Roberts, 6 Cal. App. 312, 92 Pac. 97; United States v. Mackintosh, 29 C. C. A. 176, 56 U. S. App. 483, 85 Fed. 333.

An "actual decision" is contemplated; not a mere issuance of a piece of paper analogous to a writ of assistance, which writ, unless predicated on an actual judgment, would be of no avail.

United States v. Rizzinelli, 182 Fed. 675; Teller v. United States, 51 C. C. A. 230, 113 Fed. 273; Jeffords v. Hine, 2 Ariz. 162, 11 Pac. 351, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 575; Baldwin v. Stark, 107 U. S. 463, 27 L. ed. 526, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Dargin v. Koch, 20 Land Dec. 384; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 339, 340, 23 L. ed. 427, 428; United States v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 242, 243, 54 L. ed. 1020, 1021, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7.

The patent must state the finding, or the record must show it.

Eureka Consol. Min. Co. v. Richmond Consol. Min. Co. 4 Sawy. 302, Fed. Cas. No. 4,548, 9 Mor. Min. Rep. 578.

A patent is nothing more than a deed.

Rankin v. Miller, 43 Iowa, 11; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; United States v. Mullan, 7 Sawy. 466, 10 Fed. 785; Redfield v. Parks, 132 U. S. 239, 33 L. ed. 327, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; Bushey v. South Mountain Min. & Iron Co. 136 Pa. 552, 20 Atl. 549; Beard v. Federy, 3 Wall. 478, 18 L. ed. 88.

A ruling on a question of law is not as binding as a finding on a question of fact.

United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 15 C. C. A. 96, 32 U. S. App. 272, 67 Fed. 955, 165 U. S. 463, 41 L. ed. 789, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Northern P. R. Co. v. Colburn, 164 U. S. 385, 386, 41 L. ed. 479, 480, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 489, 490, 44 L. ed. 1162, 1163, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

Digitized by Google

This suit, taken as a whole, is a direct attack, except in the instance of the allegations relating to the mineral exception, and this appellant, being in privity with the paramount title, can maintain all or any actions that could be maintained by the United States.

Mery v. Brodt, 121 Cal. 335, 53 Pac. 818.

In cases of void patents the same may be impeached in any form of action where they are offered as the base of the attack or defense.

St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 26 L. ed. 875, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Williams v. San Pedro, 153 Cal. 44, 94 Pac. 234.

The act of certification was not the legal equivalent of the issuance of patent.

Weeks v. Bridgman, 159 U. S. 541, 40 L. ed. 253, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 33 L. ed. 363, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. 145 U. S. 535, 36 L. ed. 806, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; Ard v. Brandon, 156 U. S. 537, 39 L. ed. 524, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Whitney v. Taylor, 158 U. S. 85, 39 L. ed. 906, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 796.

There is no authority for the proposition that the Land Department does not retain jurisdiction over public lands in cases where patents have been illegally issued; that is, in instances where the Land Department had not the jurisdiction to issue a controverted patent.

LeRoy v. Jamison, 3 Sawy. 369, Fed. Cas. No. 8,271.

Certification or patent will not create, of itself, the conclusive presumption that no prior claims of pre-emption or homestead or mining location existed.

Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 618–642, 31 L. ed. 844–853, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1228; Reynolds v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 116 U. S. 687, 29 L. ed. 774, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 591.

The reservation and exception contained in the grant in the patent to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company is valid.

Alford v. Barnum, 45 Cal. 482, 10 Mor. Min. Rep. 422; Merrill v. Dixon, 15 Nev. 401; Davis v. Wiebbold, 139 U. S. 519, 35 L. ed. 242, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; United States v. Central P. R. Co. 93 Fed. 873; McLaughlin v. Powell, 50 Cal. 64, 10 Mor. Min. Rep. 424; Carr v. Quigley, 57 Cal. 395; United Land Asso. v. Knight, 85 Cal. 486, 23 Pac. 267, 24 Pac. 818; Van Ness v. Rooney, 160 Cal. 131, 116 Pac. 392; Chicago Quartz Min. Co. v. Oliver, 75 Cal. 194, 7 Am. St. Rep. 143, 16 Pac. 780; Irvine v. Tarbat, 105 Cal. 243, 38 Pac. 896; Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115, 64 Pac. 113; Saunders v. La Purisima Gold Min. Co. 125 Cal. 164, 57 Pac. 656, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 93; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 330, 38 L. ed. 1002, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; 17 Ops. Atty. Gen. 248; Lamprey v. State, 52 Minn. 181, 18 L.R.A. 670, 38 Am. St. Rep. 541, 53 N. W. 1139; Reynolds v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 116 U. S. 687, 29 L. ed. 774, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 591; Hunt v. Steese, 75 Cal. 620, 17 Pac. 920.

The insertion of the mineral exception in a patent was notice to a railroad patentee that there had not been the examination required by law.

Gale v. Best, 78 Cal. 240, 12 Am. St. Rep. 44, 20 Pac. 550, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 186; Eastern Oregon Land Co. v. Willow River Land & Irrig. Co. 187 Fed. 466.

To uphold the patent in this case is to subscribe to a doctrine that any patent issued by the Land Department is conclusive and binding, although it was issued in direct violation of the law providing for its issuance, or in violation of the Land Office rules.

Moffat v. United States, 112 U. S. 24, 28 L. ed. 623, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; McLaughlin v. Heid, 63 Cal. 208.

The character of the lands within the limits of railroad land grants must, of necessity, be primarily determined by the Land Department.

Litchfield v. The Register (Litchfield v. Richards) 9 Wall. 575, 577, 19 L. ed. 681, 682.

An examination and a decision are contemplated, not a mere issuance of a patent as in this case, without any examination, decision, or adjudication.

Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 450, 27 L. ed. 226, 227, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Burfenning v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 163 U. S. 321, 323, 41 L. ed. 175, 176, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018; Northern P. R. Co. v. Sanders, 166 U. S. 620, 635, 41 L. ed. 1139, 1144, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 328, 329, 38 L. ed. 1002, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Irvine v. Tarbat, 105 Cal. 243, 38 Pac. 896; Green v. Hayes, 70 Cal. 276, 11 Pac. 716; Williams v. San Pedro, 153 Cal. 44, 94 Pac. 234; Stewart v. Sutherland, 93 Cal. 270, 28 Pac. 947; Saunders v. La Purisima Gold Min. Co. 125 Cal. 164, 57 Pac. 656, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 93; Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habishaw, 132 Cal. 115, 64 Pac. 113; Hermocilla v. Hubbell, 89 Cal. 5, 26 Pac. 611; Richards v. Wolfling, 98 Cal. 195, 32 Pac. 971; Reynolds v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 116 U. S. 687, 29 L. ed. 774, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 591; De Cambra v. Rogers, 189 U. S. 119, 47 L. ed. 734, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519; Paterson v. Ogden, 141 Cal. 43, 99 Am. St. Rep. 31, 74 Pac. 443; Dreyfus v. Badger, 108 Cal. 65, 41 Pac. 279.

Digitized by Google

It cannot be successfully contended that the examination and determination so often referred to simply mean there should be such only when there is a real contest between parties before the Department, for the Department has full authority on its own motion, or at the instance of others, to inquire into and determine the quality of the public lands.

Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 26 L. ed. 800; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 476, 25 L. ed. 801; Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Campbell, 135 U. S. 286, 34 L. ed. 155, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 765, 16 Mor. Min. Rep. 218.

The law relating to known mineral lands at time of patent applies to agricultural lands.

Morton v. Nebraska, 21 Wall. 660, 22 L. ed. 639, 12 Mor. Min. Rep. 451; Alford v. Barnum, 45 Cal. 482, 10 Mor. Min. Rep. 422; Hunt v. Steese, 75 Cal. 620, 17 Pac. 920; Merrill v. Dixon, 15 Nev. 401; Garrard v. Silver Peaks Mines, 82 Fed. 578; Hermocilla v. Hubbell, 89 Cal. 5, 26 Pac. 611; Gale v. Best, 78 Cal. 240, 12 Am. St. Rep. 44, 20 Pac. 550, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 186; McLaughlin v. Powell, 50 Cal. 64, 10 Mor. Min. Rep. 424; Chicago Quartz Min. Co. v. Oliver, 75 Cal. 198, 7 Am. St. Rep. 143, 16 Pac. 780; Southern P. R. Co. v. McCusker, 127 U. S. 790, 32 L. ed. 329; Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 30 L. ed. 1039, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; Van Ness v. Rooney, 160 Cal. 131, 116 Pac. 392; Wirth v. Branson, 98 U. S. 118, 25 L. ed. 86; Northern P. R. Co. v. Sanders, 166 U. S. 620, 41 L. ed. 1139, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 761, 23 L. ed. 769; Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 618, 31 L. ed. 844, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1228; Gregory v. Pershbaker, 73 Cal. 117, 14 Pac. 401, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 602; Cleary v. Skiffich, 28 Colo. 368, 89 Am. St. Rep. 207, 65 Pac. 59, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 284; Kansas City Min. & Mill. Co. v. Clay, 3 Ariz. 326, 29 Pac. 9.

Both the government and the grantee, as well as those in privity with him, are bound by the recitals of facts properly contained in the patent (McGarrahan v. New Idria Min. Co. 49 Cal. 331, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 641, 96 U. S. 316, 24 L. ed. 630, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 665; Dean v. Long, 122 Ill. 447, 14 N. E. 34; 32 Cyc. 1038), but an opinion of an executive officer as to matters of law indicated (either) by the act of issuing the patent is not conclusive (32 Cyc. 1038), and the patent may be examined by searching the antecedent record; and there being no record in our case, the patent at best is only an opinion of law evidenced by the issue of the patent. A patent may be shown to be void by searching the antecedent record (32 Cyc. 1043; Andrus v. Wheeler, 18 Misc. 646, 42 N. Y. Supp. 525; Bledsoe v. Well, 4 Bibb, 329), and when the court in this case finds there was no antecedent record, how may the patent be upheld?

It requires a perfect patent to set the presumption of regularity in motion.

Davis v. Wiebbold, 139 U. S. 526, 35 L. ed. 245, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 406, 29 L. ed. 427, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95.

It is conceded, it is established, and that beyond any question, that if A should convey to B, by grant deed, 640 acres of land, excepting the mineral therein, or any subdivision thereof, in which mineral should thereafter be found, such an exception would be valid; and that the grantor or his administrator, executor, or assign could at any time thereafter, even a thousand years thereafter, enforce the exception.

Maxwell Land Grant Co. v. Dawson, 151 U. S. 586, 604, 38 L. ed. 279, 285, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; Cox v. McClure, 71 Conn. 729, 43 Atl. 310; Stockton v. Morris, 39 W. Va. 432, 19 S. E. 531; Greenleaf v. Birth, 6 Pet. 302, 8 L. ed. 406; Painter v. Pasadena Land & Water Co. 91 Cal. 74, 27 Pac. 539.

Now if it follows that a patent of the United States to land within California is subject to the same rule of construction that applies to an excepted deed between individuals, it will also follow that the contention of the appellees is without force in such connection.

Fremont v. Flower, 17 Cal. 225, 12 Mor. Min. Rep. 418.

The bill specifically alleges that the patent issued without primary determination of the quality of the land, and that there had been no hearing or decision in the Land Office. A patent issued in the manner indicated is void.

Moffat v. United States, 112 U. S. 24, 28 L. ed. 623, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Kirwan v. Murphy, 189 U. S. 35, 47 L. ed. 698, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; Whiteside v. United States, 93 U. S. 247, 23 L. ed. 882; Hume v. United States, 132 U. S. 406, 33 L. ed. 393, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134; Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 175 U. S. 300, 44 L. ed. 171, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124.

Information of the character of all lands surveyed is required of surveying officers, so far as knowledge respecting them is obtained in the course of their duties; but they are not clothed with authority to especially examine them; nor does their report have any binding force. It is simply an addition made to the general information obtained from different sources on this subject.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030.

Digitized by Google

Such a patent as this is not conclusive on a collateral attack.

Ibid.

It must be conceded, we think, that the patent on its face shows it was not issued in a manner substantially regular, and therefore it cannot be presumed that formal requisites for its validity were complied with.

Fay, Ev. § 124, Greenl. Ev. § 20; Whart. Ev. §§ 1302–1309; Applegate v. Lexington & C. C. Min. Co. 117 U. S. 255, 264, 29 L. ed. 892, 894, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Adams v. Cowles, 95 Mo. 501, 6 Am. St. Rep. 74, 8 S. W. 711; Hogue v. Corbit, 156 Ill. 540, 47 Am. St. Rep. 232, 41 N. E. 219; Berrenberg v. Boston, 137 Mass. 231, 50 Am. Rep. 296; Elliott, Ev. § 99 and note; Reynolds, Trial Ev. § 81.

When this court said that the determination of the question whether the land was mineral or not is dependent on oral testimony, it meant, at any rate, that only a question of law was decided by the Land Department when it concluded to issue the patent, not issued in due form, with recitals and statement of the quality of the land.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Colburn, 164 U. S. 383, 41 L. ed. 479, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98; Johnson v. Drew, 171 U. S. 93, 43 L. ed. 88, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 800; Burfenning v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 163 U. S. 321, 41 L. ed. 175, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018.

Locating a mining claim predicated on the discovery of mineral, and recording the same, as required by rules of the mining district within which the claims are embraced, creates an estate of freehold which continues until the lawful cancelation of the location by a tribunal of competent jurisdiction, or until the claim is abandoned or forfeited; and in such latter two instances, and until such times, the legal and paramount title is held in trust by the United States for the prior mining locator.

Noyes v. Mantle, 127 U. S. 349, 351, 32 L. ed. 169, 170, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1132, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 611; Haws v. Victoria Copper Min. Co. 160 U. S. 303, 40 L. ed. 436, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Mery v. Brodt, 121 Cal. 332, 53 Pac. 818; Belk v. Meagher, 104 U. S. 279–287, 26 L. ed. 735–738, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 510; Nevada Sierra Oil Co. v. Home Oil Co. 98 Fed. 673, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 283; Thallmann v. Thomas, 49 C. C. A 317, 111 Fed. 277, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 573; St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. v. Montana Min Co. 171 U. S. 650, 655, 43 L. ed. 320, 322, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 575; Meydenbauer v. Stevens, 78 Fed. 787, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 578; Manuel v. Wulff, 152 U. S. 510, 38 L. ed. 534, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 85; Forbes v. Gracey, 94 U. S. 762, 24 L. ed. 313, 14 Mor. Min. Rep. 183; Black v. Elkhorn Min. Co. 163 U. S. 445, 41 L. ed. 221, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1101, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 375; Gwillim v. Donnellan, 115 U. S. 45, 29 L. ed. 348, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1110, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 482; Clipper Min. Co. v. Eli Min. & Land Co. 194 U. S. 220–226, 48 L. ed. 944–949, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

The title so created remained in full force and effect, even against the United States, until cancelation, forfeiture, or abandonment.

Little Gunnell Min. Co. v. Kimber, Fed. Cas. No. 8,402, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 536; Beals v. Cone, 27 Colo. 473, 83 Am. St. Rep. 92, 62 Pac. 948, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 591; Barklage v. Russell, 29 Land Dec. 401; Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Campbell, 135 U. S. 286, 34 L. ed. 155, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 765, 16 Mor. Min. Rep. 218; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 476, 25 L. ed. 801; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 26 L. ed. 800.

The relocator has the same rights as the original locator, although in strictness not a discoverer at all.

Armstrong v. Lower, 6 Colo. 393, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 631; Zerres v. Vanina, 134 Fed. 615.

Forfeiture of a mining claim does not cause the land to revert to the public domain; it passes instanter to the relocator, and thus maintains privity between the relocators and the paramount title; namely, the legal title held in trust by the United States, up to the moment of forfeiture for the prior locator.

27 Cyc. 599; Miller v. Taylor, 6 Colo. 41, 9 Mor. Min. Rep. 547; Brockbank v. Albion Min. Co. 29 Utah, 367, 81 Pac. 863; Conway v. Hart, 129 Cal. 484, 62 Pac. 44, 21 Mor Min. Rep. 20; Zerres v. Vanina, 134 Fed. 615.

The legal title of the United States does not pass under a void patent, and a void patent may be attacked and avoided in any action where it is the basis of the prosecution or defense.

Williams v. San Pedro, 153 Cal. 44, 94 Pac. 234.

Granite is a mineral, and granite-bearing lands were excluded from the railroad land grant under the exception of "all minerals." Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. ed. 575, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

Coal lands are mineral lands within the meaning of the term as used in statutes regulating the disposition of the public domain.

Mullan v. United States, 118 U. S. 271, 30 L. ed. 170, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1041.

Lands valuable for mineral, whether of the metallic or nonmetallic class, are subject to location, entry, and purchase under the provisions of the mining laws, and are also within the exception of "mineral lands" from railroad land grants.

Digitized by Google

Re Hooper, 1 Land Dec. 560; Maxwell v. Brierly, 10 Copp's L. O. 50; Lindley, Mines, §§ 96, 98, 137, 158, 162; McGlenn v. Wienbroeer, 15 Land Dec. 370; Van Doren v. Plested, 16 Land Dec. 508; Hayden v. Jamison, 16 Land Dec. 537; Shepherd v. Bird, 17 Land Dec. 82; Gary v. Todd, 18 Land Dec. 58; Re Gibson, 21 Land Dec. 327; Re Union Oil Co. 25 Land Dec. 354; Pacific Coast Marble Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 25 Land Dec. 233; Alldritt v. Northern P. R. Co. 25 Land Dec. 349; Re Florida C. & P. R. Co. 26 Land Dec. 600; Richter v. Utah, 27 Land Dec. 95; McQuiddy v. California, 29 Land Dec. 181; Tulare Oil & Min. Co. v. Southern P. R. Co. 29 Land Dec. 269; Beaudette v. Northern P. R. Co. 29 Land Dec. 248; Schrimpf v. Northern P. R. Co. 29 Land Dec. 327; Morrill v. Northern P. R. Co. 30 Land Dec. 475.

Nothing passes by implication under grants of a public nature, but in the clear and explicit language of the grant must be found all that is conveyed by it. When doubt arises, the grants must be construed most strictly against the grantee.

Dubuque & P. R. Co. v. Litchfield, 23 How. 66, 16 L. ed. 500; Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412, 28 L. ed. 321, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030.

The value of a mineral deposit, rather than its kind, appears to have been the controlling factor in determining whether the lands containing it were subject to entry and patent under the mining law.

Pacific Coast Marble Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 25 Land Dec. 233.

Petroleum is a mineral.

Gill v. Weston, 110 Pa. 312, 1 Atl. 921; Westmoreland & C. Natural Gas Co. v. De Witt, 130 Pa. 235, 5 L.R.A. 731, 18 Atl. 724; Hague v. Wheeler, 157 Pa. 324, 22 L.R.A. 141, 37 Am. St. Rep. 736, 27 Atl. 714; Thornton, Oil & Gas, § 18; Murray v. Allred, 100 Tenn. 100, 39 L.R.A. 249, 66 Am. St. Rep. 740. 43 S. W. 355, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 169; Funk v. Haldeman, 53 Pa. 229, 7 Mor. Min. Rep. 203; Williamson v. Jones, 39 W. Va. 231, 25 L.R.A. 222, 19 S. E. 436; Re Union Oil Co. 25 Land Dec. 351; Gird v. California Oil Co. 60 Fed. 531, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 45; Re Piru Oil Co. 16 Land Dec. 117; Roberts v. Jepson, 4 Land Dec. 60; Porter v. Mack Mfg. Co. 65 W. Va. 636, 64 S. E. 853: Sult v. A. Hochstetter Oil Co. 63 W. Va. 317, 61 S. E. 307; Moore v. Griffin, 72 Kan. 164, 4 L.R.A.(N.S.) 477, 83 Pac. 395; Bee v. Barnes, 79 C. C. A. 433, 149 Fed. 727, 138 Fed. 476.

Natural gas is a mineral.

Re Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. 73 Fed. 191; Thornton, Oil & Gas, § 18; Westmoreland & C. Natural Gas Co. v. DeWitt, 130 Pa. 235, 5 L.R.A. 731, 18 Atl. 724.

A mineral has been defined to be a fossil, or what is dug out of the earth. The term may, however, in the most enlarged sense, be described as comprising all the substances which now form, or which once formed, part of the solid body of the earth, both external and internal, and which are destitute of and incapable of supporting animal or vegetable life. In this view it will embrace the bare granite of the high mountain as well as the deepest hidden diamonds and metallic ores.

Bainbridge, Mines, pp. 1, 2.

Mineral in its general legal sense is any valuable inert or lifeless substance formed or deposited in its present position through natural agencies alone, and which is found either in or upon the soil of the earth or in the rocks beneath the soil.

Barringer & A. Mines, p. 76.

The mining laws from their earliest history have been administered by the Land Department as applicable in all their force and effect to the public mineral lands within the limits of railroad land grants.

Central P. R. Co. v. Valentine, 11 Land Dec. 238.

The term "minerals," standing alone, and as understood in mining law, generally comprehends and includes all the substances in the earth's crust which are sought for and removed by man for the substance itself.

1 Snyder, Mines, §§ 134, 140, 143, 145; 2 Snyder, Mines, § 926.

Whatever is recognized as a mineral by the standard authorities on the subject, whether of metallic or other substances, when the same is found in the public lands in quantity and quality sufficient to render the land more valuable on account thereof than for agricultural purposes, should be treated as coming within the purview of the mining laws.

Pacific Coast Marble Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 25 Land Dec. 233.

The mineral exception having been inserted in the patent pursuant to the assent of the defendant railroad company, and pursuant to the agreement between the United States and the defendant railroad company, the effect of the same and of the acceptance of the agreed patent, independent of any statutory authority to insert the same in the patent, is to retain the title to the controverted lands in the United States, and to estop the defendant railroad company from denying that the legal title to the lands in controversy remains in the United States thereunder.

LeRoy v. Jamison, 3 Sawy. 369, Fed. Cas. No. 8,271; Gale v. Best, 78 Cal. 240, 12 Am. St. Rep. 44, 20 Pac. 550, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 186; United States v. Schurz, 102 U.

Digitized by Google

S. 399, 26 L. ed. 172; Fremont v. Flower, 17 Cal. 199, 12 Mor. Min. Rep. 418; Cowell v. Colorado Springs Co. 100 U. S. 55, 25 L. ed. 547; 16 Cyc. 789, 790, 791.

In inserting the mineral exception the Department was acting on a construction of a statute which it was called on to construe, and it followed a construction that was in force for at least thirty-seven years; and even if the statute is ambiguous or doubtful in such regard, the contemporaneous construction of the statute by the executive officers, coupled with the assent and acquiescence of those whose duty it is to construe it, or of those who have been called upon to carry it into effect, is entitled to great respect, and should control the construction of the statute by the courts.

United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760, 24 L. ed. 588; United States v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 98 U. S. 336, 25 L. ed. 198; United States v. Graham, 110 U. S. 219, 28 L. ed. 126, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582; Brown v. United States, 113 U. S. 568, 28 L. ed. 1079, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; The Laura (Pollock v. Bridgeport S. B. Co.) 114 U. S. 413, 29 L. ed. 147, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; United States v. Philbrick, 120 U. S. 52, 30 L. ed. 559, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; Robertson v. Downing, 127 U. S. 613, 32 L. ed. 271, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1328; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 365, 33 L. ed. 367, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 578, 34 L. ed. 1066, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 23, 35 L. ed. 370, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030.

The exception gives expression to the intent of the granting act.

Reynolds v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 116 U. S. 687–697, 29 L. ed. 774–777, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 591.

Every part of the patent must be considered so that effect may be given to what may appear to be the controlling intention of the grantor.

Pugh v. Mays, 60 Tex. 191.

The estoppel will be limited by the apparent intention of the parties.

Colonial Bank v. Hepworth, L. R. 36 Ch. Div. 36, 56 L. J. Ch. N. S. 1089, 57 L. T. N. S. 148, 36 Week. Rep. 259.

Estoppels are mutual, and bind both parties or neither.

Schuhman v. Garratt, 16 Cal. 101; Franklin v. Dorland, 28 Cal. 175, 87 Am. Dec. 111; Gordon v. San Diego, 101 Cal. 522, 40 Am. St. Rep. 73, 36 Pac. 18.

Where a grant by metes and bounds excepts a tract by the name under which it is generally known, the tract so excepted does not pass by the grant.

Truett v. Adams, 66 Cal. 218, 5 Pac. 96.

Where a deed described the land conveyed by courses and distances, and conveyed no specific number of acres, it was competent for the grantor to except a swamp or marsh from the operation of the deed.

Painter v. Pasadena Land & Water Co. 91 Cal. 74, 27 Pac. 539.

A reservation forbidding the grantee from furnishing to others rock taken from the premises sold is valid.

Pavkovich v. Southern P. R. Co. 150 Cal. 39, 87 Pac. 1097.

A reservation in a grant is to be interpreted in favor of the grantor.

Martin v. Lloyd, 94 Cal. 195, 29 Pac. 491; Butler v. Gosling, 130 Cal. 422, 62 Pac. 596; Smith v. Stearns Ranchos Co. 132 Cal. 178, 64 Pac. 261, 716; Sears v. Ackerman, 138 Cal. 583, 72 Pac. 171; Adams v. Hopkins, — Cal. —, 69 Pac. 228; 13 Cyc. 676–682.

All the modern authorities class petroleum as a hydrocarbon bitumen,—a mineral.

United States v. Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. 172 U. S. 339, 43 L. ed. 469, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Caldwell v. Fulton, 31 Pa. 475, 72 Am. Dec. 760, 3 Mor. Min. Rep. 238; Stoughton's Appeal, 88 Pa. 198; Funk v. Haldeman, 53 Pa. 229, 7 Mor. Min. Rep. 203; Marshall v. Mellon, 179 Pa. 371, 35 L.R.A. 816, 57 Am. St. Rep. 601, 36 Atl. 201, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 548; Blakley v. Marshall, 174 Pa. 425, 34 Atl. 564, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 350; Jennings v. Bloomfield, 199 Pa. 638, 49 Atl. 135; Wilson v. Youst (Wilson v. Hughes) 43 W. Va. 826, 39 L.R.A. 292, 28 S. E. 781; Williamson v. Jones, 39 W. Va. 231, 25 L.R.A. 222, 19 S. E. 436; Southern Oil Co. v. Colquitt, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 292, 69 S. W. 169; Dunham v. Kirkpatrick, 101 Pa. 36, 47 Am. Rep. 696; Thompson v. Noble, 3 Pittsb. 201, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 137; Gill v. Weston, 110 Pa. 312, 1 Atl. 921; Murray v. Allred, 100 Tenn. 100, 39 L.R.A. 249, 66 Am. St. Rep. 740, 43 S. W. 355, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 169; Wagner v. Mallory, 169 N. Y. 501, 62 N. E. 584, 22 Mor. Min. Rep. 42; Kelley v. Ohio Oil Co. 57 Ohio St. 317, 39 L.R.A. 765, 63 Am. St. Rep. 721, 49 N. E. 399; Westmoreland & C. Natural Gas Co. v. De Witt, 130 Pa. 235, 5 L.R.A. 731, 18 Atl. 724; Porter v. Mack Mfg. Co. 65 W. Va. 636, 64 S. E. 853; Sult v. A. Hochstetter Oil Co. 63 W. Va. 317, 61 S. E. 307; Williams v. South Penn Oil Co. 52 W. Va. 181, 60 L.R.A. 795, 43 S. E. 214; Brown v. Vandergrift, 80 Pa. 147 Lillibridge v. Lackawanna Coal Co. 134 Pa. 293, 13 L.R.A. 627, 24 Am. St. Rep. 544, 22 Atl. 1035, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 412; McKinney v. Central Kentucky Natural Gas Co. 134 Ky. 239, 120 S. W. 314, 20 Ann. Cas. 934; Osborn v. Arkansas Territorial Oil & Gas Co. 103 Ark. 175, 146 S. W. 122; McIntosh v. Ropp, 233 Pa. 513, 82 Atl. 949; Etchison Drilling Co. v. Flournoy, 131 La. 442, 59 So. 867; Frank Oil Co. v. Belleview Gas & Oil Co. 29 Okla. 719, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 487, 119 Pac. 260; Gladys City Oil, Gas & Mfg. Co. v. Right of Way Oil Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 137 S. W. 171; Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana, 177 U. S. 190, 44 L. ed. 729, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 466; Brown v. Spilman, 155 U. S. 665, 669, 39 L. ed. 304, 305, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245; Webb v. American Asphaltum Min. Co. 84 C. C. A. 651, 157 Fed. 207; Bacon v. Walker, 204 U. S. 316, 51 L. ed. 501, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Chartiers Block Coal Co. v. Mellon, 152 Pa. 286, 18 L.R.A. 702, 34 Am. St. Rep. 645, 25 Atl. 597.

Digitized by Google

Messrs. Frederic R. Kellogg and Roberts Walker also filed an additional brief for appellant:

Not only in land grant cases, but in all other cases known to us, in which the Federal courts and the Land Department have passed upon the question (with the one exception, which was immediately corrected), petroleum land has been treated as mineral land, both within the intent of the lawmaking bodies and the courts, in connection with the various questions which have arisen, and Congress has expressly approved this view.

1 Snyder, Mines, §§ 134, 140, 143, 145; 2 Snyder, Mines, § 926; Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. ed. 575, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Webb v. American Asphaltum Min. Co. 84 C. C. A. 651, 157 Fed. 207; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 162 Fed. 958, affirmed in 220 U. S. 61, 74, 55 L. ed. 369, 375, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 160; Brewster v. Lanyon Zinc Co. 72 C. C. A. 213, 140 Fed. 807; Kansas Natural Gas Co. v. Haskell, 172 Fed. 562; Gird v. California Oil Co. 60 Fed. 531, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 45; Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana, 177 U. S. 190, 202, 44 L. ed. 729, 736, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 466; Bacon v. Walker, 204 U. S. 316, 51 L. ed. 501, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 221 U. S. 229, 252–260, 55 L. ed. 716, 725–728, 35 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1193, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Re Union Oil Co. 25 Land Dec. 357.

The fact that the Land Department has not determined whether the land in question was mineral or nonmineral does not involve a question of fact, as the facts are admitted; but solely a question of law whether land valuable for its granite is mineral or nonmineral under the terms of the grant.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 528, 47 L. ed. 580, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

Mr. D. J. Hinkley argued the cause, and, with Mr. T. H. Hogsett, filed a brief for appellants in No. 280:

The statutory grant, being in præsenti, passed the title granted as of its date upon the filing of the map of definite location of the road, of all lands granted by it, and of none other.

Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 44, 60, 22 L. ed. 551, 554; Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 741, 23 L. ed. 634, 637; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 97 U. S. 491, 24 L. ed. 1095; St. Joseph & D. C. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 103 U. S. 426, 429, 26 L. ed. 578, 579; St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U. S. 1, 5, 6, 35 L. ed. 77, 79, 80, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

The exclusion, by the statute, of all mineral lands from its operation, being in præsenti, excluded from the grant, in its creation and by its definition, all mineral lands, whether known or unknown to be such.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030.

The granting act is a special statutory law, intended and designed by Congress exclusively to define and control the grant made by it, and must be so construed as to carry its intent and purposes into effect.

Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 504, 33 L. ed. 687, 690, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 97 U. S. 491, 24 L. ed. 1095; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 319, 38 L. ed. 992, 999, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030.

The office of the patent provided for in the statute is not to make a grant of lands, nor to alter in any particular the grant made by the statute, but is to confirm to the grantee the right and title granted to it by the statute.

Missouri, K. & T. P. R. Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 97 U. S. 491, 24 L. ed. 1095; St. Joseph & D. C. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 103 U. S. 426, 26 L. ed. 578; Deseret Salt Co. v. Tarpey, 142 U. S. 247, 35 L. ed. 1001, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 315, 38 L. ed. 997, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030.

The granting act expressly puts upon the grantee the burden of selecting the land granted. All mineral lands are by the statute excluded from its grant. Therefore they were not to be located at all, and if in fact located, they could not pass under the grant.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. supra.

Neither the patent issued nor the issuance thereof establishes an adjudication by the office of the Interior Department that all of the lands described in the patent are nonmineral.

Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133

Digitized by Google

U. S. 496, 508, 33 L. ed. 687, 693, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 315, 322, 38 L. ed. 997, 1000, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030.

The appellees confessedly seek to establish, by virtue of an erroneous decision by public officers, their title to property which Congress intended and specially declared by statute that they should not have, and they must therefore show affirmatively from the record that such erroneous decision was made.

St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 640, 26 L. ed. 875, 876, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 450, 27 L. ed. 226, 227, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288–327, 328, 38 L. ed. 992–1001, 1002, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Grignon v. Astor, 2 How. 319, 340, 11 L. ed. 283, 291; Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. 499, 10 L. ed. 560; Voorhees v. Jackson, 10 Pet. 473, 9 L. ed. 499; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 511, 10 L. ed. 264, 270.

The officers of the Interior Department had authority in law to issue the patent pleaded in this cause, which purports to pass to the railroad company such of the lands therein described as are nonmineral, and not to pass title to it of such of them as are mineral.

United States v. Macdaniel, 7 Pet. 1, 8 L. ed. 587; Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 763, 23 L. ed. 769; United States v. Philbrick, 120 U. S. 53, 58, 59, 30 L. ed. 559, 561, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; Robertson v. Downing. 127 U. S. 607, 613, 32 L. ed. 269, 271, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1328; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 366, 33 L. ed. 363, 367, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 23, 35 L. ed. 363, 370, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699.

The saving clause in the patent is effective, and limits the title of the railroad company to lands nonmineral in fact.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; McLaughlin v. Powell, 50 Cal. 64, 10 Mor. Min. Rep. 424; Chicago Quartz Min. Co. v. Oliver, 75 Cal. 194, 7 Am. St. Rep. 143, 16 Pac. 780; Gale v. Best, 78 Cal. 235, 12 Am. St. Rep. 44, 20 Pac. 550, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 186; Van Ness v. Rooney, 160 Cal. 131, 116 Pac. 392; Eastern Oregon Land Co. v. Willow River Land & Irrig. Co. 187 Fed. 466.

Petroleum or mineral oil is within the meaning of the term "mineral," as it was used in the acts of Congress reserving mineral lands from the railroad land grants.

Re Union Oil Co. 25 Land Dec. 354; Re Hooper, 1 Land Dec. 560; Maxwell v. Brierly, 10 Copp's L. O. 50; Pacific Coast Marble Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 25 Land Dec. 233; Gird v. California Oil Co. 60 Fed. 531, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 45; Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 528, 47 L. ed. 580, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

Messrs. D. J. Hinkley and T. J. Butler also filed a brief for appellants:

Petroleum oil is a mineral.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. ed. 575, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Murray v. Allred, 100 Tenn. 100, 39 L.R.A. 249, 66 Am. St. Rep. 740, 43 S. W. 355, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 169; 2 Rapalje & L. Law Dict. p. 821; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 500; Kelley v. Ohio Oil Co. 57 Ohio St. 317, 39 L.R.A. 765, 63 Am. St. Rep. 721, 49 N. E. 399; Wilson v. Youst (Wilson v. Hughes) 43 W. Va. 826, 39 L.R.A. 292, 28 S. E. 781; Sult v. A. Hochstetter Oil Co. 63 W. Va. 317, 61 S. E. 307; Weaver v. Richards, 156 Mich. 320, 120 N. W. 818.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause, and, with Mr. Henry W. Clark, filed a brief for appellees:

In the administration of the public land laws generally, it has long been settled that the issue of a patent by the Department of the Interior, under an act of Congress providing for the disposal and patenting of public lands, is an official determination and declaration by the Department that the land so patented is of the character subject to disposition under such act, and that all statutory requirements preliminary to its issue have been complied with; and that this determination is conclusive except in a direct proceeding for its annulment or limitation, brought by the government or its privies.

Polk v. Wendal, 9 Cranch, 87, 98, 3 L. ed. 665, 669; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 26 L. ed. 875, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673; French v. Fyan, 93 U. S. 169, 171, 23 L. ed. 812, 813; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 49, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 83, 20 L. ed. 485, 486; Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47, 50, 29 L. ed. 61, 62, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 782; Duluth & I. Range R. Co. v. Roy, 173 U. S. 587, 590, 43 L. ed. 820, 822, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549.

The foregoing proposition as to the presumptions inherent in a patent, concerning the character of the land and other prerequisites of its issue, are fully applicable in the case of patents issued under the Southern Pacific Railroad grant, and parties not in privity with the government are not entitled to attack such a patent upon allegations that there was no investigation or determination by the Department as to the character of the land, or that the land was in fact mineral land.

Digitized by Google

Simmons v. Wagner, 101 U. S. 260, 261, 25 L. ed. 910, 911; Catholic Bishop v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 155, 167, 39 L. ed. 931, 936, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 339, 42 L. ed. 1050, 1060, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; De Cambra v. Rogers, 189 U. S. 119, 122, 47 L. ed. 734, 735, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519.

Appellants are not in privity with the government, and have therefore no standing to attack this patent. The allegations of the existence of mineral locations prior to patent do not affect the question.

Lavagnino v. Uhlig, 198 U. S. 443, 49 L. ed. 1119, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 716.

The mineral land reservation clause in the patent is ineffective for any purpose.

Re Spong, 5 Land Dec. 193; Cowell v. Lammers, 10 Sawy. 246, 21 Fed. 200; Davis v. Wiebbold, 139 U. S. 507, 35 L. ed. 238, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 29 L. ed. 423, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 42 L. ed. 1050, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; Courtright v. Wisconsin C. R. Co. 19 Land Dec. 410; Eastern Oregon Land Co. v. Willow River Land & Irrig. Co. 119 C. C. A. 437, 201 Fed. 203, reversing 187 Fed. 466.

Whether petroleum is a mineral oil is a question of fact which must be determined by a jury if conflicting evidence appears.

Farquharson v. Barnard, A. R. S. Oil & Gas Co. 22 Ont. L. Rep. 319, affirmed by Privy Council in 28 Times L. R. 590; Symington v. Caledonian R. Co. [1912] A. C. 93, 81 L. J. P. C. N. S. 155, 106 L. T. N. S. 193, 56 Sol. Jo. 87, [1912] S. C. 9, 49 Scot. L. R. 49; Caledonian R. Co. v. Glenboig Union Fireclay Co. [1911] A. C. 290, 80 L. J. P. C. N. S. 128, 104 L. T. N. S. 657, 75 J. P. 377, [1911] S. C. 72, 48 Scot. L. R. 526; North British R. Co. v. Budhill Coal & Sandstone Co. [1910] A. C. 116, 79 L. J. P. C. N. S. 31, 101 L. T. N. S. 609, 26 Times L. R. 79, 54 Sol. Jo. 79, [1910] S. C. 1, 47 Scot. L. R. 23; Great Western R. Co. v. Carpalla United China Clay Co. [1910] A. C. 83, 79 L. J. Ch. N. S. 117, 101 L. T. N. S. 785, 74 J. P. 57, 26 Times L. R. 190, 47 Scot. L. R. 612; Silver v. Bush, 213 Pa. 195, 62 Atl. 832; McKinney v. Central Kentucky Natural Gas Co. 134 Ky. 239, 120 S. W. 314, 20 Ann. Cas. 934; Brown v. Spilman, 155 U. S. 665, 669, 39 L. ed. 304, 305, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245; Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana, 177 U. S. 190, 44 L. ed. 729, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 466; Wagner v. Mallory, 169 N. Y. 501, 62 N. E. 584, 22 Mor. Min. Rep. 42; Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. ed. 575, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

Messrs. Gordon M. Buck and A. A. Hoehling, Jr., also filed a brief for appellees.

Former Solicitor General Bullitt, Assistant Attorney General Knaebel, and Mr. B. D. Townsend, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, filed a brief for the United States:

The face of the grant, together with the thorough reasoning in the Barden Case, will not allow further discussion of the first question.

There was no authority to transfer title to mineral lands, known or unknown, and no attempt by the Land Department to do so could be successful, except on the theory that a decision had actually been made.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Deseret Salt Co. v. Tarpey, 142 U. S. 241, 251, 35 L. ed. 999, 1002, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Langdeau v. Hanes, 21 Wall. 521, 529, 22 L. ed. 606, 608; Davis v. Wiebbold, 139 U. S. 507, 35 L. ed. 238, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628.

A patent cannot operate as a judgment upon any matter which was not necessarily adjudicated, and does not appear from the face of the patent to have been adjudicated.

23 Cyc. 1297; Hopkins v. Lee, 6 Wheat. 109, 114, 5 L. ed. 218, 220; Russell v. Place, 94 U. S. 606, 610, 24 L. ed. 214, 215.

Exceptions of mineral lands, inserted in railroad patents, are valid.

Reynolds v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 116 U. S. 687, 697, 29 L. ed. 774, 777, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 591; Noyes v. Mantle, 127 U. S. 348, 32 L. ed. 168, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1132, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 611; McLaughlin v. Powell, 50 Cal. 64, 10 Mor. Min. Rep. 424: Chicago Quartz Min. Co. v. Oliver, 75 Cal. 194, 7 Am. St. Rep. 143, 16 Pac. 780; Carr v. Quigley, 57 Cal. 394; McLaughlin v. Heid, 63 Cal. 208; Gale v. Best, 78 Cal. 240, 12 Am. St. Rep. 44, 20 Pac. 550, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 186; Van Ness v. Rooney, 160 Cal. 131, 116 Pac. 392; Eastern Oregon Land Co. v. Willow River Land & Irrig. Co. 187 Fed. 466.

Even if it were to be conceded that the exception was not authorized by law, it could not be treated as void and nugatory without ignoring entirely the character and function of a patent as an instrument of conveyance. A patent, like a deed, can convey only that which it purports to convey; and it strikes us as almost absurd to argue that such an instrument will operate to pass the title to lands which, by its own express terms, are excluded from the premises granted. The rule is well established and elementary that such an exception is part of the description, and the instrument containing it is not to be treated as conveying, or in anywise affecting, the land excepted.

Digitized by Google

McLaughlin v. Powell, 50 Cal. 64, 10 Mor. Min. Rep. 424; Chicago Quartz Min. Co. v. Oliver, 75 Cal. 194, 7 Am. St. Rep. 143, 16 Pac. 780; Van Ness v. Rooney, 160 Cal. 131, 116 Pac. 392.

Petroleum or mineral oil is within the meaning of the term "mineral," as it was used in the acts of Congress reserving mineral lands from the railroad grants.

Re Union Oil Co. 25 Land Dec. 351; Gird v. California Oil Co. 60 Fed. 531, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 45; Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 534, 47 L. ed. 575, 583, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

The railroad is not in proper position to urge the supposed mistake of the Land Department to its own advantage, and to the detriment of the United States.

Reynolds v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 116 U. S. 687, 697, 29 L. ed. 774, 777, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 591.

Solicitor General Davis also filed a brief for the United States.

Messrs. Charles W. Bunn and Charles Donnelly filed a brief for the Northern Pacific Railroad Company:

The mere neglect of the Department to perform its duty previous to the issuance of the patent would not impair its validity.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Polk v. Wendal, 9 Cranch, 87, 97, 3 L. ed. 665, 668.

The distinction between a void and a voidable patent has been noted many times by this court in language which makes it plain that a patent answering to the description contained in this second question would not be void.

Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Burfenning v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 163 U. S. 321, 323, 41 L. ed. 175, 176, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 400, 26 L. ed. 167, 173.

The patent is the determination; and, when issued under a grant which excludes mineral lands, it necessarily determines that the lands described in it are of the class which the patentee is entitled to receive. To speak of a patent as not determining the facts necessary to its proper issuance is as if one were to speak of a judgment as not determining the facts necessary to its rendition. The analogy between patents and judgments in this aspect is well recognized (Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 173, 37 L. ed. 123, 126, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271); and as a judgment is decisive not simply of the ultimate facts recorded in it, but as well of all the antecedent facts necessary to its rendition,—of "all the media concludendi." (Fauntleroy v. Lum, 210 U. S. 230, 237, 52 L. ed. 1039, 1042, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641),—so a patent is a determination not only that the patentee is the owner of the lands described in it, but as well that they are the kind of lands which may properly be conveyed to him.

The reservation and exception contained in the grant in the patent to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company are void, being inserted without authority.

Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 406, 29 L. ed. 423, 427, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Davis v. Wiebbold, 139 U. S. 507, 527, 35 L. ed. 238, 245, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 337, 42 L. ed. 1050, 1059, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

Such an exception in a conveyance is nugatory—

(1) Because repugnant to the grant.

4 Kent, Com. 468; Cutler v. Tufts, 3 Pick. 277; Devlin, Real Estate, 3d ed. 1911, § 979.

(2) Because uncertain.

2 Devlin, Real Estate, 3d ed. 1911, p. 1933.

The exception in the patent being void, and the patent being at most only voidable, the authorities are uniform upon the proposition that it is conclusive against a collateral attack.

Polk v. Wendal, 9 Cranch, 87, 97, 3 L. ed. 665, 668; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 83, 20 L. ed. 485, 486; French v. Fyan, 93 U. S. 169, 23 L. ed. 812; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 640, 26 L. ed. 875, 876, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 451, 27 L. ed. 226, 228, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 618, 624, 31 L. ed. 844, 846, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1228; Chandler v. Calumet & H. Min. Co. 149 U. S. 79, 92, 37 L. ed. 657, 662, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 798; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 573, 585, 34 L. ed. 1063, 1068, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; McCormick v. Hayes, 159 U. S. 332, 348, 40 L. ed. 171, 176, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37; Burfenning v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 163 U. S. 321, 323, 41 L. ed. 175, 176, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018.

The fact that the appellant was not in privity with the government in any respect at the time when the patent was issued to the railroad company prevents him from attacking the patent on the ground of fraud, error, or irregularity in the issuance thereof, as so alleged in the bill.

Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47, 29 L. ed. 61, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 782; Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 408, 29 L. ed. 428, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Sanford v. Sanford, 139 U. S. 642, 35 L. ed. 290, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Ehrhardt v. Hogaboom, 115 U. S. 67, 29 L. ed. 346, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep.

Digitized by Google

1157; Quinn v. Chapman, 111 U. S. 445, 28 L. ed. 476, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508.

It was of railroad land grant patents that the courts were speaking when some of the strongest expressions as to their conclusiveness were used.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 327, 38 L. ed. 992, 1001, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 510, 33 L. ed. 687, 694, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U. S. 1, 6, 35 L. ed. 77, 79, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Deseret Salt Co. v. Tarpey, 142 U. S. 241, 251, 35 L. ed. 999, 1002, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Lake Superior Ship Canal, R. & Iron Co. v. Cunningham, 155 U. S. 354, 375, 39 L. ed. 183, 190, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 103; Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 12, 339, 42 L. ed. 1050, 1060, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 15 C. C. A. 96, 32 U. S. App. 272, 67 Fed. 957.

Swamp-land grants, like the railroad grants, were grants in præsenti; and it has been held that the right of the states to the lands granted by them could not be defeated by failure to issue patent.

Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 499, 30 L. ed. 1039, 1041, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; French v. Fyan, 93 U. S. 169, 23 L. ed. 812.

It cannot be said that a case is not authority on one point because, although that point was properly presented and decided in the regular course of the consideration of the cause, something else was found in the end which disposed of the whole matter.

Florida C. R. Co. v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 118, 143, 26 L. ed. 327, 336.

The decision in the Barden Case has not been commonly regarded as dictum.

Toltec Ranch Co. v. Cook, 191 U. S. 532, 541, 48 L. ed. 291, 294, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; Lake Superior Ship Canal, R. & Iron Co. v. Cunningham, 155 U. S. 354, 375, 39 L. ed. 183, 190, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 103; Catholic Bishop v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 155, 166, 39 L. ed. 931, 936, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779; Central P. R. Co. v. Nevada, 162 U. S. 512, 525, 40 L. ed. 1057, 1061, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885; Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 339, 42 L. ed. 1050, 1060, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; United States v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 87 C. C. A. 592, 160 Fed. 820, 148 Fed. 891; Le Marchel v. Teagarden, 152 Fed. 666; James v. Germania Iron Co. 46 C. C. A 476, 107 Fed. 597; Boynton v. Haggart, 57 C. C. A. 301, 120 Fed. 829; Cosmos Exploration Co v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 104 Fed. 47.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

In 1910 Edmund Burke filed a bill in equity in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district [672] of California, against the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Kern Trading & Oil Company, and several individuals, wherein he sought a decree establishing certain rights claimed by him in five sections of land in Fresno county, California, and enjoining the defendants from asserting any right or interest therein. A cross bill was filed by J. I. Lamprecht and other individual defendants, and the two corporate defendants demurred to both bills. The demurrers were sustained and a decree was entered dismissing the bills, for reasons assigned in an opinion announced the same day in Roberts v. Southern P. Co. 186 Fed. 934. The complainant and cross complainants appealed to the circuit court of appeals, and it certified the case here under the Judicial Code, § 239 [36 Stat. at L. 1157, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 228], for instruction upon designated questions of law.

According to the certificate, the bill alleged, in substance, that in 1892 the five sections were public lands and were located as placer mining claims under the mining laws of the United States, each location being preceded by a discovery of mineral within its limits; that on May 9, 1892, the railroad company, with knowledge of these locations, made application at the local land office to have the five sections, with others, patented to it under the land grant made to it by the act of July 27, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278, §§ 3, 4, 18), and the joint resolution of June 28, 1870 (16 Stat. at L. 382, No. 87), and did then corruptly cause one Madden, its land agent, to make and present at such land office, in support of such application, a false and fraudulent affidavit stating that the application contained a correct list of lands inuring to the railroad company under its grant, and that the listed lands were vacant, unappropriated, and not interdicted, mineral, or reserved lands; that no notice of such application was given to any of the placer claimants, and no hearing was had in the local office or in the Land Department with the purpose of [673] determining the character of the lands; that on July 10, 1894, without any such investigation or determination, a patent was issued to the railroad company purporting to convey to it, among other lands, the five sections in controversy; that the patent contained a clause reading: "Excluding and excepting all mineral lands should any such be found in the tracts aforesaid, but this exclusion and exception, according to the terms of the statute, shall not be construed to include coal and iron lands;" that the railroad company accepted the patent and caused it to be recorded in Fresno county; that, in virtue of the patent, the railroad company claims to own all the lands described therein, including the five sections; that in March, 1909, the original mineral claimants having failed to perform the required assessment or development work for the preceding year, the complainant and certain associates of his entered upon the five sections and relocated the same as placer mining claims under the mining laws of the United States, each of the new locations being preceded by a discovery of mineral within its limits; that the lands contain petroleum in commercial quantities, which makes them more valuable for mining than for agricultural purposes; that the complainant is the owner of an undivided one-tenth interest in the mining claims created by the new location; and that the oil company, although claiming as a lessee of the railroad company, is a mere instrument of the latter, being entirely owned, dominated, and controlled by it.

Digitized by Google

According to the certificate, the cross bill set forth substantially a like state of facts, sought the same relief, and also contained the following allegation: "These cross complainants further say and show unto the court that the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, with full knowledge of all the facts and circumstances herein stated and alleged, did, for itself, its successors and assigns forever, accept and assent to, and submit to, and agree to [674] be bound by, each and all of the provisions, stipulations, terms, conditions, restrictions, limitations, exclusions, and reservations in said act and joint resolution, and in said patent, or either or any of them contained, and so accepting the same and assenting and submitting thereto, and agreeing to be bound thereby, did receive and accept said alleged patent, and cause the same to be recorded in the office of the recorder of the county of Fresno, and state of California, and that said defendant, Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and all persons claiming any interest in said lands or any part thereof, under or through it by virtue of said act of Congress and joint resolution, and said patent, or any or either of them, are bound by all of said provisions, stipulations, terms, conditions, restrictions, limitations, exclusions, exceptions, and reservations, and are in equity and in conscience estopped to resist or deny the binding force and effect of same or any part or any thereof."

The questions propounded in the certificate are as follows:

"First. Did the said grant to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company include mineral lands which were known to be such at or prior to the date of the patent of July 10, 1894?

"Second. Does a patent to a railroad company under a grant which excludes mineral lands, as in the present case, but which is issued without any investigation upon the part of the officers of the Land Office or of the Department of the Interior as to the quality of the land, whether agricultural or mineral, and without hearing upon or determination of the quality of the lands, operate to convey lands which are thereafter ascertained to be mineral?

"Third. Is the reservation and exception contained in the grant in the patent to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company void and of no effect?

"Fourth. If the reservation of mineral lands as expressed [675] in the patent is void, then is the patent, upon a collateral attack, a conclusive and official declaration that the land is agricultural, and that all the requirements preliminary to the issuance of the patent have been complied with?

"Fifth. Is petroleum or mineral oil within the meaning of the term 'mineral' as it was used in said acts of Congress reserving mineral land from the railroad land grants?

"Sixth. Does the fact that the appellant was not in privity with the government in any respect at the time when the patent was issued to the railroad company prevent him from attacking the patent on the ground of fraud, error, or irregularity in the issuance thereof, as so alleged in the bill?

"Seventh. If the mineral exception clause was inserted in the patent with the consent of the defendant, Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and under an understanding and agreement between it and the officers of the Interior Department that said clause should be effective to keep in the United States title to such of the lands described in the patent as were in fact mineral, are the defendants, Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Kern Trading & Oil Company, estopped to deny the validity of said clause?"

At the outset it is well to observe that this is not a suit by the government to cancel or annul a patent for fraud practised upon the land officers in its procurement, or for any fraudulent act, error of law, or mistake committed by them in issuing it (see United States v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233, 29 L. ed. 110, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 125 U. S. 273, 31 L. ed. 747, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850; United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 137 U. S. 160, 34 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 41 L. ed. 754, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337); nor is it a suit to have one to whom a patent has issued declared a trustee for another who, at the time of its issue, had acquired such a right to the land as to entitle him to that form of equitable relief (see Silver v. Ladd, 7 Wall. 219, 228, 19 L. ed. 138, 141; Lee v. [676] Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Duluth & I. Range R. Co. v. Roy, 173 U. S. 587, 43 L. ed. 820, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549; Svor v. Morris, 227 U. S. 524, 57 L. ed. 623, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385). On the contrary, the suit is one wherein rights asserted under a patent are called in question by parties whose only claim to the land was initiated more than fourteen years after the date of the patent.

Digitized by Google

As the fifth question has been presented in separate briefs and the occasion for considering the other questions turns upon the answer to it, we take it up first. It is: "Is petroleum or mineral oil within the meaning of the term 'mineral' as it was used in said acts of Congress reserving mineral land from the railroad land grants?"

This granting act, like several others of that period, expressly excluded from its operation "all mineral lands" other than iron and coal lands. No attempt was made at defining "mineral lands," and doubtless the ordinary or popular signification of that term was intended. Apparently it was used in a sense which, if not restricted, would embrace iron and coal lands, else care hardly would have been taken to declare that it should not include them. This was deemed a reasonable inference in Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. ed. 575, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365, where a contention that it embraced only metalliferous lands was rejected. The question there was whether it included lands containing valuable bodies of granite, and the holding was that it did. While avoiding an exact definition, the court was of opinion that it comprehended all lands "chiefly valuable for their deposits of a mineral character, which are useful in the arts or valuable for purposes of manufacture."

Petroleum has long been popularly regarded as a mineral oil. As its derivation indicates, the word means "rock oil," an oily substance so named because found naturally oozing from crevices in rocks. Its existence in this country was known from very early times, and when this and other railroad land grants, containing an [677] exception of mineral lands, were made, the extraction of oil from its natural reservoir in subterranean rocks had come to be a promising industry and was extending over an increasing area through discoveries of new oil fields. An official report laid before Congress a few months before this grant was made showed that the daily output of the oil wells in Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, and Kentucky was 12,000 barrels. H. R. Ex. Doc. No. 51, 39th Cong. 1st Sess. In the same year the supreme court of Pennsylvania, in disposing of an oil-land controversy, not only treated the oil as a mineral, but spoke of the work of extracting it from the containing rocks as "mining for oil;" and, in concluding the opinion, said: "Until our scientific knowledge on the subject is increased, this is the light in which the courts will be likely to regard this valuable production of the earth." Funk v. Haldeman, 53 Pa. 229, 7 Mor. Min. Rep. 203. And in another case that court said: "It is a mineral substance obtained from the earth by a process of mining, and lands from which it is obtained may with propriety be called mining lands." Gill v. Weston, 110 Pa. 312, 317, 1 Atl. 921. Its mineral character has also been affirmed by the courts of other states. Williamson v. Jones, 39 W. Va. 231, 256, 25 L.R.A. 222, 19 S. E. 436; Kelley v. Ohio Oil Co. 57 Ohio St. 317, 328, 39 L.R.A. 765, 63 Am. St. Rep. 721, 49 N. E. 399; Murray v. Allred, 100 Tenn. 100, 39 L.R.A. 249, 66 Am. St. Rep. 740, 43 S. W. 355, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 169; Wagner v. Mallory, 169 N. Y. 501, 505, 62 N. E. 584, 22 Mor. Min. Rep. 42. Congress at different times has spoken of it as a mineral (15 Stat. at L. 59, chap. 41, § 1; id. 167, chap. 186, § 109; 29 Stat. at L. 526, chap. 216, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1434; 32 Stat. at L. 702, chap. 1369, § 42; 36 Stat. at L. 847, chap. 421, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 593), and this court did so in Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana, 177 U. S. 190, 202, 44 L. ed. 729, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 466.

In the legislation of Congress the term "mineral lands" is not confined to railroad land grants. It occurs in the mining laws, in an excepting clause in the homestead law, and in like clauses in other public-land laws. Evidently it has the same meaning in all. The administration of these laws has rested with the Land Department, and therefore [678] its course of action in respect of oil-bearing lands—whether it has held them to be mineral or otherwise—requires to be noticed. The various mining circulars, instructions, and decisions, as published from time to time, show that the matter probably was not considered prior to the first mining circular, July 15, 1873, but that since then the Department has regarded petroleum as a mineral, and has treated lands chiefly valuable therefor as mineral lands.[1] With

[1] Circular July 15, 1873, Copp's Mineral Lands, 61; Letter of Commissioner Burdett, January 30, 1875, Sickles's Mining Laws, 491; Maxwell v. Brierly, 10 Copp's L. O. 50; Instructions January 30, 1883, 1 Land a single exception, the rulings have been uniform, and lands of great value have passed into private ownership under them. The single exception is the case of Re Union Oil Co. 23 Land Dec. 222, 226, decided August 27, 1896, which was revoked on a motion for review November 6, 1897, 25 Land Dec. 351. It appears from the later decision that action upon other pending cases turning upon the same question had been suspended in the meantime, so, practically speaking, there has been no break in the Department's rulings. The case of Union Oil Co. presented a controversy between that company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company over a tract of land in California, the former claiming under a placer mining claim and insisting that the land was chiefly valuable for petroleum, and therefore mineral, and the latter seeking a patent under its land grant and insisting that the land, even if chiefly valuable for petroleum, was not mineral. In the original decision the Secretary of the Interior held that the word "mineral" embraced only "the more precious metals," such as "gold, silver, cinnabar, etc.," but on the rehearing this view was rejected and the prior rulings holding petroleum to be a mineral [679] were reaffirmed and applied, the railroad company's application for a patent being denied.

Digitized by Google

Notwithstanding these persuasive considerations for now regarding petroleum lands as mineral lands within the meaning of the excepting clause in the granting act, we are asked to give effect to the strictly scientific view that petroleum is a resultant of the decomposition of organic matter under certain conditions of temperature and pressure, and therefore is not a mineral. As we understand it, scientists are not in full accord upon this point, some ascribing to petroleum an inorganic origin. 21 Enc. Britannica, 11th ed. p. 318. But, passing this seeming divergence in opinion, and assuming that, when subjected to a strictly scientific test, petroleum is not a mineral, we think that is not the test contemplated by the statute. It was dealing with a practical subject in a practical way, and we think it used the words "mineral lands," and intended that they should be applied, in their ordinary and popular sense. In that sense, as before indicated, they embrace lands chiefly valuable for petroleum.

Our answer to the fifth question must therefore be in the affirmative.

The other questions are so closely related one to another, and turn so largely upon principles of general application to controversies arising out of the public-land laws, including railroad land grants, that it seems the better course to consider them in a general way in connection with those principles, and then to come to the specific answers to be given to them separately.

We first notice a contention advanced on the part of the mineral claimants, to the effect that the grant to the railroad company was merely a gift from the United States, and should be construed and applied accordingly. The granting act not only does not support the contention, but refutes it. The act did not follow the building of [680] the road, but preceded it. Instead of giving a gratuitous reward for something already done, the act made a proposal to the company to the effect that if the latter would locate, construct, and put into operation a designated line of railroad, patents would be issued to the company confirming in it the right and title to the public lands falling within the descriptive terms of the grant. The purpose was to bring about the construction of the road, with the resulting advantages to the government and the public, and to that end provision was made for compensating the company, if it should do the work, by patenting to it the lands indicated. The company was at liberty to accept or reject the proposal. It accepted in the mode contemplated by the act, and thereby the parties were brought into such contractual relations that the terms of the proposal became obligatory on both. Menotti v. Dillon, 167 U. S. 703, 721, 42 L. ed. 333, 339, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 945. And when, by constructing the road and putting it in operation, the company performed its part of the contract, it became entitled to performance by the government. In other words, it earned the right to the lands described. Of course, any ambiguity or uncertainty in the terms employed should be resolved in favor of the government, but the grant should not be treated as a mere gift.

Two distinct land grants were made to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, one on behalf of the construction of a main line, and the other (act March 3, 1871, 16 Stat. at L. 579, chap. 122, § 23) on behalf of a branch line. We are not here concerned with the latter. The former was made by the act of July 27, 1866, 14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278. That act first made provision for the construction of a line of railroad, by the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, from Springfield, Missouri, westward through northern Arizona to the Pacific ocean, and by its 3d and 4th sections made Dec. 561; Roberts v. Jepson, 4 Land Dec. 60; Re Piru Oil Co. 16 Land. Dec. 117; Re Union Oil Co. 25 Land Dec. 351; McQuiddy v. California, 29 Land Dec. 181; Tulare Oil & Min. Co. v. Southern P. R. Co. 29 Land Dec. 269.

Digitized by Google

the following grant of public lands to that company:

[681] "Sec. 3. That there be, and hereby is, granted to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line to the Pacific coast, and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war, and public stores, over the route of said line of railway and its branches, every alternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of twenty alternate sections per mile, on each side of said railroad line, as said company may adopt, through the territories of the United States, and ten alternate sections of land per mile on each side of said railroad whenever it passes through any state, and whenever, on the line thereof, the United States have full title, not reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise appropriated, and free from pre-emption or other claims or rights, at the time the line of said road is designated by a plat thereof, filed in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and whenever, prior to said time, any of said sections or parts of sections shall have been granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, or pre-empted, or otherwise disposed of, other lands shall be selected by said company in lieu thereof, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in alternate sections, and designated by odd numbers, not more than ten miles beyond the limits of said alternate sections, and not including the reserved numbers. . . . Provided, further, That all mineral lands be, and the same are hereby, excluded from the operations of this act, and in lieu thereof a like quantity of unoccupied and unappropriated agricultural lands in odd-numbered sections nearest to the line of said road, and within twenty miles thereof, may be selected as above provided: And provided further, That the word 'mineral,' when it occurs in this act, shall not be held to include iron or coal: . . .

"Sec. 4. That whenever said Atlantic & Pacific Railroad [682] Company shall have twenty-five consecutive miles of any portion of said railroad and telegraph line ready for the service contemplated, the President of the United States shall appoint three commissioners to examine the same, who shall be paid a reasonable compensation for their services by the company, to be determined by the Secretary of the Interior; and if it shall appear that twenty-five consecutive miles of said road and telegraph line have been completed in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner, as in all other respects required by this act, the commissioners shall so report under oath, to the President of the United States, and patents of lands, as aforesaid, shall be issued to said company, confirming to said company the right and title to said lands situated opposite to and coterminous with said completed section of said road. And from time to time, whenever twenty-five additional consecutive miles shall have been constructed, completed, and in readiness as aforesaid, and verified by said commissioners to the President of the United States, then patents shall be issued to said company conveying the additional sections of land as aforesaid, and so on as fast as every twenty-five miles of said road is completed as aforesaid."

By its 18th section the act made provision for the construction by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of a connecting line of railroad from the eastern boundary of California to San Francisco, and in that connection made the grant now under consideration. That section reads:

"That the Southern Pacific Railroad, a company incorporated under the laws of the state of California, is hereby authorized to connect with the said Atlantic & Pacific Railroad, formed under this act, at such point, near the boundary line of the state of California, as they shall deem most suitable for a railroad line to San Francisco, and shall have a uniform gauge and rate of freight or fare [683] with said road; and in consideration thereof, to aid in its construction, shall have similar grants of land, subject to all the conditions and limitations herein provided, and shall be required to construct its road on the like regulations, as to time and manner, with the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad herein provided for."

Turning to §§ 3 and 4, as must be done, to ascertain the nature, extent, conditions, and limitations of the grant made by this section, it will be seen that it was of "every alternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers," etc., and was accompanied by a declaration "that all mineral lands be, and the same are hereby, excluded from the operations of this act, and in lieu thereof a like quantity of unoccupied and unappropriated agricultural lands in odd-numbered sections nearest to the line of said road, and within twenty miles thereof, may be selected as above provided." Words hardly could make it plainer that mineral lands were not included, but expressly excluded. This is fully recognized by counsel on both sides. But by whom and when was it to be determined whether lands otherwise within the grant were mineral and therefore excluded, or nonmineral and therefore included? How long was the question of the exclusion or inclusion of particular sections to be an open one? Was it to depend upon a discovery of mineral at any time in the future, even a hundred years after the completion of the railroad, or was it intended that the mineral or nonmineral character of the lands should be determined in administering the grant, and that, depending on the result, patents should issue or indemnity be allowed? We think these questions find clear and decisive answers in the granting act when considered in the light of settled principles of general application to the administration of the public-land laws, including railroad land grants.

Digitized by Google

As has been seen, the exclusion was of "all mineral lands." It was not a mere reservation of minerals, but [684] an exclusion of mineral lands, coupled with a provision that the company should receive other lands, not mineral, in lieu of them. This shows that a determination of the character of the lands, as mineral or nonmineral, was plainly contemplated. Besides, there was an exclusion of all sections and parts of sections "granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, or pre-empted, or otherwise disposed of" when the line of the road should be definitely located, and this was followed by a similar provision for lieu lands. The two exclusions and the indemnity provisions made it practically imperative that there be an authoritative identification of the lands passing under the grant and of those excluded, for otherwise great uncertainty in titles, conflicting claims, and vexatious litigation would be inevitable. Appreciative of this, Congress confided the identification of the lands, both included and excluded, to the Land Department, of which the Secretary of the Interior is the supervising officer. We say their identification was confided to that Department, because the granting act expressly provided for the issue of patents "confirming to said company the right and title to said lands," obviously meaning the lands granted, but not the excluded lands. and also directed that the indemnity lands be selected "under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior," and because that Department was already expressly charged with the administration and execution of all public-land laws as to which it was not specially provided otherwise. Rev. Stat. §§ 441, 453, 2478, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901. pp. 252, 257, 1586. In Catholic Bishop v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 155, 166, 167, 39 L. ed. 931, 936, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779, which related to a grant, the identification and extent of which depended, as here, upon an ascertainment of matters of fact made material by the granting act, this court said: "While there may be no specific reference in the act of 1848 [9 Stat. at L. 323, chap. 177] of questions arising under this grant to the Land Department, yet its administration comes within the scope of the general [685] powers vested in that Department. . . . . It may be laid down as a general rule that, in the absence of some specific provision to the contrary in respect to any particular grant of public land, its administration falls wholly and absolutely within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior. It is not necessary that with each grant there shall go a direction that its administration shall be under the authority of the Land Department. It falls there unless there is express direction to the contrary."

True, the grant now under consideration was in præsenti in the sense that the title to the granted lands, when they should be identified, passed as of the date of the granting act; but, as has been indicated, the act did not itself identify them, and in the nature of things that was not practicable. It was not certain that the road would be constructed, or what lands would be free from other claims at the time of its definite location, or what would be mineral. This led to the use of general descriptive terms which required to be applied to particular lands, should the road be constructed. And so it was that provision was made for issuing patents "confirming to said company the right and title to said lands" after construction. A real necessity would then arise for identifying the lands passing under the grant. This was obviously the purpose of the patents. They were to be in confirmation of the company's "right and title," and so were to be the legally appointed evidence that the lands described in them had passed to the company under the grant.

As it plainly was not intended that patents should issue for excluded lands, to which the company was not to have any right or title, the direction respecting the issue of patents necessarily carried with it the power and the duty of determining in every instance whether the land came within the terms of the grant, or, for any reason, was excluded [686] from it, and of giving appropriate effect to the result by granting or refusing a patent. This is the theory upon which the Land Department uniformly has proceeded in the administration and adjustment of this and other railroad land grants, and this court repeatedly has pronounced it the true theory. The departmental view and practice are shown in Central P. R. Co. v. Valentine, 11 Land Dec. 238, where it was said by Secretary Noble (p 243): "It is not questioned that the Land Department has jurisdiction until patent or certification, as the case may be, to the company, to determine whether any of the lands within the lateral limits of the grant had been, at the time the line of the road was definitely fixed, 'sold, reserved, or otherwise disposed of,' or was subject to 'a pre-emption or homestead claim,' and therefore excepted from the grant. That such jurisdiction exists there can be no doubt, and I am unable to perceive upon what principle of logic or process of reasoning it can be claimed that a like jurisdiction does not exist for the purpose of determining whether the lands are mineral, and for that reason excepted from the grant. Manifestly, the jurisdiction to determine the exception is the same, whether the inquiry is instituted as to the character of the land, or as to its particular status, at the date when the rights of the company attached under the grant." Again (p. 244): "All the lands within the primary limits of a railroad grant do not necessarily pass to the railroad, but only such as are not within the exceptions named in the grant, and Secretary of the Interior is clothed with the authority of determining in the first instance which lands pass by the grant and which do not pass, and this he does by approving lists for certification or patent." And again (p. 246): "Now, this jurisdiction is in the Land Department, and it continues, as we have seen, until the lands have been either patented or certified to, or for the use of, the railroad company. By reason of this jurisdiction [687] it has been the practice of that Department, for many years past, to refuse to issue patents to railroad companies for lands found to be mineral in character at any time before the date of the patent."

Digitized by Google

The same subject came before this court in Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030. The case arose under a grant (13 Stat. at L. 365, chap. 217) containing an exclusion of mineral lands, provisions for indemnity, and a direction for patents, identical with those now under consideration; the grant being followed by a joint resolution (13 Stat. at L. 567) which, referring to that and other grants made at the same session, declared that none "shall be so construed as to embrace mineral lands, which in all cases shall be, and are, reserved exclusively to the United States, unless otherwise specially provided in the act or acts making the grant." On the part of the railroad company it was insisted that the conditions existing when the line of railroad was definitely located should be taken as decisive of whether lands were mineral or otherwise in the sense of the mineral-land exclusion, and much apprehension was expressed lest a different ruling would put the matter so at large that a discovery of mineral at any time in the future would defeat titles supposedly complete. By leave of the court, the Solicitor General appeared on behalf of the government, and took the position shown by the following extract from his brief (154 U. S. 296-298; Brief, pp. 4-7):

"The act itself provides for the issuing of patents to the railroad company, and contemplates, therefore, that the Secretary of the Interior, prior to such issue, shall determine whether the lands sought to be patented come within the terms of the grant; in other words, whether they are in odd sections, unappropriated, not mineral, etc.

"But it is said that the Secretary of the Interior has no authority to patent mineral lands, and that a patent for [688] lands in fact mineral would afford no protection to the railroad company in the event of the future discovery of precious metals therein. This is a mistake. After the Secretary of the Interior has decided that any particular lands are not mineral, and has issued a patent therefor, the title is not liable to be defeated by the subsequent discovery of minerals. The authorities upon this point are cited in Mr. Shields' original brief [pp. 46 to 60].

"The point is also covered by the case of Davis v. Wiebbold, 139 U. S. 507, 35 L. ed. 238, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628, where a patent was issued for a town site, and minerals were subsequently discovered in the lands patented. But it was held that the title was not affected by such discovery, and that the provision of the town-site act (Rev. Stat. § 2392, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1459) that 'no title shall be acquired to any mine of gold, silver, cinnabar, or copper,' does not apply where the mines were discovered after a patent has been issued.

"Mr. Justice Field, delivering the opinion of the court, quotes with approval, at page 521, the following language of Judge Sawyer in Cowell v. Lammers, 10 Sawy. 246, 257, 21 Fed. 200, 206: 'There must be some point of time when the character of the land must be finally determined, and, for the interest of all concerned, there can be no better point to determine this question than at the time of issuing the patent.'

"And again, at page 523, he quotes with approval the following language of Mr. Justice Lamar while Secretary of the Interior [5 Land Dec. 194]: 'The issue of said patent was a determination by the proper tribunal that the lands covered by the patent were granted to said company, and hence, under the proviso of said act, were not mineral at the date of the issuance of said patent.'

Digitized by Google

"And again, page 524: 'The grant or patent, when issued, would thus be held to carry with it the determination of the proper authorities that the land patented was not subject to the exception stated.'

[689] "In Moore v. Smaw, 17 Cal. 199, 79 Am. Dec. 123, 12 Mor. Min. Rep. 418, it was decided, in the first opinion delivered by Mr. Justice Field as chief justice of the supreme court of California, that the patent of the United States passes title to minerals.

"Of course, if the railroad company knows at the time of receiving a patent that the lands covered by it are mineral, a case of fraud is presented which entitles the Secretary of the Interior to have the patent canceled, as was done in Morton v. Nebraska, 21 Wall. 660, 22 L. ed. 639, 12 Mor. Min. Rep. 451, and in Western P. R. Co. v. United States, 108 U. S. 510, 27 L. ed. 806, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802. But, barring cases of fraud, the issuing of a patent by the Secretary of the Interior to the railroad company gives it an absolute title, not liable to be defeated by the subsequent discovery of minerals.

"Here, then, is a method of adjusting the company's grant according to the procedure contemplated by the act itself, which protects fully the interest of both the government and the railroad, and which is in accordance with the practice which has always prevailed in the Department of the Interior." Citing Secretary Noble's decision in Central P. R. Co. v. Valentine, supra.

The court rejected the contention that the conditions existing at the date of definite location were decisive of whether the land was mineral or nonmineral, and held that the question remained an open one until the issue of a patent. In the latter connection the court referred to prior decisions respecting the power and duty of the Land Department, in issuing patents, to inquire and determine whether the lands are of the class prescribed, whether there are other claims to them, and whether the applicant is entitled to a transfer of the title; reaffirmed its ruling in St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 640, 26 L. ed. 875, 876, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673, that a patent not only "operates to pass the title, but is in the nature of an official declaration by that branch of the government to which the alienation of the public lands, under the law, is intrusted, that all the requirements preliminary [690] to its issue have been complied with;" and further said (pp. 328, 329):

"If the Land Department must decide what lands shall not be patented because reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise appropriated, or because not free from preemption or other claims or rights at the time the line of the road is definitely fixed, it must also decide whether lands are excepted because they are mineral lands. . . . If, as suggested by counsel, when the Secretary of the Interior has under consideration a list of lands to be patented to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, it is shown that part of said lands contain minerals of gold and silver, discovered since the company's location of its road opposite thereto, he would not perform his duty, stated in Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 178, 35 L. ed. 974, 980, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258, as the 'supervising agent of the government to do justice to all claims and preserve the rights of the people of the United States,' by certifying the list until corrected in accordance with the discoveries made known to the Department. . . .

"There are undoubtedly many cases arising before the Land Department in the disposition of the public lands where it will be a matter of much difficulty on the part of its officers to ascertain with accuracy whether the lands to be disposed of are to be deemed mineral lands or agricultural lands, and in such cases the rule adopted that they will be considered mineral or agricultural, as they are more valuable in the one class or the other, may be sound. The officers will be governed by the knowledge of the lands obtained at the time as to their real character. The determination of the fact by those officers that they are one or the other will be considered as conclusive."

And then, after quoting approvingly what we have already extracted from Secretary Noble's decision in Central P. R. Co. v. Valentine, supra, it was added (p. 330): "It is true that the patent has been issued [691] in many instances without the investigation and consideration which the public interest requires; but if that has been done without fraud, though unadvisedly by officers of the Government charged with the duty of supervising and attending to the preparation and issue of such patents, the consequence must be borne by the government until, by further legislation, a stricter regard to their duties in that respect can be enforced upon them."

Of the decision in that case it was concisely said in Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 339, 42 L. ed. 1050, 1060, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632: "It is true there was a division of opinion, but that division was only as to the time at which and the means by which the nonmineral character of the land was settled. The minority were of the opinion that the question was settled at the time of the filing of the map of definite location. The majority, relying on the language in the original act of 1864, making the grant, and also on the joint resolution of January 30, 1865, which expressly declared that such grant should not be 'construed as to embrace mineral lands, which in all cases shall be and are reserved exclusively to the United States,' held that the question of mineral or nonmineral was open to consideration up to the time of issuing a patent. But there was no division of opinion as to the question that when the legal title did pass,—and it passed unquestionably by the patent,—it passed free from the contingency of future discovery of minerals."

Digitized by Google

The exclusion of mineral lands is not confined to railroad land grants, but appears in the homestead, desert-land, timber and stone, and other public-land laws, and the settled course of decision in respect of all of them has been that the character of the land is a question for the Land Department, the same as are the qualifications of the applicant and his performance of the acts upon which the right to receive the title depends, and that when a patent issues it is to be taken, upon a collateral attack, as affording conclusive evidence of the nonmineral character of [692] the land and of the regularity of the acts and proceedings resulting in its issue, and, upon a direct attack, as affording such presumptive evidence thereof as to require plain and convincing proof to overcome it. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 641, 26 L. ed. 875, 876, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 673; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Maxwell Land-Grant Case, 121 U. S. 325, 379–381, 30 L. ed. 949, 958, 959, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1015; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 573, 585, 34 L. ed. 1063, 1068, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 174, 37 L. ed. 123, 126, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Burfenning v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 163 U. S. 321, 323, 41 L. ed. 175, 176, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018.

In this respect no distinction is recognized between patents issued under railroad land grants and those issued under other laws; nor is there any reason for such a distinction.

Of course, if the land officers are induced by false proofs to issue a patent for mineral lands under a nonmineral-land law, or if they issue such a patent fraudulently or through a mere inadvertence, a bill in equity, on the part of the government, will lie to annul the patent and regain the title, or a mineral claimant who then had acquired such rights in the land as to entitle him to protection may maintain a bill to have the patentee declared a trustee for him; but such a patent is merely voidable, not void, and cannot be successfully attacked by strangers who had no interest in the land at the time the patent was issued, and were not prejudiced by it. Colorado Coal & I. Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 313, 31 L. ed. 182, 185, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Diamond Coal & Coke Co. v. United States, 233 U. S. 236, 239, ante, 936, 939, 34 Sup. St. Rep. 507; Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 41 L. ed. 754, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Duluth & I. Range R. Co. v. Roy, 173 U. S. 587, 590, 43 L. ed. 820, 822, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549; Hoofnagle v. Anderson, 7 Wheat. 212, 214, 215, 5 L. ed. 437, 438. In the last case this court said, speaking through Chief Justice Marshall: "It is not doubted that a patent appropriates land. Any defects in the preliminary steps which are required by law are cured by the patent. It is a title from its date, and has always been held conclusive against all those whose rights did not commence previous to its emanation. . . . If the patent has been issued irregularly, the government [693] may provide means for repealing it; but no individual has a right to annul it, to consider the land as still vacant, and to appropriate it to himself." Of the same import are Cooper v. Roberts, 18 How. 173, 182, 15 L. ed. 338, 341: Spencer v. Lapsley, 20 How. 264, 273, 15 L. ed. 902, 906; Ehrhardt v. Hogaboom, 115 U. S. 67, 68, 29 L. ed. 346, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1157.

The patent here in question was issued July 10, 1894. Apparently, the government never brought a bill to have it vacated or annulled, and the time for doing so apparently expired in 1900 or 1901. Acts March 3, 1891, 26 Stat. at L. 1093, chap. 559, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1531; March 2, 1896, 29 Stat. at L. 42, chap. 39, § 1, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1603; United States v. Chandler-Dunbar Water Power Co. 209 U. S. 447, 450, 52 L. ed. 881, 887, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579. Apparently, also, the prior mineral claimants never sought to have the patentee declared a trustee for them, for it is admitted that they abandoned their locations. The present mineral claimants, who are assailing the patent, claim under relocations made in March, 1909, more than fourteen years after the date of the patent, and eight years after the apparent expiration of the time within which the government could ask that it be vacated or annulled. Plainly, there is no privity between the earlier and later mineral claimants, for the relocations were not made in furtherance of the prior locations, but in hostility to them. See Rev. Stat. § 2324, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1426.

Digitized by Google

But, referring to the clause in the patent, "excluding and excepting all mineral lands should any such be found in the tracts aforesaid," the contention is made, first, that the patent shows that the Land Department did not consider or determine whether the lands were mineral or not, and, second, that all lands embraced in the patent which then had been or thereafter should be discovered to be mineral were expressly excepted from the operation of the patent and therefore remained public lands. This contention must be tested in the light of the established practice in the Land Department in such matters and of the office which the granting act intended the patents to perform. The clause relied upon is not peculiar to this [694] patent or to those issued under this grant, but appears in all the patents issued from 1866 to 1904 under railroad land grants containing an exclusion of mineral lands. Its first mention in any public document was in the annual report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office for 1868. It was there said (pp. 152-154):

"In every case reported from the district land officers of selections made under the acts of 1862 and 1864 [12 Stat. at L. 492, chap. 120, 13 Stat. at L. 358, chap. 216] for the Pacific Railroad, the agent of the company in the first instance is required to state in his affidavit that the selections are not interdicted, mineral, nor reserved lands, and are of the character contemplated by the grant. Upon the filing of lists with such affidavits attached, it is made the duty of registers and receivers to certify to the correctness of the selections in the particulars mentioned and in other respects. They subsequently undergo scrutiny in this office, are tested by our plats, and by all the data on our files, sufficient time elapsing after the selections are made for the presentation of any objections to the Department before final action is taken; and to more effectually guard the matter, there is inserted in all patents issued to said railroad company a clause to the following effect: 'Yet excluding and excepting from the transfer by these presents all mineral lands, should any such be found to exist in the tracts described in this patent, this exception, as required by statute, not extending to coal and iron land.' . . . It has been suggested to this office that the government should appoint a commission to segregate the mineral from the residue of the public lands; but let anyone consider the vast amount of money expended by practical miners in excavations to test the value of mines, subsequently abandoned as worthless, and some idea may be formed of the time and expense such an undertaking would require, and how little confidence it would be likely to inspire. . . . The regulation of filing affidavits is simply a means of ascertaining the class [695] to which a particular tract of land may belong, and although it may not be the best that could be devised, it is the only practical mode that has suggested itself to meet the difficulty of disposing of different classes of land mingled together in such a way as to render it frequently impossible to tell, without great labor and expense, whether a particular subdivision belongs to one or the other class."

In addition to what was thus said respecting the affidavits and certificates required and the examination of whatever data were available, regulations were promulgated calling attention, among other things, to the mineral-land exclusion in the grants, directing that the lists be carefully and critically examined by the register and receiver, and mineral lands be excluded therefrom, and prescribing forms of affidavits and certificates reciting, among other things, that the listed lands were nonmineral and of the character contemplated by the grant.[2] It also appears from the published land decisions that hearings were often had in the local land offices to determine whether lands sought to be listed were mineral or otherwise, and that appeals in such matters were not infrequently heard by the Secretary of the Interior.[3] From all this it is manifest that the excepting clause never was intended to take the place of an inquiry into the character of the land, or to dispense with a determination of that question, and that its presence in the patents does not at all signify that no inquiry or determination was had. On the contrary, it appears that it was the accustomed practice to exact proofs respecting the character of the [696] land, to give opportunity for contests, and to give effect to whatever information was obtained. At most, according to the Commissioner's report, the clause was intended to serve merely as an additional safeguard; and its words suggest that its use was with an eye to future discoveries rather than to existing conditions.

[2] See 2 Lester's Land Laws, 362-365; 2 Copp's Land Laws, 715, 719, 727; 19 Land Dec. 21.

[3] See Re Central P. R. Co. 8 Land Dec. 30; Central P. R. Co. v. Valentine, 11 Land Dec. 238; North Star Min. Co. v. Central P. R. Co. 12 Land. Dec. 608; Southern P. R. Co. v. Allen Gold Min. Co. 13 Land Dec. 165; Re California & O. R. Co. 16 Land Dec. 262; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 19 Land Dec. 188.

Digitized by Google

Coming to its effect in a patent, which is of more importance than how it came to be there, we find that this question came before the Land Department in the case of Re Spong, 5 Land Dec. 193. The tract in question had been patented to the Central Pacific Railroad Company under its grant, the patent containing the excepting clause. Spong applied at the local land office to enter the tract under the mining law, claiming that it was mineral and therefore excepted from the patent. The local officers refused his application, assigning as a reason that the title had passed to the company under the patent, and the Commissioner of the General Land Office affirmed their decision. The matter was then taken before Secretary Lamar, who sustained the decisions below, saying (p. 194): "The issue of said patent was a determination by the proper tribunal that the lands covered by the patent were granted to said company, and hence, under the proviso of said act, were not mineral at the date of the issuance of said patent." Again (p. 195): "In the case of Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 393, 29 L. ed. 424, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95, the court reviewed and commented on the several acts of Congress relative to the disposition of mineral lands, and held that the officers of the Land Department have no authority to insert in a patent any other terms than those of conveyance, with recitals showing a compliance with the law and the conditions which it prescribed." And again (p. 196): "While the exception of mineral lands from the grant to said company is clear and explicit, yet it does not appear from a careful consideration of the language of said grant that Congress intended to grant only such lands as may, [697] after the lapse of an indefinite number of years, prove to be agricultural in character." The question was also presented in Courtright v. Wisconsin C. R. Co. 19 Land Dec. 410. The land involved had been patented under a railroad land grant like that now before us, the patent containing the same exception. Courtright, claiming that the land was mineral, and was known to be such since before the patent, insisted that it remain public land, and sought to make entry of it. The local officers held that this could not be done in the presence of the patent, and their ruling was sustained by the Commissioner. On appeal, Secretary Smith affirmed the action of the other officers, saying (p. 413):

"The issuing of patent is a determination by the Department that the lands embraced therein are of the character described in the grant.

. . . . . .

"If it was the intention of the officers of the government to leave as an open question the character of the lands embraced in the patent, then they acted without authority; for when patent issued, that was the end of the jurisdiction of the Department over the lands. The exception contained in the patent went beyond 'giving expression to the intent of the statute,' as construed by the supreme court, and added a restriction upon the grant which is not to be found in the granting act.

"I am therefore of the opinion that the Department has not jurisdiction to determine the character of the land in controversy after issuance of patent. If it be true that the lands in question contain minerals in paying quantities, and that this fact was known to the officers or agents of the company at the date of selection, or date of patent, and they failed to make the fact known to the Department, such conduct was a fraud upon the government, and the courts can grant relief."

It thus appears that the Land Department has regarded [698] the issuing of such a patent as a determination of the nonmineral character of the land, and as effectually and unconditionally passing the title. There has been no departmental decision to the contrary. Indeed, on December 10, 1903, the Secretary of the Interior directed that the excepting clause be omitted from future patents, because he regarded it as without any warrant in law and void. Re Northern P. R. Co. 32 Land Dec. 342.

This clause was extensively considered by Circuit Judge Sawyer in Cowell v. Lammers, 10 Sawy. 246, 21 Fed. 200. The patent in that case had been issued under the Central Pacific grant. The suit was to enjoin a trespass in the nature of waste, the complainant being the grantee of the railroad company and the defendant a miner who had located part of the patented tract as a lode mining claim. He had applied to the Land Department to enter the claim under the mining law, and his application had been rejected because the patent was outstanding. In granting the injunction the court said (p. 206): "The lands are either patentable under the act or they are not. If patentable, the issue of a patent is authorized. If not patentable, it is unauthorized, and the issue of a patent is, clearly, as conclusive evidence of the determination of the fact of patentability, upon a collateral attack, in the one case as in the other. Suppose it should afterwards turn out that all is mineral land. The exception would be as broad as the grant, and be void as an exception. Is it any the less so, in this class of cases, as to a part? . . . There must be some point in time when the character of the land must be finally determined; and, for the interest of all concerned, there can be no better point to determine this question than at the time of issuing the patent." Again (p. 208): "A patent upon its face should either grant or not grant. It must be seen from a construction of the language of the grant [patent] itself whether anything is granted or not, and, if anything be granted, what [699] it is. There is no authority to issue a patent which, in effect, only says if the lands herein described hereafter turn out to be agricultural lands, then I grant them, but if they turn out to be mineral lands, then I do not grant them. Such a patent would be so uncertain that it would be impossible to determine, from the face of the patent, whether anything is granted or not."

Digitized by Google

In principle, the effect of the excepting clause in the patent is not an open one, under the decisions of this court. It is foreclosed by what has been held upon full consideration. In Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 29 L. ed. 424, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95, where was involved the right to certain valuable town-site improvements upon land patented as a placer mining claim, the contention was advanced that, as the owner of the improvements was the prior occupant, the patent should have contained a reservation excluding them and all rights necessary to their enjoyment from its operation; but the contention was declared untenable, the court saying (p. 406): "The land officers, who are merely agents of the law, had no authority to insert in the patent any other terms than those of conveyance, with recitals showing a compliance with the law and the conditions which it prescribed." The case of Davis v. Wiebbold, 139 U. S. 507, 35 L. ed. 238, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628, directly involved the validity of a clause in a town-site patent declaring that no title should be thereby "acquired to any mine of gold, silver, cinnabar, or copper." By the mining laws mineral lands were withdrawn from disposal under other laws, and the town-site law specially declared that no title to any mine of gold, silver, cinnabar, or copper should be acquired under its provisions. The defendant claimed under the town-site patent and a deed of release and quitclaim from the probate judge, who was the town-site trustee, and the plaintiff claimed under a later patent for a mining claim located upon part of the town site, and based upon an actual discovery of a valuable vein of gold after the issue of the town-site patent. [700] The decision and the reasons for it are fully comprehended in the following extracts from the opinion:

(P. 519.) "The exceptions of mineral lands from pre-emption and settlement and from grants to states for universities and schools, for the construction of public buildings, and in aid of railroads and other works of internal improvement, are not held to exclude all lands in which minerals may be found, but only those where the mineral is in sufficient quantity to add to their richness and to justify expenditures for its extraction, and known to be so at the date of the grant." (As shown in Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030, the word "grant" here means the patent, and not the act making the grant.)

(P. 524.) "It would seem from this uniform construction of that department[4] of the government specially intrusted with supervision of proceedings required for the alienation of the public lands, including those that embrace minerals, and also of the courts of the mining states, Federal and state, whose attention has been called to the subject, that the exception of mineral lands from grant in the acts of Congress should be considered to apply only to such lands as were at the time of the grant [patent] known to be so valuable for their minerals as to justify expenditure for their extraction. The grant or patent, when issued, would thus be held to carry with it the determination of the proper authorities that the land patented was not subject to the exception stated. There has been no direct adjudication upon this point by this court, but this conclusion is a legitimate inference from several of its decisions. It was implied in the opinion in Deffeback v. Hawke, already referred to, and in the cases of the Colorado Coal & I. Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 328, 31 L. ed. 182, 190, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131, and United States v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 128 U. S. 673, 682, 32 L. ed. 571, 575, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195."

[701] (P. 525.) "It would in many instances be a great impediment to the progress of such towns if the titles to the lots occupied by their inhabitants were subject to be overthrown by a subsequent discovery of mineral deposits under their surface. If their title would not protect them against a discovery of mines in them, neither would it protect them against the invasion of their property for the purpose of exploring for mines. The temptation to such exploration would be according to the suspected extent of the minerals, and being thus subject to

[4] The reference is to several Land Department decisions cited and reviewed in that opinion.

Digitized by Google

indiscriminate invasion, the land would be to one having the title poor and valueless, just in proportion to the supposed richness and abundance of its products. We do not think that any such results were contemplated by the act of Congress, or that any construction should be given to the provision in question which could lead to such results."

(Pp. 527, 528.) "But we do not attach any importance to the exception, for the officers of the Land Department, being merely agents of the government, have no authority to insert in a patent any other terms than those of conveyance, with recitals showing compliance with the conditions which the law prescribes. Could they insert clauses in patents at their own discretion they could limit or enlarge their effect without warrant of law. The patent of a mining claim carries with it such rights to the land which includes the claim as the law confers, and no others, and these rights can neither be enlarged nor diminished by any reservations of the officers of the Land Department, resting for their fitness only upon the judgment of those officers. Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 406, 29 L. ed. 423, 427, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95. . . . The laws of Congress provide that valuable mineral deposits in lands of the United States shall be open to exploration and purchase. They do not provide, and never have provided, that such mineral deposits in lands which have ceased to be public, and become the property of [702] private individuals, can be patented under any proceedings before the Land Department, or otherwise."

The case of Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 42 L. ed. 1050, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632, related to a claim or right, conferred by statute, entitling its owner to select in a body about 100,000 acres "of vacant land, not mineral," in New Mexico, it being the duty of the Surveyor General "to make survey and location of the lands so selected," and his action being subject to the supervision of the Commissioner of the General Land Office. The owner of the right, having made the selection, applied to the Surveyor General in 1862 for the survey and location of the tract, and that officer reported the application to the Commissioner, saying in that connection that he had theretofore been informed that the purpose of the owner was to make such a selection as "would cover rich minerals in the mountains." The Commissioner replied that it was essential to the approval of the application by him that "it be accompanied by the certificates of the Surveyor General and the register and receiver that the land selected is vacant and not mineral." Such certificates were furnished, but the Commissioner hesitated to act upon them because they were not based upon personal knowledge, but information informally elicited from others, the lands being remote and in an unsurveyed region. Finally, the Commissioner concluded that "the difficulty" could "be avoided" by directing the Surveyor General to proceed, and in approving the survey to add to his certificate of approval "the special reservation stipulated by the statute, but not to embrace mineral land." Being instructed accordingly, the Surveyor General, after the field notes and plat of the survey were completed, indorsed upon the field notes a mere approval, and upon the plat an approval qualified by the words, "subject to the conditions and limitations" of the statute, naming it. The field notes and plat were then forwarded to and accepted by the Commissioner. [703] No patent was issued, the approved survey taking the place of one under the statute. A few years later, when inquiries were made respecting the right of prospectors to take advantage of mineral discoveries in the tract, the Commissioner took the position that the approval of the survey operated as a determination that the land was of the class and character designated in the act; that the title had passed from the government, and that, notwithstanding the apparently conditional approval, the Land Department was without authority to reopen the question of the character of the land. The case, as presented to this court, involved the possession of a mine located within the tract after the approval of the survey. The plaintiff claimed under the selection of 1862 and the defendant under the mining laws, the controversy turning upon the effect to be given to the condition in the approval of the survey. In disposing of that question the court reaffirmed and applied its rulings in Deffeback v. Hawke and Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. supra, and said (p. 337):

"What is the significance of, and what effect can be given to, the clause inserted in the certificate of approval of the plat that it was subject to the conditions and provisions of the act of Congress? We are of opinion that the insertion of any such stipulation and limitation was beyond the power of the Land Department. Its duty was to decide, and not to decline to decide; to execute, and not to refuse to execute, the will of Congress. It could not deal with the land as an owner and prescribe the conditions upon which title might be transferred. It was an agent, and not principal. Congress had made a grant, authorized a selection within three years, and directed the Surveyor General to make survey and location, and within the general powers of the Land Department it was its duty to see that such grant was carried into effect and that a full title to the proper land was made. Undoubtedly [704] it could refuse to approve a location on the ground that the land was mineral. It was its duty to decide the question,—a duty which it could not avoid or evade. It could not say to the locator that it approved the location provided no mineral should ever thereafter be discovered, and disapproved it if mineral were discovered; in other words, that the locator must take the chances of future discovery of minerals. It was a question for its action, and its action at the time. The general statutes of Congress in respect to homestead, pre-emption, and town-site locations provide that they should be made upon lands that are nonmineral, and in approving any such entry and issuing a patent therefor could it be tolerated for a moment that the Land Department might limit the grant and qualify the title by a stipulation that if thereafter mineral should be discovered the title should fail? It cannot in that way avoid the responsibility of deciding and giving to the party seeking to make the entry a full title to the land, or else denying it altogether."

Digitized by Google

(P. 341.) "But, it is said, no patent was issued in this case, and therefore the holding in the Barden Case, that the issue of a patent puts an end to all questions, does not apply here. But the significance of a patent is that it is evidence of the transfer of the legal title. There is no magic in the word 'patent,' or in the instrument which the word defines. By it the legal title passes. and when, by whatsoever instrument, and in whatsoever manner, that is accomplished, the same result follows as though a formal patent were issued."

(P. 343) "While the approval entered upon the plat by the Surveyor General under the direction of the Land Department was in terms 'subject to the conditions and provisions of § 6 of the act of Congress, approved June 21, 1860' [12 Stat. at L. 72, chap. 167], such limitation was beyond the power of executive officers to impose."

According to the statute relating to placer mining claims [705] the patent, save in an instance not material here, should contain an exception of any vein or lode known to exist within the boundaries of the claim at the date of the application for patent. but in the early patents the exception was so stated that it embraced any vein or lode claimed or known to exist at the date of the patent. The change was a material one, not only because of the difference between "claimed" and "known," but also because a year or so sometimes elapsed between the date of the application and that of the patent, and in the meantime a vein or lode might be discovered within the boundaries of the placer claim. Ultimately cases presenting the question of the effect of the exception as stated in the patents came before this court, and it was held that "the exception of the statute cannot be extended by those whose duty it is to supervise the issuing of the patent." Sullivan v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 143 U. S. 431, 441, 36 L. ed. 214, 217, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555, and cases cited.

These decisions are applicable and controlling here. The reasoning upon which they proceed compels their reaffirmance; and, besides, they have come to be recognized as establishing a rule of property. Not only has the Land Department accepted them as determinative of the invalidity of the excepting clause now before us, but innumerable titles within the limits of the western railroad land grants have been acquired with a like understanding and are now held in the justifiable belief that they are impregnable.

We come now to a contention which seeks to distinguish patents under this grant from those under other railroad grants. It is that the insertion of the excepting clause in the former was expressly authorized by Congress. Evidently this has not been the view of the Land Department. It not only began to use the clause before this grant was made, but used it in all patents of this class; and when, in December, 1903, its use was discontinued, the order embraced this grant along with the others. But passing [706] this as suggestive but not controlling, we turn to the joint resolution of June 28, 1870, upon which the contention is rested. Its chief purpose was to sanction a route which the Secretary of the Interior had disapproved. Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 183 U. S. 519, 523, 46 L. ed. 307, 310, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154. It reads as follows (16 Stat. at L. 382, No. 87):

"That the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California may construct its road and telegraph line, as near as may be, on the route indicated by the map filed by said company in the Department of the Interior on the third day of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven; and upon the construction of each section of said road, in the manner and within the time provided by law, and notice thereof being given by the company to the Secretary of the Interior, he shall direct an examination of each such section by commissioners to be appointed by the President, as provided in the act making a grant of land to said company, approved July twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six [14 Stat. at L. 299, chap. 278], and upon the report of the commissioners to the Secretary of the Interior that such section of said railroad and telegraph line has been constructed as required by law, it shall be the duty of the said Secretary of the Interior to cause patents to be issued to said company for the sections of land coterminous to each constructed section reported on as aforesaid, to the extent and amount granted to said company by the said act of July twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, expressly saving and reserving all the rights of actual settlers, together with the other conditions and restrictions provided for in the third section of said act."

Digitized by Google

It will be observed that there is no direct mention of mineral lands, nor any indirect reference to them save such as is involved in the general mention of the "conditions and restrictions" of § 3 of the granting act.

As stated in one of the briefs, the contention is this: "The resolution provided in express terms that these [707] patents should cover all of the lands coterminous with the constructed sections of the railroad, and in effect provided that the patents should save and reserve the lands excepted by the provisions of § 3 of the original granting act, which included the exception of mineral lands." In other words, it is meant that the resolution required that all the odd-numbered sections within the primary limits of the grant, and coterminous with the constructed road, should be patented to the railroad company without any inquiry or investigation to determine which of those sections were sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, pre-empted, or otherwise disposed of at the date of definite location, or were mineral, and that a general exception conforming to that in the granting act was to be inserted in the patents. This would mean that lands already sold were to be patented to the company, that reserved lands were to be patented to it, that lands occupied by homestead settlers or pre-empted were to be dealt with in the same way; in short, that the grant, instead of being administered and adjusted in an orderly way by the officers customarily charged with that duty and in possession of the records and data without which little could be done, was to be administered and adjusted in the courts through the ordinary channels of litigation. Manifestly, that is not what Congress contemplated. It did not intend that the company's title should be so uncertain, and clearly it did not intend that the title to lands already sold or those reserved should be thus beclouded, or that homesteaders and preemptioners should be placed in a situation which would be so embarrassing and discouraging to them. What would become of the indemnity provisions under that theory? Certainly, it was not intended that the company should receive a patent for lands in the place limits and also indemnity for the same lands. We think there is a more reasonable view of the provision in the resolution than the one suggested. Omitting [708] its saving clause, the provision is not materially different from § 4 of the original act, being the section providing for patents. As already said, the chief purpose of the resolution was to sanction a route—the one indicated on the map mentioned. The Secretary of the Interior had disapproved it because not within prior authorization. If it was to be approved, it was but reasonable that the existing right to the patents should be applied to it. This evidently is what was intended. Another matter also claimed consideration. Three years had passed since the filing of the map, and in the meantime the situation had been complicated by a withdrawal of the adjacent lands, a revocation of the withdrawal, and a suspension of the revoking order. The validity of the route shown on the map and of the withdrawal had been the subject of differing opinions, and some of the lands had come to be occupied by settlers, whose status was uncertain in view of the withdrawal. See 16 Ops. Atty. Gen. 80. As reported to the Senate by one of its committees, the resolution was in its present form without the saving clause. That was added when the resolution was under consideration.[5] Without it the resolution had two purposes; one, to sanction the route which had been pronounced unauthorized, and the other, to make secure the right to patents along that route. What was the purpose of the saving clause? Its words and the situation just mentioned leave no doubt that one purpose was to take care of the actual settlers then on the lands. Another, equally plain, was to require that the conditions and restrictions, that is, the exclusions and exceptions, of § 3 (the granting section) of the original act, be applied to that route. But how were these purposes to be accomplished? Was it to be by patenting all the lands to the railroad company, even those occupied by [709] actual settlers, and inserting saving clauses in the patents? Or was it to be by giving effect to the rights of the settlers and to the exclusions and exceptions in the normal and rational way; that is, by patenting to the company

[5] Congressional Globe, 41st Cong. 2d Sess. parts 4 and 5, pp. 3349–3351, 3828–3830, 3950–3953.

Digitized by Google

no lands occupied by actual settlers or otherwise excluded or excepted from the grant? The latter seems to us the only admissible conclusion.[6]

Lastly, it is urged that the railroad company accepted the patent with the mineral exception therein, and also expressly agreed that the latter should be effective as one of the terms of the patent, and so is bound by it, or at least estopped to deny its validity. There are insuperable objections to this contention. The terms of the patent whereby the government transfers its title to public land are not open to negotiation or agreement. The patentee has no voice in the matter. It in no wise depends upon his consent or will. He must abide the action of those whose duty and responsibility are fixed by law. Neither can the land officers enter into any agreement upon the subject. They are not principals, but agents of the law, and must heed only its will. Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 406, 29 L. ed. 423, 427, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Davis v. Wiebbold, 139 U. S. 507, 527, 35 L. ed. 238, 245, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 337, 343, 42 L. ed. 1050, 1059, 1061, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632. Nor can they indirectly give effect to what is unauthorised when done directly. Of course, if they enter into any forbidden arrangement whereby public land is transferred to one not entitled to it, the patent may be annulled at the suit of the government; but they cannot alter the effect which the law gives to a patent while it is outstanding.

Taking up the several questions in the light of what we have here said, we answer them as follows:

1. Did the said grant to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company include mineral lands which were known to [710] be such at or prior to the date of the patent of July 10, 1894?

Answer.—Mineral lands, known to be such at or prior to the issue of patent, were not included in the grant, but excluded from it, and the duty of determining the character of the lands was cast primarily on the Land Department, which was charged with the issue of patents.

2. Does a patent to a railroad company under a grant which excludes mineral lands, as in the present case, but which is issued without any investigation upon the part of the officers of the Land Office or of the Department of the Interior as to the quality of the land, whether agricultural or mineral, and without hearing upon or determination of the quality of the lands, operate to convey lands which are thereafter ascertained to be mineral?

Answer.—A patent issued in such circumstances is irregularly issued, undoubtedly so; but, as it is the act of a legally constituted tribunal, and is done within its jurisdiction, it is not void, and therefore passes the title (Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 174, 175, 37 L. ed. 123, 126, 127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271), subject to the right of the government to attack the patent by a direct suit for its annulment if the land was known to be mineral when the patent issued (McLaughlin v. United States, 107 U. S. 526, 27 L. ed. 621, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Western P. R. Co. v. United States, 108 U. S. 510, 27 L. ed. 806, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802).

3. Is the reservation and exception contained in the grant in the patent to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company void and of no effect?

Answer.—The mineral land exception in the patent is void.

4. If the reservation of mineral lands as expressed in the patent is void, then is the patent, upon a collateral attack, a conclusive and official declaration that the land is agricultural, and that all the requirements preliminary to the issuance of the patent have been complied with?

Answer.—It is conclusive upon a collateral attack.

[711] 5. Is petroleum or mineral oil within the meaning of the term "mineral," as it was used in said acts of Congress reserving mineral land from the railroad land grants?

Answer.—Petroleum lands are mineral lands within the meaning of that term in railroad land grants.

6. Does the fact that the appellant was not in privity with the government in any respect at the time when the patent was issued to the railroad company prevent him from attacking the patent on the ground of fraud, error, or irregularity in the issuance thereof as so alleged in the bill?

Answer.—It does.

7. If the mineral exception clause was inserted in the patent with the consent of the defendant, Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and under an understanding and agreement between it and the officers of the Interior Department that said clause should be effective to keep in the United States title to such of the lands described in the patent as were in fact mineral, are the defendants, Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Kern Trading & Oil Company, estopped to deny the validity of said clause?

Answer.—No; such an agreement is of no greater force as an estoppel than the [6] See Tome v. Southern P. R. Co. 5 Copp's L. O. 85; Southern P. R. Co. v. Rahall, 3 Land Dec. 321.

Digitized by Google

exception in the patent. The latter being void, the patent passes the title and is not open to collateral attack, or to attack by strangers whose only claim was initiated after the issue of the patent.

---

[712] JOSEPH HULL, the Prairie Pebble Phosphate Company, and the Savannah Trust Company, Appts.,
v.
ARTHUR E. BURR, Frank L. Simpson, and J. Howard Edwards.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 712–725.)

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals — Federal question.

1. A suit arises under the laws of the United States within the meaning of the Judicial Code, § 24, so as to permit an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a decree of a circuit court of appeals in the cause where it is brought in equity by persons not parties to a bankruptcy proceeding, who set up rights in opposition to the adjudication in bankruptcy and the appointment of trustees therein, and seek to have such trustees restrained from prosecuting an equity suit against them in a state court, insisting that the bankruptcy proceedings were void for want of jurisdiction, and that the entire proceedings were a fraud upon the bankruptcy act, and that, even if the proceedings were valid, the appointment of the trustees was void.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 790–807, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Pleading — relief under — prayer for general relief.

2. A prayer for general relief should be treated as abandoned where no right to other than the specific relief prayed was brought to the attention either of the Federal district court of original jurisdiction or of the circuit court of appeals.

[For other cases, see Pleading, I. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — enjoining proceedings in state courts.

3. The prohibition of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 720, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581, against injunctions to stay proceedings in state courts, prevents persons claiming to be the owners of certain property in Florida from maintaining in a Federal district court in Massachusetts a suit to restrain trustees in bankruptcy, appointed by that court, from asserting or claiming in any court or place any right, title, or interest in the property, where there is pending in a Florida state court a suit with the parties reversed, to establish an equitable claim or interest in the property in the trustees in bankruptcy, as against complainants in the present suit, who now allege the invalidity of the bankruptcy proceedings, and assert that for that reason any decree that may be made by the state court will not bind the bankrupt.

[For other cases, see Courts, 1490–1498, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — enjoining proceedings in state courts.

4. A suit by persons claiming to be the owners of certain property to restrain trustees in bankruptcy from maintaining a suit against them in a state court to establish an equitable claim or interest therein cannot be deemed to be in aid of a prior judgment in an ejectment action in a Federal court, and therefore excluded from the prohibition of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 720, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581, against injunctions to stay proceedings in state courts, where the ejectment suit was commenced after the adjudication of bankruptcy, and the bill does not aver that the judgment cut off the equitable rights of the bankrupt, but declares that if the bankrupt had any title to the property, legal or equitable, at the time of the adjudication of bankruptcy, such title still remains in the bankrupt, and it is not alleged that the claim of equitable right on the part of the bankrupt is inconsistent with the judgment, or should be subordinated to it, and the trustees were not parties to the ejectment action, and the bankrupt is not a party to the present suit.

[For other cases, see Courts, 1490–1498, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 767.]

Argued March 3, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the District of Massachusetts sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing the bill in a suit to restrain trustees in bankruptcy from asserting an equitable claim or interest in certain property. Affirmed.

See same case below, 124 C. C. A. 135, 206 Fed. 4; on rehearing, 125 C. C. A. 221, 207 Fed. 543.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George C. Bedell argued the cause, and, with Mr. H. Bisbee, filed a brief for appellants:

Jurisdiction on the ground of Federal questions appears upon the face of the bill of complaint.

Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co. 200 U. S. 411, 50 L. ed. 529, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 12, 19, 50 L. ed. 348, 352, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Williams

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court in bankruptcy cases—see note to James v. Stone, 57 L. ed. U. S. 573.

Digitized by Google

v. Heard, 140 U. S. 529, 535, 536, 35 L. ed. 550, 553, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885; Lovell v. Newman, 227 U. S. 413, 421, 57 L. ed. 577, 581, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375.

There must be a suit pending in the state court between the same parties, raising the same questions, and for like relief, when the Federal suit is filed, or U. S. Rev. Stat. § 720, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581, does not apply. This is self-evident.

Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 717, 718, 20 L. ed. 671, 672; Pendleton v. Russell, 144 U. S. 645, 647, 36 L. ed. 576, 577, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 279, 38 L. ed. 989, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019; Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 335, 345, 18 L. ed. 257, 261; Hunt v. New York Cotton Exch. 205 U. S. 323–339, 51 L. ed. 821–827, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 21, 34, 27 L. ed. 361, 365, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; David Lupton's Sons Co. v. Automobile Club, 225 U. S. 500, 56 L. ed. 1181, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 711, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 699; Fisk v. Union P. R. Co. 10 Blatchf. 518, Fed. Cas. No. 4,830; Live Stock Dealers' & Butchers' Asso. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 1 Abb. (U. S.) 406, Fed. Cas. No. 8,408; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 715, 716, 20 L. ed. 666, 671; Riverdale Cotton Mills v. Alabama & G. Mfg. Co. 198 U. S. 196, 197, 49 L. ed. 1015, 1016, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629; Shields v. Thomas, 18 How. 262, 263, 15 L. ed. 372; French v. Hay (French v. Stewart) 22 Wall. 250, 22 L. ed. 857.

The appellants had the constitutional right to resort to the Federal court for relief, and to a decree on the merits of their bill, even though another suit for the same or different relief was pending in the state court.

Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 21, 34, 27 L. ed. 361, 365, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Chicot County v. Sherwood, 148 U. S. 534, 37 L. ed. 548, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695; McClellan v. Carland, 217 U. S. 269–282, 54 L. ed. 762–767, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 501; David Lupton's Sons Co. v. Automobile Club, 225 U. S. 489, 500, 56 L. ed. 1177, 1181, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 711, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 699.

The Federal court is bound to proceed to final judgment on the merits in all cases within its jurisdiction, and the pending of a suit in a state court is no bar to proceedings concerning the same matter in a Federal court having jurisdiction thereof.

McClellan v. Carland, 217 U. S. 282, 54 L. ed. 767, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 501; Chicot County v. Sherwood, 148 U. S. 534, 37 L. ed. 548, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695; Boston & M. R. Co. v. Gokey, 210 U. S. 155, 162, 52 L. ed. 1002, 1004, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657.

A litigant cannot be dismissed from the Federal court for the reasons stated in the opinions of the court below.

Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 21–34, 27 L. ed. 361–365, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Boston & M. R. Co. v. Gokey, 210 U. S. 155, 162, 52 L. ed. 1002, 1004, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; Chicot County v. Sherwood, 148 U. S. 529, 37 L. ed. 546, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695; David Lupton's Sons Co. v. Automobile Club, 225 U. S. 489–500, 56 L. ed. 1177–1181, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 711, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 699; McClellan v. Carland, 217 U. S. 269–282, 54 L. ed. 762–767, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 501.

That the same questions may be raised in the state court does not make U. S. Rev. Stat. § 720, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581, applicable.

Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 335, 345, 18 L. ed. 257, 261; Hunt v. New York Cotton Exch. 205 U. S. 323–339, 51 L. ed. 821–827, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529; Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 279, 38 L. ed. 989, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019; Pendleton v. Russell, 144 U. S. 645, 647, 36 L. ed. 576, 577, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 717, 718, 20 L. ed. 671, 672.

Courts, under a prayer for general relief, may grant effective relief without violating § 720.

Fisk v. Union P. R. Co. 10 Blatchf. 518, Fed. Cas. No. 4,830; Live Stock Dealers' & Butchers' Asso. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 1 Abb. (U. S.) 406, Fed. Cas. No. 8,408; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 699–716, 720–735, 20 L. ed. 666–678.

Section 720 is not applicable because one object of the bill in the court below was to obtain the benefit of a Federal judgment in Florida.

French v. Hay (French v. Stewart) 22 Wall. 250, 251, 22 L. ed. 857; Julian v. Central Trust Co. 193 U. S. 93–112, 48 L. ed. 629–639, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Riverdale Cotton Mills v. Alabama & G. Mfg. Co. 198 U. S. 188–196, 49 L. ed. 1008–1015, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629; Shields v. Thomas, 18 How. 253–262, 15 L. ed. 368–372; Story, Eq. Pl. 429–431.

Mr. Frank L. Simpson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. E. R. Gunby and James F. Glen, filed a brief for appellees:

Complainants claim no right under the laws of the United States, but merely assert that defendants do not possess the capacity they claim under the laws of the United States, and the decree of the circuit court of appeals is final.

Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 212 U. S. 477, 53 L. ed. 605, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. v. Montana Ore Purchasing Co. 188 U. S. 632, 47 L. ed. 626, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 313, 50

Digitized by Google

L. ed. 1046, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Hanley, 198 U. S. 292, 49 L. ed. 1056, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 321, 44 L. ed. 486, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Shulthis v. McDougal, 225 U. S. 561, 56 L. ed. 1205, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 704.

Section 720 of the Revised Statutes, now § 265 of the Judicial Code, forbade the maintenance of the suit.

Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 42 L. ed. 807, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Re Chetwood, 165 U. S. 443, 41 L. ed. 782, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; Dial v. Reynolds, 96 U. S. 340, 24 L. ed. 644; Diggs v. Wolcott, 4 Cranch, 179, 2 L. ed. 587; Evans v. Gorman, 115 Fed. 399; Haines v. Carpenter, 91 U. S. 254, 23 L. ed. 345; Julian v. Central Trust Co. 193 U. S. 93, 48 L. ed. 629, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Molony v. Massachusetts Ben. Asso. 53 Fed. 209; Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 38 L. ed. 981, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 12 L. ed. 841; Sargent v. Helton, 115 U. S. 348, 29 L. ed. 412, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572, 13 Sawy. 387, 36 Fed. 366; Riggs v. Johnson County, 6 Wall. 195, 18 L. ed. 776; United States ex rel. Moses v. Keokuk, 6 Wall. 517, 18 L. ed. 934; United States v. Parkhurst-Davis Mercantile Co. 176 U. S. 317, 44 L. ed. 485, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Wagner v. Drake, 31 Fed. 849; Whitney v. Wilder, 4 C. C. A. 510, 13 U. S. App. 180, 54 Fed. 554.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellants, Joseph Hull, the Prairie Pebble Phosphate Company (hereinafter referred to as the Prairie Company), and the Savannah Trust Company, brought this action in equity in the district court of the United States for the district of Massachusetts against appellees, Arthur E. Burr, Frank L. Simpson, and J. Howard Edwards, who are trustees in bankruptcy of the Port Tampa Phosphate Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state of Massachusetts. The bill was filed in August, 1912, and, defendants having demurred, an amended bill was filed, and it was stipulated that the demurrer should stand as a demurrer to the substituted bill. The district court entered a decree sustaining the demurrer and dismissing the bill (124 C. C. A. 135, 206 Fed. 1). The circuit court of appeals affirmed the decree (124 C. C. A. 138, 206 Fed. 4), and denied a petition for rehearing (207 Fed. 543).

The amended bill, besides showing diversity of citizenship, avers in substance as follows: That prior to the transactions in question, Stewart and Meminger were the owners in fee simple of a tract of land in Polk county, Florida, containing 440 acres, together with certain buildings and personal property situate upon it; that on May 22, 1905, in consummation of a prior contract, they conveyed all their right, title, and interest in the property to Hull by deed duly recorded, which vested in him a good legal title in fee simple to the real estate, with full title to the personal property and the right to possession as against all persons, "and his recorded paper title to all the said properties was perfect;" that before the delivery of the deed by Stewart and Meminger to Hull the Port Tampa [714] Company claimed to own some equitable interest in the property, under a contract between it and Stewart and Meminger, which interest Hull purchased for a full consideration, and before the delivery of said deed to Hull the Port Tampa Company adopted and placed upon its records a resolution reciting its agreement to sell the property to Hull, and authorizing and directing Stewart and Meminger to make a deed to him; that soon after the delivery of the deed Hull took possession; that on June 7, 1907, he executed and delivered to the Prairie Company a deed of conveyance of all his right, title, and interest in said properties for the consideration of about $37,000, which deed was shortly afterwards recorded, and the Prairie Company took actual and peaceable possession of the property, and has continued to hold it until the present time, having made valuable improvements upon it; that afterwards, and prior to March 26, 1908, the Prairie Company executed and delivered to the Trust Company a deed of trust conveying its right, title, and interest in said properties, together with other properties, to secure the payment of bonds amounting to about $1,800,000, and the deed of trust was duly recorded; that it came to the knowledge of Hull that certain creditors of the Port Tampa Company had asserted that the company owned some interest in said properties, and on the 28th of November, 1905, he commenced an action of ejectment against that company in the United States circuit court for the southern district of Florida being the district in which the property was situate; that the company was served with process therein on December 6, 1905, and such further proceedings were had that on March 13, 1906, upon the verdict of a jury, a judgment was rendered adjudging that Hull was entitled to recover from the Port Tampa Company the fee-simple title and right of possession of the lands in question. The bill sets up that on November 8, 1905, a petition in bankruptcy [715] was filed against the Port Tampa Company "in this court of bankruptcy" [the district court of the

Digitized by Google

United States for the district of Massachusetts]; that a subpœna was issued thereon returnable on the 20th day of the same month, and returned served, and that on the return day an appearance was entered for the company by one J. H. Robinson. Copies of the creditor's petition, the subpœna, and the appearance are appended to the bill as an exhibit. The bill alleges that defendants assert that by virtue of a decree in bankruptcy made in said district court on November 27, 1905, adjudging the Port Tampa Company bankrupt, they are the owners of an equitable interest or estate in the said lands and other properties, and that the defendant Burr was, on December 27, 1905, appointed sole trustee in bankruptcy of the company; that he resigned as such trustee on March 12, 1909, and on the same day his resignation was accepted, and Burr, Simpson, and Edwards were appointed trustees in his place; and that defendants claim that by the adjudication in bankruptcy and their appointment the title to an interest or estate in said lands became vested in them as such trustees; that on or about March 26, 1908, and before he resigned as trustee, Burr brought a suit by bill in equity in the circuit court in and for Polk county, Florida, against complainants, to establish such interest or estate, but there has been no trial of this suit on the merits, nor had the same been brought to final issues of fact and law before Burr's resignation; that on January 9, 1912, the defendants filed in said state court a supplemental bill of complaint, wherein they averred that said suit was brought by Burr as trustee in bankruptcy, and that Burr resigned as such trustee on March 12, 1909, and prayed that they might be substituted as complainants in his place; that the present complainants filed an answer to the said supplemental bill, but that the issues have not been tried, and no decree has been rendered making [716] the defendants as trustees complainants in said suit. The present bill then proceeds to attack the proceedings and adjudication in bankruptcy, and the title of the defendants as trustees, as fraudulent and void upon various grounds, which may be summarized as follows: That the Port Tampa Company's principal place of business was not in Massachusetts, as alleged in the petition, and that it had no business except in Florida; that it was not insolvent, and did not commit the act of bankruptcy alleged, or any act of bankruptcy; that the petitioning creditors were directors of the company, and knew the company was solvent and had committed no act of bankruptcy; that the jurisdictional facts were falsely and fraudulently averred, being fabricated for the purpose of pretending to state a cause within the jurisdiction of the court; that the petitioning creditors controlled both sides of the litigation through their ownership of a majority of the company's stock; that Robinson, who entered the appearance in behalf of the Port Tampa Company, was not in fact authorized to appear for or represent the company; and that the petition was fraudulently made to appear as an involuntary petition by creditors, whereas in truth and in legal effect it was a voluntary petition on the part of the company and its officers and directors. It is also alleged that the appointment of defendants as trustees in the place of Burr on March 12, 1909, was invalid, because no judge or referee appointed them, their claim being that in fact they were appointed trustees at a meeting of creditors, whereas complainants allege that the pretended call by the referee for the meeting of creditors was issued at a time when there was no vacancy in the office of trustee; that ten days' notice of the meeting was not given by mail to all the creditors, as required by law; that the only creditor who attended the meeting was one Wills, a director of the company, and that there were ten other creditors who had proven claims; that Wills did [717] not own a bona fide provable claim to the amount of one half of the claims that had been proven; and that the appointment of defendants as trustees was made by Wills alone. Complainants insist that there was no power or jurisdiction in any creditor or creditors to appoint defendants as trustees on March 12, 1909, because at that time there was no vacancy in the office of trustee, since Burr had not then resigned and his resignation had not been accepted by the court. The bill further avers that in their answer to the supplemental bill in the equity suit in the circuit court of Polk county, Florida, the present complainants set up the defense of "want of jurisdiction of the said court of bankruptcy to render any decree of adjudication, and that such alleged decree was void on the face of the said proceedings;" that this part of the answer was excepted to and the exceptions sustained by the order of the Polk county circuit court; that on appeal, the Florida supreme court affirmed this order on July 3, 1912, ruling that all such defenses were collateral attacks upon the bankruptcy proceedings, which were not permissible, the ruling being expressed in the following words: "The assaults made upon the bankruptcy proceedings in the Federal court of Massachusetts by the answer of the appellants to the supplemental bill of the appellees in the particulars wherein said answer was excepted to by the appellees is simply a collateral attack upon the judgments, orders, and proceedings in said bankruptcy court that is not permissible either by way of defense to the supplemental bill or to the original bill as amended;" that by reason of the said judgment of the Florida courts the present complainants cannot, by way of defense to the bills of complaint in those courts, "have and obtain that speedy, adequate, and appropriate relief that this court is competent to render upon this original bill of complaint; and your orators fear that the Florida courts will decline to adjudicate as to the character [718] and title of the defendants as trustees and their competency to attack your orators' title to said properties, as herein set forth, upon any answer to the said bills in the said state court." The present amended bill further sets up that "upon the facts hereinbefore set forth, which are conclusively provable to be true by the record of the proceedings of the said court of bankruptcy, if the said Port Tampa Company had any title to any of the aforesaid properties, legal or equitable, at the time of the said alleged decree of adjudication, such title still remains in the said company; that your orators are still liable to be sued by the said company in any court of competent jurisdiction to assert such title, and that a final decree in the Florida state court for or against the defendants as such alleged trustees would not be pleadable in bar of a suit by the said company against your orators to assert such title." The specific prayer is for a decree to restrain defendants "from asserting or claiming as trustees in bankruptcy, in any court or place, any right, title, or interest in or to any of the properties herein described until the further decree of this court." There is also a prayer for general relief. Appended as exhibits and made a part of the bill are the copies of the petition, subpœna, return, and appearance in the bankruptcy proceedings, already mentioned, and a transcript of the record of the ejectment suit in the United States circuit court for the southern district of Florida.

Digitized by Google

The district court, in sustaining the demurrer, held that since upon the face of the bankruptcy proceedings there was no want of jurisdiction over the parties or the subject-matter, and the decree was not void in form, it could not be collaterally attacked, and could be assailed only by a direct proceeding in a competent court; citing New Lamp Chimney Co. v. Ansonia Brass & Copper Co. 91 U. S. 656, 662, 23 L. ed. 336, 339; Graham v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co. 118 U. S. 161, 178, 30 L. ed. 196, 204, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1009. Treating the present suit as a direct attack, [719] the court held, first, that no right or interest of complainants appeared to be so prejudiced by the adjudication in bankruptcy as to entitle them to equitable relief against it; that the adjudication concerned only the bankrupt and its creditors, since it made no difference to complainants whether the claim to the Florida properties was asserted by the bankrupt itself or by its trustees; that the allegation that a final decree in the Florida suit would not bar an action brought by the company itself was a mere conclusion of law, not admitted by the demurrer, and an unsound conclusion in view of the facts alleged; that, the adjudication not having been questioned by the bankrupt or its creditors, they were bound by it, and by virtue of it the trustees were in the bankrupt's place so far as concerned any claim that it could assert to the Florida properties. And, secondly, that there was a defect of necessary parties, because the only defendants named in the bill were the bankruptcy trustees, respecting whom it was not alleged that they were parties to the bankruptcy proceedings, nor that they participated in the fraud whereby the adjudication was alleged to have been procured.

The circuit court of appeals, while agreeing with this reasoning, placed its decision upon the ground that complainants were invoking not the powers of the district court in bankruptcy, but its general powers as a court in equity; that it also appeared that the proceedings in Florida were instituted by a bill in equity with the parties reversed; that the Florida court was a chancery court and a court of superior jurisdiction in equity, and for present purposes of equal dignity and authority with the district court of the United States for the district of Massachusetts; that the bill in substance merely invoked the general equitable jurisdiction of the district court in order to restrain proceedings in a state court proceeding in equity in a prior suit between the same parties; and that this ran [720] counter to § 720, Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581 (§ 265, Judicial Code, 36 Stat. at L. 1162, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 236), as well as to the general principle that the authority of the court first acquiring jurisdiction, the parties being the same, must prevail; citing Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 596, 35 L. ed. 870, 872, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62, and Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 462, 42 L. ed. 807, 818, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

There is a motion to dismiss the appeal, based upon the ground that the jurisdiction of the district court depended solely upon diversity of citizenship, and that therefore the decree of the circuit court of appeals is final, under § 128, Judicial Code (36 Stat. at L. 1133, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 193). The motion must be granted unless the suit was one arising under the laws of the United States, within the meaning of the first subdivision of § 24 of the Code. The rule is firmly established that a suit does not so arise unless it really and substantially involves a dispute or controversy respecting the validity, construction, or effect of some law of the United States, upon the determination of which the result depends. And this must appear not by mere inference, but by distinct averments according to the rules of good pleading; not that matters of law must be pleaded as such, but that the essential facts averred must show, not as a matter of mere inference or argument, but clearly and distinctly, that the suit arises under some Federal law. Hanford v. Davies, 163 U. S. 273, 279, 41 L. ed. 157, 159, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1051; Mountain View Min. & Mill. Co. v. McFadden, 180 U. S. 533, 535, 45 L. ed. 656, 657, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Defiance Water Co. v. Defiance, 191 U. S. 184, 191, 48 L. ed. 140, 143, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 191 U. S. 405, 413, 48 L. ed. 239, 241, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Bankers Mut. Casualty Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 192 U. S. 371, 383, 48 L. ed. 484, 489, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Shulthis v. McDougal, 225 U. S. 561, 569, 56 L. ed. 1205, 1210, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 704.

Digitized by Google

We have not considered whether the action could be regarded as ancillary to the proceedings in bankruptcy, and for that reason maintainable in the district court as a suit arising under the laws of the United States (See Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 460, 16 L. ed. 749, 752; Milwaukee & M. R. Co. v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. (Milwaukee & M. R. Co. v. Soutter) 2 Wall. 609, 633, 17 L. ed. 886, 895; Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 334, 345, 18 L. ed. 257, 261; [721] Christmas v. Russell (Christmas v. Gaines) 14 Wall. 69, 81, 20 L. ed. 762, 763; Krippendorf v. Hyde, 110 U. S. 276, 281, 28 L. ed. 145, 147, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Lammon v. Feusier, 111 U. S. 17, 19, 28 L. ed. 337, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 176, 179, 180, 28 L. ed. 390-392, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355; Dewey v. West Fairmont Gas Coal Co. 123 U. S. 329, 333, 31 L. ed. 179, 181, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Gumbel v. Pitkin, 124 U. S. 131, 144, 31 L. ed. 374, 378, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Morgans' L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Texas C. R. Co. 137 U. S. 171, 201, 34 L. ed. 625, 635, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61; Byers v. McAuley, 149 U. S. 608, 615, 37 L. ed. 867, 871, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; Root v. Woolworth, 150 U. S. 401, 413, 37 L. ed. 1123, 1126, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 274, 38 L. ed. 981, 987, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019; White v. Ewing, 159 U. S. 36, 39, 40 L. ed. 67, 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018; Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 161 U. S. 115, 130, 40 L. ed. 638, 643, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537; Re Johnson, 167 U. S. 120, 125, 42 L. ed. 103, 104, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735; Pope v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 173 U. S. 573, 577, 43 L. ed. 814, 816, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Wabash R. Co. v. Adelbert College, 208 U. S. 38, 54, 52 L. ed. 379, 386, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182), because complainants have not planted themselves upon that ground.

Complainants are not parties to the proceeding in bankruptcy, and are setting up rights in opposition to the adjudication and the appointment of trustees therein. They seek to have the trustees restrained from prosecuting the equity suit against them in the state court of Florida, and to that end undertake to show (a) that the bankruptcy proceedings were void for want of jurisdiction; (b) that the entire proceedings were a fraud upon the bankrupt act; and (c) that, even if the proceedings were valid, the appointment of the trustees was void. This is the theory of the bill of complaint, and it is by this that the right of ultimate appeal to this court is to be tested, rather than by the grounds upon which the district court and the circuit court of appeals reached conclusions adverse to the relief prayed. Were the views adopted by those courts found to be untenable, it would be necessary to pass upon the attack made by complainants upon the title of the trustees in bankruptcy; and to do this would require us to determine the construction and effect of those provisions of the bankruptcy act that bear upon the matters of fact averred as the basis of the attack. We deem, therefore, that the suit is one arising under the laws of the United States, within the meaning of § 24, [722] Judicial Code, and the motion to dismiss will be denied.

Upon the merits, we find it unnecessary to consider the views expressed by the district court, since it seems to us that the view of the circuit court of appeals as to the effect of § 720, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581), is correct, and is sufficient to dispose of the case.

The substance of the matter is that complainants allege that they are the owners of certain property in Florida in which defendants, as trustees in bankruptcy of the Port Tampa Company, assert an equitable claim or interest, to establish which they are prosecuting or attempting to prosecute an equitable action in a Florida state court against complainants. The latter aver that because of fraud, or for other reasons, the proceedings and adjudication in bankruptcy and the appointment of defendants as trustees are invalid, and that for this reason any decree that may be made by the Florida state court will not be binding upon the Port Tampa Company. As already mentioned, the specific prayer is that defendants may be restrained from asserting or claiming as trustees in bankruptcy, in any court or place, any right, title, or interest in the property. There is a prayer for general relief, but it was pointed out by the circuit court of appeals (207 Fed. 534, 544) that no right to relief other than by way of an injunction was brought to the attention of the district court or of the court of appeals upon the hearing. The general prayer should therefore be treated as abandoned.

Digitized by Google

So far as the action already pending in the Florida court of equity is concerned, the case is clearly within § 720, Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581, (§ 265, Judicial Code, 36 Stat. at L. 1162, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 236): "The writ of injunction shall not be granted by any court of the United States to stay proceedings in any court of a state, except in cases where such injunction may be authorized by any law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy." [723] The latter clause formerly had reference to § 5106, Rev. Stat. (§ 21 of the bankruptcy act of March 2, 1867, 14 Stat. at L. 526, chap. 176); in the place of which we now have § 11 and subdivision 7 and 15 of § 2 of the bankruptcy act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 546, 549, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3421, 3426). It is quite evident that the injunction sought by the present complainants is not one authorized by the bankruptcy act.

The prohibition against injunctions to stay proceedings in state courts originated in the act of March 2, 1793 (chap. 22, § 5, 1 Stat. at L. 335), and has been constantly observed by the courts. See Diggs v. Wolcott, 4 Cranch, 179, 2 L. ed. 587; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 625, 12 L. ed. 841, 846; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 719, 20 L. ed. 666, 672; Haines v. Carpenter, 91 U. S. 254, 257, 23 L. ed. 345, 346; Dial v. Reynolds, 96 U. S. 340, 24 L. ed. 644; Chapman v. Brewer, 114 U. S. 158, 172, 29 L. ed. 83, 88, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; United States v. Parkhurst-Davis Mercantile Co. 176 U. S. 317, 320, 44 L. ed. 485, 486, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Hunt v. New York Cotton Exch. 205 U. S. 322, 338, 51 L. ed. 821, 827, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529; Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 210, 226, 53 L. ed. 150, 158, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

It is recognized, however, that § 720 was not intended to limit the power of the Federal courts to enforce their authority in cases that, on other grounds, are within their proper jurisdiction; and hence, it has been held that, in aid of its jurisdiction properly acquired, and in order to render its judgments and decrees effectual, a Federal court may restrain proceedings in a state court which would have the effect of defeating or impairing such jurisdiction. French v. Hay (French v. Stewart) 22 Wall. 250, 22 L. ed. 854; Deitzsch v. Huidekoper (Kern v. Huidekoper) 103 U. S. 494, 497, 26 L. ed. 497, 498; Julian v. Central Trust Co. 193 U. S. 93, 112, 48 L. ed. 629, 639, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Madisonville Traction Co. v. St. Bernard Min. Co. 196 U. S. 239, 245, 49 L. ed. 462, 464, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251.

The contention that the present case falls within this exception to the general application of § 720, because the bill is really filed in aid of the judgment of a Federal court, that is to say, the judgment in favor of Hull in the ejectment suit in the circuit court of the United States for [724] the southern district of Florida, will not bear analysis. The ejectment suit was commenced after the adjudication of bankruptcy, and the bill does not aver that the judgment cut off the equitable rights of the Port Tampa Company, but, on the contrary, declares that if that company had any title to the property, legal or equitable, at the time of the adjudication of bankruptcy, such title still remains in the company. It is not averred that the claim of equitable right on the part of the company is inconsistent with the judgment, or should be subordinated to it. The present trustees, or either of them, were not made parties to the ejectment suit, nor is the company made a party to the present action. And, upon the whole, it seems to us that by no interpretation or construction can the present bill be deemed to have been filed in aid of the judgment in ejectment, or be sustained upon that theory.

It is argued that the bill cannot be deemed to have as its object the staying of a pending suit in the state court, because that action abated upon Burr's resignation as trustee, and no further proceeding can be had until his successors have been made parties. To this point a decision of the Florida supreme court in the very action is cited (Hull v. Burr, 62 Fla. 499, 56 So. 673). We do not interpret this decision as sustaining the contention, and in a subsequent stage of the same litigation (64 Fla. 83, 59 So. 787), the court distinctly held that the action did not abate on the resignation of Burr, but might be proceeded with by his successors when appointed, the same as if originally instituted by them; and that a supplemental bill was the proper procedure to have such successors formally brought into the case as parties. Indeed, it is only upon the theory that defendants are prosecuting that suit that the complainants show ground for an injunction against them.

Digitized by Google

To the suggestion that the term "any court," in the bill of complaint, may include other Federal courts, it is [725] sufficient to say that the bill is devoid of any showing that defendants are asserting claims against complainants' title in any court other than the Florida state court. Hence, there is no occasion to invoke the general rule that the court first obtaining jurisdiction of a controversy should be permitted to proceed without interference. Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 624, 12 L. ed. 841, 846; Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 459, 42 L. ed. 807, 817, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Bigelow v. Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelting Co. 74 N. J. Eq. 457, 473 et seq., 71 Atl. 153.

We deem that the main object of the bill, to which all else is incidental, is in contravention of § 265 of the Judicial Code (formerly § 720 of the Revised Statutes), and that therefore the decree should be affirmed.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
D. E. CROCKETT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 725–738.)

Error to state court — Federal question — suit based on Federal statute.

1. A decision of a state court adverse to plaintiff in error's contention that, by the true construction of the Federal employers' liability and safety appliance acts, it could rely upon the common-law defense of assumption of risk, is reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1436–1445, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Master and servant — employers' liability — assumption of risk.

2. The defense of assumption of risk is available to an interstate carrier under the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 65, chap. 149, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322), as at common law, except in the cases mentioned in § 4 of that act, i. e., "any case where the violation by such common carrier of any statute enacted for the safety of employees contributed to the injury or death of such employee."

Master and servant — safety appliances — standard height of locomotive drawbars.

3. The standard height of drawbars, promulgated by the Interstate Commerce Commission under the authority of the safety appliance act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), § 5, if originally confined to freight cars by that section, was made applicable to locomotive engines by the provision of the amendatory act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 943, chap. 976, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1314), that the provisions and requirements of the acts of March 2, 1893, and April 1, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 85, chap. 87, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3175), relating to train brakes, automatic couplers, grab irons, and the height of drawbars, shall be held to apply to all trains, locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles used on any railroad engaged in interstate commerce and in the territories and the District of Columbia, and to all other locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles used in connection therewith, excepting those exempted by the earlier acts and those used upon street railways.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, 28–51, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 826.]

Submitted April 16, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Tennessee to review a judgment which dismissed a petition for a writ of certiorari and affirmed a judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals of that state, which had affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Knox County in favor of plaintiff

---

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On the constitutionality, application, and effect of the Federal employers' liability act—see note to Lamphere v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 38.

On the duty and liability under Federal and state railway safety appliance acts—see notes to Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 20 L.R.A.(N.S.) 473, and Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Benson, 41 L.R.A.(N.S.) 49.

Digitized by Google

in a suit based upon the Federal employers' liability and safety appliance acts. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. L. E. Jeffries submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. L. D. Smith was on the brief:

This court has jurisdiction.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Duvall, 225 U. S. 477, 56 L. ed. 1171, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. McWhirter, 229 U. S. 265, 57 L. ed. 1179, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 858; St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 57 L. ed. 1129, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 18, 50 L. ed. 352, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216.

Did the safety appliance acts in force at the time of the injury involved in this case require of railroad companies the duty of having the drawbars on switch engines at a minimum height of 31½ inches above the level of the tops of the rails?

Pennell v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 231 U. S. 675, ante, 430, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220.

Defendant in error assumed the risk.

Gila Valley, G. & N. R. Co. v. Hall, 232 U. S. 94, ante, 521, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 220 U. S. 590, 55 L. ed. 596, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561; Thornton, Federal Employers' Liability, § 85.

In cases arising under the Federal employers' liability act the doctrine of assumption of risk is still open as a defense.

Neil v. Idaho & W. N. R. Co. 22 Idaho, 74, 125 Pac. 331; Central Vermont R. Co. v. Bethune, 124 C. C. A. 528, 206 Fed. 868; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Vreeland, 227 U. S. 59, 57 L. ed. 417, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Moore, 228 U. S. 433, 57 L. ed. 907, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. McGinnis, 228 U. S. 173, 57 L. ed. 785, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426, 3 N. C. C. A. 806; American R. Co. v. Birch, 224 U. S. 547, 56 L. ed. 879, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603; Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 54, 56 L. ed. 348, 38 L.R.A. (N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875; Bowers v. Southern R. Co. 10 Ga. App. 367, 73 S. E. 677; Barker v. Kansas City, M. & O. R. Co. 88 Kan. 767, 43 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1121, 129 Pac. 1151; Freeman v. Powell, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 144 S. W. 1033; Union P. R. Co. v. Fuller, 122 C. C. A. 359, 204 Fed. 45; Southern R. Co. v. Gadd, 125 C. C. A. 21, 207 Fed. 277; Worthington v. Elmer, 125 C. C. A. 50, 207 Fed. 306; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Lankford, 126 C. C. A. 247, 209 Fed. 321; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Bossert, 44 Ind. App. 245, 87 N. E. 158.

Mr. J. A. Fowler submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. A. C. Grimm and H. G. Fowler were on the brief:

The writ of error should be dismissed because no question is presented which authorizes this court to take jurisdiction of the case.

Kizer v. Texarkana & Ft. S. R. Co. 179 U. S. 199, 45 L. ed. 152, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; Montgomery v. Hernandez, 12 Wheat. 129, 133, 6 L. ed. 575, 576.

If this court has jurisdiction, the case should be affirmed, because the decision of the state courts is so manifestly right that the case should not be kept upon the docket for further argument.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1–10, 51 L. ed. 681–685, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

Crockett, the defendant in error, brought this action in the circuit court of Knox county, Tennessee, to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by him while in the employ of the railway company. The action was based upon the Federal employers' liability act of April 22, 1908 (chap. 149, 35 Stat. at L. 65, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1322), in connection with the safety appliance act of March 2, 1893 (chap. 196, 27 Stat. at L. 531, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), [728] and the amendments of 1896 and 1903 (chap. 87, 29 Stat. at L. 85, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3175; chap. 976, 32 Stat. at L. 943, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1314). He recovered a judgment in the trial court, which was affirmed by the court of civil appeals. A petition for a writ of certiorari being presented to the supreme court of Tennessee, that court dismissed the petition and affirmed the judgment.

The facts, so far as material, are as follows: Defendant was an interstate carrier by railroad, and plaintiff was in its employ as a switchman, and was engaged in a movement of interstate commerce at the time he was injured. The date of the occurrence was October 15, 1910. In making up a freight train, a switch engine, with a freight car attached, was being moved down grade towards where other freight cars were standing upon the track, when the single car became uncoupled from the engine, and, being propelled by gravity towards the standing cars, came into contact with them. Plaintiff, being upon the car which thus became uncoupled, was by the impact thrown against the brake and injured. He insisted that the car became detached from the engine because of the defective condition of the track at that point, in conjunction with the insufficient height of the drawbar on the engine. There was evidence tending to show that the ground upon which the track rested was wet and marshy, and the cross-ties broken and insufficient, so that the track was uneven and rough, and that, as a result, the engine and the car attached to it were made to alternately rise and fall at the ends where they were coupled together; and tending further to show that the drawbar upon the engine, which was used in coupling the car to it, was not more than 30 inches high, measured from the track to the center of the drawbar; that it was too low to engage properly with the couplers of ordinary freight cars, and that, because of the resulting inadequacy of the coupling, together with the unevenness of the track, the car in question became detached. There was, however, evidence [729] tending to show that plaintiff knew of the defective condition of the track and of the engine; that he had passed over the same track frequently with the same engine, and that prior, to the occurrence in question, cars had, as he knew, repeatedly become detached from the engine because of the conditions mentioned. It was either found or assumed by the state courts that defendant's railway was of standard gauge, and that the standard height of drawbars for freight cars ranged between a maximum of 34½ inches and a minimum of 31½ inches. See Resolution of Interstate Commerce Commission, June 6, 1893 (Ann. Rep. I. C. C. 1893, pp. 74, 263), construed in St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 289, 52 L. ed. 1061, 1065, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464, see also, Ann. Rep. I. C. C. 1896, p. 94. It should be noted that the alleged cause of action arose October 15, 1910, after the enactment of the amendment of that year to the safety appliance act, but before the taking effect of the Commission's order respecting drawbars, made pursuant to the new law. This order, while dated October 10, 1910, became effective on December 31 following.

Digitized by Google

Defendant requested the trial court to direct a verdict in its favor, upon the ground that plaintiff admittedly knew of the defects and therefore assumed the risk. The court refused the motion, and likewise refused the request of defendant for an instruction to the jury in the following terms: "If the jury should find from the evidence that the drawbar of the engine was defective by being too low, or the track defective, and that this caused the engine to become detached from the cars, and this caused the plaintiff's injury, still, if you should further find that these defective conditions had existed prior to that time with the knowledge of the plaintiff, and plaintiff knew before he went to work that the defect existed at that time, and that by reason thereof the engine had been accustomed to become uncoupled, and he appreciated the danger, then the court charges you that under those facts the plaintiff [730] could not recover, and your verdict should be in favor of the defendant."

The contentions of defendant, overruled by each of the state courts and here renewed, are, that by the true interpretation of the employers' liability act, the common-law rule respecting the assumption of risk was not abolished except in cases where the violation by the carrier of some statute enacted for the safety of employees contributed to the injury of the employee; and that by the safety appliance act and amendments, as properly interpreted, the height or construction of the drawbars of locomotives was not regulated, so that the fact that the drawbar in question was only 30 inches high was not a violation of these acts, and hence afforded no ground for a recovery under the employers' liability act.

There is a motion to dismiss, based upon the insistence that the record presents no question reviewable in this court under § 237, Judicial Code (act of March 3, 1911, chap. 231, 36 Stat. at L. 1156, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227). The motion must be overruled, upon the authority of St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 293, 52 L. ed. 1061, 1067, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Duvall, 225 U. S. 477, 486, 56 L. ed. 1171, 1175, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. McWhirter, 229 U. S. 265, 57 L. ed. 1179, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 858; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Horton, 233 U. S. 492, 499, ante, 1062, 1068, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635.

Upon the merits, we of course sustain the contention that by the employers' liability act the defense of assumption of risk remains as at common law, saving in the cases mentioned in § 4, that is to say: "Any case where the violation by such common carrier of any statute enacted for the safety of employees contributed to the injury or death of such employee." Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Horton, 233 U. S. 492, 503, ante, 1062, 1069, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635.

This leaves for determination the question whether the provision of § 5 of the safety appliance act of 1893 respecting the standard height of drawbars, together with the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission promulgated [731] in pursuance of it, and the 1903 amendment of that act, had the effect of regulating the height of drawbars upon locomotive engines, as contended by plaintiff, or upon freight cars only, as contended by defendant.[1]

Digitized by Google

[732] In Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412, a case that arose under the act as it stood before the 1903 amendment, it was held that the provision of § 2 rendering it "unlawful for any such common carrier to haul or permit [733] to be hauled or used on its line any car used in moving interstate traffic not equipped with couplers coupling automatically by impact, and which can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars," was broad enough to embrace locomotive engines within the description "any car." This conclusion was based upon the declared purpose of Congress to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads engaged in interstate commerce, and the specific intent to require the installation of such an equipment that the cars would couple with each other automatically by impact, and obviate the necessity of men going beween them either for coupling or for uncoupling. The court, by Mr. [734] Chief Justice Fuller, pointed out (pp. 20, 21) that by the amendment of March 2, 1903, the provisions and requirements of the act were extended to common carriers by railroad in the territories and the District of Columbia, and were made to apply "in all cases, whether or not the couplers brought together are of the same kind, make, or type," and that the provisions and requirements relating to train brakes, automatic couplers, grab irons, and the height of drawbars, were made to apply to "all trains, locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles, used in any railroad engaged in interstate commerce." And it was said that this amendment was affirmative and declaratory of the meaning attributed by the court to the prior law.

In Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 10, 51 L. ed. 681, 685, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407, it was held that a shovel car was within the contemplation of § 2.

In Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222

[1] Safety Appliance Act of March 2, 1893, chap. 196, 27 Stat. at L. 531, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174.

"An Act to Promote the Safety of Employees and Travelers upon Railroads by Compelling Common Carriers Engaged in Interstate Commerce to Equip Their Cars with Automatic Couplers and Continuous Brakes, and Their Locomotives with Driving-wheel Brakes, and for Other Purposes.

"Be it enacted, etc., that from and after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, it shall be unlawful for any common carrier engaged in interstate commerce by railroad to use on its line any locomotive engine in moving interstate traffic not equipped with a power driving-wheel brake and appliances for operating the train-brake system, or to run any train in such traffic after said date that has not a sufficient number of cars in it so equipped with power or train brakes that the engineer on the locomotive drawing such train can control its speed without requiring brakemen to use the common hand brake for that purpose.

"Sec. 2. That on and after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, it shall be unlawful for any common carrier to haul or permit to be hauled or used on its line any car used in moving interstate traffic not equipped with couplers coupling automatically by impact, and which can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars.

. . . . . .

"Sec. 5. That within ninety days from the passage of this act the American Railway Association is authorized hereby to designate to the Interstate Commerce Commission the standard height of drawbars for freight cars, measured perpendicular from the level of the tops of the rails to the centers of the drawbars, for each of the several gauges of railroads in use in the United States, and shall fix a maximum variation from such standard height to be allowed between the drawbars of empty and loaded cars. Upon their determination being certified to the Interstate Commerce Commission, said Commission shall at once give notice of the standard fixed upon to all common carriers, owners, or lessees engaged in interstate commerce in the United States by such means as the Commission may deem proper. But should said association fail to determine a standard as above provided, it shall be the duty of the Interstate Commerce Commission to do so, before July first, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, and immediately to give notice thereof as aforesaid. And after July first, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, no cars, either loaded or unloaded, shall be used in interstate traffic which do not comply with the standard above provided for.

"Sec. 6. That any such common carrier using any locomotive engine, running any train, or hauling or permitting to be hauled or used on its line any car in violation of any of the provisions of this act, shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each and every such violation . . . Provided, that nothing in this act contained shall apply to trains composed of four-wheel cars, or to locomotives used in hauling such trains.

. . . . . .

"Sec. 8. That any employee of any such common carrier who may be injured by any locomotive, car, or train in use contrary to the provision of this act shall not be deemed thereby to have assumed the risk thereby

Digitized by Google

U. S. 20, 26, 56 L. ed. 72, 74, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, 3 N. C. C. A. 822, it was held that the 1903 amendment had enlarged the scope of the original act so as to embrace all locomotives, cars, and similar vehicles used on any railway that is a highway of interstate commerce, whether the particular vehicles were at the time employed in interstate commerce or not.

In Pennell v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 231 U. S. 675, ante, 430, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220, the question was whether the provision respecting automatic couplers was applicable to the coupling between the locomotive and the tender. This was answered in the negative, the court saying (p. 678): "Engine and tender are a single thing; separable, it may be, but never separated in their ordinary and essential use. The connection between them, that is, between the engine and tender, it was testified, was in the nature of a permanent coupling, and it was also testified that there was practically no opening between the engine and tender, and that attached to the engine was a drawbar which fitted in the [735] yoke of the tender, and the pin was dropped down to connect drawbar and yoke. The necessary deduction from this is that no dangerous position was assumed by an employee in coupling the engine and tender, for the reason that the pin was dropped through the bar from the tank of the tender."

In each of these cases, the letter of the act was construed in the light of its spirit and purpose, as indicated by its title no less than by the enacting clauses. The same guiding principle should be adhered to in considering the question now presented. Conceding that it may be doubtful whether the act, in its original form, evidenced an intent on the part of Congress to standardize the height of drawbars upon vehicles other than freight cars, and therefore assuming for argument's sake that the act was not in this respect applicable to locomotive engines, it seems to us that the amendment of 1903, manifestly enacted for the purpose of broadening the scope of the original act, must, upon a fair construction, be deemed to extend its provisions and requirements respecting the standard height of drawbars, so as to make them applicable to locomooccasioned, although continuing in the employment of such carrier after the unlawful use of such locomotive, car, or train had been brought to his knowledge."

---

Amendment of April 1, 1896, chap. 87, 29 Stat. at L. 85, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3175.

"Be it enacted, etc., that section six of an act entitled . . . be amended so as to read as follows:

"'Sec. 6. That any such common carrier using any locomotive engine, running any train, or hauling or permitting to be hauled or used on its line any car in violation of any of the provisions of this act, shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each and every such violation. . . . Provided, that nothing in this act contained shall apply to trains composed of four-wheel cars or to trains composed of eight-wheel standard logging cars where the height of such car from top of rail to center of coupling does not exceed twenty-five inches, or to locomotives used in hauling such trains when such cars or locomotives are exclusively used for the transportation of logs.'"

Amendment of March 2, 1903, chap. 976, 32 Stat. at L. 943, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1314.

"Be it enacted, etc., that the provisions and requirements of the act entitled, 'An Act to Promote the Safety of Employees and Travelers upon Railroads by Compelling Common Carriers Engaged in Interstate Commerce to Equip Their Cars with Automatic Couplers and Continuous Brakes, and Their Locomotives with Driving-wheel Brakes, and for Other Purposes,' approved March second, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, and amended April first, eighteen hundred and ninety-six, shall be held to apply to common carriers by railroads in the territories and the District of Columbia, and shall apply in all cases, whether or not the couplers brought together are of the same kind, make, or type; and the provisions and requirements hereof and of said acts relating to train brakes, automatic couplers, grab irons, and the height of drawbars shall be held to apply to all trains, locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles used on any railroad engaged in interstate commerce, and in the territories and the District of Columbia, and to all other locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles used in connection therewith, excepting those trains, cars and locomotives exempted by the provisions of section six of said act of March second, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, as amended by the act of April first, eighteen hundred and ninety-six, or which are used upon street railways."

. . . . . .

Amendment of April 14, 1910, chap. 160, 36 Stat. at L. 298, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1328.

. . . . . .

"Sec. 3. . . . Said Commission is hereby given authority, after hearing, to modify or change, and to prescribe the standard height of drawbars, and to fix the time within which such modification or change shall become effective and obligatory, and prior to the time so fixed it shall be unlawful to use any car or vehicle in interstate or foreign traffic which does not comply with the standard now fixed or the standard so prescribed, and after the time so fixed it shall be unlawful to use any car or vehicle in interstate or foreign traffic which does not comply with the standard so prescribed by the Commission."

Digitized by Google

tives, excepting such as are in terms exempted.

There was abundant reason for applying the standard to locomotives. The drawbar —sometimes called the "drawhead"—carries at its outer end the device or mechanism for coupling the cars. The height of the drawbar determines the height of the coupler, and has an intimate relation not only to the safety of the coupling operation, but to the security of the coupling when made. See Car Builders Dict. (1884), title, "Drawbar" and "Drawhead," and Figs. 395–643; Voss, Railway Construction (1892) pp. 16, 91, etc. The evidence in this case shows, without contradiction, that the gripping surface of the coupling knuckle on the freight car in question, measured vertically, was between 7 and 9 inches, and that [736] because of the comparatively low level of the engine's drawbar the effective grip was reduced to the point of practical inefficiency. Indeed, it is not seriously disputed that there exists as much reason for having the drawbars of the locomotive adjusted to a standard of height as exists in the case of freight cars.

The experience of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in seeing to the enforcement of the act of 1893, tended to emphasize the importance of interchangeable equipment upon the rolling stock of railroads engaged in interstate commerce, so that cars used in such commerce would readily couple with cars not so used, and that locomotives could be readily coupled with cars of either sort. The 16th Annual Report of the Commission, 1902, p. 61, recommended to Congress, inter alia: "That provisions relating to automatic couplers, grab irons, and the height of drawbars, be made to apply to all locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles, both those equipped in interstate commerce and those used in connection therewith (except those trains, cars, and locomotives exempted by the acts of March 2, 1893, and April 1, 1896)." This recommendation appears to have been evoked by the decision of the circuit court of appeals in Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 54 C. C. A. 508, 117 Fed. 462, 12 Am. Neg. Rep. 398, afterwards reversed by this court in 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412. The court of appeals held that there was nothing in the act of 1893 to require a common carrier engaged in interstate commerce to have every car on its railroad equipped with the same kind of coupling, or to require that every car should be equipped with a coupler that would couple automatically with every other coupler with which it might be brought into contract; and also that the act did not forbid the use of an engine not equipped with automatic couplers. Congress not only responded to the recommendation of the Commission, but enlarged the act more broadly by enacting (amendment of March 2, 1903, set forth in footnote, [737] supra) that the provisions and requirements of the original act should be held (a) to apply to common carriers by railroad in the territories and the District of Columbia; (b) to apply in all cases, whether or not the couplers brought together are of the same kind, make, or type; (c) that "the provisions and requirements . . . relating to train brakes, automatic couplers, grab irons, and the height of drawbars, shall be held to apply to all trains, locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles used on any railroad engaged in interstate commerce, and in the territories and the District of Columbia, and to all other locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles used in connection therewith," excepting those exempted by the act of March 2, 1893, as amended April 1, 1896, and those used upon street railways. We have to do especially with the latter clause. As was intimated in Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 25, 56 L. ed. 74, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, 3 N. C. C. A. 822, its collocation of phrases is not altogether artistic. But at least the purpose is plain that where one vehicle is used in connection with another, that portion of the equipment of each that has to do with the safety and security of the attachment between them shall conform to standard. We cannot assent to the argument that the clause means only that the locomotives used upon all railroads engaged in interstate commerce and in the territories and the District of Columbia are to be equipped with the appliances provided by the original act for locomotives, and so on with the other classes of cars, and that hence the amendatory act has merely the effect of prescribing the standard height of drawbars with respect to freight cars, because the original act required such a standard only with respect to cars of that type. This would give altogether too narrow a construction to the language employed by Congress, and would lose sight of the spirit and purpose of the legislation. We deem the true intent and meaning to be that the provisions and requirements [738] respecting train brakes, automatic couplers, grab irons, and the height of drawbars shall be extended to all railroad vehicles used upon any railroad engaged in interstate commerce, and to all other vehicles used in connection with them, so far as the respective safety devices and standards are capable of being installed upon the respective vehicles. It follows that by the act of 1903 the standard height of drawbars was made applicable to locomotive engines as well as to freight cars. And so it was held by the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit in Chicago, M. & P. S. R. Co. v. United States, 110 C. C. A. 444, 196 Fed. 882, 884.

Digitized by Google

Judgment affirmed.

JOHN E. ROLLER, Plff. in Err.,
v.
MARY H. MURRAY, Holmes Conrad, Trustee, George A. Wheelock, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 738–747.)

Error to state court — frivolous Federal question — due process of law.

1. No substantial question of Federal right which will support a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court is presented by a contention in a state court that to give conclusive effect to a judgment of a court of another state which had jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the parties is to deny due process of law.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1110–1137, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — collateral attack — judgment of sister state.

2. The proper mode of obtaining a review of the Federal question, if any, involved in a decision of a state court refusing to entertain a third amended bill, is by prosecution of a writ of error under the Judicial Code, § 237, from the Federal Supreme Court, and not by attacking the judgment collaterally on that ground when it is pleaded as res judicata in a suit in the courts of another state.

[For other cases, see Judgment, VI. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 966.]

Submitted May 25, 1914. Decided June 22, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of West Virginia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court of Pendleton County, in that state, sustaining a plea of res judicata and dismissing the bill in a suit to establish a trust. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 71 W. Va. 161, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 76 S. E. 172.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John E. Roller, in propria persona, submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Herbert W. Wyant was on the brief:

This court has jurisdiction.

Home for Incurables v. New York, 187 U. S. 155, 47 L. ed. 117, 63 L.R.A. 329, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; St. Louis Expanded Metal Fireproofing Co. v. Standard Fireproofing Co. 195 U. S. 627, 49 L. ed. 351, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 792; Stuart v. Hauser, 203 U. S. 585, 51 L. ed. 328, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 783; Parmelee v. Lawrence, 11 Wall. 36, 38, 20 L. ed. 48, 49; Lawler v. Walker, 14 How. 149, 152, 14 L. ed. 364, 365; Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Rock, 4 Wall. 177, 18 L. ed. 381; Arrowsmith v. Harmoning, 118 U. S. 194, 30 L. ed. 243, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023.

Messrs. Holmes Conrad and Edward S. Conrad submitted the cause for Mary H. Murray, one of the defendants in error:

The question whether a former judgment rendered against one is a bar to another action on the same cause of action is a question of general law only, and involves no Federal question.

San Francisco v. Itsell, 133 U. S. 65, 33 L. ed. 570, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241.

The error of the court of appeals of Virginia cannot be corrected in this appeal from the decree of the court of appeals of West Virginia.

Fauntleroy v. Lum, 210 U. S. 230, 52 L. ed. 1039, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641.

The assignments of error are so frivolous and it is so apparent that this appeal is taken for delay only that the motion to affirm should be granted.

Blythe v. Hinckley, 180 U. S. 338, 45 L. ed. 561, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Brown, 187 U. S. 311, 47 L. ed. 192, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

This writ of error was sued out under § 237, Judicial Code (act of March 3, 1911,

---

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On necessity of color of merit in Federal question to sustain writ of error to state court—see note to Offield v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 51 L. ed. U. S. 231.

On error to state courts in cases involving questions of due process of law—see note to Burt v. Smith, 51 L. ed. U. S. 121.

Digitized by Google

36 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227), in order to bring under review a judgment of the supreme court of appeals of the state of West Virginia (71 W. Va. 161, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 76 S. E. 172), which affirmed a decree of the circuit court of Pendleton county, in that state, in an equitable action brought by plaintiff in error against defendants in error. His original bill was filed May 10, 1901, and an amended bill was filed in December, 1907. Complainant therein averred that in the year 1872 he was employed by the late Emily Hollingsworth, of the city of Philadelphia, as attorney, to recover for her a tract of 52,000 acres of land situate in the counties of Rockingham and Augusta, in the state of Virginia, and the county of Pendleton, in the state of West Virginia, and immediately undertook [740] the necessary work and labor, and diligently and faithfully endeavored to discharge the duties imposed upon him by the employment; that from time to time various parcels of land were recovered from adverse claimants, some by compromise settlements and others by actions of ejectment, until the entire tract of 52,000 acres was recovered, the actual litigation not being completed until some time in the year 1893; that portions of the property had been sold, so that in the year 1889 there remained of the lands recovered about 44,000 acres undisposed of, from the proceeds of the sale of which complainant was to receive payments on account of his services; that on or about April 1, 1889, the said Emily Hollingsworth made a deed of gift of the unsold lands, amounting to about 44,000 acres, to Mary H. Murray, one of the defendants, upon condition that she should pay to complainant one fifth of the proceeds thereafter to be realized on the sale of the lands, and that she should hold the same as trustee for complainant, and complainant avers that the said Mary H. Murray accepted said deed upon that condition, and became liable to complainant for the said proportion of said proceeds of sale and for the reasonable value of his services rendered by him to Miss Hollingsworth, and to be thereafter rendered to the said Mary H. Murray; that the latter, having accepted the conveyance, continued to act under it and in conformity with it until May 25, 1901, when for the first time she repudiated it. The object of the bill was to enforce a trust as to the undivided one fifth of the land and of the purchase money upon sales made of the same, as against Mary H. Murray and her grantees with notice. Mrs. Murray pleaded that in a chancery cause brought by the same complainant against her, with others, in the circuit court for the county of Rockingham, in the state of Virginia, a court of competent jurisdiction, complainant asserted and claimed that there was due to him from her the same sum of money and the same [741] debt, as compensation for the same services alleged in his present bill, and that the cause of action was the same as now set up and asserted; that on June 24, 1907, a final decree was made and entered in said cause by the said circuit court, and this, on appeal, was affirmed by the supreme court of appeals of Virginia in accordance with opinions found in 107 Va. 527, 59 S. E. 421, in which it was held that defendant Mary H. Murray was a privy in estate to Miss Hollingsworth, her grantor, and a privy also to the contract with complainant, and that the said supreme court of appeals of Virginia, affirming the circuit court, determined that complainant had no right to recover on said cause of action, wherefore defendant pleaded the final adjudication of the Virginia court as res judicata. There was filed with the plea a certified copy of the record of the proceedings had in the circuit court of Rockingham county, Virginia, and in the supreme court of appeals of that state. Subsequently, complainant filed in the Pendleton county court written objections to the plea of res judicata upon the following grounds: First, that the circuit court of Rockingham county, Virginia, after the rendition of the judgment pleaded by defendant, in another cause pending in that court between the Chesapeake-Western Company and the complainant, John E. Roller, and others, in which latter cause the said Mary H. Murray was impleaded as a party, decreed that the matters involved in the cause pending in the circuit court of Pendleton county, West Virginia, were not concluded by the judgment and decree of the circuit court of Rockingham county, Virginia, and did therefore vacate and dissolve certain injunctions previously awarded in that cause, restraining complainant from further prosecution in the West Virginia court of his present suit against said Mary H. Murray. Secondly, that the cause of action and grounds of jurisdiction and relief in the present cause are [742] not the same as those set out in the record filed in the plea of res judicata. And thirdly, that the record and judgment of the Virginia court should not be enforced as res judicata for the following reasons: (a) that the courts of West Virginia do not enforce foreign judgments that are contrary to the laws and public policy of that state; (b) that the decree rests not upon rights arising ex contractu, or upon torts based on natural rights, but upon a penalty denounced by the policy of the law of Virginia which is not so denounced by the policy of the law of the state of West Virginia, and that it is not one of such nature as the courts of West Virginia will enforce; and (c) that the lex loci rei sitæ determines the jurisdiction and relief to be given by this court as to the land in the bill referred to, regardless of the judgment of any sister state as to land therein situate.

Digitized by Google

The circuit court of Pendleton county, West Virginia, sustained the plea of res judicata and dismissed the bill, and it is the judgment of the court of last resort of West Virginia, affirming this decree, that is now under review.

There are three assignments of error, the substance of which is as follows:

First, that the court erred in holding that the plea of res judicata filed by the defendant Mary H. Murray was a good and sufficient plea, for the reason that the decree therein relied upon in terms provided that it should be without prejudice to complainant's right to institute other proceedings upon a quantum meruit if so advised, and that the record shows the cause of action and ground of jurisdiction were not the same in the present West Virginia action as those set out and contained in the record in the Virginia action; the present action being based upon a quantum meruit for just and reasonable compensation for services rendered by complainant in and about the recovery of the tract of land in controversy.

[743] Second, that the court erred in sustaining the action of the court below upholding the plea of res judicata, because the decrees in the Virginia courts presented in that plea were void and of no effect, since they had denied to complainant due process of law, in that they had denied to him the right to file the third amended bill of complaint tendered by him, and denied him a hearing upon the case thereby pre

Third, that the court erred in sr ning the action of the court below in c... ruling the objections made by complainant to the plea of res judicata, because in the suit of Chesapeake-Western Co. v. Roller, it was necessarily decided that the matters involved in the case in the West Virginia courts were not concluded by the decrees rendered in the first cause of Roller v. Murray in the Virginia courts.

There is a motion to dismiss or affirm, based upon the ground that no Federal question is raised by the record, or that, if any such question is raised, it is so frivolous as not to need further argument.

It appears that the Virginia court (107 Va. 527, 59 S. E. 421) denied relief to complainant with respect to the lands in that state upon the ground that the contract upon which the action was based was champertous, and therefore illegal under the laws of the commonwealth. The supreme court of appeals of West Virginia (71 W. Va. 161, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 76 S. E. 172), finding that this decision was rendered not in a mere proceeding in rem or quasi, in rem, but in an action in personam (defendants having appeared, and the validity of the contract constituting the basis of the plaintiff's claim to the fund or to the land having been actually litigated by the parties and decided by the courts), that decision necessarily settled and determined the question of the validity of the contract in the state of Virginia, and that under the "full faith and credit" clause of the Constitution of the United States the decision was entitled to the same credit [744] in West Virginia that it had in the commonwealth of Virginia. Upon this ground, although assuming that the contract was valid under the law of West Virginia, viewed independently of the Virginia decision, the court held itself bound by the Virginia decision to deny relief to complainant.

It is argued under the first assignment of error that the contract in controversy must be held to be a Pennsylvania contract, and that its validity and enforcement in the courts of West Virginia did not depend upon the decision of the Virginia courts, but required an independent consideration upon its merits by the courts of West Virginia, and that their failure to give such consideration was a denial of due process of law. We are unable to find that it was contended in the courts of West Virginia that the contract in question was made in Pennsylvania, or ought for other reasons to be regarded as a Pennsylvania contract; nor are we able to find that the "due process of law" clause was invoked in the West Virginia courts upon the ground that to follow the Virginia decision would be a denial of the right of plaintiff in error to such process. Assuming the contention to have been made, we are unable to see that any Federal question was thereby raised. Supposing the courts of West Virginia erred in giving conclusive effect to the Virginia decision, this was no more than an error of law, committed in the exercise of jurisdiction over the subject-matter and the parties; and such an error—not involving a Federal question—affords no opportunity for a review of this court.

The same response must be made to the second argument presented under the first assignment of error; which is that the contract in controversy shows that its terms, so far as they related to the property within the jurisdiction of West Virginia, were different from those which related to the property in Virginia, and that the West Virginia court, in holding them to be the same, and refusing [745] to recognize the contract as a West Virginia contract, deprived plaintiff in error of his property without due process of law.

Digitized by Google

It is not contended that the West Virginia court, in holding the Virginia judgment to be conclusive upon the present controversy, violated the "full faith and credit" clause of the Federal Constitution. By that clause, and by the act of Congress (§ 905, Rev. Stat. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 677) passed to carry it into effect, it was incumbent upon the West Virginia court to give to the judgment the same faith and credit that it had by law or usage in the courts of Virginia. The effect of this was that, provided the Virginia court had jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the parties (which was not questioned), the merits of the controversy there concluded were not open to reinvestigation in the courts of West Virginia. It is not here questioned that the West Virginia courts gave such credit to the Virginia judgment as was thus required.

Under the second assignment of error, the argument is that plaintiff in error was denied due process in the Virginia courts in that the circuit court of Rockingham county arbitrarily and unlawfully rejected his third amended bill, and its action in so doing was affirmed by the court of last resort of that state. Upon this point the West Virginia court (71 W. Va. 170) said:

"The said amendment was offered at a very late stage of the proceedings. The court based its rejection thereof upon two grounds,—the delay in tendering it without excuse or explanation, and its failure to show a contract materially different from that set up in the original and first and second amended bills. In disposing of the amendment, the court said: 'The bill had been amended twice already, and after these amendments, and after a thorough argument of the case on its merits, the court announced its decision. A due regard for the orderly procedure of the court and the rights of the opposing party required [746] that some limit be set to the privilege of amendments. The amendments now presented are offered without explanation or excuse, and in the main are unsubstantial, and would not change the opinion of the court on the merits of the case.' Having said this, the court proceeded to analyze the amendments and show their lack of merit and insufficiency to bring about a different conclusion if they had been filed. The decision relied upon to sustain this contention is Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409, 42 L. ed. 215, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841, asserting lack of due process in the entry of a decree for the plaintiff, after having stricken out the defendant's answer, because he was guilty of contempt in neglecting to pay into court a certain sum of money. This was a total denial of the right of defense, upon an insufficient ground. In that case, the action of the court was arbitrary and oppressive. Here, the plaintiff has been allowed a hearing. He had filed an original and two amended bills, and had no doubt had opportunity to tender the third amended bill long before the submission of the cause. It is certainly competent for a court to say, within reasonable limits, what amounts to a compliance with its rules and the principles of law, respecting the order and limitations of proceedings in a case. Besides, in the opinion of the court, the proposed amendment would not have changed the character of the plaintiff's claim, nor relieved the contract of its infirmity. An erroneous decision in respect to either of these matters would not amount to a denial of due process of law. As to them, it is not a case in which the plaintiff has had no day in court."

For present purposes it is sufficient to say that there is nothing upon the face of the record to indicate that the refusal of the Virginia court to entertain complainant's third amended bill was arbitrary or unlawful, or otherwise inconsistent with the "due process of law" clause of the 14th Amendment; that there is nothing to show that in the Virginia court complainant based his right to [747] file a third amended bill upon the 14th Amendment; and that if he had in fact set up such a right in the Virginia court and it had been there denied, his proper mode of obtaining a review of the Federal question would have been by prosecuting a writ of error under § 709, Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575 (§ 237, Judicial Code [36 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1911 Supp. p. 227]) to review the judgment of the court of last resort of Virginia, and not by attacking the judgment collaterally upon that ground when it was invoked against him in the courts of West Virginia.

With respect to the third assignment of error, it is contended that the supreme court of appeals of West Virginia refused to give full faith and credit to the objection interposed by plaintiff in error to the plea of res judicata based upon the decrees rendered in the Virginia case of Roller v. Murray, the objection being based upon the record in the case of Chesapeake-Western Co. v. Roller, a subsequent decision in the Virginia courts, which, it is contended, overruled the decision in the first Virginia suit so far as it tended to debar plaintiff in error from suing upon a quantum meruit. It appears that the decision in the Chesapeake-Western Co. Case was to dissolve an injunction that had been issued against the prosecution of the West Virginia suit. Its effect as res judicata was denied by the West Virginia court (71 W. Va. 172) upon the ground that it was not a final decree. It is now contended that, subsequent to the decree dissolving the injunction, a final decree was rendered in the same cause which in effect concluded the merits. We find nothing in the record, however, to show that any such contention was presented to the West Virginia courts.

Digitized by Google

Since we are unable to find that any substantial question of Federal right was raised by plaintiff in error in the courts of West Virginia, and there decided against him, it follows that the writ of error must be dismissed.

Digitized by Google

'RESS COMPANY et al., Plaintiff
RUDMAN. [No. 344.]
liability to agreed value urt of Civil Appeals for udicial District of the

— Tex. Civ. App. —,

nis and Cecil H.
or.
and H. A. Cunrror.
m: Judgment
n the author-
Co. v. Robin-
34 Sup. Ct.
rn R. Co.
L. ed. 683,

MEMORAN

OF

CASES DISPOSED OF WITHO

CLINCHFIELD COAL CORPORATION, Plaintiff in Error, v. R. L. MANESS. [No. 887.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Tennessee.

See same case below, — Tenn. —, 162 S. W. 1105.

Messrs. John W. Price and J. Norment Powell for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Isaac Harr and Robert Burrow for defendant in error.

April 6, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction, upon the authority of Patterson v. Colorado, 205 U. S. 454, 51 L. ed. 879, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556, 10 Ann. Cas. 689; Preston v. Chicago, 226 U. S. 447, 57 L. ed. 293, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF G. & C. MERRIAM COMPANY, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file a petition for a Writ of Mandamus.

Mr. William B. Hale for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

April 6, 1914. Denied.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND, & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. PINE TREE LUMBER COMPANY, LIMITED. [No. 244.]

Courts—exclusiveness of Federal jurisdiction—suit to recover overcharge on interstate shipment.

In Error to the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit of Louisiana.

Messrs. Thomas S. Buzbee and M. L. Bell for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Walker Elder for defendant in error.

April 6, 1914. Affirmed with costs by an equally divided court.

NORTHERN T Plaintiff
STATE [749
Error to state
In Error to State of Illinois.
See same case
L.R.A.(N.S.) —,
1913D, 514.
Messrs. Samuel A
Holden for plaintiff in Messrs. Patrick J. L
Strawn for defendant in April 13, 1914. Per Curi for want of jurisdiction, u of Haseltine v. Central Nat.
S. 130, 46 L. ed. 117, 22 Sup.
Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v.
S. 185, 56 L. ed. 155, 32 Sup.
Louisiana Nav. Co. v. Oyster
226 U. S. 99, 57 L. ed. 138, 33 Sup.
78; Pons v. Yazoo & M. Valley R.
U. S. 720, ante, 814, 34 Sup. Ct.

, etc.,
COAST
elow.
the t of in n

THOMAS W. SYNNOTT, etc., Appellant, v. TOMBSTONE CONSOLIDATED MINES COMPANY, LIMITED, etc. [No. 879.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—bankruptcy case.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 207 Fed. 544, on rehearing 208 Fed. 251.

Mr. Amos L. Taylor for appellant.

Messrs. A. B. Browne, Alex. Britton, Evans Browne, Everett E. Ellinwood, and John Mason Ross for appellee.

April 13, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction, upon the authority of (1) Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 234, 235, 53 L. ed. 772, 777, 778, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008; Tefft, W. & Co. v. Munsuri, 222 U. S. 114, 118, 56 L. ed. 118, 119, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67. (2) Chapman v. Bowen, 207 U. S. 89, 91, 52 L. ed. 116, 117, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 32; J. W. Calnan Co. v.

Digitized by Google

Doherty, 224 U. S. 145, 147, 56 L. ed. 702, 703, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460. (3) Conboy v. First Nat. Bank, 203 U. S. 141, 144, 145, 51 L. ed. 128–130, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.

HENRY E. MEEKER, Surviving Partner, etc., Petitioner, v. LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD COMPANY [No. 1000]; and HENRY E. MEEKER, Petitioner, v. LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD COMPANY [No. 1001].

[750] Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Mr. Wm. A. Glasgow, Jr., for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.†

April 13, 1914. Per Curiam: Petitions granted, upon the authority of § 262 of the Judicial Code [36 Stat. at L. 1162, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 235]. Re Chetwood, 165 U. S. 443, 462, 41 L. ed. 782, 788, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 50 L. ed. 963, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 584; McClellan v. Carland, 217 U. S. 268, 54 L. ed. 762, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 501; United States v. Beatty, 232 U. S. 463, 467, ante, 686, 687, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF HENRY H. EVANS, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file petition for a Writ of Mandamus.

Mr. Albert J. Hopkins for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

April 13, 1914. Denied.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF JOHN DENNETT, JR., et al., Petitioners. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file petition for Writs of Prohibition and Mandamus.

Mr. William M. Seabury for petitioners.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

April 20, 1914. Denied.

LOUIS W. PRENICA, etc., et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. MAY BULGER. [No. 806.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Nebraska.

See same case below, 93 Neb. 697, 142 N. W. 117.

Messrs. William C. Prentiss and Walter L. Clark for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. W. T. Thompson for defendant in error.

April 27, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction, on the authority of (1) Consolidated Turnp. Co. v. Norfolk & O. Valley R. Co. 228 U. S. 596, 600, 57 L. ed. 982, 983, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609. (2) De Bary v. Louisiana, 227 U. S. 108, 57 L. ed. 441, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 239, and cases cited.

---

[751] STEPHEN M. EGAN, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF NEW JERSEY. [No. 738.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Court of Errors and Appeals of the State of New Jersey.

See same case below, 84 N. J. L. 701, 87 Atl. 455.

Mr. John Franklin Fort for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Robert H. McCarter and Pierre P. Garven for defendant in error.

April 27, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction, upon the authority of Zeller v. New Jersey, 231 U. S. 737, ante, 460, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316, and cases cited.

SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY, Plaintiff in Error, v. J. M. PACE MULE COMPANY. [No. 652.]

Carriers — limiting liability — Carmack amendment.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina.

See same case below, 160 N. C. 215, 76 S. E. 513.

Messrs. Murray Allen and Walter H. Neal for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

May 4, 1914. Per Curiam: Judgment reversed with costs, and cause remanded for further proceedings, upon the authority of Adams Exp. Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 57 L. ed. 314, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 257, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Miller, 226 U. S. 513, 57 L. ed. 323, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 57 L. ed. 690, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

CITY OF LEWISTON, Plaintiff in Error, v. JOHN CHAMBERLAIN et al. [No. 701.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Idaho.

See same case below, 23 Idaho, 154, 129 Pac. 1069.

Mr. James H. Forney for plaintiff in error.

†Mr. Joseph W. Folk and Mr. C. W. Needham, by leave of court, filed a brief herein in behalf of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Burton L. French for defendants in error.

May 4, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction on the authority of McCorquodale v. Texas, 211 U. S. 432, 53 L. ed. 269, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 146; Kansas City Star Co. v. Julian, 215 U. S. 589, 54 L. ed. 340, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Consolidated Turnp. Co. v. Norfolk & O. V. R. Co. 228 U. S. 326, 334, 57 L. ed. 857, 862, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 112, 118, 53 L. ed. 431, 434, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227.

---

[752] EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF DANIEL E. STRUB, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file petition for Writ of Mandamus.

Mr. Joe Kirby for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

May 4, 1914. Denied.

WALTER A. LEDBETTER, Receiver, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. KAUFMAN MANDELL. [No. 273.]

Judgment—full faith and credit.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

See same case below, in appellate division 141 App. Div. 556, 126 N. Y. Supp. 497, in court of appeals 205 N. Y. 537, 98 N. E. 1106.

Messrs. Arthur F. Gotthold, Joseph W. Bailey, and Walter A. Ledbetter for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Louis Marshall for defendant in error.

May 4, 1914. Judgment affirmed with costs by an equally divided court.

FRANK B. CRAIG, Plaintiff in Error, v. WILLIAM P. JARRETT, Sheriff, etc. [No. 92.]

Appeal—in habeas corpus proceeding—changed conditions.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii.

See same case below, 20 Haw. 483.

Messrs. Warren Gregory, W. H. Chickering, Edward M. Watson, Aldis B. Browne, Alex. Britton, and Evans Browne for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Mason F. Prosser, Robbins B. Anderson, and Sidney Ballou for defendant in error.

May 11, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction upon the authority of Johnson v. Hoy, 227 U. S. 245, 247, 57 L. ed. 497, 499, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240.

PACIFIC EXPRESS COMPANY et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. I. RUDMAN. [No. 344.]

Carriers—limiting liability to agreed value.

In Error to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Sixth Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas.

See same case below, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 145 S. W. 268.

Messrs. James L. Minnis and Cecil H. Smith for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Mark McMahon and H. A. Cunningham for defendant in error.

May 11, 1914. Per Curiam: Judgment reversed [753] with costs, on the authority of Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Robinson, 233 U. S. 173, ante, 901, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 652, 57 L. ed. 683, 688, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391.

PETER GALLAGHER, Administrator, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. FLORIDA EAST COAST RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 359.]

Error to district court—jurisdiction below.

In Error to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

See same case below, 196 Fed. 1000.

Mr. William A. McQuaid for plaintiff in error.

Mr. George S. Scofield for defendant in error.

May 11, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction upon the authority of Fore River Shipbuilding Co. v. Hagg, 219 U. S. 175, 55 L. ed. 163, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Bogart v. Southern P. Co. 228 U. S. 137, 144, 57 L. ed. 768, 771, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 497, and cases cited.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND, & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. W. W. BEATTY. [No. 342.]

Commerce—state regulation—requiring carrier to furnish cars.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma.

See same case below, 34 Okla. 321, 42 L.R.A.(N.S.) 984, 118 Pac. 367, 126 Pac. 736.

Messrs. F. C. Dillard and C. O. Blake for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

May 25, 1914. Per Curiam: Judgment reversed with costs, and cause remanded for further proceedings, upon the authority of Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 772, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Greenwood Grocery Co. 227 U. S. 1, 57 L. ed. 389, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213.

Digitized by Google

The Cincinnati Northern Railway Company, Plaintiff in Error, v. George E. Dillon. [No. 930.]

Master and servant—employers' liability—safety appliances.

In [754] Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio.

Mr. Frank L. Littleton for plaintiff in error.

Mr. W. H. Dailey for defendant in error.

June 22, 1914. Per Curiam: Judgment affirmed upon the authority of Southern R. Co. v. Carson, 194 U. S. 136, 140, 48 L. ed. 907, 910, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Southern R. Co. Carolina Div. v. Bennett, 233 U. S. 80, 85, ante, 860, 862, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Grand Trunk Western R. Co. v. Lindsay, 233 U. S. 42, 49, ante, 838, 842, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Chicago Junction R. Co. v. King, 222 U. S. 222, 56 L. ed. 173, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79; Southern R. Co. v. Gadd, 233 U. S. 572, ante, 1099, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 696.

Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company, Appellant, v. L. E. Goodrich. [No. 1031.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—Federal question.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 213 Fed. 339.

Mr. Joseph M. Bryson for appellant.

Mr. J. A. L. Wolfe for appellee.

June 22, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction upon the authority of York v. Texas, 137 U. S. 15, 34 L. ed. 604, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; Kauffman v. Wootters, 138 U. S. 285, 34 L. ed. 962, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 298; see Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Goodrich, 229 U. S. 607, 57 L. ed. 1349, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 776.

Thomas D. Thomas, Petitioner, v. South Butte Mining Company. [No. —.]

Motion for leave to file and prosecute petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit in forma pauperis.

Mr. P. P. Wells for petitioner.

June 22, 1914. Denied.

---

[755] Frank Sullivan, Petitioner, v. United States. [No. 928.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 209 Fed. 1006.

Mr. J. P. Cox for petitioner.

Mr. Assistant Attorney General Wallace for respondent.

April 6, 1914. Denied.

Havana Central Railroad Company, Petitioner, v. Central Trust Company of New York. [No. 938.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

The same case below, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 123 C. C. A. 72, 204 Fed. 546.

Mr. Herbert A. Heyn for petitioner.

Mr. Lewis H. Freedman for respondent.

April 6, 1914. Denied.

Beach Front Hotel Company, Petitioner, v. Richard R. Sooy. [No. 877.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 118 C. C. A. 579, 197 Fed. 881, on rehearing 210 Fed. 265.

Messrs. Edwin G. C. Bleakly, Henry F. Stockwell, John W. Wescott, and Gilbert Collins for petitioner.

Mr. Robert H. McCarter for respondent.

April 13, 1914. Denied.

William Cramp & Sons Ship & Engine Building Company, Petitioner, v. International Curtis Marine Turbine Company et al. [No. 963.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 211 Fed. 124.

Messrs. [756] James R. Sheffield and Clifton V. Edwards for petitioner.

Messrs. Frederick P. Fish and Charles Neave for respondents.

April 13, 1914. Denied.

Moy Guey Lum, Petitioner, v. United States. [No. 977.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. H. Ralph Burton for petitioner.

The Attorney General for respondent.

April 13, 1914. Denied.

Emilie M. Bullowa et al., Petitioners, v. Sarah J. Thurston. [No. 982.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 42 Wash. L. Rep. 198.

Messrs. Rudolph H. Yeatman, W. J. Lambert, D. W. Baker, and F. S. Bright for petitioners.

Messrs. Fulton Lewis and John Ridout for respondent.

April 13, 1914. Denied.

Digitized by Google

M. C. KISER COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. GEORGIA COTTON OIL COMPANY et al. [No. 962.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 208 Fed. 548.

Mr. Harold Remington for petitioners.

No counsel appeared for respondents.

April 20, 1914. Denied.

THOMAS J. KEMP, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 904.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 41 App. D. C. 539.

Messrs. R. H. Liggett and John E. Laskey for [757] petitioner.

The Attorney General for respondent.

April 20, 1914. Denied.

HOCKING VALLEY RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 972.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 210 Fed. 735.

Messrs. James H. Hoyt, William B. Stewart, Lawrence Maxwell, and Clarence Brown for petitioner.

The Attorney General for respondent.

April 20, 1914. Denied.

SUNDAY CREEK COMPANY, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 985.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 210 Fed. 747.

Mr. William B. Henderson for petitioner.

The Attorney General for respondent.

April 20, 1914. Denied.

KANSAS CITY SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. GEORGE C. MAYNOE et al. [No. 986.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 209 Fed. 611.

Messrs. Hiram Glass, W. L. Estes, John J. King, and A. L. Burford for petitioner.

Messrs. Cone Johnson and James M. Edwards for respondents.

April 20, 1914. Denied.

GEORGE B. TAYLOR, Claimant, etc., Petitioner, v. CLEVELAND GRAIN COMPANY. [No. 999.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States [758] Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 212 Fed. 678.

Mr. Frank S. Masten for petitioner.

Mr. Wm. B. Cady for respondent.

April 20, 1914. Denied.

FRENCH MUTUAL GENERAL SOCIETY OF MUTUAL INSURANCE AGAINST THEFT, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES FIDELITY & GUARANTY COMPANY OF BALTIMORE. [No. 1005.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 212 Fed. 620.

Mr. Hyland P. Stewart for petitioner.

Messrs. J. Kemp Bartlett and Edgar Allan Poe for respondent.

April 20, 1914. Denied.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. MARY A. MEESE et al. [No. 1025.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Mr. C. W. Bunn for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondents.

April 27, 1914. Granted.

NEW YORK TIMES COMPANY, Petitioner, v. SUN PRINTING AND PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION. [No. 994.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 123 C. C. A. 54, 204 Fed. 586.

Messrs. Harold Nathan and Max J. Kohler for petitioner.

Messrs. James M. Beck and Charles K. Carpenter for respondent.

April 27, 1914. Denied.

JAMES LANSBURGH et al., Petitioners, v. MYRON M. PARKER et al. [No. 998.]

Petition for [759] a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 41 App. D. C. 549.

Messrs. Charles H. Merillat and Alexander Wolf for petitioners.

Messrs. John Ridout and J. J. Darlington for respondents.

April 27, 1914. Denied.

Digitized by Google

BIRGE FORBES COMPANY, Petitioner, v. CARL R. HEYE. [No. 1002.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 212 Fed. 112.

Mr. Cecil H. Smith for petitioner.

Mr. Newton H. Lassiter for respondent.

April 27, 1914. Denied.

SOLOMON RIPINSKY, Petitioner, v. G. W. HINCHMAN et al. [No. 1006.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 121 C. C. A. 35, 202 Fed. 625.

Mr. J. H. Cobb for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondents.

April 27, 1914. Denied.

SADIE A. STEAD, Executrix, etc., et al., Appellants, v. ISABELLA M. CURTIS et al. [No. 1022.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Mr. Horace W. Philbrook for appellants.

Messrs. Joseph C. Campbell and John S. Partridge for appellees.

May 4, 1914. Denied.

MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Petitioner, v. L. HILTON-GREEN et al. [No. 1011.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. [760] Emmett Wilson and P. D. Beall for petitioner.

Messrs. W. A. Blount and A. C. Blount for respondents.

May 11, 1914. Granted.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 1024.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 217 Fed. 309.

Messrs. E. C. Lindley, F. V. Brown, and C. S. Albert for petitioner.

The Attorney General for respondent.

May 11, 1914. Denied.

TELEFUNKEN WIRELESS TELEGRAPH COMPANY OF THE UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. NATIONAL ELECTRIC SIGNALING COMPANY et al. [No. 1026.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 208 Fed. 679.

Mr. Hector T. Fenton for petitioner.

Messrs. Melville Church and F. W. H. Clay for respondents.

May 11, 1914. Denied.

AMERICAN ICE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. CAMILLA PORRECA. [No. 1033.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 213 Fed. 185.

Mr. Frank R. Savidge for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

May 11, 1914. Denied.

ALBERT DELLEVIE, Sole Surviving Executor, etc., Petitioner, v. FECHHEIMER-FISHEL COMPANY, Bankrupt. [No. 1040.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari [761] to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 212 Fed. 357.

Mr. Roger Foster for petitioner.

Mr. Louis F. Doyle for respondent.

May 11, 1914. Denied.

JOHN N. MCCLINTOCK, Petitioner, v. CITY OF PAWTUCKET. [No. 1044.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 209 Fed. 361.

Mr. John N. McClintock in propria persona for petitioner.

Mr. William R. Tillinghast for respondent.

May 11, 1914. Denied.

CORNELIA G. GOODRICH et al., Petitioners, v. HOUSTON OIL COMPANY OF TEXAS et al. [No. 1039.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 213 Fed. 136.

Mr. W. D. Gordon for petitioners.

No counsel appeared for respondents.

May 25, 1914. Denied.

Digitized by Google

MONONGAHELA RIVER CONSOLIDATED COAL & COKE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. RIVER & RAIL STORAGE COMPANY. [No. 1048.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 210 Fed. 611.

Mr. J. Arthur Lynham for petitioner.

Mr. C. H. Trimble for respondent.

May 25, 1914. Denied.

EASTERN OREGON LAND COMPANY, Petitioner, v. WILLOW RIVER LAND & IRRIGATION COMPANY. [No. 1057.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth [762] Circuit.

See same case below, 122 C. C. A. 636, 204 Fed. 516.

Messrs. J. N. Teal, Wirt Minor, A. B. Browne, Alex. Britton, Evans Browne, and Francis W. Clements for petitioner.

Messrs. J. H. Richards and Oliver O. Haga for respondent.

May 25, 1914. Denied.

THE GRAND RAPIDS & INDIANA RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. THE UNITED STATES. [No. 1036.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 212 Fed. 577.

Mr. James H. Campbell for petitioner.

Mr. Solicitor General Davis for respondent.

June 8, 1914. Denied.

NICHOLS & COX LUMBER COMPANY, Petitioner, v. THE UNITED STATES. [No. 1037.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 212 Fed. 588.

Mr. Ganson Taggart for petitioner.

Mr. Solicitor General Davis for respondent.

June 8, 1914. Denied.

WARREN E. TALBERT, Petitioner, v. THE UNITED STATES. [No. 1051.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 42 App. D. C. 1.

Messrs. Matthew E. O'Brien and James A. O'Shea for petitioner.

Mr. Solicitor General Davis for respondent.

June 8, 1914. Denied.

LOUIS STEINBERGER, Petitioner, v. GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY et al. [1058.]

Petition [763] for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. Charles H. Wilson and William G. Johnson for petitioner.

Messrs. Charles Neave and William G. McKnight for respondents.

June 8, 1914. Denied.

WILLIAM J. KAHN, Petitioner, v. THE UNITED STATES. [No. 1060.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 214 Fed. 54.

Messrs. Terence J. McManus and David W. Kahn for petitioner.

Mr. Solicitor General Davis and Mr. Assistant Attorney General Wallace for respondent.

June 8, 1914. Denied.

F. A. WILLIAMS, Trustee, etc., Petitioner, v. GEORGE G. FRIEDRICHS. [No. 1070.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 122 C. C. A. 664, 204 Fed. 1007.

Messrs. E. D. Saunders and Girault Farrar for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

June 8, 1914. Denied.

WILLIAM H. HOTCHKISS et al., Petitioners, v. L. K. LYNN. [No. 1076.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 211 Fed. 948.

Mr. John Lord O'Brian for petitioners.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

June 8, 1914. Denied.

ALLEN BOTSFORD, Petitioner, v. THE UNITED STATES. [No. 1083.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals [764] for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. Theodore F. Horstman and Michael G. Heintz for petitioner.

Mr. Solicitor General Davis and Mr. Assistant Attorney General Wallace for respondent.

June 8, 1914. Denied.

Digitized by Google

WALTER WALDIN, Petitioner, v. WALTER R. COMFORT. [No. 1093.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 211 Fed. 1019.

Mr. A. A. Boggs for petitioner.

Mr. Frank B. Shutts for respondent.

June 22, 1914. Denied.

THE DAVIDSON STEAMSHIP COMPANY, Petitioner, v. THE WESTERN TRANSIT COMPANY. [No. 1095.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 212 Fed. 696.

Messrs. Harvey D. Goulder and Frank S. Masten for petitioner.

Mr. George Clinton, Jr., for respondent.

June 22, 1914. Denied.

CUDAHY PACKING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. GRAND TRUNK WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 1103.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Messrs. Charles B. Morrison and Wells M. Cook for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

June 22, 1914. Denied.

NAHONA STAYTON, Petitioner, v. THE UNITED STATES. [No. 1109.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals [765] for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 213 Fed. 224.

Mr. Theodore Mack for petitioner.

June 22, 1914. Denied.

CHARLES KAPLAN et al., Petitioners, v. ISAAC E. LEECH, Trustee, etc., et al. [No. 1110.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 213 Fed. 753.

Mr. Joseph Gross for petitioners.

Mr. Solicitor General Davis for respondents.

June 22, 1914. Denied.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. NIPISSING MINES COMPANY. [No. 709.]

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 124 C. C. A. 313, 206 Fed. 431.

The Solicitor General and Mr. Assistant Attorney General Harr for petitioner.

Mr. George F. Hurd for respondent.

April 6, 1914. Dismissed on motion of counsel for the petitioner.

CONTINENTAL LIFE INSURANCE & INVESTMENT COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. I. C. HATTABAUGH, as Insurance Commissioner of the State of Idaho. [No. 448.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Idaho.

Mr. Charles C. Cavanah for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

April 6, 1914. Dismissed per stipulation.

---

[766] LEOCADIO PAJARILLO et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 1015.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands.

No counsel appeared for plaintiffs in error.

The Attorney General for the United States.

April 13, 1914. Docketed and dismissed on motion of counsel for defendant in error, and mandate granted.

ROY C. HECOX, as Trustee, etc., Appellant, v. COUNTY OF TELLER, State of Colorado, et al. [No. 363.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 117 C. C. A. 338, 198 Fed. 634.

Messrs. Ernest Morris and Wm. W. Grant, Jr., for appellant.

Mr. C. S. Thomas for appellees.

April 13, 1914. Dismissed per stipulation.

ALABAMA & VICKSBURG RAILWAY COMPANY et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. PEARL MORRIS. [No. 426.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Mississippi.

Messrs. Robert H. Thompson and J. Blanc Monroe for plaintiffs in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

April 16, 1914. Dismissed with costs on motion of counsel for the plaintiffs in error.

Digitized by Google

WISCONSIN CENTRAL RAILWAY COMPANY et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 380.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota.

Messrs. J. L. Erdall, M. D. Munn, and A. H. Bright for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Charles W. Bunn and Emerson Hadley for defendant in error.

April 20, 1914. Dismissed per stipulation.

---

[767] COLORADO & SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE RAILROAD COMMISSION OF COLORADO et al. [No. 465.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado.

Mr. E. E. Whitted for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Barney L. Whatley for defendants in error.

April 27, 1914. Dismissed with costs on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

JOHN W. PRICE, Plaintiff in Error, v. PECOS VALLEY & NORTHEASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 351.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of New Mexico.

Mr. Charles R. Brice for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. William C. Reid and Robert Dunlap for defendant in error.

May 1, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

HENRY ATHOL EWDARDS, Appellant, v. H. B. McCOY, Collector of Customs of the Philippine Islands. [No. 357.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands.

See same case below, 22 Philippine, 598.

Mr. Clement L. Bouvé for appellant.

Mr. Felix Frankfurter for appellee.

May 4, 1914. Dismissed with costs on motion for counsel for the appellant.

BROWN SHOE COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. C. ROSS HUME, Trustee, etc. [No. 376.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma.

Mr. James R. Keaton for plaintiff in error.

Mr. W. F. Wilson for defendant in error.

May 6, 1914. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

BOB KIRKPATRICK, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF GEORGIA. [No. 527.]

In Error to the Court of Appeals [768] of the State of Georgia.

Mr. B. Z. Phillips for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Thomas S. Felder for defendant in error.

May 25, 1914. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

SUCCESSION OF RAMON PEREZ VILLAMIL, Appellant, v. MARIA DE JESUS. [No. 825.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of Porto Rico.

Mr. Frederic R. Coudert for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

May 25, 1914. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellant.

ADAMS EXPRESS COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. WILLIAM H. WINDOLPH, TO THE USE OF LEON WEINER et al. [No. 187.]

In Error to the Superior Court of the State of Pennsylvania.

Messrs. Thomas DeWitt Cuyler and John Lewis Evans for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Russell Duane for defendants in error.

June 8, 1914. Judgment reversed with costs, and cause remanded for further proceedings per stipulation of counsel.

ELLEN M. MORSE et al., Appellants, v. H. ROZIER DULANY, Trustee, etc. [No. 455.]

Appeal from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Messrs. Holmes Conrad and John Selden for appellants.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

June 22, 1914. Dismissed with costs on motion of counsel for the appellants.

THE NATIONAL COUNSEL, JUNIOR ORDER UNITED AMERICAN MECHANICS, Plaintiff in Error, v. [769] MARTHA BROWN, formerly Ringo. [No. 521.]

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky.

Mr. Patterson A. Reece for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

June 22, 1914. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for plaintiff in error.

ANTONIO BALASQUIDE GOMEZ, Appellant, v. ENRIQUE CAMACHO, etc. [No. 841.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of Porto Rico.

See same case below, 19 P. R. R. 564.

Mr. F. Kingsbury Curtis for appellant.

Messrs. F. D. McKenney and Francis H. Dexter for appellee.

June 22, 1914. Dismissed per stipulation.

Digitized by Google

William A. Wright, Comptroller General of the State of Georgia, Petitioner, v. Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company et al. [No. 535.]

Petition for a cross Writ of Certiorari to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. Joseph B. Cumming and Alex. C. King for cross petitioner.

October 20, 1913. Granted.

G. & C. Merriam Company, Appellant, v. Syndicate Publishing Company. [No. 644.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. William B. Hale for appellant.

Mr. Hugh A. Bayne for appellee.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

Allen & Wheeler Company, Appellant, v. Hanover Star Milling Company. [No. 793.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari herein.

Messrs. Lindorf B. Whitnel, Edward Everett Logan, and J. Fred Gilster for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

December 8, 1913. Granted.

Ex parte: In the Matter of Concepción Veve y Diaz, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file petition for Writ of Mandamus.

Messrs. Paul Charlton and Jacinto Texidor for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

June 8, 1914. Denied.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX I.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

ORDER.

Mr. Attorney General McReynolds presented Mr. John W. Davis, of West Virginia, as Solicitor General of the United States, and it was ordered that his commission be recorded.

October 13, 1913.

APPENDIX II.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

IN MEMORIAM, JAMES HALL McKENNEY.

The Chief Justice said:

"It is my sad duty to announce to the gentlemen of the bar the death last night of Mr. James H. McKenney, the clerk of this court. He was associated for more than fifty years with the work of the court, and the expression of our sorrow needs no elaboration. As a mark of respect to his memory the court will do no further business to-day, and will adjourn until to-morrow morning."

October 14, 1913.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX III.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

ORDER.

It is hereby ordered that James D. Maher be appointed clerk of this court in the place of James H. McKenney, deceased, and that he forthwith take the oath of office and give bond conditioned according to law.

The Chief Justice then said:

In entering the order appointing a clerk because of the death of Mr. McKenney, the court is unwilling to let the occasion pass without making some note on its records of the character of the services rendered by Mr. McKenney to the court and the country for so long a time, and also without expressing for permanent record the sorrow which the members of the court feel at the loss which has been occasioned by the death of Mr. McKenney. Mr. McKenney became connected with the work of the court as far back as 1858; first as a junior clerk, then as acting deputy, then, when the statute authorized it, as the deputy clerk; and finally, in 1880, upon the death of Mr Middleton, he became clerk of the court. During all that long period of more than fifty years, with diligence, with fidelity, and with honor, he served the court and the country. The consolation at his loss to the court and the country is this: That no one can look over the period of time during which he served and consider the grave subjects with which the court dealt during that time, and with reference to which the clerk was called upon within his sphere of duty to act, and deny that the effect of those services so faithfully rendered redounded to the benefit of the people of the country and to the preservation of our constitutional system of government which remains as the safeguard of every right and the guaranty of the liberties of all. The consolation of those united to him by ties of kindred and personal affection is that they have the heritage of a long, virtuous, and well-spent life, which, if contemplated in the light of faith, brings to them the assurance that its rectitude finds place on the minutes of that court of everlasting and infinite power to which all human conduct must come for ultimate judgment; and that that record affords ground for faith to believe that the one whose loss they deplore is gone to his everlasting reward.

October 20, 1913.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX IV

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

ORDER.

On the application of the clerk, pursuant to § 221 of the Judicial Code, it is ordered that Henry C. McKenney be, and he is hereby, appointed deputy clerk of this court.

October 27, 1913.

APPENDIX V.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

ORDER.

Mr. Sidney T. Miller presented the resolutions of the Association of the Bar of the City of Detroit upon the death of the late Mr. Justice Brown, and it was ordered that they be placed upon the files of the court.

December 1, 1913.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX VI.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

ORDER.

The reporter having represented that, owing to the number of decisions at the present term, it would be impracticable to put the reports in one volume,

It is therefore now here ordered that he publish an additional volume in this year, pursuant to § 226 of the Judicial Code, approved March 3, 1911.

March 9, 1914.

APPENDIX VII.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

ORDER.

It is ordered by the court that the bond presented by the marshal for the performance of his duties be filed and recorded.

June 8, 1914.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX VIII.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

ORDER.

It is now here ordered by the court that all the cases on the docket not decided, and all the other business of the term not disposed of, be, and the same are hereby, continued to the next term.

June 22, 1914.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google